NYPL RESEARCH LIBRARIES
3 3433 08181019 8

Digitized by the Internet Archive in 2008 with funding from Microsoft Corporation

http://www.archive.org/details/centennialhistor03gast

THE CENTENNIAL HISTORY

OF OREGON

1811-1912

ILLUSTRATED

VOLUME III

CHICAGO
THE S. J. CLARKE PUBLISHING COMPANY
1912

Львівська
Міська
Медична

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASTOR, LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS

NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY

HUGH M. PRICE

BIOGRAPHICAL

HUGH M. PRICE, county commissioner of Lane county, and a farmer, who since June, 1909, has made his home in Eugene, was born in Montgomery county, Illinois, March 7, 1846, his parents being Joseph and Elizabeth (Jones) Price. The father was born in North Carolina, but was reared in Kentucky, and after attaining his majority, went to Illinois, where he engaged in farming until 1859. In that year he removed to Kansas and became a pioneer of Anderson county, where both he and his wife spent their remaining days. He served as justice of the peace and was well known in the locality where he made his home.

Hugh M. Price spent his youth as do most farm boys, his time being divided between the duties of the school-room, the pleasures of the playground, and the work of the fields. He was a boy in his teens when he enlisted for service in the Civil war, becoming a member of Company L, Fourteenth Kansas Cavalry, with which he served throughout the period of hostilities. During the years that he saw service on the western frontier he acted as dispatch bearer, a most hazardous pursuit which often involved him in situations of great danger and hardships. His company was engaged in scouting and skirmishing over a wide range of territory and Hugh M. Price, though but a boy in years, shared all the adventures of the members of his troops. When the war was over, he returned to Kansas, where he engaged in farming until 1886. Thinking to have still better opportunities in the Pacific northwest, he came to Lane county, Oregon, in 1886, and settled on Mackenzie river, where he engaged in farming until about eight years ago. He then sold that property and bought a ranch, twenty-two miles west of Eugene. Upon this place, he carried on farming and stock raising with excellent success, bringing his fields under a high state of cultivation, so that he annually harvested good crops, while the grade of stock which he raised also enabled him to secure good prices, when he placed his cattle upon the market. He continued to reside upon the farm until June, 1909, when, with a handsome competence, won from his labors, he moved to Eugene, where he has since lived.

In 1867 Mr. Price was united in marriage to Miss Elizabeth Frances Day, a daughter of Thomas Day, of Kansas. Mrs. Price passed away May 21, 1911, at the age of sixty-five years. In their family were four children: George, now a resident of Arizona; John, who is living in Thurston, Oregon; Fred, who makes his home near Paisley; and Carrie, the wife of Jesse T. Fountain, of Eugene. Mrs. Price was a member of the Christian church, in which Mr. Price also holds membership. His political support is given to the republican party, and in 1904, he was elected to the office of county commissioner, in which he is now completing his second term. He belongs to Eugene Lodge, No. 11, A. F. & A. M.; Eugene Chapter, No. 10, R. A. M.; and Hiram Council, No. 7, R. & S. M., and is a worthy examplar of the teaching of the craft. He likewise belongs to Eugene Lodge, No. 357, B. P. O. E., and he maintains pleasant relations with his old army comrades through his membership in J. W. Gear Post, No. 7, G. A. R. He is as true and loyal to his country in the duties of citizenship as when he followed the old flag upon the battlefields and the march.

JAMES S. RANKIN, editor of the Times of Willamina, was born in Carlton county, province of New Brunswick, Canada, April 6, 1863, a son of James and Marion (Shea) Rankin. The father, of Scotch and English parentage, was a native of England but lived in Canada until late in life and then moved to the state of Washington, where he died in 1902. He was a farmer by occupation and also engaged in logging. He fought in some of the Indian wars, in which he rendered valiant service. The mother, of English and Scotch descent, was born in Canada and died there when her son, James S., was only three years of age. In their family were five children: Alexander, deceased; Marion, the wife of Dr. E. S. Frost, of Willmar, Minnesota; Edith, deceased; John S., of Vancouver, British Columbia; and James S., of this review.

The last named attended school in Canada but left that country in 1874, making his home in Willmar, Minnesota. Subsequently he was a student for two terms in the Shattuck Military Academy at Faribault, Minnesota. After living in Minnesota for fourteen years he went to North Dakota, where he remained seven years as editor of a paper, he having previously learned the printer's trade in the former state. At the end of that time he removed to Washington, locating near Auburn, where for ten years he was proprietor of a hop yard. Later he reentered the field of journalism, buying and managing a paper in Auburn. From there he went to Seattle and later to Tacoma, where he was employed in a smelter. Finally he arrived in Oregon in 1907, settling in McMinnville, where he became foreman of the News Reporter. In March, 1911, he came to Willamina and took charge of the Times, which he now publishes. This paper has a circulation of five hundred copies, an increase of one hundred and fifty since he began managing it.

Mr. Rankin was married in North Dakota in 1892 to Miss Abbie Carwell, a native of Elk River, Minnesota, and they have become the parents of six children, Frank, Harold, Whitney, Madeline, Abbie and John, all of whom are at home. In politics Mr. Rankin is a consistent republican and the paper which he edits advocates the principles of this party. He holds membership with the Artisans of McMinnville. Mrs. Rankin is a member of the Episcopal church. Mr. Rankin has a well equipped printing establishment, and is recognized as a progressive business man and as an editor is greatly admired.

JOHN W. GRASSMAN, who has been an agriculturist of Marion county for nearly ten years and is now residing a half mile south of Gervais, was born in Iowa on the 9th of November, 1861, his parents being Valentine and Mary (Churchman) Grassman, the former a native of Germany and the latter of Ohio. The parents were married in Iowa, where they lived until after the father's death in 1871. They were the parents of six children: Mrs. Mary Briles, of Iowa; John W., of this review; Louis, who is residing in Marion county, Oregon; Frank, deceased; Clara, who is a native of Biggs, Oregon; and Mrs. Annie McGraw, who is living in South Dakota. Subsequently Mrs. Grassman was married again, her second union being with Nicholas Fery. After their marriage they removed to Oregon in 1900, where Mrs. Fery died in 1906. Mr. Fery is still residing in Portland. They were the parents of one child, Henry E., who lives in Portland.

John W. Grassman received his education in the common schools and afterward assisted his father until he was twenty-four years of age, when he started farming independently in Iowa. He continued to be thus employed until 1902, when he disposed of his property and came to Oregon, where he settled upon the farm upon which he is now residing. This property consists of one hundred and twenty-three acres, all of which has been brought under a high state of cultivation. His activities are along the line of general farming in which he has won a good measure of success.

On the 16th of February, 1892, Mr. Grassman was married to Miss Agnes Fery, whose birth occurred in Warren county, Iowa, October 10, 1872. She is a daughter of Joseph and Christina (Buzzard) Fery, the former a native of Germany and the latter of Illinois. They were married in Illinois, where they resided for a few years previous to removing to Iowa and locating in Warren county. They made this county their home until the mother's death in 1891, when the father came to Oregon with his family and resided in this state for two years previous to returning east to Missouri, where he still lives. They were the parents of eight children: Mrs. Mary Richardson, of Des Moines, Iowa; Mrs. John W. Grassman; Frances, deceased; Mrs. Annie McCafferty, of Kent, Iowa; Amelia, deceased, who was the wife of Harvey Bacon, of Creston, Iowa; Frank and John, both deceased; and Mrs. Della Booth, who is living in Prescott, Iowa. Mr. Fery's second marriage was to Mrs. Ellen Parkins, of Illinois. To Mr. and Mrs. Grassman four children have been born: Clarence L., whose birth occurred on the 27th of March, 1893; Lawrence, who was born on the 1st of March, 1895; Pearl E., who was born July 16, 1898; and Ruby M., born August 16, 1901. They are all residing at home and attending school.

Mr. Grassman is a republican but is very liberal in his views and casts his vote for the man or measure that in his judgment will best serve the greatest number rather than according to party dictates. Both he and Mrs. Grassman hold membership in the Roman Catholic church, according to whose teachings they live consistently. Already Mr. Grassman has firmly established himself in the opinion of his fellow citizens as a substantial and progressive farmer and is fast winning the respect and regard of the members of his community amongst whom he has come to make his home.

J. OSCAR HOLT. One of the progressive business men of Oregon who have taken active part in the development of its resources, is J. Oscar Holt, secretary-manager of the Eugene Fruit Growers Association. He was also prominently identified with the early history of the Alaskan mining district and was one of the founders of Nome. He has an excellent education and for many years was a public instructor. He was born in Tennessee, September 17, 1867, a son of J. J. and Annie A. (Pickel) Holt. The great-grandfather was a soldier of the Revolutionary war and the grandparents were natives of North Carolina and Tennessee, respectively. In the family of J. J. and Annie A. Holt were five children, namely: J. Oscar, of this review; Estella, the wife of Rev. W. B. Moore, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church at Lents, Oregon; V. L., a grocer of Eugene; Theodore P., who is at the head of the mining department of the University of Utah; and Vesta, now pursuing the science course in the University of Oregon. The subject of this review was about twelve years of age when he came with his parents from Tennessee to this state. Here the father settled where Medford now stands, purchasing a farm on which he lived until 1897, when he retired and took up his residence in Eugene, where both he and his wife still live. The father always lived a quiet life, his interests centering entirely in his home.

J. Oscar Holt remained at home with his parents until he attained the age of twenty-one years. He was given a good education, having been a student in the University of Oregon and also pursuing a normal course in Monmouth State Normal School, from which he was graduated in 1892. He then taught school for two years, after which he entered the government service as an instructor in the Indian schools, being principal at Yainax, as well as of the Fort Simco (Wash.) Industrial School. After his resignation from the government service he went to Alaska where he did prospecting and mining in the same year Dawson was founded, and for two years acted as mine inspector for a group of San Francisco capitalists, buying mining properties for them in the Seward peninsula. He became one of the founders of Nome and helped to build the first house in that town. He was in Alaska throughout the early boom period, returning to Eugene in 1904. On coming back to Oregon he purchased a fruit farm and later became one of the organizers of the Eugene Fruit Growers Association of which he was elected as a member of the board of directors. He became secretary-manager of the association, with H. F. McCornack as president and George A. Dorris, of Springfield, as vice president. The association has become widely known throughout the northwest. It was organized in 1908 with a capital stock of five thousand dollars under the Oregon state laws, and after two years its capital stock was increased to twenty-five thousand dollars. It constructed a business house of its own, consisting of packing house, fruit drier, cannery and all necessary accessories. In 1910 the volume of business handled by the association was forty thousand dollars and in 1911 the business had increased at a remarkable rate, reaching the one hundred and twenty-four thousand dollar mark. The factory has from time to time been improved and in addition to its original green fruit packing house has an extensive drier and cannery and a vinegar and spray factory. They handle everything in the way of fruits and vegetables which is furnished them by the growers of this district. The factory is so situated as to have excellent shipping facilities, being connected with the Southern Pacific and Oregon Electric lines. The office and works are located at the corner of Ferry and Railroad streets and the residence of Mr. Holt is at 226 East Fourteenth street.

Mr. Holt is not a politician in the sense of being an office seeker although he gives a reasonable amount of attention to public matters. He takes a lively interest in the young men of the community and is a director of the Young Men's Christian Association. He is also a member of the board of governors of the Eugene Commercial Club. Although he has accomplished more than does the average man in a lifetime, he has just attained the prime of life and is in the midst of particularly useful activities which render him one of the most valued men in his locality. Alert to everything that may affect the public good, he is one of the optimistic and careful promoters of the community's business and social welfare, and by his keen intellect and indomitable courage is rendering most efficient service in the community.

J. D. BELT, proprietor of a drug store at Willamina, was born in Missouri, August 31, 1849, the son of Dr. A. M. and Nancy (Ward) Belt. The father, a native of Kentucky, was reared and educated there and moved to Missouri in 1841, where he practiced medicine until 1850. In that year he crossed the plains with ox teams, being six months on the road, and located at Salem, Oregon, after which for twenty years he followed his profession in various parts of the state. He died at Independence, Oregon, in 1878. He was a widely known man, a strong democrat, organized the first Masonic lodge in Oregon, 1855. He owned the first piano ever brought into Oregon, an old-fashioned square instrument which is still in Portland. The mother was born in Kentucky, a daughter of General Ward, of the southern confederacy, and a cousin of Nancy Ward, the famous Kentucky belle. She died in Oregon. In their family were eleven children: Thomas, Joseph and A. M., all deceased; B. F., of Los Angeles, California; J. D., of this review; Charles, deceased; Emily, now Mrs. Jordan, of California; Sarah E., now Mrs. Hewlet, of Portland, Oregon; Myra, the wife of Judge Barnett, of Salem, Oregon; and two children who died in infancy.

J. D. Belt was educated in Willamette University at Salem, Oregon, and was graduated in the class of 1865. He was engaged in farming until 1878, when he went to Salem, where he remained five years, conducting a drug store at that place. Subsequently he located in several communities in Oregon, continuing in the drug business, until 1908, when he came to Willamina, where he has now a store fully stocked with a complete line of sundries. He also owns an interest in a bank at Willamina and was one of its organizers.

In 1878 Mr. Belt wedded Miss Nellie Hackleman, a native of Oregon and a daughter of H. H. Hackleman, who was at one time state treasurer of Oregon. They are the parents of five children: Edith, the wife of W. H. Ormsby, a freight agent for the Northern Pacific Railroad; Harry, county superintendent of Yamhill county; Paul C., in business with his father; and Barbara and Marjorie, at home.

In politics Mr. Belt has been loyal to the democratic party and although he has never sought public office he still has held sundry official posts. He and Mrs. Belt are members of the Presbyterian church in the affairs of which they share a sincere interest. They have been identified also with the order of Maccabees. As a true descendant of his worthy ancestors Mr. Belt has always been a strong factor in advancing the interests of the community in which he has lived.

STEPHEN BAUMAN. Austria and Hungary have furnished many of the men who have proven to be the most thrifty, diligent and conscientious agriculturists of Marion county. Among these is Stephen Bauman who resides four miles northeast of Gervais and whose birth occurred on the 21st of December, 1876, his parents being Leo and Elizabeth (Tepolt) Bauman. They also were natives of Austria-Hungary, and after their marriage in the land of their birth came to America in 1893. They settled in North Dakota, but very soon afterward removed to Oregon and located in Lane county where the father's death occurred two weeks after his arrival. Mrs. Bauman remained here for two years with her children, but at the end of that time moved four miles southeast of Woodburn where the family home is still located, although the mother has returned and moved into Gervais. Mr. and Mrs. Leo Bauman were the parents of two children: Stephen, who is the subject of this sketch; and Leo, who is residing in Gervais.

Stephen Bauman came to America when he was seventeen years of age. In his native land he had acquired a high-school education and had had some experience in the working world. For eight years after his arrival in America he remained at home with his mother, assisting her in the cultivation of her property. At twenty-five years of age, however, he was married, and although he continued the management of his mother's farm he also began learning the carpenter's trade. At the end of two years he had acquired sufficient skill to enable him to move into Gervais and earn a good competence as a carpenter. After two years' employment at this he purchased his mother's and brother's shares in the homestead and has since been engaged in bringing this property under a high state of cultivation and from it is now reaping profitable rewards. Of the seventy acres which he owns fifty acres have been made highly productive for general farming, stock-raising and dairying.

In 1901 Mr. Bauman was married to Miss Mary Andres, whose birth occurred in Oregon on the 7th of September, 1884, and who is a daughter of George and Mary (Borth) Andres, the former a native of Germany and the latter of Wisconsin. The father and mother both came to Oregon with their parents while still young and in this state they were married and established their home. The mother's death occurred here in January, 1909, and the father is still residing on the homestead which is located four and one half miles southeast of Woodburn. They were the parents of eight children, as follows: Mrs. Bauman; Mrs. Lena Zielinsky, who is a resident of Marion county; Louisa, who is the wife of Wolf. Pfaffinger, also of Marion county; Della, George, McKinley and Ernest, all residing at home and Anna, who died in infancy. To Mr. and Mrs. Bauman three children have been born: Louisa M., whose birth occurred on the 3d of January, 1903; Ethel Therese, who was born July 20, 1904; and Emma Lena, born November 14, 1910. It is Mr. Bauman's desire to give these children the advantages of a good education because he is well aware of the advantage his high-school education has been to him.

In politics he is a democrat and is thoroughly in sympathy with the principles and policies of that party. In religious faith he is Catholic, he and the members of his family holding membership in the Roman Catholic church of Woodburn. He has never had occasion to regret leaving his native land because in America he has found the opportunity for advancement, progress and financial success which he sought and in the country of his adoption his life has been such as to commend him to the esteem and confidence of all.

L. C. SCHARPF is the owner of one of the large lumberyards of Pilot Rock, Oregon, and also the cashier and business manager of the only banking institution in that place. He is a young man of unusual ability, having won his way to a leading place in the business affairs and social life of Umatilla county. He was born in Prairie Du Chien, Wisconsin, July 30, 1887, a son of George J. and Mary (Bracher) Scharpf, both of whom were natives of Prairie Du Chien. His father was one of the representative business men of that city, owning a grocery store there for a number of years. In 1901 he removed to Bassett county, Iowa, where he engaged in the lumber business until his death, which occurred in the year 1909. He is survived by a widow who now resides at Portland, Oregon, to which place she removed upon the death of her husband.

L. C. Scharpf was reared in his father's home and acquired his early education in the public schools of Wisconsin and Iowa. He spent the early years of his manhood under the parental roof and worked for his father in the lumber business at Bassett, Iowa. There he learned the rudiments of the business and with this knowledge as the only capital with which to start in life at the age of sixteen years he removed to the state of Washington in the year 1903, locating at Monohan, where he was an employe in one of the lumber mills for three years. His knowledge of the lumber business acquired in his father's yards and office in Iowa made his services very acceptable to his employer. Later he removed to Portland and there secured a clerkship in the Lumberman's National Bank of that city. While serving in that capacity he became a student at the Holmes Business College and was graduated from that institution. He remained an employe of the Lumberman's National Bank of Portland for two and one half years and in the spring of 1909 he severed his connections therewith and removed to Pilot Rock, where he established himself in the lumber business. On May 1, 1911, he was offered the position of cashier of the Bank of Pilot Rock, which as it in no way interfered with his lumber business, he accepted and has ince remained

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASTOR, LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS

in that position, having full charge of all the business interests of the bank.

On the 7th of May, 1912, Mr. Scharpf married Miss Eva M. Fanning of Portland, a daughter of G. F. Fanning. He is a member of Alta Lodge, No. 165, I. O. O. F., of Pilot Rock, and also of Ya Tenneowitz Tribe, No. 27, Improved Order of Red Men. He is an enthusiastic oarsman and is a member of the Portland Rowing Club, and belongs to the Presbyterian church of Pilot Rock. Mr. Scharpf is prominently identified with all the social and business interests of his community, and for one year served as mayor of the city. His influence is always exerted in behalf of advancement and moral improvement.

A. M. FANNING, the present mayor of Sheridan, was born in Ann Arbor, Michigan, January 29, 1867, a son of Charles H. and Phoebe (Dreggs) Fanning. He belongs to a family of Irish descent, an ancestor coming from Limerick, Ireland, in the seventeenth century and settling in Connecticut. Representatives of the name were in the Revolutionary war. Charles H. Fanning was born in the state of New York and removed in boyhood with his parents to Michigan, where he lived during the remainder of his life, his death occurring in 1881. He was a shoemaker by trade. His wife was also born in New York and died in Michigan in 1881. In their family were six sons: Edward, deceased; William A., of El Paso, Texas; James Louis; A. M., of this review; George J., a physician at Wendling, Oregon, and Seth, deceased.

A. M. Fanning was educated in the common schools of Michigan and at the age of seventeen went to Chicago, where he was engaged in hotel work until the following year, or until 1886. He then removed to Butte, Montana, becoming a solicitor for insurance. Later for the period of a year he was employed in a quartz mill. The following year, or in 1887, he came to Oregon, settling in Portland, where he was solicitor for a hospital company and also filled the position of bookkeeper until 1889. In that year he began the study of law, becoming a student in the Oregon State College, where he spent one year. He remained in Portland for ten years, during which time he was in the government mail service as railway mail clerk. Subsequently he came to Sheridan, taking up his abode on a prune ranch which he had previously developed. He remained there three years, when he removed to Sheridan, but he still operates the ranch, which consists of one hundred and twenty acres on which he has good buildings and about seven thousand prune and walnut trees. He also owns in Sheridan a block of fine brick buildings, among which is a warehouse, and an opera house of which he is manager. Besides this he owns property in Michigan and a tract of land near Portland, on which he is cultivating prunes. In addition to his other business interests he has figured in financial circles, having organized the Farmers' State Bank, of which he was president until 1908.

Mr. Fanning was married in 1894 to Miss Nettie Bailey, a native of Michigan, and they have four children, Irma Eleanor, Baylis Gilbert, Beulah Phoebe and Lea Irene, all of whom are in school except the latter. In politics Mr. Fanning is a democrat and as a candidate on that party's ticket was elected mayor of Sheridan, in which capacity he is now serving. He is a stalwart friend of the cause of education and while residing on his farm he was a member of the school board. Fraternally he is allied with the United Artisans and was formerly a member of the Knights of Pythias. He is an honorary member of the State Horticultural Society and a member of the Sheridan Commercial Club, in the organization of which he was instrumental. He may well be called a self-made man for he started in life empty-handed and carefully saved his earnings until able to purchase property, since which time his management of his horticultural and agricultural interests has brought him success. That he is regarded as the foremost citizen of his community is evidenced by the fact that his fellow townsmen have chosen him as their chief executive.

GEORGE W. WOODS, who is residing four miles northeast of Gervais, was born in Saint Joseph county, Indiana, on the 22d of February, 1858, his parents being James and Lucy (Buel) Woods, the former a native of Pennsylvania and the latter of Indiana. They were married in Saint Joseph county and resided there for two years following. At the end of that time they removed to Iowa, where they preempted land and remained until their deaths, which occurred in 1883 and on the 26th of January, 1900, respectively. They were the parents of nine children, six of whom survive, namely: Mary J., the wife of Asa Stoner, of Iowa; Henrietta, who is married to Aaron Jay, also of Iowa; Melissa, who became the wife of Peter Dull, of Iowa; Laura, who is married to John McMinnus, of South Dakota; George W., the subject of this sketch; and O. A., who is living in South Dakota.

After finishing his early education George W. Woods assisted his father on the home property but at the age of twenty-one years started out independently. His first undertaking was the preemption of one hundred and sixty acres in Brule county, South Dakota. On this place he made his home for seven years before selling it and removing to eastern South Dakota, where he lived for three years. At the end of this time he went west and settled in California for a year before coming to Oregon. After arriving in this state he located near Portland, where he was employed in a logging camp for seven years. After he gave up this position he settled three miles southeast of Woodburn, where he now owns the small farm upon which he is residing. He has always been a diligent worker, conscientiously performing the duties which come daily to hand.

In 1896 Mr. Woods was married to Mrs. Lucy Saunders, the widow of William Saunders and a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chalmers.

Her birth occurred in Oregon, where her parents lived throughout the greater part of their lives. They were both natives of Wisconsin and have both passed away. Two children were born to them: Mrs. Woods; and Perry, who is residing in Portland. To Mrs. Woods' first union three children were born: Charles, who is living in Portland; and Emma and Katie, both deceased.

In politics Mr. Woods gives his support to the democratic party but he has no desire for official preferment and in the occupation he has chosen he finds a satisfaction and gratification that he feels no other line of industry would have afforded. Perseverance, diligence and integrity have constituted for him the guiding posts of life, bringing him to the creditable place which he now occupies in the industrial circles of his community.

FINDLEY P. PERKINS, one of Clatsop county's successful ranchmen, was born in Memphis, Tennessee, on the 26th of January, 1854, a son of Jacob and Eleanor E. (Black) Perkins. The father was a native of Jackson county, Mississippi, and the mother of Pennsylvania, but both passed away in Memphis. Of their union there were born ten children, four of whom are still surviving.

After the acquirement of a good practical education, Findley P. Perkins was qualified to begin his career as a wage earner and at the age of nineteen years began to set out for himself. He followed various pursuits for a time in his endeavors to discover something that he would like to adopt for a life vocation. At last he studied telegraphy and for eighteen years thereafter followed the vocation of operator in the railroad service. Withdrawing at the expiration of that period he engaged in the livery business at Falun, Saline county, Kansas. In April, 1904, he removed to Clatsop county, Oregon, and bought one hundred and seventy-one acres of land, known as the Spelmire ranch. It is a valuable property, finely improved and partially under cultivation, and Mr. Perkins' future would seem to be assured and most promising, as ultimately his property will net him a substantial income.

On the 8th of July, 1887, Mr. Perkins' plans for a home of his own had their culmination in his marriage to Miss Aramintta Ellen Cutshall, whose birth occurred in Fulton county, Indiana. Mrs. Perkins is a daughter of the late Andrew H. and Margarette Catherine (Secrist) Cutshall, the father a native of Pennsylvania and the mother of Ohio. The mother passed away while the family were still residents of Indiana, but the father's death occurred in Caldwell, Kansas. Mr. and Mrs. Cutshall were the parents of two daughters.

In matters politic Mr. Perkins has ever been loyal to the principles of the democratic party for whose candidates he casts his ballot. Although progressive and public-spirited in his recognition of the duties of citizenship he has never participated in governmental matters as a candidate for political honors. He is a capable business man in addition to which he possesses the ambition, energy and perseverance which must characterize the man who succeeds in the northwest.

HON. HERVEY M. HOSKINS, now postmaster of McMinnville, has but recently reached the age of thirty-three years, his birth having occurred in Rush county, Indiana, on the 4th of January, 1879. His parents were J. Lewis and Mary L. (Hadley) Hoskins, who were natives of Ohio and of the Hoosier state respectively. The father was reared in Ohio and at the inauguration of hostilities between the north and the south offered his services to the government, enlisting in the Thirteenth Ohio Volunteer Cavalry. During Grant's campaign he was transferred to the infantry and served under General Grant in the battles of the Wilderness, Cold Harbor, Spottsylvania, the Petersburg campaign and in fact took part in the most active campaigns during the war. He was in one of the divisions under General Burnside when they were cut off at Petersburg and was often in the thickest of the fight in the various battles in which his command participated. He was within sight of the noted Confederate leader Lee at the time of his surrender. When the war was over J. Lewis Hoskins went to Indiana, where he was married, settling in Charlottesville. There he followed various business pursuits and for a time engaged in teaching school. He also conducted a feed store, but his health failed him as the result of exposure and hardships which he bore during his military service. Hoping that a change of climate would prove beneficial, he came west to the coast, making the journey by train to San Francisco and thence by water to Oregon. In 1879 he settled where Newberg now stands, although the district was at that time but a country region, the town having not yet been built up. There he has since resided and during his connection with Yamhill county he has devoted his time and energies to general farming, to horticultural pursuits and to cattle-raising. He also helped to mold the first brick that was used in the erection of the first brick building in McMinnville and his business enterprise and progressive spirit have constituted forceful factors in the upbuilding and progress of his section of the state. He is regarded as one of the leaders of the republican party of Yamhill county and upon that ticket was twice elected to the office of county recorder, the duties of which he discharged with promptness and fidelity, winning him the commendation of all concerned. Still higher honors have been awarded him, for he is now representing his district in the state senate. He still lives upon a portion of his home farm, having retained twenty-five acres as a place of residence. He and his wife are members of the Friends church and he belongs also to the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. Throughout Yamhill county he is widely known and his sterling traits of character have gained him recognition as one of its leading and honored citizens.

Hervey M. Hoskins spent his youthful days under the parental roof. He was but a young child when brought by his parents to Oregon and in the public schools acquired his early education, while later he attended the Pacific College at Newberg, from which he was graduated with the degrees of Bachelor of Science and Bachelor of Arts, receiving the former in 1899 and the latter in 1900. He then took a scholarship in Haverford College at Haverford, Pennsylvania, and was graduated from that institution with the B. A. degree in 1903. Following his return home he entered the First National Bank of McMinnville but after being employed there for a number of months accepted a position in the office of the Oregon Fire Relief Association, with which he was connected for three years. In January, 1908 he was appointed postmaster of McMinnville, in which position he has since served giving a public-spirited administration. He has carefully systematized the work of the office and his duties are promptly and capably performed. As is indicated by his present position, he gives his political allegiance to the republican party.

On the 26th of September, 1906, Hervey M. Hoskins was married to Miss Louisa Maloney, of McMinnville, a daughter of Captain H. S. Maloney, county recorder of Yamhill county at this writing, in 1911. Mr. Hoskins belongs to Occidental Lodge, No. 30, I. O. O. F., and to Schafer Encampment, while both he and his wife are members of the Rebekah lodge. He still holds membership in the Friends church of Newberg and his wife is a member of the Presbyterian church. Both are widely known in this county and have an extensive circle of warm friends. Mr. Hoskins is very popular in McMinnville and in the position which he is filling is proving himself a capable officer, well worthy the confidence and trust reposed in him.

ALFRED A. SAARI, a well known photographer of Astoria, was born in Finland on the 29th of June, 1872, being a son of Jacob and Katherine Louise Saari, also natives of Finland, the father having been born in 1835 and the mother in 1830. Seven children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Saari: Wilhelmine, who is living in Finland; Reinhold, who died in Astoria in December, 1890; Jacob Edward, the first member of the family to come to the United States, now living in Finland, where he is superintending the operation of a copper mine for an American syndicate; Louise Emelia, the deceased wife of Abraham Erickson, of Washington, by whom she had twelve children; Vendla Lucina, who is living in Astoria; Josephine, who died when she was six years of age; and Alfred A., our subject. The mother passed away in 1882 and two years thereafter the father and the son Alfred A. emigrated to America. They located in Minnesota, where the father engaged in agricultural pursuits, owning his own land, until his demise in the early '90s.

Alfred A. Saari was only a lad of twelve years when he emigrated to the United States from Finland, whose common schools he had been attending for three years. The education therein begun was further pursued in the schools of New York Mills, Minnesota, following which he attended the normal at Winona for two years. He subsequently entered the high school at St. Paul, Minnesota, from which institution he was graduated in 1891. Immediately thereafter he came to Astoria, clerking in the grocery store of A. V. Allen for two years. At the end of that period he went to California, where he remained for four months, returning to Astoria to take charge of the general merchandise store for the Upshaw Mill Company. He retained this position for six years, when he took up the study of photography with the expectation of making it his vocation. In May, 1902, he opened a studio, that he has operated continuously ever since. He has very pleasant quarters, conveniently and tastefully arranged, his gallery occupying eight rooms. Mr. Saari has met with success in his profession and has interests in several enterprises, all of them netting him good returns on the capital invested.

Ever since naturalization conferred upon him the right of franchise Mr. Saari has given his political support to the men and measures of the republican party. He belongs to the Suomi Temperance Society thus voicing his attitude in regard to the liquor question.

LUCIUS C. BASYE is a native of Oregon who in early life followed farming as a vocation. He cared for his aged parents until the time of their deaths and is now living on the old homestead which the father acquired many years ago and which he improved. It is now a valuable property containing one hundred and forty acres, lying on the Applegate river. Mr. Basye was born in Jackson county, July 6, 1869, a son of W. H. and Emeline (Ashhoff) Basye in whose family were eight children. The father was a native of Indiana and came west at an early day, settling on the ranch upon which he passed away in 1894. After the father's death the mother made her home with her son Lucius until her demise in 1904.

Lucius C. Basye received a common school education and after reaching the age of manhood he continued to operate the old homestead as he had done during the lifetime of his parents and has brought it to a high state of fertility, developing it into a valuable farm of seventy acres, on which he carries on a general agricultural business. In early years he devoted his attention to farming as a means of livelihood, but during late years has given his entire attention to his ranch.

Mr. Basye was married on [illegible] to Miss Vincent, a native of Illinois and to this union have been born five children, Ethel and Geneva H. In his political views Mr. Basye is allied with the Democratic party. He has taken [illegible] in public affairs and has held the office of [illegible] constable. He also [illegible] fraternally with the Modern Woodmen of America.

rector in his district. He is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, being associated with the lodge at Grants Pass. Being brought up in the state of his nativity and associating with friends and neighbors whom he has known all his life, Mr. Basye has formed a wide acquaintance in the community of which he is an honored member. He has long since been recognized as one of the best citizens of the neighborhood in which he lives and the family is held in high esteem by all acquaintances.

DAVID S. LITTLEFIELD is one of the early and honored pioneers of Oregon. To him belongs the distinction of having been one of a company of five men who first discovered gold in paying quantities in Baker county more than fifty years ago. The discovery was made four miles southwest of Baker City and since that time he has been continuously identified with mining interests in Baker county, in which he now maintains his home at Baker City, where he lives retired in the enjoyment of a well earned rest from business cares. He was born September 27, 1829, in Waldo county, Maine, and is the son of Rufus and Sarah (Batchelder) Littlefield, both of whom were natives of the Pine Tree state. The father was born December 25, 1801, and for a livelihood followed farming until the close of his life, in 1886, at the age of nearly eighty-five years. The mother was born June 16, 1796, and passed from this life February 15, 1883. To Mr. and Mrs. Littlefield were born eleven children, of whom three are still living: David S., of this review; Simon B., who resides on the old homestead in Maine; and Jane, the wife of Captain Frank Marden, of Maine.

David S. Littlefield was reared in his parents' home and received his early education in the public schools. As a young man he was employed as a sailor on freighting vessels plying between the coast of Maine and the West Indies, the exports being lumber, which was exchanged for sugar and molasses with which the ship was loaded and returned to the United States. In 1850 he crossed the Isthmus of Panama and settled in San Francisco, later joining his brother in the mining business at Moquelme Hill, California, and remaining with him for a period of nine years, during which time he was continuously engaged in mining. He then went to the Fraser river and later to the Lower Fraser river, at which place he was engaged in placer mining for four months. He then returned to California, remaining in that state for one year, at the end of which time he removed to Portland, Oregon, and thence to Baker county, which was then an uninhabited, primeval wilderness. He there engaged in prospecting and was one of five men who were the first to discover gold in that part of Oregon. The discovery was made four miles southwest of Baker City and resulted not only in the enrichment of its discoverers but in attracting the attention of the people of the western coast to that particular locality, which has since proved to be one of the richest mining and agricultural districts in Oregon. He was one of a company of miners who presented a petition to Governor Gibbs to set aside a county in the state to be named in honor of Colonel E. D. Baker. The petition was favorably received, their request granted, and later the boundary lines of what is now Baker county were established. At the time of Mr. Littlefield's settlement in Baker county there was not a white man living this side of the Blue mountains and they were of necessity compelled to obtain all their provisions from Walla Walla, now in Washington, but at that time a portion of the territory of Oregon. Mr. Littlefield has been a miner all his life and now owns one hundred and sixty acres of rich placer mining ground located near Auburn, and is also the owner of a highly developed stock ranch of one hundred and sixty acres, upon which for a number of years past he has made a specialty of raising horses for the eastern market. The ranch is now under the care and supervision of his son and is one of the well known stock farms of Oregon.

On December 13, 1871, Mr. Littlefield was united in marriage to Mrs. Mary Ann (Nutman) Parkinson, a daughter of George and Ann Nutman, in whose family were eight children. Mrs. Littlefield is a native of England and with her first husband emigrated to America in 1859. The ship on which they sailed became disabled shortly after leaving the English port and they were compelled to return to Liverpool, where they remained for one month and again sailed for America. After a voyage of seven weeks they reached the shores of the new world, settling first at St. Louis, and later removed to Nebraska, from which place Mr. Parkinson with his wife and two children started on their journey across the plains with ox teams, en route for Oregon. After having nearly completed their pilgrimage the father died as they were crossing the plains and was buried at the mouth of the Malheur river. One of the children of the family died some time later and the surviving son, John Parkinson, married Marie Moody and they now reside at Portland. To Mr. and Mrs. Littlefield three children were born. Rufus, who resides on a ranch near Auburn and married Emma Miller by whom he has two children, Dolores and Thelma. Eva is the wife of Oliver Holloway, of Seattle, Washington, and they have three children, Myrtle, David and Lilah. Grace, who completes the family, is the wife of W. D. Holloway, of Baker City.

Mr. Littlefield is a Bryan democrat and has loyally supported the political principles of his chief during the vigorous and determined national campaigns in which he has been engaged. David S. Littlefield is one of the best known and among the most highly honored of the early pioneers of Oregon.

DAVID S. LITTLEFIELD

Having made the business of mining the occupation of his entire life, he has met with gratifying success and he has the distinction of having been honored as one of the special guests at a banquet held in Baker City in 1911, at which time the city celebrated the visit of the first white man to Oregon one hundred years ago. At that banquet Mr. Littlefield was the sole survivor of the company of five men who made the first discovery of gold in this state and at that gathering he gave a brief review of the discovery of gold and also of the struggles and hardships encountered in his early efforts to establish the first church and school at Auburn. Since 1901 he has been a resident of Baker City, where he now lives a retired life. The past years in his life have been years of struggle and hardship but have been fraught with gratifying success and he has a peculiar and honored place in the history of his adopted state during the period of its transformation from an unknown wilderness to one of the rich and prosperous commonwealths of the Pacific seaboard, and with twenty-two grandchildren as his lineal descendants he looks hopefully toward the future as, he nears the crossing of the Great Divide.

J. W. ADAMS, a substantial farmer who has for a long time resided in Baker county, Oregon, was born in Saline county, Missouri, June 2, 1859, his parents being W. D. and Barbara (Baisley) Adams. The father's birth occurred in Mississippi on the 12th of June, 1822, while the mother was a native of Pennsylvania. The youth of J. W. Adams was spent in Missouri, where he received a common-school education. He remained with his parents until he attained the age of nineteen years, when, deciding that fortune held for him more opportunity in the land of the setting sun, he set his face westward, crossed the great plains and upon reaching Oregon settled in Baker county. He then became a miner and worked at that occupation for two years, after which he took up the blacksmith's trade, a vocation which he followed for ten years. He then went to Idaho, where for four years he was engaged at various occupations. Subsequently he returned to Oregon and bought a farm of one hundred and sixty acres in Baker county, upon which he settled. After cultivating this farm for several years he purchased another farm of one hundred and sixty acres, upon which he is now living. This land he has brought up to a high state of cultivation, it now being among the well improved and productive farms of Baker county.

On the 28th of March, 1886, Mr. Adams was married to Miss Mandora Spielman, who was born in Baker county, June 15, 1866. Her father's birth occurred in Maryland, while her mother was a native of Pennsylvania. Our subject and his wife have three children, as follows: Leo K., Mrs. Loula Nell Lee, and William D.

Politically Mr. Adams is a republican. Although he has never been very active politically, he is a prominent man in his community and interested in educational matters and has for six years been clerk of the school board of his district. He belongs to the Christian church, of which he and his family are active supporters, contributing of their means and influence to the well-being of that denomination. Mr. Adams is well and favorably known throughout the county and is popular in the community where he is a resident.

ORA GODSEY, who is conducting a general store in Willamina and also owns good farming property near the town, was born near Maryville, in Nodaway county, Missouri, September 30, 1870, the son of Jesse T. and Sarah N. (Ball) Godsey, the father a native of Illinois and the mother of Indiana. The parents were married in Missouri and lived there until 1879, when they went to Smith county, Kansas, residing there until 1890. In that year they removed to Franklin, Nebraska, where they still live, the father being a retired farmer. In their family were ten children of whom Ora was the eldest. The others are: Edward T., of Maryville, Missouri; Lena May, the wife of William Larington, of Franklin, Nebraska; Juda M., the wife of William Etherton, of Bloomington, Nebraska; Emma P., of Macon, Nebraska; Sylvia, the wife of Charles Huffine, of Holyoke, Colorado; Charles, of Superior, Nebraska; Miles, of Willamina, Oregon; Elizabeth, the wife of Richard Hamm, of Franklin, Nebraska; and Geneva, at home.

Ora Godsey attended the common schools of Franklin, Nebraska, and was graduated from the high school in 1889. He was a student in Franklin Academy from 1889 to 1891 and during the years 1893 and 1894, later attending the State Normal School at Peru, Nebraska. In the meantime he was studying law and continued in the study of the same for two years more, being in 1896 admitted to the Nebraska bar. He then gave up the profession and opened a butcher shop in Franklin, afterward engaging in business at Tecumseh, Nebraska, for two years—1896 and 1897. Subsequently going to Omaha, he was in the employ of the Swift Packing Company for five years, after which he came to Oregon and homesteaded a timber ranch near Willamina, which he later improved and where he now lives. Turning his attention to commercial pursuits, he opened a grocery store and afterward added a stock of general merchandise. In addition to his other activities Mr. Godsey has held the office of post master since February 1, 1911. He owns ninety-six acres of land in his home place and a store building in Willamina; also two and one-half acres adjoining the corporation limits; forty acres at Butler; and one hundred and fifty-two acres at Midway.

In 1892 Mr. Godsey was united in marriage to Miss Agnes M. Boyer and they have four children, Earl, Mervin, Harry and Harold, all in school. In politics Mr. Godsey is a republican, and his fraternal relations are with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows at Willamina. He has filled all the chairs of the local lodge and is also a member of the Encampment at Sheridan. Mr. Godsey has gained a leading place in the business world of his town and his success has been entirely due to his own efforts and honest principles.

CHARLES SCHAMBURG, who for many years was successfully engaged in agricultural pursuits in Washington county, and is now residing in Tigard, Oregon, where he owns a fine residence and has extensive property interests, is one of the estimable citizens whom Germany has furnished the northwest. His natal day was the 10th of February, 1861, and his parents were Gottfried and Augusta Schamburg, both of whom were born, reared and married in the old country. They emigrated to the United States in 1864, locating in Will county, Illinois, where the following year the mother passed away. The father, who was again married in 1872, continued to reside in Will county, being there engaged in farming for eleven years. At the expiration of that time he crossed the prairies with his family to Oregon, filing on a homestead of eighty acres in Washington county, to which he devoted his energies until 1905, when he retired from the active work of the fields and removed to Sherwood, where he has since made his home. To Mr. Schamburg and his first wife there were born four children: Augusta, who is living in Washington county, this state; Charles, our subject; one, who died in infancy; and Annie, who was thirty years of age, at the time of her demise. Mrs. Schamburg had one son by a former marriage, William Bottner, who is also a resident of this county. Mr. Schamburg and his second wife are the parents of five children: August, who lives in the vicinity of Portland; Fritz and Sophia, both of whom are living in this county; Louis, who is deceased; and Katie, living near Portland.

As he was only a child of three years, when brought to the United States by his parents, Charles Schamburg acquired his education in the common schools of Illinois. His early life took a similar course to that of other lads who grew up among rural surroundings, his youthful energies being engaged in work on the farm, until he had attained his majority. He started life on his own account at the age of twenty-two years, and during the succeeding five years operated his father's homestead. Following his marriage, which took place when he was twenty-seven years of age he bought one hundred acres of land that he operated until 1909. He was thrifty and energetic, and so capably applied himself to the cultivation of his fields that he met with lucrative returns. Having exercised more than average business ability and foresight, during the twenty-one years of his active work in connection with the operation of his land, he accumulated a competence that enabled him to withdraw from active work, and he is now living practically retired. He extended the boundaries of his ranch during the period of his residence thereon by the addition of twelve acres, disposing of his entire holding of one hundred and twelve acres, at a price that netted him a handsome profit on the investment. On the 11th of March, 1888, Mr. Schamburg established a home of his own by his marriage to Miss Minnie Schoen, a native of Minnesota and a daughter of Fred and Wilhelmina (Able) Schoen. The parents came to Oregon in 1864, locating in Washington county, where the father died in 1910, while the mother is still living and now makes her home in Cornelius. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Schoen numbered six, three of whom, Emma, Herman and Annie, are deceased. Those living are: Fred, who is a resident of this county; Bertha, who makes her home in California; and Mrs. Schamburg. To Mr. and Mrs. Schamburg have been born four children. Samuel, whose birth occurred on August 23, 1890, was given the advantages of a business education and is now assisting his father. Matilda, who was born August 19, 1892, has been given the advantages of a musical training and is now attending business college, taking a course in stenography. Hattie, who was born April 13, 1894, and Bertha, whose birth occurred October 12, 1895, have both graduated from the common school and are now living at home.

In matters of faith the family are Lutherans, and politically Mr. Schamburg is a republican, but he has never been an aspirant to public office. During the long years of his agricultural career he belonged to the Grange and yet continues to be identified with this association, thus maintaining relations with the ranchmen of this vicinity. His activities are being devoted very largely to the real-estate business at the present time, as he owns a tract of five acres, that has been subdivided into residence lots. Such success as has attended the efforts of Mr. Schamburg has been well merited, as he has applied himself tirelessly to everything he has ever undertaken, realizing that everlasting persistence is paramount in the attainment of our ambitions.

HON. JAMES HEMENWAY, a prominent real-estate dealer of Cottage Grove, is interested in mining operations, was for many years a merchant of the city and is universally considered one of its most public-spirited and enterprising citizens. He was born in Canada, July 3, 1854, the son of William and Catherine (McCord) Hemenway, the former a native of Canada and the latter of Ireland. The parents removed to Wisconsin when James Hemenway was an infant and in that state the family resided for fifteen years, after which, in 1870, they went to Kansas, where the father took up a homestead, upon which he lived until 1888, when he removed to Oregon. In his family were six children: James; Almond, deceased; William F., of Seattle, Washington; D. H., of Cottage Grove; and Rose and Clarence, both of whom are deceased.

James Hemenway received his education in the schools of Wisconsin and began life on his own account at the age of seventeen years. He was first employed at farm work and later was engaged in various occupations. When he came to Oregon with his family in 1888 he settled in Cottage Grove and with his brother, William F. Hemenway, established a livery business with which he remained connected for ten years. He then sold out and engaged in real estate and mining in the Bohemian mining district, operating both lines of business together. One of his prominent mining operations was the opening of the Riverside and Happy Jack mines. He sold these mines, however, after operating them for a year and later purchased a mining claim elsewhere in the Bohemia district. He was for nine years engaged in the general merchandise business in Cottage Grove, purchasing it in 1901 and disposing of it to again engage in the real-estate business, reentering that field in 1910. In addition to his mining interests he owns an eighty acre farm besides property in Cottage Grove, where he resides.

Mr. Hemenway has been twice married. By his first union he became the father of two children: W. Almond, of Cottage Grove, who is married and has three children, Margaret, Catherine and Read; and Hazel, a graduate of the high school, who is engaged in teaching and resides at home. In 1905 Mr. Hemenway wedded Mrs. Carrie Northway, a native of Indiana.

Mr. Hemenway, who is a republican and who has been actively and prominently engaged in politics for many years, was elected in 1901 as a member of the state legislature, serving for one term. He was in the legislature when the Oregon system was adopted, at which time the Torrence land law was enacted. During the early years of his residence in Cottage Grove, when the town contained a population of only two hundred and fifty people, having four stores and a flour mill, he was elected a member of the council and served in that capacity for almost seven years. The city has now attained a population of twenty-five hundred people and Mr. Hemenway has been prominently associated with all the enterprises of a public nature during this period of growth in the population. During the time he was a member of the council the first water plant was installed. He was deputy tax collector for one term and has also been deputy sheriff of Lane county. He has always been actively interested in educational matters and served for one term as clerk of the school board. In his fraternal connections Mr. Hemenway is a member of the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks and the Knights of Pythias.

His long and active business and political career in Lane county has contributed very materially to the upbuilding of the business, political and social interests of the city and county. As a member of the Oregon state legislature he was active and efficient and while in that position formed the acquaintance of large numbers of people throughout the state. He is universally recognized as one of the leading citizens of Cottage Grove and as he has always taken a deep interest in all matters of public import he is considered one of the most valuable of its citizens. Affable in demeanor, courteous to his customers and optimistic in temperament, he has made an unusually large number of friends and acquaintances, all of whom hold him in high esteem.

W. H. FELLMAN. One of the [illegible] recent acquisitions to the mercantile community of Astoria is W. H. Fellman, [illegible] of the Astoria Furniture Company [illegible] the thriving enterprises of this city. His birth occurred in Cleaborg, Finland, on the 14th of February 1881, his parents being Abraham and Maria (Ultving) Fellman. Three daughters and one son were born to them, the former with the mother remaining to make their home in Finland, while the father is deceased.

W. H. Fellman was given the benefit of educational advantages well fitting him for a commercial career, having pursued a business course in a commercial college at Brahestad after completing the common and high schools of his native city. He began his wage-earning career as a bookkeeper in a saw mill in his native country, continuing in this capacity for two years. Anxious to investigate for himself the opportunities and advantages said to be available in the United States, in 1903 he took passage for this country, arriving in Astoria with [illegible] dollars. He obtained work in the yards of the Clatsop Mill Company, where he remained for two months, then took a position as shipping clerk for a few months. He subsequently accepted a clerical position with H. H. Zapf, a furniture dealer conducting in his employ for two months. From there he went to the Hartman Furniture Company as shipping clerk in their extensive shipping department. [illegible] his position he again became identified with the furniture business as clerk for D. Shanahan, with whom he remained for three years. In the meantime he had been saving a portion of his salary and had accumulated sufficient capital to buy an orchard in California, which he kept for a year, then disposing of it, he returned to Astoria and bought out the furniture business of D. Shanahan, which [illegible] he has since been conducting under the name of the Astoria Furniture Company. During the period of his ownership he has increased the capital stock from twenty-five hundred to twenty-five thousand dollars, having the largest store of the kind in the city. He carries a general line of [illegible] and has twenty-five thousand feet of floor space devoted to the display of his stock. Although he has been a resident of the United States but eight years, he has mastered the duties of his store in a manner commensurate with modern American business methods and is meeting with most gratifying success.

On the 15th of September, 1904, Mr. Fellman was united in marriage to Miss Ida Kastell, also a native of Finland, [illegible] and they are [illegible] the parents of one son, Kasten Robert, whose birth occurred in Astoria on the 22d of November, 1905.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Fellman are members of the Lutheran church, while fraternally he is a member of the Masonic order, having taken the degrees of the Blue Lodge. He also belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America. Ambitious and enterprising, Mr. Fellman possesses the qualities that make for success in any country or occupation. He came to this country determined to win and to that end strained every nerve, his indomitable courage and tenacity of purpose enabling him to convert obstacles into opportunities.

IRA E. PURDIN. For fifty-seven years a resident of Oregon, Ira E. Purdin is one of the honored citizens of the state and his farm of three hundred and fifty acres two miles north of Forest Grove, Washington county, is convincing evidence of his ability as an agriculturist and stock-raiser. He was born in Boone county, Missouri, November 7, 1845, a son of Ira E., Sr., and Deborah (Patterson) Purdin. William Purdin, the grandfather of our subject on the paternal side, was a native of England. He came with his parents to America at the age of seven years but was soon thrown upon his own resources by the death of his natural protectors, his father having been killed fighting for American independence. After growing to maturity he engaged in farming for a year at Redstone, Virginia (now West Virginia), and then moved to Harrison county, Ohio. After spending two years there he settled in Brown county, Ohio. He died at the age of eighty-eight and his wife at the age of ninety-three.

Ira E. Purdin, Sr., was born at Redstone, Virginia, and became in his boyhood a resident of Maysville, Kentucky. At the age of seventeen he began to learn the cabinetmaker's trade and early in 1825 removed to Boonville, Missouri, where he engaged in cabinet making. He also was connected with the grocery business two years and with the hotel business twelve years. After leaving Boonville he spent two years in Linn county, Missouri, and ten years in Boone county, near Columbia, during which time he engaged in agriculture and stock-raising. Believing that conditions were more favorable in the northwest, he started for Oregon with his family in 1854 via New Orleans and the Nicaragua route. The travelers changed boats four times on the San Juan river in accomplishing a distance of twelve miles and finally reached the Pacific coast in wagons drawn by oxen and mules. They went aboard the steamer Sierra Nevada, which landed them in San Francisco at the end of two weeks. After spending four days in the metropolis of California they started for Portland by steamer, which was taken over the bar by Captain Flavel, the city of Portland being reached April 11, 1854. Mr. Purdin purchased a farm of Ben Allen one mile north of Greenville and relocated a donation claim of three hundred and twenty acres, applying himself to the development of both properties for eight years. He then purchased a donation claim of three hundred and eighty acres from W. Mulkey, upon which he spent the remainder of his days. This place is now owned by his son, Ira. Mr. Purdin was a pioneer of Ohio, Missouri and Oregon and took the first modern wagon to Ohio. He was for sixty years a member of the Methodist Episcopal church and throughout a long and useful life was active, progressive and enterprising in an unusual degree. His name is inseparably connected with the development of the region with which he became identified in this state. The maiden name of the mother of our subject was Deborah Patterson. She was born in Shelby county, Kentucky, and was a member of an old Virginia family and a daughter of Major William Patterson, who was born in Virginia and served in the War of 1812. He finally settled in Shelby county, Kentucky. Mr. Purdin died at the age of ninety-one years and his wife was called away at the age of eighty-six years. They had six children, Ira E. being the youngest. The others are: C. W., who died in Oregon; Mrs. Mary A. Watson; W. W., who was the first incumbent of the county surveyor's office in Washington county and is now deceased; Mrs. E. J. Barrett; and J. P., who died in this state at the age of twenty.

Ira E. Purdin came to Oregon with his parents at the age of eight years. He received his early education in the common schools and later attended the Tualitin Academy and Pacific University. He early gave evidence of a taste for literature and science and has all his life been a student and investigator. He has devoted his attention principally, however, to agricultural pursuits and many years ago purchased a farm adjoining that of his father. Later he acquired the home place and was at one time the owner of four hundred and thirty acres in this county. He has given considerable attention to fruit-raising and is one of the large shippers to the Portland market. He also raises hogs, cattle and sheep upon an extensive scale and is one of the most successful general farmers in this part of the state.

In 1880, at Chillicothe, Missouri, Mr. Purdin was married to Miss Alice H. Purdin, who was born in Linn county, Missouri, a daughter of Ira and Martha (Griffey) Purdin, the former of whom was a native of Bloomington, Indiana, and the latter of Boone county, Missouri. She was a granddaughter of Charles B. Purdin, who was born in Delaware. He removed to Missouri and was for a number of years identified with the development of that state, living to the advanced age of ninety years. He became prominent in his adopted state and the town of Purdin was named in his honor. The father of Mrs. Purdin was a tinner by trade. He came to Portland in 1884 and conducted a tin shop and hardware store in that city. He died in 1900 and his wife passed away at Vancouver, Washington. Four children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Ira E. Purdin, their names being: Cora I., who died in April, 1905; Elmer V.; Edna C.; and Homer G. The mother of these children was called away in 1906.

After the death of his wife Mr. Purdin moved to Portland, where he lived for about five years. In October, 1910, he returned to his farm and has since resided amidst scenes that are endeared to him by many associations. In 1908 he became a member of the Oregon Academy for the Advancement of Science. He has delivered several addresses before the academy at Portland, one of which was upon the Geology of the Willamette valley, a subject on which he is remarkably well informed from personal observation. He is a member of the Pioneer Society of Oregon and also of the Grange. He has given his support to the democratic party ever since he arrived at voting age and has been an active and intelligent adviser in the councils of the party in Washington county. He served as member of the county democratic committee and in 1878 occupied a seat in the lower house of the state legislature, assisting in the election of James H. Slater to the United States senate. He is highly respected for his sterling qualities and has made many friends, who have ever found him to be a man of the strictest integrity—one whose life has commended him to the entire confidence of his associates and acquaintances.

O. M. FAULCONER, proprietor of the Red Front Livery Stable at Sheridan, was born near The Dalles, Oregon, September 2, 1859, a son of Marcellus and Caroline (Baunbridge) Faulconer, both natives of Missouri, the father being of Scotch parentage. He was reared in Missouri and crossed the plains in 1849, at the time of the discovery of gold, locating in the mining regions, but the following year, in 1850, he came to Sheridan, taking up a donation claim three miles west of the town. Later he went to eastern Oregon where he engaged in freighting for five or six years, returning in 1862 to Sheridan, where he spent his remaining days, dying in 1907. He was a farmer and also engaged in mercantile business in Sheridan, where he erected a great many of the present buildings. He was a republican in politics, a very prosperous man, and highly respected. His wife crossed the plains with her parents in 1852 and was married in Oregon. She died in 1911. Six children were born to them: Alice, who is the wife of L. L. Shortridge, of Willamina, Oregon; O. M., of this review; Ollie, the wife of J. A. Waugaman, of McMinnville, Oregon; Clara, the wife of Lee Rowell, of Sheridan, Oregon; J. D., a resident of Anacortes, Washington; and H. T., of Sheridan Oregon.

O. M. Faulconer was educated in the common schools of Oregon and from his youth remained at home, working in connection with his father until the latter's death. He operated and managed the farm until two years ago, when he engaged in the livery business, buying an excellent barn, known as the Red Front Livery Stable, which contains eight head of horses. He also owns a beautiful residence in Sheridan.

In 1886 Mr. Faulconer wedded Miss Ida Bower and two children were born to them: Roy, who is in a store in Sheridan, and Guy, who is in the livery barn. Mr. Faulconer's first wife died seven years after their marriage and in 1899 he was married to Miss Claudia Steward. They have one child, Alma, now eight years of age. In politics Mr. Faulconer is a republican. Both he and his wife are members of the Christian church, of which he is also a deacon. Having passed so many years of his life near Sheridan, he is widely and favorably known and his just business methods and upright character have won for him a prominent place among his associates.

ELZA PARKER, who is residing on his farm of one hundred and seventy acres three miles southeast of Gervais, was born in Silverton, Marion county, Oregon, on December 28, 1849, his parents being William and Cynthia A. (Davis) Parker, the former a native of England and the latter of the state of Ohio. The parents were married in Ohio, where they remained for a few years before removing to Illinois, and after having resided in Illinois and Missouri for a short time they traveled across the plains in 1847. They made the trip with ox teams and came direct to Silverton where William Parker located on a donation claim of six hundred and forty acres. After improving this and residing upon it for two years he disposed of it and moved to what is known as Parkersville, twelve miles northeast of Salem. At that place he purchased a sawmill together with six hundred and forty acres of land and resided there until his death in 1877. In addition to operating the sawmill he also built a gristmill which he managed until 1867. Idleness and indolence were foreign to his nature, and realizing that the rich soil of the country was one of the greatest of its resources and offered abundant remunerations he also undertook the cultivation of a large portion of the land which he owned. William Parker's death occurred in August, 1877. By them eight children were born, two others having died in the east. Thomas Jefferson William D., of St. John, Washington; Harvey A. D., whose birth occurred in 1843 and who is now residing in Portland, Oregon; Mrs. Mary E. Brunet, deceased; Elza, the subject of this sketch; Benjamin Franklin, deceased, who occurred in 1851; Lucinda, who died when eighteen years of age, and Mary Cooper, whose death occurred when she was about seven years of age.

In his youth Elza Parker received his education in the district schools but as the early age at which he started to assist in the work of the farm prevented him from attending school for any length of time. He was married by the month, but at the end of that time he had saved enough money to buy forty acres from his father and to this he has since been engaged in cultivating and improving this property. He now has a fine farm one hundred and forty acres of which have been brought to a high state of productiveness. His life has been spent among the farming interests of the state. He has been one of the active agents in developing the natural resources of which this district is so rich. Persistent labor and untiring energy, together with a conscientious attention to details have made him one of the most successful agriculturists in Marion county.

Mr. Parker has been twice married. His first union occurred in 1877, when he was married to Miss Helen Cline, a daughter of William and Lorinda (Fuller) Cline. Her birth occurred in Marion county, Oregon, her parents having come to this state in 1852. The father and mother have both passed away, the former in December, 1911, at Mount Angel, aged eighty-three years. To Mr. and Mrs. Parker four children were born: Linda C., whose birth occurred in 1879, and who is the wife of George Nice, of Seattle, Washington; Ed. F., born in 1881, who is married and living in Olympia, Washington; Dora, whose birth occurred in 1883, and who is married and living in Olympia; and Dick, born in 1884 and also residing in Olympia. Mr. Parker's second union occurred in 1893, when he was married to Josephine Woolery, whose birth occurred in Iowa on the 18th of August, 1867, and who is a daughter of Henry L. and Margaret (Lightfoot) Woolery. The father was a native of Canada and the mother was born in Illinois and their marriage occurred in Iowa where they lived for the ensuing four years. At the end of that time they went to California where they resided for twenty years before coming to Marion county and settling near Brooks. Subsequently they removed to Gervais where they are still living. To this union five children were born, namely: Mrs. Parker; Walter, who is residing near Gervais; Henry, who is living at home; Rosa, who is the wife of George Richie; and Mrs. Nettie McDougal, also a resident of Gervais. To Mr. and Mrs. Parker six children have been born: Ima, Elsie and Velma, whose births occurred in 1894, 1896 and 1897 respectively; Daisy, born in 1899; Irene, whose birth occurred in 1902; and Vena, deceased, whose birth occurred in 1905.

In politics Mr. Parker gives his support to the democratic party, but has never sought the honors or emoluments of office. He is a member of the Catholic Order of Foresters of Gervais in which he takes an active interest. He is one among many who deserve great credit for their successful careers inasmuch as their achievements have been due entirely to their own efforts. Industrious habits and straightforwardness have enabled him to maintain his standing in the community as a desirable and substantial citizen.

FREMONT LOVETT LENT, of Lents, Oregon, a suburb of Portland, a well known and prosperous farmer now living retired, was born in Multnomah county, Oregon, December 2, 1856. His parents, O. P. and Martha A. (Buckley) Lent, were natives of Ohio and Virginia respectively. Their marriage occurred in Ohio and shortly afterward, in 1852, they determined to cross the great American desert to the Pacific coast. On arriving in Oregon they settled in Multnomah county, in Richey valley, ten miles east of Portland, shortly afterward taking up a government claim of three hundred and twenty acres of land there, now known as Sycamore. They lived there until 1866, when O. P. Lent sold his half section of land and moved to where Lents now stands, a thrifty suburb of Portland one-half mile distant from the city limits of Portland. There he bought one hundred and ninety acres of land and, population increasing, a town soon sprang up which was given the name of Lents in his honor. He sold this farm in 1889 and retired, living in Mount Tabor until 1898, when his death occurred, the mother passing away in 1905. O. P. Lent followed farming and the sawmill business all his life. He became the father of twelve children, as follows: George P., who is a resident of Portland; Mrs. Emma L. McGrew, of Lents, Oregon; Fremont L., of this review; Ella, the wife of Columbus Whitlock, of Silverton, Oregon; Oscar E., living in Lents; Rosetta A., the wife of Philip Evans, of Prosser, Washington; Elizabeth, who gave her hand in marriage to Frank P. Wood and resides in Los Angeles, California; Oliver W., who makes his home in Sunnyside, Portland; William M., Charles P. and Jean, all of whom are deceased; and one who died in infancy.

The youth of Fremont Lovett Lent was spent in Oregon, his education being gained in the common schools. He remained with his parents until twenty-one years of age, when he embarked in the wood business and farming, an occupation which he has since followed, though not having been actively engaged in farming for some years. He is living in his fine home in Lents and owns also one hundred and sixty acres of land in Tillamook county, Oregon, forty miles south of Tillamook, part of which is in a high state of cultivation, the remainder being in heavy and valuable timber.

On the 20th of March, 1904, Mr. Lent was married to Miss Laura A. Hannaford, whose birth occurred in Bridgeport, Connecticut, on the 20th of December, 1863, her parents being Stephen and Harriet M. Hannaford. The father was a native of England, while the mother was born in Connecticut. Their marriage occurred in Connecticut and in that state Stephen Hannaford passed away. His widow then removed to Chicago, Illinois, where her demise occurred in 1890. They were the parents of eighteen children, four of whom are still living, namely: George, who makes his home in Chicago; Margaret, living in Connecticut; Charles, also a resident of Chicago; and Mrs. Anna L. Lent. Elizabeth, Robert H., Louisa and William are all now deceased and the other children of the family passed away in early life. Unto our subject and his wife was born a daughter, Ruth H., whose natal day was February 23, 1909.

Politically Mr. Lent is independent in his views, bestowing his support on those candidates of the various political parties whom he deems most worthy of the positions to which they aspire. He has never been an office seeker or holder. He is a member of the Grange and he and his family are of the

O. P. LENT

MRS. O. P. LENT

Protestant faith. Coming of one of the early and honored families of Oregon, Fremont L. Lent occupies a position of respect and confidence in his community and is one of the substantial citizens of Lents and well known in business circles in Portland.

OSCAR E. LENT, a well known farmer and business man of Lents, Oregon, was born November 25, 1865. His parents were Oliver P. and Martha A. (Buckley) Lent, a more detailed account of whom appears elsewhere in this work in connection with the sketch of Fremont Lovett Lent, a brother, of our subject. The youth of Oscar E. Lent was passed in Oregon, where he received a good common school and business education. He remained with his parents until attaining his majority and then engaged in farming and in the wood business quite extensively and also has been connected with the sawmill business. He is occupying a fine home in Lents, where he owns many vacant lots and where he is also a heavy stockholder in the Grange Hall.

On the 31st of October, 1888, Mr. Lent was married to Miss Vilura L. Anderson, whose birth occurred in St. Croix county, Wisconsin, March 4, 1866, her parents being William and Augusta (Marshall) Anderson. The father was a native of Pennsylvania, while the mother was born near Boston, Massachusetts. Their marriage occurred, however, in Wisconsin, where Mrs. Anderson passed away in 1869. William Anderson continued living in that state until 1894, when he came to Oregon, here residing until the time of his death, which occurred October 12, 1911. He was twice married and by his first wife had two children: Mrs. Vilura L. Lent; and William Anderson, living in Lents, Oregon. For his second wife William Anderson, Sr., chose Eva Beers, a native of Minnesota, whom he wedded in 1882 and by whom he had five children, as follows: Mrs. Claude Rowland, of Corvallis, whose husband is a college professor; Cathie, who is the wife of John F. Watts and resides in Canada; Merlie, who is a resident of Colusa county, California; Verlie, a college student at Corvallis, Oregon; and Thomas K., at home. Unto Oscar E. and Vilura L. (Anderson) Lent have been born four children, namely: Claude P., born May 31, 1890, who is in the high school and is still under the parental roof; Leila E., born February 12, 1892, who is a high school graduate, has also been educated in music and is now attending Willamette University; Jasper C., whose natal year was 1893 and who is a high school student; Oscar Paul, whose birth occurred on the 7th of October, 1895, and who is also a high school student.

Mr. Lent is of the democratic faith politically but has never been active in politics nor a seeker of public office, although he has been a member of the school board in Lents for eight years. He is a member of the Grange and also belongs to the Woodmen of the World and the Maccabees. His religious faith is indicated by his membership in the Universalist church, while his wife belongs to the Methodist Episcopal church. Oscar E. Lent, by his continued residence in this county and his activity in business, fraternal and church life, has formed the acquaintance of a large number of the best people of Multnomah county and Portland, as well as being a very prominent man in Lents, where he resides. He is among the many useful business men of Oregon and wherever known is respected for the many good qualities which he possesses.

WILLIAM D. LOCKHART is engaged in farming in the vicinity of Sumpter, Oregon, and the success which he is now enjoying is the result of a life of well directed energy and thrift. He was born in Ashland county, Ohio, about the year 1842, and on the paternal side comes of Scotch ancestry, the family being founded in America by his grandfather who was a native of Scotland. His father, David Lockhart, was born in Pennsylvania, and became an early settler of Ohio where he followed farming, clearing a tract of land in Ashland county between the years 1820 and 1830. In that state he married Miss Fleming who died when her son William was very young. The family numbered nine children, four sons and five daughters. One of the sons, Hiram [illegible] served in the Civil war as a member of the Ohio infantry regiment, and died in Eastern Oregon, about 1881. The eldest brother, David, died before the birth of William D. Lockhart and his other brother, John Lockhart, was living in Ohio when last heard from fifteen years ago. The eldest sister, Malona, also died before the birth of William D., and the next sister, Mary, [illegible] passed away about the time [illegible] The third sister, Martha, died while [illegible] in the army about 186[illegible] and Mary married in Colorado about thirty five years ago but has been dead about twenty six years, passing away in Jacksonville, Oregon. The youngest sister, Matilda [illegible] to Benicia, California and for [illegible] after engaged in teaching school [illegible] in San Francisco at the time of the earthquake, and as no word has been heard from her since it is believed that she lost her life in that disaster.

William D. Lockhart had very meager educational advantages, attending the country school for only a few months each year. [illegible] the army he learned to [illegible] later took up the trade of [illegible] freighting in Colorado. [illegible] acquainted [illegible] of learning and in the [illegible] he has learned many valuable lessons. His first business [illegible] the plains in company with his brother [illegible] died in Ontario. He afterward engaged in the manufacture of [illegible] ty, Colorado, in connection with a man by the name of Barkley. This was about 1867 and they had sixty cows. Mr. Lockhart had previously had two years' experience in cheese making in Ohio before he entered the army. In 1868 he purchased some cows at fifty dollars a piece in the vicinity of Fifty rado City, Colorado, and joined forces with a Mr. Douglas. They owned together seventy cows and did a good dairy and cheese-making business until a large band of Comanche Indians made a raid on their neighbors and drove several head of horses away. Mr. Lockhart went as one of a party of twenty-seven men in pursuit of the Indians. On one occasion they had a fight with a band of warriors who wounded two of their men and shot seventeen of the horses, thus dismounting nearly all the party. The white men then retreated to Colorado City, nearly one hundred miles distant, glad to escape with their lives. This episode caused Mr. Lockhart to lose another summer's work. The following winter he drove stage and freight teams and in the spring, selling his cows and his ponies, he started for California, going by rail to Salt Lake City, thence by stage to White Pine and later over the Central Pacific Railroad to Sacramento City. At Stockton, California, he met his two sisters who, while he was in the army, had crossed the plains with their uncle, Peter Johnson.

For about two years Mr. Lockhart remained at Stockton and in San Joaquin valley where he engaged in grain farming, but the drought utterly ruined his crop and all he had remaining was a six horse team and wagon. About 1872 he came to Oregon and for a year engaged in making cheese on Hadley's ranch in Lane county. He next removed to Wallowa valley, stopping in Union county, where he made cheese through the summer and took up a land claim, but owing to the outbreak of hostilities among the Joseph tribe of Indians he never filed on the claim. On leaving Wallowa county he removed to Burnt River and made cheese for one summer on the ranch of James Fleetwood. He was next located on the Burris & McClellan ranch where he handled about forty cows and made cheese one summer. On the Locey ranch on Upper Willow creek he again engaged in cheese-making, keeping from forty to fifty cows. Removing to the Reeves ranch on Clover creek he milked about eighty cows, using the product in cheese-making to the time of the Bannock Indian war of 1877 and 1878. He later made cheese on the little Mulhall creek, and the next year took a ranch near Ironsides on Bridge creek, where for seven years he was engaged in cheese-making, milking from sixty to eighty cows. While there he became the owner of a large number of cattle and horses and otherwise prospered. On selling that ranch he removed to Ontario where he continued in cheese-making for about four years and then came to Baker county, purchasing one hundred and sixty acres of land on Powder river at what is now called Lockhart station on the Sumpter Valley Railroad, although there were no railroads at that time. The following winter he drove his cattle to Eagle valley, but the winter proved very severe and it was impossible to buy more hay when his supply gave out so he lost all his cattle. Through the succeeding summer he engaged in hauling lumber with a six horse team and afterward followed the logging business for about seven years. During that time he purchased three hundred and twenty acres of land in Sumpter valley, suitable for the growing of hay and grain, and he also operated a cheese dairy for two years and conducted a milk dairy at Sumpter for about three years. Since selling his cows, or for about four years, he carried on general farming near Sumpter. All this indicates that his life has been a very busy one in which have been few idle hours.

Mr. Lockhart enlisted in June, 1862, for service in the Union army as a member of Company I, Fifty-second Ohio Volunteer Infantry, with which he remained for three years. He participated in the battles of Perryville, Bowling Green, Nashville, Stone River, Chickamauga, Tannehill, Buzzards Roost, New Hope Church, Kenesaw, Resaca, Dalton, Rome and Peach Tree Creek. Near Atlanta he was taken prisoner and sent to Andersonville, Georgia, whence he was transferred to the prison at Florence, South Carolina. After five months he was paroled and when Sherman's army reached Charleston, South Carolina, he rejoined his regiment with which he remained until mustered out at Washington, D. C., following the Grand Review at the close of the war. He received his discharge at Columbus, Ohio. Mr. Lockhart has had other military experience, having served as a scout in the Bannock Indian war in Oregon in 1877-8 under Major General O. O. Howard. He now draws a pension of twelve dollars per month in recognition of his service in the Civil war.

Mr. Lockhart was married at Stockton, California, about 1872, to Miss Alice Chase, a daughter of Chance Chase. With her mother and brother she went from Iowa to California at an early day. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Lockhart have been born several children. The eldest, John Oliver, living at Bandon, Oregon, married Miss Sweeton and has one son. Archie died in Malheur county, Oregon, about 1878 when almost five years of age. Almer died in Sumpter Valley in 1911 when about thirty-three years of age. Thomas Guy married Miss Laura Cooley who died about ten years ago leaving a son, and for his second wife Mr. Lockhart chose Pearl Dean. Frank James resides with his father on the home farm. Mame Lily is the wife of Bert Jenkins living at Oaks Bar, California, and they have three sons and a daughter. Edith died in early childhood about twenty years ago.

Such in brief is the life history of William D. Lockhart, and one who reads between the lines will recognize the fact that his time has been given mostly to business pursuits and that unfaltering industry and energy have been the source of his success.

CAPTAIN JOHN BERGMAN is one of the heroes of the sea. To himself and his volunteer crew belongs the credit of having saved the lives of eighteen people from the wreck of the Tacoma, which foundered and sank off the coast of Oregon many years ago. In recognition of his heroic service and that of his crew, each was presented with a gold medal by the United States government. He was born in Hanover, Germany, in the year 1848, and is the son of Louis and Elizabeth Bergman. His parents were both natives of Germany and spent their lives in their native land, his father dying at the age of twenty-nine and his mother in 1906, at a very advanced age.

Captain John Bergman was reared in his parents' home and during his childhood received but limited educational advantages. At the age of fifteen he began life for himself and chose as his vocation the career and fortunes of a deep-water sailor and as such continued until the time of his emigration to the United States, which occurred in the year 1869. On reaching New York he spent one year in the great metropolis of the new world and then shipped as a sailor on the schooner Forest King, outbound for the Pacific coast by way of Cape Horn. In the latter part of the year 1870 he made his way to the Columbia river, where he engaged in the fishing industry, to which he added the business of a salmon cannery, which he continued to operate until the year 1883, during which time he made his home at Astoria. After closing out his interest in the salmon cannery in 1883 he purchased a canning establishment at Florence, Oregon, and to this gave his careful attention for a period of four years, at the end of which time he disposed of that property and purchased the passenger steamer Favorite. This boat he at once put in commission and, with himself in command, he sailed for three years, his steamer being engaged largely in government work. It was during this period in the life of Captain John Bergman, while his good ship Favorite was at Umpqua, that the wreck of the Tacoma occurred. Notwithstanding that a perfectly equipped and well manned life-saving station was located at Coos Bay, the keeper refused to take chances in the rescue of the unfortunate crew and passengers on board the Tacoma, and his failure to do his duty as a trusted guardian of the lives and property off the coast of Umpqua, afforded Captain Bergman an opportunity to show the genuine metal of his manhood and utilize his skill and knowledge as a worthy captain of the sea in voluntarily attempting, at the hazard of his life and that of his crew, to accomplish the work of rescuing the perishing from the Tacoma. Thinking only of his duty, without counting the hazard of the task which confronted him, he at once weighed anchor and with his volunteer crew turned the prow of his boat directly toward the sinking ship and with all possible speed spanned the distance between the coast and the helpless victims on the sinking ship. He was fortunate in reaching the goal in time to rescue all souls, whose only hope for life in that hour of peril was in the hands of the brave captain of the Favorite. In recognition of his valiant service and the success which attended his unselfish efforts, Captain John Bergman and all the members of his crew were presented with gold medals by the United States government. Shortly after this event he sold his steamer and received the appointment as keeper and master of the life-saving station at Jetty and in that position he continued for the ensuing period of twenty years and three months, after which he retired from active seafaring life and has since devoted himself exclusively to his private interests. He is a resident of Florence, where he owns and resides in one of the finest residences in the city. He is the owner of one quarter section of timber land in Lane county and three hundred and twenty acres in Douglas county. In addition to these holdings he also owns four residence lots in the city of Portland and much valuable real estate property beside his residence in Florence. In August, 1910, he was one of the principal factors in the organization of the Lane County State & Savings Bank. This financial corporation is capitalized for ten thousand dollars. The officers of the institution are as follows: Fred Hollister, the son-in-law of Captain Bergman, president; Captain John Bergman, vice president; John W. Bergman, a son of Captain Bergman, second vice president and cashier; and Henry Bergman, a son of Captain Bergman, first assistant cashier.

Captain Bergman is affiliated with the democratic party and as representative of that great political organization he has held several of the minor offices in his county. He has, however, never sought political preferment of any kind and his having served in several offices of public trust is solely the result of unsolicited favors tendered him by his fellow citizens. Fraternally he is identified with the Ancient Order of United Workmen, while his religious faith is indicated by his membership in the Lutheran church, to which his wife also belongs.

In the year 1881 Captain Bergman was united in marriage to Miss Lena Moy, who is a native of Switzerland and who emigrated to America in 1879. Her parents were also natives of Switzerland and in that country continued their residence until the time of their death. To Captain Bergman and his wife seven children were born, Lena, who died at the age of fifteen years, while attending school in California; John W., cashier of the Lane County State & Savings Bank of whom a more extended review is published further on; Carl, who is employed as a bookkeeper in Douglas county; Henry, first assistant cashier of the Lane County State & Savings Bank; Mary, now the wife of Fred Hollister, president of the Lane County State & Savings Bank; Otto, who was accidentally drowned at the age of four years; and Frederick, who died in infancy. Each one of the surviving children of Captain and Mrs. Bergman has received a thorough education in the public schools and in college.

JOHN W. BERGMAN is the popular cashier of the Lane County State & Savings Bank of Florence. He was born at Astoria, Oregon, on the 8th of January [illegible] and is a son of Captain John and Lena (Moy) Bergman, of whom an extended review appears above. He was reared in his parents' home and educated in the public schools of this state, later pursuing both a classical and commercial course in Albany College, from which institution he was graduated at the end of three years with the degree of B. A. At the age of nineteen he entered the service of the United States government as a member in the life-saving department and served as a regular member of the crew at Coos Bay Station for a period of three years and seven months and later he was in the service at Umpqua life-saving station. He eventually severed his connection with the life-saving service and was later employed as one of the surveying crew of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company for a period of nine months. On retiring from that occupation he became one of the prominent factors in the organization of the Lane County State & Savings Bank of Florence and of that financial house he is at present first cashier and second vice president. Mr. Bergman is the owner of one of the handsome residences of Florence, in which he resides, and one of the principal stockholders in the Lane County State & Savings Bank. He also owns one hundred and sixty acres of valuable merchantable timber located nine miles northeast of Gardiner, this state, and also forty acres of merchantable timber on the Siuslaw river, twelve miles from Florence. In addition to the above holdings in real estate he also owns forty choice city lots in Glenada, across the river from Florence, and several residence lots in Florence, as well as valuable residence properties in Portland.

On the 6th of September, 1911, John W. Bergman was united in marriage to Miss Isabella F. Kyle, whose birth occurred at Florence, Oregon, on the 28th of December, 1889, and who received her education in the public schools of Florence and is a graduate of the high school of that city. She is the daughter of William M. and Christina (Bovange) Kyle, natives of England and Sweden respectively. The parents were married in Astoria, this state, and established their residence in that city, where they continued to live for the next three years, during which time Mr. Kyle, in company with Captain John Bergman, successfully operated a salmon cannery. That property its owners later disposed of, after which Mr. Kyle became interested in a cooperative cannery at Gardiner, and of that establishment he was general manager for two years, after which he removed to Florence on the Siuslaw river and was interested in business with Captain John Bergman for three years. He then associated himself in partnership with Mike Meyers in a general merchandising business which they successfully conducted until 1903 and during that year Mr. Kyle purchased the interest of his partner, Mr. Meyers, and the establishment was thereafter operated under the firm name of the Kyle & Sons Company. In addition to his mercantile interests Mr. Kyle also owned and operated the Spruce Point sawmill for four years. He has been heavily interested in the canning industry for many years, having for twenty years operated a successful cannery in Florence. He is one of the principal stockholders in the cannery at Rosehill and also the Lone Star cannery, located at Acme. He is the owner of the tug Robarts and the steamer Lillian and he also owned the schooner Bella which suffered destruction by wreck in the year 1907. In addition, he owns one hundred acres of choice agricultural land near Florence and eighty acres of ranch property located sixty miles east of Florence on the state road to Eugene. He resides in a beautiful home, of which he is the owner, located in Florence. To Mr. and Mrs. Kyle five children were born: William, now a partner in the Kyle & Sons Company's mercantile house of Florence; David, also a partner in the same concern; Edwin, who is one of the stockholders in the Kyle & Sons Company; Mrs. Isabella F. Bergman; and Otto, who died in infancy.

Mr. John W. Bergman is affiliated with the republican party but is liberal in the exercise of his franchise. He has served as deputy assessor of Douglas county for one term and also served as state fire warden for one term and has been a member of the Florence city council. Fraternally he is identified with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, belonging to the lodge, the encampment and the Rebekahs. He is also a member of the Woodmen of the World. He and his wife are members of the Presbyterian church of Florence.

Captain John Bergman and his son, John W. Bergman, are among the best known and most successful business men in this part of the state of Oregon. Captain Bergman's career as a sea captain of well merited fame and his long service, extending over a period of twenty years, in the government life-saving department have made his name a household word on the Pacific slope. The careers of him and his son, John W., have uniformly been distinguished for success attained by the practice of constant attention to business and the observance of strictest integrity in all their transactions. The Lane County State & Savings Bank, of which they are the organizers and principal stockholders and of which Captain John Bergman is vice president and John W. Bergman first cashier, is one of the solid and influential financial institutions of the city of Florence. Their financial interest in this concern and their official relations to the bank, in addition to their extensive holdings in real estate in various parts of this state, place Captain John Bergman and his son, John W. Bergman, in the front ranks of the influential and useful citizens of their state and county.

AUGUSTUS N. DAVIES, a substantial agriculturist and representative citizen of his community, is the owner of the Pheasantdale farm, comprising one hundred and sixty acres of land and situated five miles southwest of Beaverton. His birth occurred on the 9th of June, 1858, in Washington county, Oregon, on the Miles Davies donation claim, on section 6, township 2, range 1, west, his parents being Miles and Jane (Haines) Davies. Miles Davies was born in Fayette county, Pennsylvania, on the 11th of July, 1809, and on the 12th of March, 1835, wedded Miss Jane Haines, who passed away in 1876. They were married in Indiana and subsequently removed to Ohio, residing in the latter state until 1851. In that year they went to Missouri and in the spring of 1852 began the overland journey to Oregon, arriving in this state at the end of six months—in the fall of 1852. They spent the following winter on the John Kellogg place, ten miles west of Portland, and in the spring bought the right of another man to a donation claim of three hundred and twenty acres, residing thereon until 1883, when Mr. Davies disposed of the property. Thereafter he made his home with his children until called to his final rest on the 16th of January, 1893. In his passing the community sustained the loss of one of its most substantial and respected pioneer settlers. Unto him and his wife were born eight children, as follows: Mrs. Phoebe Kindt, whose demise occurred on the 11th of June, 1911, when she had attained the age of seventy-four years; Alfred A., born July 18, 1841, who resides in Beaverton; Mary J., born September 16, 1843, who is the wife of Fletcher Royal and makes her home in Salem, Oregon; James W., whose birth occurred October 17, 1846, and who is now a resident of Ohio; Francis M., whose natal day was June 17, 1849, and who passed away in 1876; Horace G., who was born December 26, 1851, and who lives in Sellwood, Oregon; Rachel E., born in Oregon, October 21, 1854, who gave her hand in marriage to Oren Heath and passed away when twenty-eight years of age; and Augustus N., of this review.

MR. AND MRS. A. N. DAVIES

The last named acquired his education in the common schools and when a youth of eighteen years began earning his own livelihood, working at steam engineering for a period of two years and afterward for fourteen years operating a sawmill in Washington county. Subsequently he became identified with general agricultural pursuits and has since devoted his attention to the work of the fields. At the present time he owns a tract of one hundred and sixty acres of well improved land, fifty acres thereof being under a high state of cultivation, while forty acres are covered with merchantable timber. In his undertakings as an agriculturist he has won a well merited measure of prosperity, annually gathering excellent crops, which find a ready sale on the market.

On the 10th of April, 1883, Mr. Davies was united in marriage to Miss Rosaline Gabbert, who was born in Minnesota, on the 3d of December, 1859, her parents being August and Caroline (Hartman) Gabbert, natives of Germany. They emigrated to the United States in early life and were married in Minnesota, in which state they made their home for some years, residing there at the time of the Indian massacre. In 1877 they came to Oregon, arriving in this state on the 10th of April. Soon afterward Mr. Gabbert purchased one hundred and sixty acres of partly improved land in Washington county, residing on the property for twelve years and then disposing of same. He next bought a tract of eighty acres in Washington county and made his home thereon, until called to his final rest, in 1906, on January the 20th. His widow still resides on the old homestead in section 6, township 2, range 1, west. Mr. and Mrs. Davies are the parents of a son and daughter. Francis A., whose natal day was May 1, 1890, is a graduate of a business college and also has had an excellent musical education, now giving instruction in the art. He is still under the parental roof and operates the home farm of one hundred and sixty acres in partnership with his father. Rosaline R., who was born on the 19th of January, 1893, now attends the high school at Kenton, Oregon and is likewise pursuing a course in music.

Mr. Davies is a stanch republican in politics and for four years held the office of justice of the peace in his township. Fraternally he is identified with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, belonging to Charity Lodge at Tigard. He is also a member of the Butte Grange at that place. His entire life has been passed in Washington county, covering more than half a century, and his fellow townsmen know him as a straightforward and reliable business man and an enterprising, progressive citizen, who well merits the esteem that is uniformly accorded him.

WILLARD W. HINDMAN, a member of the law firm of Happy, Cullen, Lee & Hindman, attorneys at Spokane, is well known in Baker, Oregon, and throughout that section of the state, for he is the youngest son of the Hon. W. C. Hindman of Baker county, and was there born in July, 1870. He pursued his education in the public schools of Baker and in a private school taught by Dr. Smith of the Episcopal church. About 1885, his preliminary course completed, he entered the law school of the Michigan State University at Ann Arbor from which he was graduated before he was twenty years of age. He obtained a permit from the supreme court of Oregon to practice law and had not yet attained his majority when he entered upon the active work of his profession. He practiced in [illegible] Grande, Oregon, taking part in important [illegible] and then seeking the broader field of labor offered by the city, removed to Spokane and became a member of the law firm of Happy, Cullen, Lee & Hindman, with offices in the Hyde building. He has won a place among the leading attorneys of the state and has been favorably mentioned and recommended by large numbers of the bar by reason of his activity in the courts of appeals in the Eastern states and by circuit judges of the state of Washington for appointment as one of the federal judges of that state. He was married about three years ago to an estimable lady of Spokane and now enjoys an attractive home and an enviable reputation as a leading member of the bar of that state.

CHARLES ERICKSON who owns and operates a twenty-seven acre ranch, located two miles southeast of Beaverton, is one of the enterprising and highly desirable citizens that Sweden has contributed to the United States. His birth occurred on the 12th of April, 1848, and he is a son of Charles and Regina (Carlson) Erickson. The parents were also born and reared in Sweden and there the father passed away during the childhood of our subject, but the mother emigrated to the United States, in 1882, and made her home with her sons in Washington county until her death in January, 1907. To Mr. and Mrs. Erickson there were born two children, the elder of whom is Andrew.

His boyhood and youth Charles Erickson spent in his native land, where he received the advantages of a good common-school education. An ambitious young man, he was not content with the slow progress to be made in the old world with all her limitations and, feeling instinctively that he could attain a better station in life, surrounded by the opportunities of a virgin country, he took in 1873 passage for the United States to seek his fortune. He first located in Michigan, where for three years he worked in the copper mines. At the expiration of that time he came to the Pacific coast, California being his destination, and the following nine months were spent in the quicksilver mines in Napa county. His next removal was to Oregon, where he continued to follow mining, being employed for four and a half years in the Oswego iron mines. From his earliest boyhood he had been carefully trained in habits of thrift and industry, and not being misled by the extravagant habits of the majority of his associates managed to save the greater portion of his earnings. The work of the fields and free open-air life of the farmer, however, had always appealed to him much more strongly than mining, so when he gave up his position in the Oswego mines, he invested his small capital in twenty-seven acres of timber land in this county. He immediately began clearing his tract, and placing it under operation, making such improvements as his earnings permitted from time to time. His entire land is now cleared and practically all under high cultivation, and equipped with everything essential to its operation. He has a comfortable residence, good barns and substantial outbuildings, while the care and effort expended in the preparation of his fields result in abundant harvests. Mr. Erickson takes much pride in his ranch, which represents not only a most pleasant and comfortable home, but provides an income that amply supplies the needs of his family, and yet leaves a margin that is growing year by year into a comfortable competence. His success is well merited, as he has applied himself faithfully to the direction of his undertakings, and he is now enjoying the dividends on his long years of labor.

Mr. Erickson's plans for a home had their culmination in his marriage, in 1884, to Miss Anna Bergman, who was born in Sweden, on the 26th of July, 1858. She is one of the five children of Peter and Anna Bergman, who spent their entire lives in the old country. The other members of the family are as follows: Louisa, Charley, Christina and Johanna, all of whom live in Sweden. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Erickson number eight: Henry, who was born on November 10, 1884, living at home; Nellie, the wife of N. J. Pierson, of this county; Florence W., born on the 3d of March, 1888; Albert P., whose birth occurred on April 6, 1890; Mary C., born on the 12th of April, 1892; Frank O., born on the 2d of April, 1894; Claus, who was born on August 30, 1896; and Alice, who was born on the 3d of September, 1899. All of the family have been given the advantages of a good common-school education, while Miss Mary was also given a musical training and, with the exception of the eldest daughter, all are living at home.

In matters of faith the family are Lutherans and in politics Mr. Erickson is a republican, but he has never been an office seeker. He is representative of that class of industrious, enterprising and self-reliant citizens, who comprise the backbone of the population of the country and give stability to the nation.

ERNST RINDELL, who is successfully engaged in business as a druggist of Astoria, was born in Abo, Finland, on the 3d of August, 1862, his parents being Edward and Auguste (Freudenthal) Rindell. The father who spent his entire life in Finland, was a clergyman and newspaper man. Our subject is one of the five surviving children, the others being as follows: Arthur, a university professor in Finland; Anna, who is the wife of Rev. Westerlund and resides in Finland; Edward and Axel, both of whom are college professors.

Ernst Rindell obtained his education in his native land and pursued a course in pharmacy at the university, passing all the examinations prepared for druggists. After his emigration to the United States he successfully passed the Oregon state examination on the 28th of August, 1906, without extra preparation. He came to this state in 1905 and was associated in business with T. F. Laurin for eight months, saving two hundred dollars during that period. This sum constituted his first payment on the establishment known as the Central Drug Store, on which he made all the payments within a period of eighteen months. His present stock represents an outlay of fifty-three hundred dollars. He carries a complete line of drugs and druggists' sundries and enjoys a liberal patronage.

On the 22d of May, 1908, Mr. Rindell was united in marriage to Miss Edith Roos, a daughter of Edward Roos, who has charge of forestry preserves in Finland. Our subject and his wife have one son, Borje, whose natal day was June 4, 1909. Mr. Rindell is a republican in politics and a Lutheran in religious faith. Fraternally he is identified with the Knights of Pythias. His life has always been actuated by high and honorable principles and characterized by manly conduct. He has made for himself a creditable name in business circles and at all times has been loyal to his belief in his association with political, fraternal and moral interests.

JOHN KUSCHNICK, who is the owner of one hundred and ten acres of valuable land, situated four miles southeast of Gervais, in Marion county, was born in New Ulm, Minnesota, January 22, 1859. He is the son of Nicholas and Magdalena (Elliott) Kuschnick, both of whom were natives of Saxony, the father born in 1823 and the mother in 1824. The parents were married in Saxony and immediately after came to America, settling in Chicago, where they lived three years, after which time they moved to New Ulm, Minnesota, and resided there six years. During the Indian war, when they were living on the river bottom, three miles west of New Ulm, everything they owned was stolen or else destroyed by fire. Four years after the close of the war they moved to Richmond, Minnesota, where they resided three years, subseqnently going to Jasper county, Indiana, where they remained eleven years. They then came to Oregon and one year later bought a farm in Marion county, which was located fourteen miles north of Salem and was in heavy timber at that time. They resided on this tract of land until the father's retirement, when they moved to Gervais, but the last few years of their lives were spent with their son John, of this review. The mother died December 25, 1908, and the father on July 7, 1910. In their family were seven children, the eldest of whom died in infancy. The others are: Andrew, of Arkansas; Peter, of Marion county, Oregon; John, of this sketch; Mary, of Albany, Oregon; Annie, who died at the age of four years; and Joseph, who died in Indiana at the age of seven years.

John Kusehnick received a good business education and remained under the parental roof until he was twenty-two years of age, at which time he started farming on a tract of land of one hundred and three acres, which he had purchased and which was a part of the farm where he now resides. He has added to the original tract so that he now owns one hundred and ten acres of finely improved land, fifty of which is under a high state of cultivation, including twenty acres of Beaver Dam land. He also owns five acres of city property at Mount Angel, which is located two blocks north of the depot. In his farming he makes a specialty of raising hops, having forty acres in cultivation.

On November 26, 1895, Mr. Kuschnick was wedded to Miss Maggie Friedl, who was born in Bohemia, November 12, 1860, a daughter of Anton and Catherine (Paschta) Friedl, both of whom died in Europe. She was one of a family of nine children who grew to maturity, six of whom came to America. They were: Elizabeth, deceased; Peter, of Marion county; Wencel, of Waterloo, Iowa; Anna, the wife of John Boro, of Waterloo, Iowa; Maggie, now Mrs. John Kuschnick; and Joseph, who is married and lives in Waterloo, Iowa. Mr. and Mrs. Kuschnick have become the parents of four children: Anna M., who was born December 11, 1896, and is now attending school; George N., who was born April 5, 1899; Therese M., born December 12, 1901; and John P., born April 15, 1904.

In his political allegiance Mr. Kuschnick is a republican, but he has never sought nor desired office, preferring to give his time to the cultivation of his land. He and his family adhere to the Roman Catholic faith. He stands well in both business and social circles and his life record presents many traits of character worthy of emulation.

JOHN KIRKWOOD, eighty-four years of age, is living on a farm near Hopewell, which has long been his home, and has not only brought this place to its present state of development but has also been a factor in the pioneer improvement and later progress of his county. He was born in Boston, Massachusetts, May 4, 1828, a son of James and Christiana (Davie) Kirkwood, both of whom were natives of Scotland and came to America in 1822. The father was a glass blower by trade and was brought to America by a company who wanted to start a glass factory in Boston. At that time mechanics were not allowed to leave England, so he was smuggled across. He lived in Boston for a number of years and then removed to Redford, New York, and afterward to Providence, Rhode Island. In 1846 he crossed the plains with a wagon and ox team, being on the way from May until October, and located at Sonoma, California. October 26, 1846 he and his son John enlisted in the Mexican war, joining Company B of the California Regiment of Volunteer Infantry, and served for five months. Two brothers of John Kirkwood, James and Henry, also served in the same company. The father afterward traveled and lived with his son John until his death. He had brought a set of blacksmith tools across the plains with him, and he and his son did general blacksmithing and made knives and Spanish spurs. His wife died in 1841 and twenty three years later James Kirkwood passed away, his grave being made in the Hopewell cemetery. In their family were seven children: Joseph, of Yamhill county, Oregon; James and William both deceased; John, of this review; and Henry, Christian and Mary, all of whom are deceased.

John Kirkwood's chances in youth for an education were very limited but, being of a studious disposition, he read a great deal and having a retentive memory, he is now quite well informed. As previously stated, he enlisted for the Mexican war on the same day as his father. John Kirkwood was often in the thickest of the fight and on one occasion had his tin cup cut away from his side by a lance. His captain was shot down by his side and a comrade on the other side, this being when they were on special detail duty, Mr. Kirkwood being the first one selected from his company to form a detachment to rescue four comrades whom the Spaniards had surrounded in a patch of timber. Mr. Kirkwood was undoubtedly selected because of the bravery which he had shown on previous occasions and his superior marksmanship. After the war he went to Sonoma, California, and bought a lot for sixteen dollars, which he sold a few months after the discovery of gold there for one thousand dollars. He started out in life as a blacksmith and gunsmith and then went into the mines during the gold excitement in California. With his father he left San Francisco in 1849 on a sailing vessel, paying one hundred and ten dollars for his passage, but they were landed on Vancouver Island because of the wrecked condition of the vessel and later reached Portland in a canoe. John Kirkwood then located on his present farm, which was a donation claim. He went back to San Francisco in 1851 and after the fire of 1852, helped rebuild the city. While going overland to California he discovered the Yreka mine. He worked this mine for a time but returned to Yamhill county in 1852 and began improving his farm. He also worked in a shop on his place and constructed the first threshing machine in Oregon, making the castings, woodwork and all parts on the farm on which he now lives. He worked in the shop for twenty years, making plows, wagons, etc., and when the courthouse of Yamhill county burned he was chosen to make a seal for the county. He never turned down a job of work in his life. He now owns here two hundred and twenty acres of land, and one hundred and sixty near Wheatland.

On the 26th of December, 1852, Mr. Kirkwood wedded Miss Charlotte Matheny, who was born in 1838 in Platte county, Missouri, a daughter of Daniel and Mary (Cooper) Matheny. The father, who was born and reared in the Shenandoah valley, Virginia, served in the War of 1812, taking part in the battle of New Orleans, and was a captain in the Black Hawk war. He went to Missouri in 1837 and crossed the plains in 1843, locating near Hillsboro, Oregon, as a neighbor of Joe Meek and lived there for one year. He then settled in the vicinity of Wheatland and bought a tract of land on which he died in 1872. He was an active, industrious farmer and a brave frontiersman. The mother came of an old Kentucky family and died on the same farm as her husband, in 1856. In their family were eight children: Adam, deceased; Elizabeth, the wife of Henry Hewitt, both of whom are now deceased; I. C., D. B., Mary and Jasper N., all of whom are deceased; Charlotte, now Mrs. John Kirkwood; and one who died in infancy. Mrs. Kirkwood is like her husband, well, though self educated. She lived with her parents until the time of her marriage, being then only fourteen years of age. To Mr. and Mrs. Kirkwood seven children were born: William, deceased, who was a physician and a graduate of the University of California; Dale, who was engaged in the practice of dentistry and is now deceased; A. M., an engineer in Yamhill county; Nellie, who is a school teacher and a graduate of Sacred Heart College at Salem; Walter, a hop grower in Yamhill county; Leonora, who is a graduate of the State Normal School at Monmouth, Oregon, and is now the wife of Thomas Rodgers, a druggist of McMinnville, Oregon; and Pearl, now Mrs. C. C. Chapman, of Portland.

In politics Mr. Kirkwood was first a republican, later a populist and now is an independent, and he believes in studying the man who is to be put in office. Both he and Mrs. Kirkwood are members of the Adventist church. He has now reached the advanced age of eighty-four and is passing his last days in a country whose early development he has witnessed, surrounded by many friends whom his genial disposition, progressive nature and strong personality have won for him.

DAVID W. SMALL is one of the well known, honored pioneers of Washington and Oregon, having been identified with the early business enterprises and developments of both states since the later years of their territorial history. He is also a battle-scarred, pensioned veteran of the Civil war. He was born in New Brunswick, December 18, 1837, a son of Daniel and Lavina (Munroe) Small, both of whom were natives of New Brunswick. The paternal grandfather was a native of New York city and of Irish parentage. The parents of the subject of this review celebrated their wedding at Miramichi, New Brunswick, and there continued to live until 1843. In that year they removed to Maine, where the father was engaged in farming and also in the sawmill and lumbering business until 1867. He then removed with his family to Montana and was engaged in the operation of a hotel and also in the general merchandising business until the time of his death, which occurred in 1872. In 1874 the mother moved to Walla Walla, Washington, and there died early in the year 1875. In their family were nine children: David W., of this review; Mary, whose death occurred in Helena, Montana; Albert, of Lewiston, Idaho; Edward, who passed away in Maine when he was about seven years of age; Sarah, the wife of John Potter, of Los Angeles, California; Lottie E., the wife of Frank Sanborn, of Manhattan, Montana; Ira, a resident of Lewiston, Idaho; Inez, the wife of T. W. Colby, of Idaho; and Edward, who passed away at the age of five years at Houlton, Maine.

David W. Small was reared in his parents' home and received his early education in the public schools of Maine. The period of his school days, however, was very limited, amounting to a total of only sixteen months. In 1861, at the outbreak of the Civil war, he enlisted at Houlton in Company E, of the First Maine Volunteer Cavalry, under Captain Blackhawk Putnam, and followed his command for one year. He was mustered out of service September 24, 1862, at Au-

DAVID W. SMALL

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASTOR LENOX A
TILDEN FOUNDA

gusta, Maine, the cause of his discharge being disability resulting from the failure of his health. Immediately after his discharge he returned to his home in Maine, and one year later reenlisted in Company A, of the Second Maine Cavalry, under Captain J. F. Twitchell, and continued in the United States army until the close of the war, receiving his discharge in December, 1865. At Alexandria, Louisiana, he received a severe wound in the left side, while in the active discharge of his duty and is now one of the honored pensioned soldiers of the great internecine conflict. His war record abounds with tragic experiences, for in many cases he barely succeeded in escaping in time to save his life. At the close of the war he returned to his father's old homestead in Maine, where he was engaged in farming for the five years following. In 1871 he moved to Montana and after spending six months in that territory he settled at Walla Walla, Washington, and was there engaged as superintendent for Dr. D. S. Baker in the furnishing and delivering of timber and ties used in the construction of the Walla Walla & Columbia River Railway. He was also superintendent of construction work on that road until its completion in 1874. It was the first railroad built in Washington territory, and its track extended from Wallula to Walla Walla, its organizer and promoter being Dr. D. S. Baker. After the completion of that line of railroad, Mr. Small obtained contracts from the United States government for the furnishing of all forage used at the government post at Walla Walla, and to that business he gave his time and attention until 1890. He had previously engaged in the hotel and livery business, operating also at the same time an opera house and was the owner of the steamboat Northwest, used on the inland waters in both passenger and freight service. In 1879, during the Bannock Indian war, he had the honor of transporting General O. O. Howard and his troops on the Northwest to a point thirty miles above Lewiston on the Grande Ronde river. In 1879 he secured his first contract to furnish the timber required in the construction of the main line of the Northern Pacific Railroad, which was completed three years later. During that time he also successfully conducted a variety of business interests at Walla Walla. In 1894 he disposed of all his property and various business enterprises at Walla Walla and moved to Fort Bragg, California, where he remained for three years and then went to Alaska and started a pack train between Dyea and Bennett for the purpose of freighting provisions to the miners who were rushing to the gold fields. In that business he continued for one and one-half years and then moved to Dawson City, Alaska. During the time of his business operations at Dyea, in 1899, he staked John Gagnon with a scow and nine thousand dollars' worth of building material and started him for Dawson with instructions to sell the cargo and receive for his services one-half of the net profits. The man in trust of this expedition proved recreant to the confidence which had been placed in him and disposed of both the scow and its cargo, thereby entailing a total loss to Mr. Small of twenty-three thousand dollars. The following July, however, still undeterred and full of courage, he started a similar equipment for Dawson and at that time met with gratifying success. In 1900 he again sent out a similar supply of building material destined for Dawson, but the ice proved an insurmountable barrier and Mr. Small suffered the entire loss of his property right within sight of Dawson. He spent the winter at Dawson and returned to Idaho the following spring, but remained there only a short time, removing in 1901 to Coos county, Oregon, where he secured from Major L. D. Kinney grading contracts for the building of a belt line railroad from Marshfield to Empire. In 1912 in copartnership with his son he established himself in the contract paving business and has since devoted his attention to that growing and successful enterprise. He is one of the large real estate owners of Marshfield, owning more than one hundred well located residence and business lots in that city and also owns a very valuable water front property in the business section of the town.

Mr. Small was twice married, his first wife being Miss Martha F. Bradbury, whom he wedded in 1863. She was a native of Limerick, Maine, and a daughter of Cyrus K. and Sarah (Shields) Bradbury. The parents were both natives of the Pine Tree state, and there passed their entire lives, the mother's death occurring when she was seventy years of age, and the father passing away at the age of seventy-three. They became the parents of nine children, of whom four are still living: Mrs. Christie Davidson, and Mrs. Abbie Davidson, both of whom reside in Massachusetts; John, of Alberta, Canada; and Henry, whose home is at Presque Isle, Maine. To Mr. and Mrs. Small three children were born: Dora A., the wife of Chester Bradbury, who is engaged in the milling and timber business at Fort Fairfield, Maine; Schuyler Colfax, who is engaged in the paving and construction business at Marshfield, Oregon; and Ira, who died in infancy. The eldest daughter, Dora A. Bradbury, is a graduate of Wellesley College at Wellesley, Massachusetts, and the son, Schuyler Colfax Small, received a good business education, and while residing in Montana served for eight years as sheriff. The mother of these children died at Houlton, Maine, in 1876, and in 1878 Mr. Small was united in marriage to Miss Ellen Davison, a native of Monmouth, Oregon, and a daughter of Judge Davison, who as a young man settled at Monmouth and there spent his entire life, serving as district judge. He was a man highly respected for the integrity of his character and his capabilities as a jurist. His death occurred in 1882. In his family were seven children, of whom three are still living, namely: Mrs. J. M. Bewley of Bend, Washington; Mrs. Smith of Tacoma, Washington; and Mrs. Ellis of Dixie, Washington. Mrs. Ellen Small passed away at Marshfield

July 12, 1910, and her remains were interred in the Odd Fellows cemetery at that place.

Mr. Small is a loyal member of the republican party, and is a member of the Masonic lodge of Marshfield. He and his family are members of the Presbyterian church. Mr. Small is entitled to all the honors that belong to the hardy pioneer of the undeveloped west. A man of rare business ability and acumen, he has survived the results of the repeated losses with which he has met in business and out of the ashes of disaster he has erected new enterprises which his genius and fortitude have carried to notable success. His word is as good as his bond, and now in his declining years he is able to look back upon a career of usefulness, having devoted himself to the enterprises now well founded, which are destined to be a monument and credit to his memory for many decades to come.

OLIVER P. ISON. A half century has come and gone since Oliver P. Ison arrived in Baker county, and during the greater part of this period he has engaged in farming and stock-raising, owning now four hundred acres of rich and productive land situated ten miles north of Baker City on sections 7 and 12, range 40. He makes his home, however, in the city, residing at the corner of Sixth and A streets. He was born June 11, 1846, in Garrard county, Kentucky, a son of Strother and Judith Ann (Gaines) Ison, who were also natives of Kentucky. In 1849 they left that state and went to Grundy county, Missouri, and in the spring of 1862 came overland with ox teams to Baker county, where the remainder of their lives was passed. Both died near Wingville, the father in 1889 at the age of seventy-six years and the mother September 25, 1900, when eighty-six years of age. When in Missouri he had followed merchandising and also engaged in the live-stock business, while in Oregon he carried on general farming. He bought his first land of the state, owning at one time a section, while at his death he had a homestead of one hundred and sixty acres in the Wingville district. In 1868 he was elected the first state senator from Baker county, which at that time comprised a large part of eastern Oregon. He also served as county commissioner for one or two terms and was recognized as the leader of the democratic party. His religious faith was indicated by his lifelong membership in the Methodist Episcopal church, South, to which his wife also belonged. In Missouri he joined the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and was one of the first members of Baker Lodge, No. 25. In fact his activities touched the general interests of society here and constituted a force in the upbuilding and progress of the entire community. Unto him and his wife were born nine children of whom the second, a son, died in infancy. The others are: Bascom, who was the first born and also died in infancy; Luther B., who was circuit judge and held many other offices and died in 1889; Susan Virginia, the wife of James Akers, a retired farmer living in Baker; Oliver P.; Lester Oscar, also of the Wingville district; Adelia, who is the wife of George Chandler, of Baker, a stock man who has the finest herd in eastern Oregon; Gabrilla, who died at the age of thirty-five years; and Annie Gaines, who died January 29, 1892, at the age of thirty-two years.

Oliver P. Ison was only sixteen years of age when he came to Baker county with his parents, since which time he has resided within its borders, the entire period now covering a half century. Here he has carried on farming and stock-raising, having in 1870 purchased four hundred acres of state land ten miles north of Baker. He engaged in raising range cattle until the last three years and the farm is now principally devoted to the cultivation of hay. He has left the ranch to make his home in Baker and is pleasantly situated in an attractive residence at the corner of Sixth and A streets.

In January, 1871, Mr. Ison was married to Miss Martha Jane Vernon, who was born in Pleasantville, Iowa, December 13, 1855, and in 1859 was brought to Oregon by her parents, Thomas B. and Mary Jane (Foster) Vernon. The father was the pioneer blacksmith of Auburn, Oregon, and removed to Pocahontas, where he remained until 1872, when he became a farmer in the Wingville district. There he spent the remainder of his life, passing away on the 29th of September, 1900, his wife's death having occurred on the 3d of February, 1876. They were active members of the Methodist Episcopal church, and were among the most prominent and highly respected of the county's residents. Mrs. Ison was their only child. In the family of Mr. and Mrs. Ison were three children, as follows: Ora Perry, who is the wife of John G. Foster, of Baker, and has one child, Verna; Carrie Lee, who is the wife of H. B. Kinnison, a farmer of Baker county in the Wingville district, by whom she has three children, Buford, Beulah and Ermil; and Lilith Buford, who is a graduate of the Baker high school and also pursued a course at Buford College in Nashville, Tennessee, after which she taught school in Baker. She is now the wife of John W. Allen, of Portland, and they have one child, Alletha Aileen.

In his political views Mr. Ison is a democrat and an active worker in the party yet he has never sought nor desired political office. He has served, however, on the school board for eleven years and has been a member of the city council for six years, four years of which time he was its president. He was also acting mayor for about two years during the absence of the mayor. He was a member of the council when the work of paving the streets was first started, about three miles being laid. He was also a stanch champion of the commission form of government which was adopted. He stands firm in his opposition to anything like misrule in public affairs and is in sympathy with the progressive movement of the times which is seeking to make politics the expression of general public opinion and not of the will of the few. Fraternally he is connected with Wingville Lodge, No. 69, I. O. O. F., which he joined in 1882, and for the past twelve years he has been a member of the encampment. He also belongs to Baker Lodge, No. 338, B. P. O. E. Energy and industry have been salient traits in his life work. He has never faltered in carrying out a plan that he has formed in relation to business matters, realizing that when one avenue of effort seemed closed he might find another path that would lead to the desired goal. Moreover, he has always adopted constructive measures in his business life and in his political service and his efforts have been a feature in general progress and improvement.

SAMUEL H. McKERNAN, a retired farmer, living in a fine home with ten acres of land adjoining Cottage Grove, was born in Otter Creek township, La Salle county, Illinois, April 19, 1855, the son of Captain J. J. and Mary (Cramer) McKernan. The father, who was a native of Ireland, came to America when nine years of age in company with his parents. The family settled in Livingston county, Kentucky, but removed in 1826 to Illinois, settling at Ottawa, where they passed the remainder of their lives, the father of Captain J. J. McKernan passing away in 1831, while the mother's death occurred in 1863.

Captain J. J. McKernan, the father of our subject, remained at home with his mother until he attained his majority and then removed to Otter Creek, Illinois, where he settled on a tract of land under the squatter's right act, residing there until he could obtain a title, when he purchased the land. His first purchase consisted of one hundred and sixty acres but he later added to his holdings until he owned four hundred and eighty acres of the finest land in Illinois. In 1862 the father organized, for service in the Civil war, Company F, of the One hundred and Fourth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, of which he was made captain. Entering into active service the company did its full duty but at Hartsville, Tennessee, the entire company including the captain was captured by the Confederates and sent to Andersonville prison where they remained until paroled. The captain, being sick and disabled, was mustered out of service and returned to his old farm home, where he continued to live until the time of his death, January 9, 1878, at the age of sixty-six years. He was survived by the mother, who lived on the old homestead until her death in 1900, at the age of eighty-nine years. She had resided on the homestead during nearly her whole life and had witnessed the raising of seventy-five crops on that farm. She was the mother of eight children: Rose Ann, who is the widow of Aaron Kliber, of La Salle county, Illinois; Candies, who married Henry Ackerman, of North Dakota, deceased; Ann E., the wife of Mathias Gouchanour, of La Salle county, Illinois; George, who passed away in Colorado; Samuel H.; Salanda Lockwood, of Streator, Illinois; Charley, of Lenox, Iowa; and Gussie, of Streator, Illinois.

Reared in the state of Illinois and educated in its public schools, Samuel H. McKernan received a good education and training. At the age of twenty years he began farming on his own account, operating in Illinois until 1878, when he removed to Ottawa, Kansas, and purchased land there. He remained on his Kansas farm for ten years, developing it and making of it a very valuable property. At the end of that time he sold his holdings in Kansas and came to Oregon in 1888, settling in Lane county, where he took up a homestead of one hundred and sixty acres, which he occupied for twenty years. When he took up his land in Oregon it was covered with a heavy growth of timber. He continued working hard, however, until he placed twenty-five acres of it under cultivation and in the earlier days he was compelled to build a high fence around his fields in order to keep the deer from eating his crops. In 1908 he sold his farm for thirty-three hundred dollars and retired to Cottage Grove, where he bought a comfortable home with a ten acre tract adjoining the city limits, for which he paid two thousand dollars. He also owns a business house in Cottage Grove and two residence properties, which he is renting.

Mr. McKernan was married at Streator, Illinois, January 1, 1873, to Miss Laura Welchanse, who was born in Pennsylvania, July 14, 1855, the daughter of Jackson and Mary (Corl) Welchanse, the former a native of Pennsylvania while the latter was born in New York city. The marriage of the parents was celebrated in Pennsylvania where they lived for eight years, after which they removed to Illinois, settling in La Salle county in 1856. There the father purchased land and died at the age of thirty years. In their family were five children: Henetta, the wife of Henry Cunliffe, of Pontiac, Illinois; George, of Streator, Illinois; Laura, who became Mrs. Samuel H. McKernan; William, who was killed in a railway accident; and Esther, the wife of Lyman Baker, of Streator. After the death of her husband Mrs. Welchanse was again married, her second union being with James Cunliffe, of Fall River, Massachusetts, and they became the parents of three children: Charlotte, the wife of Ross Corl, of Carey, Kansas; Emma, the wife of Arthur Garner; and James, of Streator, Illinois. To Mr. and Mrs. McKernan six children have been born: James, who died in infancy; Candies, the wife of Martin Foster, of Lane county, Oregon; Clyde, who met death by drowning at the age of eight years; Sylvia, the wife of Hiram Griggs, of Cottage Grove, Oregon; Charles, of Cottage Grove, who married Carrie Dickens, a native of Iowa, by whom he has a son Clyde, born in September, 1910; and Ralph, who died at the age of three and one-half years.

Mr. McKernan gives his political allegiance to the democratic party, and fraternally he belongs to Lodge No. 357, B. P. O. E., of Eugene. He is well and favorably known in the community where he resides and although he has been a resident of Cottage Grove a comparatively short time, he has formed a large circle of personal friends, by whom he is held in high esteem.

MRS. AURA M. RALEY, known as the mother of Pendleton, was born in Kennebec county, Maine, on August 23, 1829. She was a daughter of Stephen L. and Cozhi (Sawtelle) Morse, both of whom were natives of Maine. The father died in his native state and the mother later married a Mr. Townsend with whom she removed to Wisconsin, and in 1853 crossed the plains to Oregon. They were in the same train with Mrs. Raley of this review, but separated at Powder river, going into the Willamette valley, while the subject of this sketch went on to Washington. Aura Morse of this review resided in Maine until she was fifteen years of age when, with her mother, she removed to Wisconsin, where she was later united in marriage to Mr. Moses E. Goodwin, who was a native of Crawford county, Illinois. In 1853 Mr. and Mrs. Goodwin started across the plains with ox teams for Oregon, being in company with several other families among whom were her mother and step-father. The journey was beset with many difficulties and the Indians were unusually troublesome. Of the large train that started only five families completed the trip. Mr. and Mrs. Goodwin first settled fifteen miles north of Vancouver, Washington, where they purchased a farm and resided for three years. At the breaking out of the Indian war they built a raft and, taking with them enough timber to erect a house, they floated down the river to Vancouver, which was then only a Hudson's Bay Company trading post. There they built their house which they later converted into a hotel and operated the same as such until 1864. At that date, with their stock, they started for the mining district of Boise, Idaho, but upon reaching Umatilla county they were unable to take their cattle over the mountains and, liking this section of the country, they located here. They took up a donation land claim on which Pendleton now stands, erecting the first house in this vicinity. It was on the present site of the Pendleton Hotel and they operated it as a hotel for several years. Their donation land claim consisted of one hundred and sixty acres, and was the location on which the earlier Pendleton was built, the town which on the 20th of November, 1868, the county commissioners chose as the seat of Umatilla county.

To Mr. and Mrs. Goodwin were born three children, the eldest of whom died in infancy. The others were: Wallace W., who was murdered on Snake River in 1872 while he was on a trip to that section of the country with some horses; and Olive, who is now the wife of S. A. John of Portland. Mr. Goodwin passed away on January 17, 1871, and in May, 1872, the subject of this sketch was again united in marriage, her second union being to Henry J. Raley, who came to Oregon in 1853. To them was born one child, Cozhi, who is now the wife of W. C. E. Pruitt, the deputy district attorney of Pendleton. Mr. Raley passed away in October, 1876, and after his death Mrs. Raley continued for several years in the hotel business. Being thrifty and industrious, and capable in her business management she is now in good financial circumstances and resides in a beautiful home at No. 214 West Alta street, which she built in 1909.

Mrs. Raley is a member of the Episcopal church and is a lady of many good traits of heart and mind whose life is in harmony with her Christian profession. She is exceptionally well preserved in both mind and body, having an excellent memory, and, although she is now in her eighty-fourth year she does not appear to be a woman of more than sixty. She has seen two Indian wars and well knows the meaning of the privations and hardships of frontier life, and highly deserves the comfortable circumstances in which she is placed. She has lived in Pendleton for more than half a century, has long witnessed the growth and development of this part of the state and has a wide circle of acquaintances and host of friends among the older settlers as well as among those who have arrived at a later date.

C. T. MYERS is classified with the successful merchants and business men of Sheridan and his present enviable position is due to the fact that close application and indefatigable energy have ever been the guiding forces of his life. He is now proprietor of a hardware and implement store and in connection therewith conducts an undertaking establishment. He was born near Appleton, in Knox county, Illinois, December 13, 1884, and is a son of S. A. and Ida L. (Mitchell) Myers. The father was born in Illinois and afterward removed to Iowa. Later he returned to Illinois but again went to Iowa, settling at Weldom, where he remained until he came to Oregon in 1908. In that year he located at Sheridan, where he is now living retired, although for many years he was closely associated with general farming interests. His wife is a native of Illinois and in that state they were married. They became the parents of nine children: Bessie, now the wife of H. H. Fuller, of Weldon, Iowa; C. T.; Jennie B., the wife of J. T. Yocom, of Sheridan, Oregon; H. P., who is with his brother in business; Ethel, Harley, Daisy, Clark and Lawrence, all yet at home.

C. T. Myers pursued his education in the public schools of Illinois and Iowa and after a partial high-school course became a student in the commercial college at Chillicothe, Missouri. He is also a graduate of the Capital City Commercial College of Des Moines, completing his work there with the class of 1907. After coming to Oregon in the following year he entered the high school at Eugene and on completing his studies there came to Sheridan, with the business interests of which he has since been closely associated. Here he first engaged in the furniture trade and afterward added a stock of hardware.

MRS. AURA M. BAILEY

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY

On the 1st of January, 1911, however, he disposed of his furniture business but still continues in the hardware trade, carrying a complete line of shelf and heavy goods. He is also dealing in implements and conducts an undertaking and embalming business, having studied embalming in Iowa for two years. The establishment is conducted under the firm name of Myers Brothers, his younger brother, H. P. Myers, being now associated with him in a partnership relation. They are accorded a liberal patronage and are meeting with well merited success.

C. T. Myers was united in marriage to Bertha Courtemanche, in June, 1909, and unto them was born one child, who died in infancy. In politics Mr. Myers is an independent republican, usually supporting the principles of the party yet never feeling himself bound by party ties. He has served as a member of the city council for one term and he is secretary of the Commercial Club. In the Woodmen of the World he has served as clerk and he also belongs to the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. He is yet a young man but has already made a creditable record in commercial circles and the salient qualities which he has thus far displayed argue well for a successful future.

JOHN HAGENAUER, who is interested in general farming and is the owner of one hundred and eighty-three acres of valuable land, situated two and one half miles southeast of Gervais, in Marion county, was born in Austria in April, 1849. His parents were Wenceel and Helena Hagenauer, who came to America in 1873 and settled in Wisconsin. In 1877 they removed to Oregon and purchased one hundred and eighty-three acres of land, which is the farm now owned by John Hagenauer of this review and all of which at that time was covered with heavy timber. They resided on this place during the remainder of their lives, the mother dying in 1891 and the father in 1902. In their family were seven children, of whom John Hagenauer was the third in order of birth. The others are Wenceel, Barbara, Annie, Frank, Mary and Peter.

John Hagenauer was reared and educated in Austria and came to America in 1869, thus preceding his parents by four years in taking the trip. He settled in Wisconsin, where he remained eight years, and then came to Oregon, locating on the place where he still lives. One hundred acres of his excellently improved farm are under a high state of cultivation, whereon he uses the latest and most improved methods known to those who have made a study of farming.

In 1888 Mr. Hagenauer was united in marriage to Miss Josephine Herald, a native of Germany, who was reared and educated there. She came to America in 1885 and lived three years in Minnesota, after which time she removed to Oregon. She is one of twelve children who were born to her parents, all of whom are still residing in Germany except herself and one sister. Her parents both died in Germany. In the family of Mr. and Mrs. Hagenauer are five children: Annie M., born in 1890; Helena E., born in 1893; Barbara C., born in 1896; Peter J., born in 1899; and John J., born in 1902.

In his political views Mr. Hagenauer is a stalwart democrat, giving unfaltering support to the men and measures of the party. He and his family adhere to the teachings of the Catholic church. Energetic in his work, conscientious in all matters of business, Mr. Hagenauer is a progressive and valued citizen of the country in which he has chosen to make his home.

FREDERICK L. GRAY is the owner of a well improved ranch of three hundred acres located seven miles northeast of Springfield, where he has resided for more than fifty years and engaged in agricultural pursuits. He was born in Washington county, Pennsylvania, on February 2, 1831, and is a son of Alexander and Lydia (Lutanner) Gray. The father was of Irish extraction and the mother of German descent, but they were born, reared and married in the Keystone state and there passed the early years of their domestic life. In 1831, they removed to Ohio, but five years later the family was called upon to mourn the loss of the mother, who was buried in the vicinity of Wooster, and the father and children subsequently returned to Pennsylvania. He located in Washington county, continuing to reside there for several years, and during that period he was married again, his second wife having been Miss Mary Andrews. The attraction of the west again proving irresistible, in 1844 he crossed the prairies to Indiana, settling in the vicinity of Greencastle, where both he and his wife passed the remainder of their lives. He died on the 26th of December, 1866, but she survived for several years thereafter. Mr. Gray was a miller, and while he followed his trade at various periods, his energies were devoted to agricultural pursuits during the greater part of his life. To him and his first wife there were born four sons, of whom our subject, the third in order of birth, is the only one now living. The others are as follows: John, who passed away in Texas at the age of eighty years; Alexander, whose death occurred in Los Angeles at the age of eighty-three; and Jacob S., who was seventy-five and a resident of Nebraska at the time of his death. Five children were born of the second marriage: Samuel R., now deceased, who engaged in the practice of medicine in Illinois; Robert, who is a resident of Nebraska; Sarah M., who is deceased; Nancy Jane, the deceased wife of Albert Hurt; and William J., who was accidentally killed in Idaho.

Born in a family of moderate means, Frederick L. Gray received but a limited education in the district schools of his native state. Having been reared in the country, he was early trained to agricultural pursuits, so upon leaving home at the age of seventeen years he sought and obtained employment as a farm hand. He continued to follow this occupation in Pennsylvania for three years. At the expiration of that time he decided to go west, so he joined an emigrant train and crossed the plains to Oregon in 1851. During the first three years of his residence in the west he worked in the gold fields of the Rogue River country and also in California, but in 1855 he gave up prospecting and came to Lane county. For a year he worked in the Deadwood mines, and in 1853 he participated in the Indian war, guarding Jacksonville, Oregon. After engaging in various activities he filed on a claim of one hundred and sixty acres and went into the stock business. He followed this with very good success until he received the deed to his land four years later. At the end of that time he disposed of his claim and went to the Willow Springs mines and prospected for two years. In 1861, he returned to Lane county and bought his present ranch, which at that time contained three hundred and twenty acres of land. This is located on section 35, Range south, 2 west, township 17, on the old stage road between Springfield and Walterville. Soon after acquiring this property he joined a party and started for the Salmon river mines. It was a perilous journey and fraught with many hardships and privations. The snow was deep and the cold extreme and several of their number perished from cold and exposure as they walked the entire distance. Upon reaching their destination they found the snow eight feet deep on a level at the mines, which made it practically impossible to work. The scarcity of food and the exorbitant prices they paid two hundred and twenty-five dollars for two hundred pounds of flour upon their arrival —caused Mr. Gray to leave soon after his arrival for the Piatt Valley mines. There he found practically the same conditions— the season too far advanced to work, and the food supply very low—so he returned to his ranch and has ever since been a resident of Lane county. He applied himself energetically and intelligently to the development of his land and the direction of his undertakings, meeting with a corresponding degree of success. He now owns three hundred acres of well improved land, one hundred acres of this being under high cultivation. All of the improvements upon his place are in good condition, it is well stocked and thoroughly equipped with everything needful to the modern agriculturist. In addition to his home place, Mr. Gray owns one hundred and twelve acres of fertile land near Thurston, Oregon.

In 1864, Mr. Gray was married to Mrs. Olive Looney, the widow of James C. Looney, who filed upon a donation claim in Lane county in 1852, that included the present Gray ranch. Eight children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Gray, as follows: Alexander, who was born on the 9th of November, 1864, now a resident of Springfield, Oregon; Charles, whose natal day was the 2d of September, 1866, a resident of Klamath Falls, this state; Mary Jane, whose birth occurred on October 22, 1868, the wife of Albert Mathews, of Lane county; Frederick, who was born on April 14, 1871, living on a portion of the old homestead in this county; Ira, whose birth occurred on June 24, 1873, also of Lane county; John, who was born in 1876 and died in infancy; and Nellie, whose natal day was September 20, 1879, and had attained the age of eleven years when she died. Margaret Ann, who is the sixth in order of birth, was born on the 7th of June, 1875, and married Frank Campbell, who died October 27, 1900. Mrs. Campbell and her son Frank, who was born on November 19, 1900, are living with Mr. Gray on the old homestead. Mrs. Gray had four children by her first husband. The three eldest, Isaac D., William M. and Sarah A., are all deceased, but the youngest, Martha E., is the wife of William McKinney, of Independence, Oregon. All of the children were given the advantages of a good practical education.

Mr. Gray is a socialist in his political views, but twice cast his ballot for Abraham Lincoln. He has never actively participated in public affairs, not being an aspirant to public honors. Mr. Gray who has lived far beyond the Psalmist's alloted span, having attained the venerable age of eighty-one years, is widely known in the county and enjoys the confidence and esteem of a large circle of friends.

FRANK PRANTL, who resides on his farm of sixty-two acres, situated two and one-half miles southeast of Gervais, was born in Marion county, Oregon, February 17, 1877, the son of John and Mary Prantl, both natives of Germany. The parents were married in New Jersey but a short time afterward removed to California and later came to Marion county, Oregon, where they bought one hundred acres of land which they occupied until the father retired from active work, in 1901. Since that date he has lived with his son Frank, of this review, the mother having died in December, 1902. In their family were ten children: Mrs. Katie Aicher, of Woodburn, Oregon; Mrs. Mary Hitchman, of Portland; Rose, at home; Frank, the subject of this review; Mrs. Agnes Aicher, of Woodburn; Peter, Mrs. Lena Addleman, Mrs. Theresa Schindler and Mrs. Cecilia Eder, all residents of Gervais, Oregon; and Joseph, of Marion county.

Frank Prantl was reared under the parental roof and started out in life for himself at the age of twenty-four, when he took charge of his farm of fifty acres, which was his share of his father's estate. He has since added to this until he now owns sixty-two acres of improved land, thirty acres of which is under a high state of cultivation, eleven acres being in hops and six set out in apple trees.

Mr. Prantl was wedded on the 7th of January, in 1909, to Miss Therese Ditrich, a daughter of Martin and Therese Ditrich, both of whom are natives of Hungary. The parents came to America in 1904 and are now living on a farm in Marion county. Their family consists of eight children who are living, namely: Mrs. Katie Siefer, of Gervais, Oregon; John, of Portland; Mrs. Annie Kohn, of Gervais; Mrs. Prantl, the wife of Frank Prantl, of this review; Lena, at home; Martin, of Gervais; and Mary and Cecilia, at home. Mr. and Mrs. Prantl have become the parents of two children: Cecilia T., born December 29, 1909, and Agnes M., born July 23, 1911. In politics Mr. Prantl adheres to the principles of the republican party and both he and his wife are devout members of the Catholic church. His entire life has been spent in Marion county, where he is well known and highly esteemed as a progressive and enterprising man.

JAMES F. KINDRED. With limited educational opportunities and no special advantages to aid him as he started out in the business world, James F. Kindred worked his way upward and has long been widely and favorably known as a leading agriculturist of Clatsop county. He represented one of the old pioneer families of the northwest, his birth having occurred in Oregon City, December 25, 1844. His parents were B. C. and Rachel (Miller) Kindred, both of whom were natives of Illinois, and in 1844 crossed the plains with ox teams, settling first in Oregon City, which at that time was a very small place. They remained there only one winter and then removed to Columbia county, Oregon, where the father was employed in a logging mill one year. In 1846 they removed to Clatsop county and the father entered a farm, which is now known as the Gearhart place. He built thereon a log cabin, which he occupied two years, and then traded the place for a yoke of oxen. He next secured a tract of land of six hundred and forty acres, upon which the town of Hammond now stands, and there he lived up to the time of his death. When he first settled in Clatsop county he had to haul his provisions from Vancouver on the Columbia river in a birch canoe and it required a week to make the trip. Subsequently he had a whaleboat built, which was propelled by sails, after which he engaged in transporting goods for pioneers of this end of the county from Vancouver. Subsequently he became a pilot for vessels plying on the Columbia river from its mouth to Portland. His death occurred in 1905 and his wife passed away January 2, 1898. In their family were twelve children: Henry P., now living at Seaside, Oregon; James F.; Joel, deceased; Nancy, the wife of Henry Fisher, of Hammond, Clatsop county; Julia, the deceased wife of Captain Babbidge; William, a resident of Washington; Mary, the wife of Frank Mudd, who is living on a farm eight miles south of Astoria; David, now at Fort Stevens; Amanda, in Portland; Amelia, the wife of Charles Holt; Sarah, the wife of Wilas Mudd, of Hammond, and Rozettie Cunningham.

Only in a limited way did James F. Kindred have opportunity to attend school and at eighteen years of age he started out in the world on his own account, working in various ways for three years, after which he rented a farm on Youngs river and continued its cultivation for a year. Subsequently he purchased the property known as the Burke farm, comprising one hundred and twenty-nine acres, finely improved. He has since devoted his energies to general agricultural pursuits and has converted his place into an excellent property. In addition to this he owns six lots in the vicinity of Hammond, four lots and a fine residence in Warrenton, three lots in Astoria and one in Portland.

Mr. Kindred has been married twice. He first wedded Eliza Doak, who was born in Clatsop county, and unto them were born six children: Joel, a resident of Clatsop county; Edward, now in Washington; Julia, the wife of M. Miller, of Idaho; Augusta, who is married and resides south of Portland; Charles, living at Goble, Oregon; and Katherine, the wife of Charles Dean, of Clatsop county. In 1881 Mrs. Kindred died and in 1883 Mr. Kindred was again married, his second union being with Mrs. Lavina Keaton Dean, the widow of William R. Dean, who by her first marriage had five children, namely: Charles, who is first mate on the gasoline schooner Patsy; Elizabeth, the wife of Fred Preston, of Clatsop county; Edward, a farmer; Mrs. Achsa Bowers, of Astoria; and William R., who was chief engineer on the Oshkosh gasoline schooner and was drowned on the 13th of February, 1911, in the Pacific ocean in a terrible gale. Mrs. Kindred was born in St. Louis, Missouri, and is a daughter of Thomas and Lorina (Karnes) Keaton, the former a native of Kentucky and the latter of Illinois. She was one of a family of nine children and by her marriage to Mr. Kindred has become the mother of four children: Maud, the wife of Peter Fake, of Astoria; Rosa, the wife of George Baker, of Tacoma, Washington; Ralph, deceased; and Lester, who is now engineer on the Teddy Roosevelt, a steamer plying on the Columbia.

In his political views Mr. Kindred is a republican but has never been an office seeker. His understanding of political questions and issues is comprehensive, but he prefers to devote himself to private business interests that are now bringing him substantial returns.

O. D. HAMSTREET, editor and owner of the Sheridan Sun, was born in Darlington, Lafayette county, Wisconsin, May 5, 1858, a son of Jonathan and Elizabeth (Pramer) Hamstreet, both natives of the state of New York. The paternal ancestors have lived in America for three generations, the great-grandfather and two of his brothers coming from Germany, and they have all followed the occupation of farming. The father grew to manhood in New York and was married there and then moved to Wisconsin, making the trip by boat through the Erie canal. He lived in Wisconsin until just before his death in 1879, when he moved to Clear Lake, Iowa. He, too, was a farmer by occupation but being very active in church and Sunday school work, he gave the last twenty years of his life to the organizing of Sunday schools. His faith was that of the Congregational church and also, in addition to his other activities for the church, he served as deacon. The maternal grandfather was a fencer by profession in his native country, Holland, but left there on account of a duel to which he was challenged, and came to America. The mother died in 1909 and is buried beside her husband in the cemetery of Clear Lake, Iowa.

O. D. Hamstreet attended the country schools and the State Normal School of Wisconsin and then studied law in the State University of Iowa at Iowa City, being graduated in the class of 1882. He then located in Paullina, Iowa, where he remained eleven years in the practice of law. For a part of this time he was also editor of the Paullina Times. Subsequently he moved to Sheridan, Wyoming, and was engaged for ten years in the hardware trade and in the live-stock business. He was then at Norfolk, Nebraska, for four years, at the end of which time he returned to Sheridan and became editor of the Sheridan Enterprise. In 1908 he removed to Sheridan, Oregon, where he purchased the Sheridan Sun, of which he is still editor and manager.

In 1883 Mr. Hamstreet was married to Miss Vina Daniels, a native of Iowa. They have two children: Loil, who is a high-school graduate and is now shipping clerk in a wholesale house in Portland; and Harold, now attending high school. In politics Mr. Hamstreet gives his allegiance to the republican party and has held various offices. He is an active worker in the Commercial Club of Sheridan, of which he was one of the organizers.

FRANCIS E. ROWELL, a prosperous and prominent citizen of Washington county, where he has resided from his birth to the present time, has for the past eight years conducted a general mercantile establishment in partnership with his brother, James Albert, their store being located at Scholls, eight miles southwest of Beaverton. His birth occurred on the 21st of August, 1876, his parents being John D. and Ann R. (Jack) Rowell. The father was born in St. Joseph county, Michigan, on the 10th of October, 1836, while the mother's birth occurred in Virginia on the 5th of February, 1852. Their marriage was celebrated in Washington county, Oregon, where John D. Rowell spent the remainder of his life and where his widow still resides at the age of sixty years. In 1853, when their son John was a youth of sixteen, the paternal grandparents of our subject crossed the plains to Oregon, the journey consuming four months and twenty days. The grandfather took up a donation claim in Washington county, continuing to reside thereon until called to his final rest. The maternal grandparents of Francis E. Rowell removed to Iowa when their daughter Ann was still a child, remaining in that state for four years. On the expiration of that period they crossed the plains by ox team to Oregon, settling in Washington county, where the grandfather purchased one hundred and sixty acres of land. Subsequently he augmented his land holdings by additional purchase and at one time owned three hundred and sixty acres. At the time of his demise, which occurred in 1908, he had largely converted his property into cash. His wife passed away in May, 1896.

John D. Rowell, the father of Mr. Rowell of this review, first came into possession of a tract of one hundred and twenty acres and subsequently traded the same for one hundred and ninety-eight acres of the donation claim originally owned by his father and bought one hundred and twenty-two acres making a total of three hundred and twenty acres. The latter place was his home throughout the remainder of his life, his death occurring on the 7th of August, 1896. Unto him and his wife were born five children, as follows: Francis E., of this review; Carrie May, who died in infancy; James Albert, who is associated in business with his brother, Francis E.; Cassie, the wife of T. R. Ratcliffe, of Portland, Oregon; and Ina I. I., who is yet at home. James Albert Rowell, as above stated, is his brother's associated in the conduct of a general mercantile establishment at Scholls. In fact he and his brother conduct all their interests in partnership, including a tile and brick factory and a sawmill in Washington county. James Albert Rowell is also interested in the Portland Concrete Pile & Equipment Company, the American Life & Accident Insurance Company of Oregon and in a tract of one hundred and eight acres of land in Washington county.

Francis E. Rowell, like the other children of his father's family, attended the common schools in the acquirement of an education. When nineteen years of age he began assisting in the operation of the old homestead farm, devoting his attention to the work of the fields until 1910. In addition to his work on the farm he, in 1903, in association with his brother, James Albert, embarked in business as a general merchant of Scholls, where they have since built up a profitable store, enjoying an extensive patronage. Furthermore, he has an interest in a sawmill and tile and brick factory, and likewise holds stock in the American Life & Accident Insurance Company of Portland as well as the Portland Concrete Pile & Equipment Company. In association with his brother, James A., he owns a tract of one hundred and eight acres of land in Washington county, forty-five acres of which is under a high state of cultivation, seven acres being planted to onions. The brothers also own two hundred and ninety-two acres of land in Canada and a tract of one hundred and ninety-three acres near Crescent City, California.

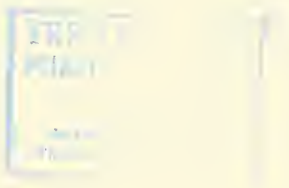
On the 2d of January, 1905, Mr. Rowell was united in marriage to Miss Minnie B. Sutherland, who was born in Stockton, California, on the 2d of March, 1884, her parents being E. J. and Mary Jane (Turner) Sutherland, natives of California and Indiana respectively. They were married in the Golden state and there resided until 1885,

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY

ASTOR LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS

JOHN D. ROWELL

MRS. JOHN D. ROWELL



when they came to Oregon, first locating in Clackamas county and later in Washington county. In 1891 they removed to Yamhill county but ten years later returned to Washington county, where they spent the remainder of their lives, Mr. Sutherland passing away on the 18th of October, 1902, and his wife on the 2d of March, 1908. Unto them were born six children, as follows: Grace, the wife of P. C. Anderson, of Portland; Edna May, who is deceased; Mrs. Rowell; Edward J., living in Portland; Jennie, the wife of George D. Lee, of Portland; and John, who is a resident of Scholls, Oregon. Mr. and Mrs. Rowell had two children, namely: one who died in infancy; and Francis Theron, whose natal day was August 9, 1908.

In politics Mr. Rowell is a stanch republican, casting his ballot for the men and measures of that party. He belongs to the United Artisans. He is a thoroughgoing business man, improving his opportunities for the attainment of financial success, and his diligence has been the source of his prosperity.

FRANK SEYMOUR BAILLIE was born at Flint, Michigan, on August 11, 1869. His parents were William P. Baillie and Emily Seymour Pier-Baillie. He received his education in the public school of Flint, Michigan, and graduated from its high school in 1886. He graduated from the University of Michigan with the class of 1890, receiving the degree of B. S. (C. E.). His professional career began as a surveyor under the direction of General W. W. Duffield. He later was a draftsman with the American Bridge Works, of Chicago, Illinois. From 1893 to 1896 he was assistant engineer for the Gillette-Herzog Manufacturing Company of Minneapolis, Minnesota. In the fall of 1896 he became vice president and general manager of the Columbia Gold Mining Company, operating what is known as the Columbia Mine and has since that time to date continued in that position.

In 1905 Mr. Baillie was married to Jessie Allen Perkins, of Coffeyville, Kansas. Mr. Baillie is a member of the various clubs, as well as benevolent orders of the eastern Oregon district, being a past commander of Baker Commandery No. 9, K. T.

WILLIAM J. DENVIR was numbered among the self-made men of Clatsop county and, although early left and orphan and deprived of many of the advantages which come through home training and environment, he made for himself a name and position in the business world most creditable. He was born in County Down, Ireland, but was early left an orphan. The date of his birth was unknown to him, yet the supposition is he was about sixty-one years of age at the time of his demise. He had an uncle on the paternal side who was a bishop in the Catholic church in Belfast, Ireland, and his paternal grandfather was a soldier in the English army in the Revolutionary war in America. By occupation he was a sea captain and devoted many years to sailing the seas. Patrick Denvir, father of William, by his marriage to Nancy Philips, had four daughters and two sons, Margaret, Mary, Sarah, Anne, Robert and John.

William J. Denvir was about seven years of age when he lost his mother and was one of a family of six children born of the second marriage of his father. Five of the children are still living, including four daughters, Jane, Catherine, Elizabeth and Martha. William J. was the fourth in order of birth in the family and was about twelve years of age when his father died. At that time he was attending the common schools of Ireland. When a youth of about fourteen he was sent to America and joined Alexander Alcorn in Iowa, living with him for four years at Mount Sterling, in Van Buren county. In 1862 he was sent across the plains to Nevada, driving ox teams. He located in Virginia City, where he remained until able to dispose of some horses which he had taken with him. In the following year he returned to Iowa and in the fall of 1864 again crossed the plains with mule teams, locating at the old Virginia mining camp in Montana. There he engaged in mining for eight months, after which he went to Helena, where he carried on ranching. Failing in this venture, he returned on horseback to Iowa, but once more crossed the plains, in 1871, this time journeying by rail to San Francisco and thence by water to Portland. In the following year he settled upon the farm on which he resided up to the time of his death. He took up both a homestead and a preemption claim, in all about two hundred and eighty acres. To this he added from time to time, becoming the owner of two hundred and seventy acres additional.

In 1879 Mr. Denvir was united in marriage to Miss Eva A. Ledford, who was born in Jackson county, Oregon, March 16, 1859, and is a daughter of Eli and Sarah Jane (Walker) Ledford, both of whom were natives of Missouri. They came to Oregon while still single with their respective parents in 1845, crossing the plains with ox teams, six months being consumed ere the trip was completed. Her grandfather Walker was a member of the Oregon state legislature and was also captain of Company E, of the Ninth Regiment of Oregon Militia, his company being composed of Jackson county men. The death of Mr. Ledford occurred in 1885, his widow and Mrs. Denvir surviving him. He was a volunteer of the Ninth Regiment under Colonel John E. Ross, which was organized in 1865 and only existed from October 16th to November 21st. He was then honorably discharged and was to receive for his services the usual compensation and pay for the use of his horse, but the government failed to meet its obligation. In 1859 the father with a party of men out prospecting for claims was met by a band of Indians and all were massacred by the savages, while the horses and belongings were confiscated. Mrs. Denvir was the only child of her parents. By her marriage she became the mother of six children: Mollie E., the wife of R. S. Smith; Kate, deceased; Anna Grace, the wife of Fred L. Pope, living in Elsie, Oregon; Nancy R., the wife of Edward Ridderbusch, of Jewell, Oregon; Maud A., the wife of Damon E. Stinson, of California; and Robert James, at home.

Mr. Denvir passed away on the 2d of May, 1904, leaving a widow and five children. Mrs. Denvir still owns a farm of one hundred and eighty acres, of which fifty acres is under cultivation. She is now serving as postmistress of Warrenton, which position she has filled for the past six years. Mr. Denvir was a man of many sterling traits of character and his personal qualities were such as endeared him to many friends so that genuine sorrow was felt when he passed from this life.

GEORGE A. McFARLAND. Agricultural pursuits have always engaged the attention of George A. McFarland, who is operating a ranch of twenty-five acres east of Beaverton, that formed a portion of the donation claim acquired by his father over fifty years ago. His birth occurred on the farm where he is now living, in 1859, his parents being James and Eliza McFarland, the father a native of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and the mother of Iowa. They were married in the latter state and there they resided until 1852, when they crossed the plains to Oregon, being among the pioneer settlers of Washington county. Here the father took up a donation claim of three hundred and twenty acres, that he operated until his death in 1882. The mother passed away in 1890. Of the seven children born to Mr. and Mrs. McFarland four are living, of whom our subject is the youngest, the others being as follows: Mary E., who married H. P. Johnson, of Portland, Oregon; Josie, the wife of Charles Overand, of Alaska; and William H., who is living in Portland. Those deceased are: Thomas, James and Ina.

The boyhood and youth of George A. McFarland were spent on the farm where he was born, his education being limited to the courses provided by the common schools of the vicinity. At the age of eighteen years he worked out as a farm hand for a time, but subsequently took charge of the home place, which he operated until the death of his parents. Soon thereafter he came into possession of his portion of the home ranch, that he immediately located upon and here he has ever since resided. He now owns twenty-five acres of land on section 3, township 2, south, range 1, west, practically all of which he has brought to a high state of cultivation. During the period of his occupancy Mr. McFarland has wrought extensive improvements in the property that now forms one of the attractive features of this section of the county. He has applied himself intelligently and industriously to the operation of his fields, that have responded to his efforts by abundant harvests. A firm believer in extensive farming, he has made a careful study of the soil on his place and the products to which it is best adapted, thus greatly increasing his annual yield and at the same time improving its quality.

On the 3d of March, 1888, was celebrated the marriage of Mr. McFarland and Miss Lillie Tibitha Burnham, also a native of this county, and a daughter of Charles and Mary E. Burnham. Mrs. McFarland lost her mother when she was a child of ten years, and her father passed away on September 17, 1911, at the age of seventy-six years. Mr. and Mrs. Burnham were the parents of seven children, four of whom are deceased. Those living are: May, the wife of Joseph Boyd, of Dilley, this state; Albert, who is a resident of Butteville; and Mrs. McFarland. Of the five children born to Mr. and Mrs. McFarland all are living with the exception of one son, Robert, who died at the age of ten years. The others are as follows: Josephine, the wife of Max Stockdale, of Silvan; Francetta and Henry W., both of whom are at home; and Emery K., who is a lad of five years. Fully appreciating the advantages of a thorough mental training Mr. McFarland has given his three elder children the advantages of a good business education, thus equipping them to meet the practical responsibilities of life.

Although he has never been an aspirant to public honors or the emoluments of office, Mr. McFarland meets the requirements of good citizenship by casting a ballot on election day, his support being accorded to the candidates of the republican party. By reason of his honest and upright life he is held in high esteem in his community, where his friends are practically coextensive with his acquaintances.

JOHN A. FERSCHWEILER is the owner of a tract of fifty acres of highly cultivated land, situated twelve miles north of Salem and two and one-half miles east of Gervais. A native of Marion county, he was born near St. Louis in 1874, the son of Peter J. and Elizabeth (Domier) Ferschweiler. The father was born in St. Cloud, Minnesota, and the mother was a native of Austria and was brought by her parents from that country to America when she was four years of age. The father and mother were married in Oregon, having come here in the early '70s, and soon after their marriage bought land in Marion county, which they occupied until the father's death, in August, 1880. At that date they owned two hundred and fifty acres and in addition the father and his brother operated the flour mills at Champoeg. The mother is still residing at Gervais, Oregon. They were the parents of five children, three of whom are now living, Susan, Christina and John A., of this review. The mother was married a second time, becoming the wife of D. Bauer, and of this union one child was born, Anna. Mr. Bauer died in February, 1884, and the mother is now the wife of Frank Nihler.

John A. Ferschweiler began life for himself at the time of his marriage when he took charge of the old homestead, which he still operates, being engaged in general farming. On the 24th of November, 1903, he was united in marriage to Miss Theresa Reiling, a native of Washington county, Oregon, born

May 10, 1881, the daughter of Frank J. and Eleanor (Greiner) Reiling, the father a native of Ohio and the mother of Michigan. The parents were married in Kansas, where they lived until 1875, when they came to Oregon and settled in Washington county, where the father followed farming until his retirement, at which time he sold his place and is now living near Gladstone, Oregon. In their family were thirteen children, of whom Mrs. Fersehweiler was seventh in order of birth. The others were: Francis and John L., deceased; M. J.; Clara; Mary; Margaret; Charley; George J.; Agnes; Annie; Fred; and Catherine. Mr. and Mrs. Fersehweiler have become the parents of six children: Margaret and Frances, twins, born July 19, 1904; Raymond, born November 5, 1905; Leonore, born August 14, 1907; Frederick, born April 2, 1909; and Annie, born September 2, 1911.

In politics Mr. Fersehweiler votes the republican ticket, but he is very liberal in his views, and fraternally he is a member of the order of United Artisans. Both he and Mrs. Fersehweiler are much interested in the cause of education, they themselves having had the advantages of good common-school courses. The family are members of the Catholic church and their lives are guided by its teachings. Mr. Fersehweiler enjoys a wide and favorable acquaintance in the county where his entire life has been spent and is entitled to a place among its upright, respected and representative citizens.

WILLIAM B. BROWN, a farmer of Marion county, Oregon, residing twelve miles north of Salem and four miles south of Gervais, was born in Clark county, Missouri, June 22, 1858, the son of Benjamin and Mary (Hawkins) Brown, the father a native of Pennsylvania and the mother of Indiana. The parents were married in Missouri and lived there until 1860, when they crossed the plains and settled in Marion county, Oregon, on a tract of land, part of which included the present site of Woodburn. The father resided on this land until within two years of his death, when he went to live with his daughter at Longbeach, Washington, where he died in 1907, the mother having passed away several years before. In their family were thirteen children: Barbara E.; Mary Jane; Minerva A.; Emma P., deceased; A. B.; William B., of this review; Sarah D. J.; Cora May; H. D.; Loretta, deceased; S. B.; John M.; and Nancy E., deceased.

William B. Brown, being only two years of age when his parents crossed the plains, was reared and attended the common schools in Oregon. He remained at home with his parents until he was twenty-one years of age, although he had married one year previous to that time, and then began farming on land that he bought in Marion county, known as the old donation land claim, on which he lived until 1892, when he moved to the adjoining farm, where he still resides. He has followed the occupation of farming all his life and now owns two hundred and eighty-six acres of highly improved land, with two hundred and sixty acres under a high state of cultivation. He also owns property in Woodburn.

On January 1, 1879, Mr. Brown was united in marriage to Miss Olive J. Jones, a native of Marion county, Oregon, and a daughter of Mithra and Julia A. (Hubbard) Jones. The parents crossed the plains with ox teams in 1847 and settled in Marion county, where they continued to make their home. The father is still living with his daughter, Mrs. Brown, and has now reached the advanced age of eighty-two years, the mother having passed away in 1898. Six children were born to them: Ella; Olive J., now Mrs. William B. Brown; Minnie; Georgie; Charlie, deceased; and Rachel V. Mr. and Mrs. Brown have become the parents of four children. Winifred died at the age of six months. Zoe was born in 1882 and is now Mrs. Bert McAtee, of Portland, Oregon, and is the mother of a daughter, Marjory Ethel, born December 19, 1911. Lulu S. and Luke S., who are twins were born September 23, 1889, and the former is now Mrs. Andrew C. Baker, of Portland, while Luke S., who lives at home with his father, married Miss Edna Holman, of Salem, and has a son, Raymond A., born March 25, 1912. All the members of the family have a good common-school education and some of them also have completed business-college courses.

Mr. Brown's political allegiance is given to the republican party, and fraternally he is allied with the A. F. & A. M.; with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, of which he has filled all the chairs; with the Elks of Salem and with the Foresters, having also filled all the chairs in this lodge. Since boyhood he has given his undivided attention to farming and has studied the best methods of cultivating the soil and as the result of untiring and faithful work he has reached a position where he is recognized as one of the successful and substantial men of his community.

ELDON E. ANTRIM, who is conducting a thriving grocery business in Hopewell, Oregon, was born near that city, January 26, 1868, a son of Benjamin and Sarah E. (Sawyer) Antrim. His parental grandfather was a pioneer in Logan county, Illinois, building the first brick house at Lacon. The family came from the northern part of Ireland and one of the ancestors, John Antrim, was a member of William Penn's colony. The maternal grandfather was also a pioneer of Logan county, Illinois. He was a native of Virginia and his wife, of Tennessee. Benjamin, the father of Eldon E. Antrim, was born in Dearborn county, Indiana, and was only a small child when his parents removed to Illinois, where he grew to manhood. He crossed the plains in 1849, going direct to Oregon. He spent the winter in Linn City and in 1850 he went to the mines in California, where he remained for thirteen years. He went through all the hardships and experiences of pioneer life, including participation in the two Rogue River Indian wars and in an engagement was wounded in the head by an Indian bullet but the injury proved to be only a slight one. Being thoroughly acquainted with that region, he was placed on scout duty where he rendered very efficient service. Finally, before the close of the war he bought one hundred and sixty acres of land near Hopewell, where he lived during the remainder of his life, his death occurring in 1893. After his arrival on the Pacific coast he married Miss Sarah E. Sawyer, a native of Logan county, Illinois, who had come to Oregon in 1847 with her parents, who located on a donation claim near Hopewell. She died at her home near Hopewell in 1897. In their family were four children: George, who is a farmer residing three miles northeast of Hopewell; Eldon E., of this review; Mary, who is now Mrs. T. E. Armstrong, of Yamhill, Oregon; and Ray L., of Portland.

Eldon E. Antrim was educated in Oregon and attended first the common schools, then Philomath College and later McMinnville College. He remained at home with his parents until he was twenty-one years of age, when he began life for himself by taking charge of a part of his father's farm, which work he continued until ten years ago. He then engaged in the grocery business in Hopewell but after three years he sold this and from 1907 to 1909 was out of business. Then he again engaged in business at Hopewell, where he has now a large stock of groceries and owns his store building and two lots.

In 1889 Mr. Antrim was married to Miss Lela Belle Cooper, a native of Oregon and a daughter of E. S. and Melissa (Stephens) Cooper, both of whom are living in Yamhill county. Mr. and Mrs. Antrim are the parents of four children. Hugh B., Benjamin F. Oscar C., and Metta M., all of whom are at home.

In politics Mr. Antrim is an independent, and fraternally he is identified with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows at Amity. Mrs. Antrim is a member of the United Brethren church. He is recognized as a man of laudable ambition and marked energy, who seldom fails to carry forward to successful completion whatever he undertakes.

CHARLES H. WELCH, now retired, an Oregon pioneer who in 1882 bought land for a farm which is now solidly built up within Portland's boundaries, was born in Otsego county, New York, July 14, 1839, his parents being William V. and Lucy P. (Pringle) Welch. The father's birth occurred in Pennsylvania on the 29th of June, 1806, while the mother was born in New York on the 4th of July, 1806. They were of Welsh and Scotch lineage respectively. William V. Welch and Lucy P. Pringle were married in New York and resided on the old homestead farm in that state until 1846, when they disposed of the property and removed to Illinois, purchasing a farm in Boone county. Subsequently they took up their abode in McHenry county and there also purchased a farm. In 1862 Mr. Welch sold out again and returned to the state of New York, where he bought a farm and remained for some years. Subsequently he took up his abode in Ohio and later removed to Iowa. He passed away in Oregon on the 3d of April, 1896, while paying a visit to his son Charles. His wife was called to her final rest in 1881. Both are buried in Multnomah county, Oregon. Their children were six in number, as follows: William, who died in Colorado at the age of fifty years; John, whose demise occurred in Kansas in the year 1881; Charles H., of this review; Frances, the widow of J. D. Maynard, who passed away in 1897; Katherine, who died in infancy; and David, whose death occurred in 1897.

The parents of Charles H. Welch removed to Illinois when he was about seven years old, and the greater part of his youth was passed and his education gained in that state, where he attended the public schools. He remained at home until 1861, when he enlisted for three years' service with the Federal forces, becoming a member of Company F of the Forty-fifth Illinois Volunteer Infantry. During the period of his first enlistment he was promoted to the rank of corporal. The Forty-fifth Regiment was known as the Washburn Lead Mine Regiment and was organized at Camp Washington, near Galena, by John E. Smith, who was commissioned as colonel. On November 22, the regiment moved to Camp Douglas, Chicago, where it was mustered into the United States service on the 25th of December, 1861. On January 12, 1862, it moved to Cairo, Illinois, where Mr. Welch was assigned to the Second Brigade, First Division, which left the next day with Grant's army for Tennessee. The army camped near Fort Henry, and it received its baptism of fire at Fort Donelson on February 14 and 16, and on March 4 moved to Savannah, Tennessee, and thence to Pittsburg Landing, camping near Shiloh Church. Mr. Welch's regiment was in the front line of battle in the engagement at Shiloh, during which conflict twenty-six of its members were killed, while the wounded and missing numbered one hundred and ninety-nine. The regiment afterward took part in the seige of Corinth, Mississippi, and on November 22, marched for La Grange, Tennessee, where it guarded the city, subsequently moving to Holly Springs, Mississippi. In February, 1863, with the Seventeenth Corps, it moved on to Vicksburg and took part in the engagements at Port Gibson, Raymond and Champion's Hill, participating in the siege of Vicksburg. The regiment made three charges on Vicksburg on the 19th, 22d and 25th days of May, respectively, losing in the last charge eighty-three men in killed and wounded. The regiment remained on guard before Vicksburg from July 4, to October, 1863, and then took part in the Canton raid from November 7, 1863, to February 3, 1864, and encamped at Black river, during which period nearly to a man, the regiment reenlisted. His first period of enlistment having expired, Corporal Welch also reenlisted while at Black river, where he took part in the Meridan raid and then went home on a furlough. He rejoined the army on June 7, at Etowah, Georgia. His regiment then took part in the Atlanta campaign and at Savannah, Georgia, joined Sherman in his march to the sea. On January 4, 1865, Mr. Welch started with his regiment on the campaign of the Carolinas, taking part in the engagements of Pocotaligo, South Carolina, Fayetteville and Bentonville, and after Johnson surrendered, marched to Washington, where Corporal Welch was honorably discharged on July 8, 1865. When he returned to his father's home in New York he had been wounded three times, his injuries at one time being so serious that he was laid up for two months.

MR. AND MRS. C. H. WELCH

At the end of a year Mr. Welch left the Empire state and removed to Boone county, Illinois, where he engaged in farming for two years. On the expiration of that period he went to Tama county, Iowa, there following farming for ten years. Subsequently he spent three years in Kansas and at the end of that time, in 1882, came to Oregon, settling in Multnomah county, where he purchased land covered with dense forest which is now built up solidly and is part of the city of Portland. As the city rapidly grew, Mr. Welch sold off tract after tract of his holdings in subdivisions, and the land is now completely assimilated by this great city. He still owns three and a half acres in block 1.

On the 16th of May, 1866, Mr. Welch was married to Miss Esther Crittenden, whose birth occurred in Boone county, Illinois, May 18, 1845, her parents being Philander and Maria L. (Williams) Crittenden, both natives of Ohio. They were long residents of Illinois, Mr. Crittenden there occupying a farm until his death, which occurred on the 30th of August, 1873. His wife was called to her final rest in 1870. In the Crittenden family were nine children, namely: Elmira, who is the wife of T. J. Bishop, of Minnesota; Rosaltha, who is deceased; Henry, who laid down his life on the altar of his country, being killed in the Civil war in 1862; Amanda, Cynthia A. and Adelaide, all of whom died in infancy; Mrs. Esther Welch; Julia M., the wife of Leonard Gleason, of Illinois; and Isaac Newton, whose whereabouts are unknown. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Welch have been born six children: Jessie C., born August 31, 1867, was the wife of T. W. Searles, and passed away on the 20th of February, 1907; Willie L., whose natal day was September 22, 1869, died on the 27th of December, 1876, when seven years of age; Gertie and Bertie, twins, were born on the 28th of March, 1872, and passed away on the 1st of January, 1877, when five years of age, dying within a few hours of each other; Julia E., whose birth occurred on the 27th of April, 1877, is the wife of H. G. McGowan, of Lyle, Washington. She taught school for seven years prior to her marriage and is also proficient in the arts of music and painting. Verna L., born November 13, 1881, is the wife of Charles G. Royle, who is connected with the printing bureau at Washington, D. C. Mrs. Royle pursued a course in bookkeeping prior to her marriage, and has also studied vocal music. Mrs. Esther Welch has both a college and musical education and followed the profession of teaching for several terms prior to her marriage.

Mr. Welch gives his political allegiance to the republican party, but has never sought nor desired office as a reward for his fealty. He belongs to Evening Star Grange, No. 27, and is one of the four surviving charter members of Sumner Post, No. 12, G. A. R. He and his family are affiliated with the Missionary Baptist church. With a creditable war record and having played an important part in the development of Multnomah county, Mr. Welch at a mature age is enjoying in peace and comfort in his home in Portland the rewards which his active life's labors have brought him. He is among the most honored of the old settlers of Multnomah county, and to him Portland is indebted in no small degree for many acts of service to her.

JOHN A. MONTGOMERY. One of the representatives of the pioneer families of Astoria is John A. Montgomery, whose birth occurred in this city on the 8th of September, 1861. His parents were Almerin and Fanny (Clark) Montgomery, the father a native of New York, having been born in 1822, and the mother of Vermont, her birth occurring in 1825, both are now deceased. In the paternal line our subject is descended from General Montgomery of Revolutionary fame, while some of the maternal ancestors were signers of the Declaration of Independence, and several of Mrs. Montgomery's brothers were in the Civil war. The father, who was a cooper by trade, came to Oregon in 1852, crossing the plains with an ox team. The mother came seven years later by way of the isthmus, sailing from New York to Astoria, where she was married the same year. Mr. Montgomery was quite prominently identified with public affairs during the pioneer days, having served as sheriff of Clatsop county for eight years during the '60s, and for sixteen years he was inspector at the custom house. Mr. and Mrs. Montgomery had two children, a son, John A., and a daughter, Laura now deceased.

John A. Montgomery obtained his education in the public and high schools of Astoria, where he was reared to manhood. After leaving school he learned the trade of a tinsmith and plumber, becoming in 1880 a member of the firm of C. E. Jackens & Company, with which he was identified for nine years. In 1889 he removed to Pacific county, Washington, where he resided for ten years, conducting a general merchandise store at Willapa. At the expiration of that period he returned to Astoria and again engaged in the plumbing business in connection with which he also does tinning and sheet metal work and sells and installs heating plants. Mr. Montgomery has built up an extensive patronage and is doing a satisfactory business.

On the 20th of June, 1882, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Montgomery and Miss Emma T. Morris, who was born in Manchester, England, whence she came to the United States in 1881 with her parents, Richard and Jane (Taylor) Morris. Her father was a foundryman in the mother country but after locating in Pacific county, Washington, engaged in ranching. Of the union of Mr. and Mrs. Montgomery there has been born one daughter, Dorothy John, whose birth occurred in Willapa, Washington. She is now a student in the high school here.

The religious affiliation of the family is with the Methodist Episcopal church, while fraternally Mr. Montgomery belongs to the Ancient Order of United Workmen, Maccabees and the Owls. His allegiance is given to the republican party, but he does not seek political preferment or position, though he takes active interest in party issues and exacts his constitutional right and duty on election day faithfully. Although he is progressive and public-spirited in matters of citizenship he has never been an aspirant to municipal honors, preferring to give his undivided attention to the development of his business, in the conduct of which he is meeting with very good success.

MRS. CLARA COLLINS is the owner of a farm of forty acres not far from Haines, Oregon, and in its management and control she displays good business ability and sound judgment. She was born in Kansas, April 17, 1864, and after residing there for some years went to Missouri. From the latter state she came to the northwest, settling in Oregon, where she became the wife of John Brasier on the 8th of October, 1882. They became the parents of seven children: Geneva, born August 1, 1883; Mettie, born August 14, 1885; Arthur, who was born April 12, 1887, and died in infancy; James, born June 18, 1890; William, born October 10, 1892; Ellen, born January 1, 1894; and Elsie, born May 3, 1899. All are yet residents of Oregon. On the 17th of June, 1905, Mrs. Brasier became the wife of John Collins, from whom she separated in February, 1908. She has always lived on the forty-acre tract of land which is now her home, has succeeded in rearing her children to be a credit to herself and to the community and has ever enjoyed the warm regard and respect of those who know her. She holds membership in the Methodist church, faithfully performs her religious duties and greatly aids that church in its work and in the promotion of its influence. She has a wide circle of friends and both she and her family are well and favorably known in Haines and vicinity.

G. P. TERRELL. One of the most straightforward, energetic and successful business men of Mehama, Marion county, is G. P. Terrell, who is engaged in the general mercantile business. He was born in Litchfield county, Connecticut, February 1, 1836, the son of Sylvester and Almyra (Clemmont) Terrell, both of whom were natives of Connecticut and passed all their lives there. They were the parents of seven children: Elizabeth, who resides in Connecticut; Abigail and Emma, deceased; Rhoda Anne, who resides at Flushing, Long Island; G. P., of this review; Willis, who was in the Civil war and died while in service; and Hubert, who also served in the Civil war and who died at the Soldiers' Home, Norton, Connecticut, in 1912.

G. P. Terrell received his education in the common schools and in an academy in Connecticut, and remained at home until 1858, when he went to Kansas City, Missouri. In 1860 he crossed the plains settling in Polk county, Oregon, and then went to Salem, where he remained six months. Subsequently he removed to Idaho and engaged in mining but after a short time went to Walla Walla, Washington, and later returned to Salem and has since resided in Marion county. In 1880 he engaged in the mercantile business in Mehama, where he now has a well equipped general store. He owns, besides, two hundred and fifty acres of land in Marion county and one hundred and sixty acres in Taney county, Missouri. He has been associated with the mercantile business the greater part of his life.

In 1867 Mr. Terrell was united in marriage to Miss Emma Smith, a native of the state of New York, and they have become the parents of two children: Ralph W., of Roseburg, Oregon; and Lila, who is the wife of J. W. Irvine, who is in business with Mr. Terrell. In politics Mr. Terrell is a republican and he has served as county commissioner for four years and also as county judge for the same period. He is a member of the Congregational church and his wife is a member of the Presbyterian. Fraternally he is identified with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and with the Elks and the Ancient Order of United Workmen, all at Salem. Mr. Terrell deserves much credit for what he has accomplished in a business way and may rightfully be termed a self-made man.

MRS. MAY BELL ANDERSON is the owner of a fine farm of two hundred acres situated six and a half miles west of Carlton and to its cultivation and improvement she gives her personal attention and supervision. She was born in Iowa on the 10th of May, 1861, and is a daughter of John Hamilton and Mary (Simpson) Walker, of whom extended mention is made in connection with the sketch of her brother, Daniel A. Walker, on another page of this work. She was married in 1881 to August William Anderson and four children were born unto them: Violet, who was born on the 26th of November, 1882, and is the wife of Elon Wallace, of McMinnville, Oregon; Lottie, born August 16, 1884, who is the wife of B. L. Bell and resides four miles north of McMinnville; Goldie, who died at the age of nine months; and Earl, who was born on the 23d of October, 1889, and who operates the homestead property for his mother.

Mrs. Anderson secured a legal separation from her husband in 1892 and she is now living on her farm of two hundred acres with her son Earl. She inherited this property from her father and it is one of the well developed farms of the district, supplied with many modern equipments, conveniences and appointments. Mrs. Anderson and her family are widely and favorably known in this locality and enjoy the warm regard of all.

MURRAY A. WADE was born in Maine in 1829, a son of Alfred and Sarah (Gilkey) Wade. The father was also a native of Maine and lived there until 1858, when he came to Oregon by way of the Isthmus of Panama and settled in Marion county, later removing to Salem, where he died at the age of seventy-two years. The mother was a native of Massachusetts and she died in Salem, Oregon, at the age of ninety-three. They were the parents of four children, of whom only Murray A., of this review, survives. The others were: a child who was drowned at the age of one and one-half years; Sarah G.; and W. L.

Murray A. Wade started out in life for himself at the age of fourteen years by going to sea as a sailor, which occupation he followed until he was twenty-four years of age. He studied navigation under John Mederkin, of Maine, who later was a representative in congress. On the vessel he filled the position of mate, and, since he was qualified as lunar observer, being one of the few in the United States who at that time were fitted for the work, he was of great assistance to his captain. He made voyages from Bangor, Maine, to different ports of Europe and America, and he has visited almost all of the ports of the latter country. He left the ship in 1853 on account of certain disadvantages in the work and was employed for fourteen years in a machine shop in Boston. At the end of that time he came to Oregon on board a packet ship, by way of Nicaragua, and settled in Marion county. He bought one hundred and sixty acres of land on which he still resides. During his early days in Oregon he lived in a log house and experienced various privations in common with his fellow pioneers. He now owns three hundred and seventy-five acres of finely improved land, two hundred acres of which is under a high state of cultivation.

In 1860 Mr. Wade was united in marriage with Miss Jane Webb, a native of Indiana and a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Webb, who were married in that state in 1844. The parents crossed the plains and at first settled in Oregon City, where they lived two years. Subsequently they took up a donation land claim of six hundred and forty acres near Parkersville, where they resided until their deaths, the mother dying at the age of seventy-four and the father at the age of eighty-six years. To them thirteen children were born, those still living being: Mary; Jane, now Mrs. Murray A. Wade; Tobisa; Harriet; Mrs. D. Skeen; Annie; Margaret; Frank; Daniel and Lucinda. Mr. and Mrs. Wade were the parents of seven children: Minnie, who taught school for thirteen years and is now the wife of Andrew Sigman, of Marion county, Oregon; Ida, who also engaged in teaching school for several years and is now at home; Frank, at home; Sarah, deceased; Malinda, at home; and Lincoln and Christinia, deceased.

Mr. Wade is a republican in his political views but is without aspiration for office, preferring to give his time and attention to business affairs. Fraternally he is identified with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Grange. He and all his family are zealous members of the Christian church. As Mr. Wade in his first position, on account of his faithfulness and ability, became a valued mate for the crew of his vessel, so in a larger sense his worthiness and energy have made him a valued man in his community.

W. A. WHITE was born in Madison county, Indiana, July 10, 1849, a son of Thomas J. and Rachel A. (Meryfield) White, both natives of Indiana. The first American ancestors of the family were passengers on the Mayflower and in later generations members of the family removed to the middle west, the grandfather of W. A. White spending all his life in Indiana. The father and mother were married in Indiana and lived there until 1853, when they repaired to Iowa, locating near Corydon, where they resided until 1862. At that time they started across the plains with teams and wagons, W. A. White riding on horseback all the way and helping to drive the cattle. They were exactly six months in making the journey from Corydon to the Grande Ronde valley, Oregon, where they settled and lived four years. Subsequently they bought seven hundred and fifteen acres of land eighteen miles east of Salem, residing there the rest of their lives. Thomas J. White was a very successful man in business and became a noted farmer and cattle raiser. He died in 1900, one of the most highly honored men of his county and a very prominent Mason, his wife having passed away six years before his death. In their family were nine children, of whom W. A. White was the eldest. The others are; James F., who resides near Salem, Oregon; Mrs. Amanda E. King, of Salem; Mrs. Josephine King, residing near the old homestead; Thomas, who lives north of Salem; Belle, the wife of Charles Mull, who lives twelve miles from Portland; Myrtle, the wife of J. T. Hunt, who resides east of Salem; Wesley M., a resident of Seattle, Washington; and Lewis, of Salem, Oregon.

W. A. White attended the public schools in Iowa and in Oregon, remaining at home with his parents until he was twenty-two years of age. He then began farming east of Salem, where he continued until 1884, when he went to Aumsville, Oregon, and engaged in the general mercantile business. After two years he again started in farming, buying a tract of land sixteen miles east of Salem, where he remained two years. Subsequently he bought a farm near Aumsville, Oregon, upon which he resided two years and then went south, settling near the Willamette river, where he bought a farm of seventy-eight acres seven miles east of Portland and here resided for eight years. He still owns this farm, upon which he has made many improvements, and he also owns a house and lot and has store buildings in Hopewell. When he first came to Hopewell he engaged in the butchering business for one and one-half years and then established a grocery store, which he still conducts.

Mr. White has been twice married. In 1871 he wedded Miss Jane T. King, a native of Oregon and to them were born five children: Mrs. Effie May Ledgerwood, a widow residing at Portland; William M., of Walla Walla, Washington; Edwin K., of Portland, Oregon; Claude C., of Salem; and Thomas C., also of Salem. In 1903 Mr. White married Miss Mabel Irene Landreth and they have two children, Hauntz and Mabel Irene Josephine, both of whom are at home. Politically Mr. White is in symapthy with the democratic party and although he has never cared to hold office, he has been constable and filled other official positions. He has been a member of the A. F. & A. M. at Salem, Oregon, for twenty-five years. His early pioneer days and varied business experiences have given him a broad knowledge of human character and the competence that he now enjoys is proof that his time has been successfully and profitably spent.

HON. LARK BILYEU. Something of the standing of the Hon. Lark Bilyeu among his professional associates is indicated by the fact that for four years he has been honored with election to the office of president of the Lane County Bar Association; his reputation among the laity is indicated by the fact that a most liberal and distinctively representative clientage is accorded him. He has practiced law in Eugene since 1882, and has been connected with the most important litigation tried in the courts of this district. He was born in Miller county, Missouri, May 24, 1852, and is a son of Joseph and Anna (Osborne) Bilyeu. The father was born near Cumberland, Tennessee, and when he was seven years of age his parents removed to Missouri. They were all farmers and were identified with agricultural interests in that state until 1862, when the family came to Oregon, settling in Linn county. The father lived there and in Albany throughout his remaining days, passing away in Albany in December, 1907, when about eighty-five years of age.

The Hon. Lark Bilyeu was partially educated in the public schools, having been only about ten years old when the journey to the northwest was made. He also attended the Pacific University at Forest Grove and then took up the profession of teaching, which he followed for seven years before his admission to the bar, acting for a time as superintendent of the schools of Linn county. He has always been a stanch friend of the cause of education and his efforts in that direction have been far-reaching and beneficial. He next took up the study of law, reading under the direction of Judge Strand. He was admitted to the bar in December, 1877, and the regard entertained for him by his preceptor is indicated by the fact that he was admitted to a partnership, the relation so continuing until Judge Strand was called to the supreme court bench. In 1882 Mr. Bilyeu removed to Eugene, where he has since practiced, and has always been alone in his professional work there. He is a most capable lawyer, his comprehensive knowledge of the principles of jurisprudence being manifest in the clear and accurate way in which he applies legal principles to the points at issue. His practice is now extensive and that he is honored and respected by his professional colleagues is indicated by the fact that for four years he has been elected to the presidency of the Lane County Bar Association.

On December 20, 1881, Mr. Bilyeu was united in marriage to Miss Margaret Irvine, a daughter of R. A. Irvine. She was born in Linn county, and has one son, Coke. Fraternally Mr. Bilyeu is connected with Eugene Lodge, No. 1, F. & A. M., of which he is a past master, and he also belongs to Eugene Chapter, No. 10, R. A. M.; Ivanhoe Commandery, K. T., of which he is a past eminent commander; Oregon Consistory, No. 1, M. R. S., and Al Kader Temple of the Mystic Shrine. His political allegiance is given to the democratic party and he has served as a member of the city council for a number of terms but is not a politician in the usually accepted sense of office seeking. He has served, however, for three terms—1885, 1887 and 1896—in the state legislature and he obtained the first appropriation for the State University of which he has ever been a stalwart champion, this appropriation providing for the building of Millard Hall. He was likewise a member of the first board of equalization and his public work has at all times been of a most practical and valuable character. At the same time he is recognized as one of the strong and able attorneys of the Oregon bar, carefully analyzing and strongly presenting his cases, and in the work of the courts has won many verdicts favorable to his clients. He has indeed been a leader of public thought and action and one who has wielded a wide influence on public opinion.

CLYDE T. HOCKETT, M. D., is one of the well known physicians and surgeons of Enterprise, where he has been identified with the medical fraternity for the past four years. A son of Jesse M. and Sarah (Booth) Hockett, he was born on his father's ranch in Douglas county, Oregon, on the 26th of February, 1878. Jesse M. Hockett is a native of Iowa, in which state he was reared to the age of two years, and very soon after passing the second anniversary of his birth in 1847, his parents with their five children, of whom he was the youngest, started across the plains with an ox team. Both the father and mother died en route, the care of the family then devolving on the eldest child, Rachel, who had attained her maturity and soon thereafter married John Griffith and reared her younger brothers and sisters. She died when Jesse M. Hockett was a youth of thirteen years, after which he was bound out to a man by the name of Bronson, who resided in the vicinity of Portland. He continued to live with him until he was nineteen when he began working for himself. As he was ambitious and desired to acquire a better education he went to Wilbur, this state, and worked his way through Umpqua Academy. Later he matriculated at Willamette University at Salem, where he studied for a time and then turned his attention to teaching, following this profession for ten years. He subsequently acquired a ranch in Douglas county, this state, upon which he settled and has ever since devoted his attention to its further improvement and cultivation. It is located five miles from Eugene and is one of the valuable properties of the county, the land being used for general farming and fruit culture. Mr. Hockett is one of the foremost citizens of his community and has always taken an active part in all political affairs, giving his support to the men and measures of the republican party.

Dr. Hockett was reared at home, attending the common schools of that vicinity in the acquirement of an education until graduated from the Grants Pass high school. He then went to Ashland Normal College, but in his sophomore year the Spanish-American war broke out and in common with many of his classmates he responded to his country's call for troops. Enlisting in Company B, Second Oregon Volunteer Infantry, he was assigned duty in the Philippines, his being the first regiment to land on the islands. He continued in the service for a little more than a year, having enlisted on May 10, 1898, and being discharged at San Francisco on the 7th of August, 1899. In the fall of 1900, he matriculated in the medical department of Willamette University, being awarded the degree of M. D. from this institution with the class of 1904. He was an excellent student and early gave evidence of possessing more than average skill both as a diagnostician and surgeon and during his senior year he was house physician in the city hospital, the experience he there received proving of inestimable value to him later when he began practicing. Immediately following his graduation he went to Cottage Grove, Lane county, this state, where he established an office that he successfully maintained for three years. In July, 1907, he removed to the eastern part of the state, settling in Enterprise, and during the five years of his residence here he has succeeded in building up a large and lucrative practice. Dr. Hockett in the choice of a profession very happily decided in favor of a vocation to which he is most ably adapted by nature, possessing the pleasing personality, optimistic temperament, and acute mental faculties so essential to both physician and surgeon.

In 1903, Dr. Hockett was united in marriage to Miss Grace Suter of Salem, Oregon, a daughter of E. O. Suter, who died at Jervis, this state, when his daughter was a child of but two years. Mrs. Hockett, who passed away in May, 1911, was also a niece of Senator Ben Harding, one of the prominent men of the northwest. Two children were born to Dr. and Mrs. Hockett, Asahel J. and Wayfe E. On the 11th of December, 1911, Dr. Hockett was married to Mrs. Louise Wade Long, a daughter of Aaron Wade, one of the prominent and influential ranchmen of Wallowa county.

Dr. Hockett is a member of the Presbyterian church, and fraternally he is affiliated with Wallowa Lodge, No. 82, A. F. & A. M., and the Enterprise Chapter, R. A. M. He is also a member of Enterprise Lodge, No. 94, K. of P., while he maintains relations with his fellow practitioners through the medium of his connection with the Wallowa County Medical Society of which he is vice president. In politics he is a republican and during the greater part of his residence in Enterprise he has represented his ward in the town council, and in the last election he was a candidate for state representative but was defeated by Jerry Rusk. Dr. Hockett is very popular both socially and professionally, and is meeting with excellent success in his practice, having had ample opportunity during the period of his residence here to demonstrate his skill both as a physician and surgeon.

JOSEPH W. HAYES, residing on an excellent farm of one hundred and sixty-five acres one mile west of Carlton, was long known as a successful breeder of full-blooded horses but has now retired from that branch of activity, although he still owns several high grade specimens of the noble steed. His birth occurred in Posey county, Indiana, on the 24th of March, 1858, his parents being Thomas W. and Keziah (Murphy) Hayes, who were born, reared and married in the Hoosier state. In 1865 they made their way to Oregon via the Isthmus of Panama, settling in Marion county, where they lived for seven years. On the expiration of that period they came to Yamhill county, purchasing a farm of two hundred and seventy-five acres near Yamhill, whereon they continued to reside until 1890. In that year Mr. Hayes put aside the active work of the fields and took up his abode at Sheridan, Oregon, where he has since lived in honorable retirement. He has now attained the age of seventy-six years, while his wife is seventy-five years old. The period of their residence in the Sunset state covers forty-six years and they are therefore largely familiar with its annals from pioneer times down to the present. Unto them were born six sons and two daughters, as follows: Mrs. Archibald, who is a resident of Marion county, Oregon; Joseph W., of this review; Edward L., living in Polk county, Oregon; John L., who died at Milton, Oregon, when forty years of age; James B., of Sheridan, Oregon; Willard, who was accidentally drowned when eleven years of age; Mrs. Maggie S. Easterbrook, who makes her home in Bellingham, Washington; and Silas, of Yamhill county, Oregon.

Joseph W. Hayes, who was a lad of seven when he came to this state with his parents, acquired his education in the common schools and when a youth of nineteen began working as a farm hand. Subsequently he became a breeder of full-blooded horses, raising Norman and also fast stock in connection with his agricultural interests. He first purchased a farm at Yamhill and there made his home until 1901, while during the following six years he resided at Glencoe. In 1907 he took up his abode at Sheridan, on another of his farms, being successfully engaged in its operation for three years. At the end of that time he purchased the tract of one hundred and sixty-five acres near Carlton whereon he has since resided. At the present time more than one hundred acres of his land is under a high state of cultivation. As an agriculturist he has won a well merited measure of prosperity, annually gathering rich crops which find a ready sale on the market. He is still a great fancier of fine horses and yet owns several high grade stallions but has retired as a breeder.

Mr. Hayes has been married twice. In 1886 he wedded Miss Mary E. Rice, a native of Marion county, Oregon, by whom he had three children, namely: Harland B., who is married and resides at John Day, Oregon; and Veda M. and Ila, both living at Salem, this state. Mr. and Mrs. Hayes obtained a legal separation in 1891 and the latter passed away in 1904. In 1901 our subject was again married, his second union being with Mrs. Drusilla Jones, a daughter of George and Louisa Corey, the former of whom crossed the plains to Oregon in 1852 and the latter in 1850. They were married in Oregon. The demise of George Corey occurred in June, 1887, while his wife was called to her final rest in July, 1896. Their children were three in number, namely: James, who is a resident of Mountaindale, Washington county, Oregon; Mrs. Drusilla Hayes; and John, who died at the age of forty-four years. Mr. and Mrs. Hayes have two children: Elma L., whose birth occurred March 7, 1902; and Lela C., whose natal day was October 29, 1906.

Since age conferred upon him the right of franchise Mr. Hayes has supported the men and measures of the democracy, believing firmly in its principles. From 1883 until 1888 he served as guard at the state prison of Oregon. His life has been well spent. In all of its relations he has been true to high and honorable principles and has never faltered in a choice between right and wrong but has always endeavored to follow a course that his judgment and his conscience have sanctioned.

LEWIS C. THOMPSON. Widely known in Yamhill county, where he has spent much of his life, Lewis C. Thompson needs no introduction to the residents of his part of the state because his important business interests have brought him into contact with many. He is one of the foremost representatives of agricultural life in Oregon, his operations being carried on most extensively. Moreover, he is president of the Thompson Company, a close corporation formed to manage the extensive property holdings of the Thompson estate on the Pacific coast.

He was born at Oregon City, Oregon, August 23, 1847, his parents being R. R. and Harriet (Bell) Thompson, who were natives of Pennsylvania and Ohio respectively. They were married at Cadiz in the latter state and there resided until 1846, when they crossed the plains to the northwest, first settling at Vancouver, Washington, where they spent one winter. They then removed to Oregon City, where Mr. Thompson engaged in milling and in speculating and also spent a part of his time at cabinet making. In 1850, attracted by the discovery of gold in California, he went to the mines, after which he returned to Oregon, having spent but a brief time in the mining regions. He took up his abode near The Dalles in eastern Oregon, where he secured a donation claim of six hundred and forty acres. It was entirely wild and undeveloped but he proved up his claim and became an active factor in the development not only of his own property but of that portion of the state. After residing there for six years he built the first seamboat of that district and operated it on the upper Columbia river for a few years. Later this became the property of a steamboat company which was organized and still later became one of the boats owned by the Oregon Railway & Navigation Company. While engaged in the steamboat business he purchased a large farm consisting of twenty-five hundred acres in Yamhill county, owning this from 1872 up to the time of his death, which occurred in 1908. He did not reside upon the place, which, however, was operated by his son Lewis, who purchased the property following the father's demise. Again R. R. Thompson went to California, this time settling at Alameda, where he established the first waterworks of the place. He afterward sold out at Alameda and removed to San Francisco, California, where he resided until his death, while his wife passed away five months later.

In their family were ten children: Eliza F., who is the widow of M. A. King and resides in Alameda, California; Sarah A., the wife of Colonel O. W. Pollock, of San Francisco; Mary Ellen, who died in San Francisco; Lewis C.; Martha J., the wife of D. Linderman, of San Francisco; R. H., a speculator of Portland; Walter S., of San Francisco; Clara Lilly, who became the wife of Charles Yates and both are now deceased; Frank, of San Francisco; and Hattie Bell, the wife of I. W. Borden, of San Francisco.

Lewis C. Thompson completed his education in 1866, when eighteen years of age, and started out in business life, being employed first as clerk and later as telegraph operator in the steamboat office at The Dalles, where he remained for five years. He then went upon a ranch as a cowboy and was employed in that way in Oregon for two years. In September, 1872, he came to Yamhill county and took charge of his father's extensive farm of twenty-five hundred acres, while he continued to cultivate for his father until the latter's death, when he purchased the property. It has since been his home and his labors have converted it into one of the finest improved farms of the northwest. It is pleasantly located about three miles west of Carlton, Oregon, and seven miles northwest of McMinnville, and he now has eight hundred acres of the land under a high state of cultivation, returning annually to him large and gratifying harvests. After the death of their parents Lewis C. Thompson and his brothers and sisters organized the estate as a corporation, there being three sisters and four brothers who are thus interested in vast property holdings in San Francisco, Portland and Tacoma. Of this corporation Lewis C. Thompson is the president. Recently he has made extensive improvements on the property in Portland, consisting of the erection of the Multnomah Hotel and also on the Peters building at the corner of Second and Davis streets. He has also established a hotel—the Hotel Levens—on Ash street. They have also made improvements on their property in San Francisco, erecting business houses at the corner of Main and Market and at Fremont and Market streets.

In 1870 Mr. Thompson was united in marriage to Miss Emma M. Juker, who was born in New York and came around Cape Horn in 1852 with her parents as passengers on the Fredonia. The family first settled at The Dalles and her father was first sergeant in the United States army. He was on military duty in Oregon for a time and when honorably discharged he turned his attention to merchandising at The Dalles, continuing in business there until his death in 1870. His widow still survives him and is now living with her children at the age of eighty years. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Juker were born five children: Mrs. Thompson; Harry E., a resident of Yamhill county; Lillie, the wife of Thurston Daniels, of Vancouver; William T., who is a twin brother of Lillie and lives in La Fayette, Yamhill county; and Gussie K., the wife of C. F. Hobart, of Spokane, Washington.

Unto Mr. and Mrs. Thompson have been born five children, as follows: Lewis L., born in 1871, who is married and resides in Portland, Oregon; Lawrence E., whose natal year was 1874 and who is also married and lives in Portland; Clarence G., born in 1877, who was accidentally drowned when twenty-eight years of age; Nina B., born in 1882, who is at home; and R. R., born in 1892, who is also yet under the parental roof. The family have a very wide acquaintance throughout Yamhill county and Mr. Thompson is recognized as one of the prominent and representative business men. He holds membership in the Elks lodge of Salem and in the Odd Fellows lodge at McMinnville and he gives his political indorsement to the democratic party but has never held nor sought office, preferring to leave himself free for the management of his important business affairs or for the enjoyment of those activities which are to him a matter of interest and pleasure. He is today one of the leading and most successful agriculturists of Yamhill county, supervising extensive interests which are conducted along most progressive lines, and in the management and control of the property of the Thompson estate he has also done much for the improvement of different cities where these interests are located. His judgment is sound, his descrimination keen, his sagacity far-reaching, and his well formulated plans are carried forward to successful completion.

G. G. CHRISTENSON is the owner of an excellent farm of eighty-seven acres near Dayton and its well tilled fields and substantial buildings make it one of the attractive features of the landscape. He was born in Waushara county, Wisconsin, January 19, 1862, a son of George and Anne (Anderson) Christenson, both natives of Copenhagen, Denmark. The parents came to the United States nine years before the birth of their son G. G. and located in Racine county, Wisconsin, where they remained for four years and then removed to Waushara county, residing there twelve years. They next went to Grundy county, Iowa, where they resided until 1874, when they came to Oregon, settling in Amity, where the father died in 1890 and the mother in 1902. In their family were twelve children, six of whom were born in Denmark and six in America. They are: Mary, deceased; Andrew, residing at Newberg, Oregon; Hans, a carpenter at Newberg; Nels, of Wisconsin; Peter, a farmer of North Dakota; Christ, residing near Dayton, Oregon; Carrie, Anna and Johnnie, all deceased; Ellen, who is the wife of John Carter and resides at Newberg; G. G., of this review; and Sarah, deceased.

G. G. Christenson was educated in the common schools of Iowa and remained at home until he was seventeen years of age, when he started out in life for himself on a farm near Newberg, Oregon, where he remained until 1899, when he moved to Amity, residing there seven years. He then lived for three years at Hopewell, after which he came to his present home near Dayton. He is now engaged in general farming, owning a tract of eighty-seven acres, and his neatness and industry are shown in the many improvements he has put upon his place. He has remodeled all the buildings, making them among the best in this part of the community, and has converted his home into a beautiful place.

Mr. Christenson has twice married. In 1885 he wedded Miss Sophia Martesen, a native of Denmark. She died in 1895, leaving three children: Carrie, living at Amity; William and Erlena, at home. His second wife, whom he married in 1896, was Miss Sina Jensen, a native of Minnesota and of Danish parentage. Unto this union have been born four children: Irvin, Georgia, Mildred and Chester, all at home.

Politically Mr. Christenson is a republican and fraternally he is identified with the Brotherhood of American Yeomen at Amity, while both he and his wife are members of the Baptist church. He has inherited many of the sturdy characteristics of his worthy ancestry and these have made him a most useful and worthy citizen. He is widely known as a man who has the welfare of the community at heart, giving his support to many projects for the public good.

JAMES PARVIN. Time is rapidly thinning the ranks of Lane county's old pioneers, those brave men and women who formed the advance guard of civilization and courageously faced the hardships and privations incident to life on the frontier, leaving behind them all of the comforts to which they had been accustomed, to establish homes for themselves and families on the western plains. Of such as these was the late James Parvin, who had been a resident of this county for fifty-five years at the time of his death on December 17, 1908, at the age of nearly seventy-eight. He was born in Indiana on the 2d of May, 1831, and was a son of Hosea Parvin by his first marriage. The parents were married in Indiana, whence they removed in 1832 to Illinois, and there the mother passed away. The father subsequently married again and removed to Texas, in which state he passed the remainder of his life. The family of Hosea Parvin was very large, but the majority of the members are now deceased.

James Parvin was only a child of one year when his parents removed to Illinois, where he was reared to manhood and received his schooling. In common with many other young men, he was desirous of pursuing his career in a new country affording greater opportunities, so in 1853, at the age of twenty-two, he came to Oregon, crossing the plains with an emigrant train. Upon his arrival he located in Lane county, and filed upon a donation claim of three hundred and twenty acres. After operating this for a short time he sold it and invested the proceeds in another claim of three hundred and twenty acres, which belonged to John B. Hannah. His entire time and attention during the remainder of his active life was devoted to the further improvement and cultivation of this tract which was located one mile south of Dexter. Careful and intelligent cultivation, close application and unceasing industry eventually brought well merited reward and the Parvin ranch became known as one of the best improved and equipped properties in that community. For more than half a century it has been the home of the family and there the widow still resides. It is undisputable evidence of what can be accomplished with energy, perseverance and good judgment in winning success and has for many years netted an annual income that well repaid its owner for his early labor and hardships.

For his wife and helpmate, Mr. Parvin chose Miss Selenia Parker, who had come across the plains to Oregon with two brothers, a sister and a brother-in-law, and here she was married to Mr. Parvin, and to them were born eight children: Idres C., the wife of William Williams, of Dexter, Oregon; H. M., who lives in the vicinity of Dexter; Jennie, who married August Shaffler, of Montana; Joseph M., who died at the age of nineteen years; Lillias C., who was three years of age at the time of her death; Hila Ann, a child of one year at the time of death; Edgar, who died when he was two years old; and Bertha, deceased, the first wife of William Williams, of Dexter. All of the children were given the advantages of a good education and some of them taught school.

The family affiliated with the Christian church in which the parents held membership, and the political support of Mr. Parvin was given to the democratic party. He was a man of many sterling qualities the worth of which had been thoroughly tested during the long period of his residence and he had a large circle of friends who held him in high esteem.

ROBERT T. BROWN. For eight years Robert T. Brown has filled the office of county clerk in Umatilla county, making his home in Pendleton, and his long retention in the office is indicative of the ability and fidelity with which he discharged his duties. He was born in Bates county, Missouri, January 18, 1870, a son of David and Clara (Pence) Brown, both of whom were natives of Ohio, the former born June 28, 1828, and the latter in 1830. They removed from the Buckeye state to Illinois and afterward to Missouri, settling in Bates county about the year 1868. After eight years there passed they left the middle west for the Pacific coast, crossing the plains with team during the summer of 1876. Weeks passed ere they reached their destination, but eventually they settled on a homestead eight miles northeast of Pendleton. Mr. Brown was the first one who undertook to raise wheat in this part of Umatilla county, but he was forced to leave his first crop in the beginning of the harvest and seek refuge during the Indian war. The family experienced many hardships, trials and difficulties incident to the establishment of a home upon the frontier, but as the years passed advancing civilization did away with all such conditions.

Robert T. Brown was but a lad of six years when the family came to Oregon, and in the public schools of Pendleton he pursued his early education, which was supplemented by further study in Pendleton Academy. The greater part of his life has been devoted to public service, and he has made a most creditable record in office. He was called to the position of deputy assessor in 1898 and served in that capacity for four years, or until 1902. As previously stated, he was appointed to his present position as deputy county clerk in 1904, and has continuously served in this capacity. He is methodical and systematic in all his work, prompt in dispatching business, and is ever loyal to the best interests of the community which he represents.

Near Pendleton, in Umatilla county, on the 19th of March, 1900, Mr. Brown was united in marriage to Miss Leota M. Plymate, a daughter of James E. and Matilda

MR. AND MRS. JAMES PARVIN

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASTOR
TILDEN

A. (Prather) Plymate. Mr. and Mrs. Brown have many friends in and around Pendleton, and theirs is a hospitable home the good cheer of which is enjoyed by all who know them. Mr. Brown is well known in fraternal circles, holding membership with Pendleton Camp No. 41, W. O. W., and Integrity Lodge, No. 92, I. O. O. F., also of Pendleton. The rules and principles which govern his conduct and guide him in his relations with his fellowmen are furthermore indicated in his membership in the Christian church. His influence is always found on the side of progress, advancement and improvement, and the record he has made in both public and private life is a most commendable one.

JACOB J. CHADWICK is a pioneer settler of the state of Oregon, coming overland with ox teams in October, 1864, and engaged in the cultivation of the soil and the development of the resources of the new country. He was born in West Virginia, July 22, 1839, and is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Eli Chadwick. His mother was a native of Virginia and bore the name of Miss Smoot before her marriage to Eli Chadwick. The father was a native of Kentucky but removed to West Virginia at an early date and later in 1841 removed to Missouri.

Jacob J. Chadwick received his early education in the public schools of Missouri and remained with his parents until twenty-two years of age. He then went to Illinois where he worked on a farm for two years. In 1864 he started overland to Oregon. The caravan in which he made the trip contained fourteen wagons drawn by oxen and Mr. Chadwick acted as scout for the party. Six months were spent upon the journey and the train arrived in Yamhill county, where Jacob J. Chadwick remained for two years. At the expiration of that time he rented a ranch in Douglas county which he operated for four years. He saved his money and was able to buy a farm of his own which he later sold. Some time afterward he bought nine hundred acres and also a tract of two hundred and fifty acres which Mrs. Chadwick inherited from her father's estate, all of which he is now cultivating.

On May 10, 1868, Jacob J. Chadwick was united in marriage to Mrs. Harriet J. (Weaver) Bentley, a native of Missouri, and they became the parents of four children, Mary, Susie, William D. and Frank C. The latter's death occurred in 1882 and his grave is in the I. O. O. F. cemetery at Myrtle Creek.

Politically Mr. Chadwick is affiliated with the democratic party but has never taken an active part in public life and has never sought office for himself. He is prominent in fraternal circles of Myrtle Creek and is a member of Myrtle Lodge, No. 38, I. O. O. F., and has acted as noble grand for two terms. He also is a charter member of Maple Lodge, A. F. & A. M., and is active in the affairs of that organization. His views on religious matters are liberal and he does not affiliate with any particular faith. His wife holds membership in the Methodist Episcopal church of Myrtle Creek. Mr. Chadwick has met with great success in his farming business and has become an expert along this line. He is familiar with the various details of his occupation and his success is the natural result of his thorough knowledge.

ROBERT W. VEATCH. The name of Robert W. Veatch, who resides on an attractive ranch of sixty-six acres located four and a half miles east of Cottage Grove, is well known to naturalists throughout the state, as he is the owner of a valuable collection of Indian relics and curios, and has achieved much more than a local reputation as a taxidermist, specimens of his work being found in practically every museum of any size in the northwest. He is a native of this state, his birth having occurred near Creswell, Lane county, on the 19th of February, 1861, and is a son of Sylvester E. and Maria E. (Knox) Veatch, well known pioneer residents of Lane county, who are mentioned at greater length elsewhere in this work. The mother is now deceased, but the father is still living at the venerable age of eighty-one years and continues to make his home on his old ranch, located two miles west of Cottage Grove on the Lorane road.

Robert W. Veatch was reared very much in the manner of other lads in Oregon during the pioneer period. He was given a common-school education, pursuing his studies until he was sixteen when he laid aside his text-books and assumed the duties of manhood. For three years thereafter he gave his undivided attention to the work of the fields and care of the stock on his father's ranch, but at the expiration of that time he left home and went to eastern Oregon, where for several years he followed the life of a cowboy. About 1882, he gave this up and took a clerkship in a store at Cottage Grove, retaining this position for a year. At the end of that time he went to Buena Vista, this state, where he continued to clerk for six months. During that time he was married and soon after this event he located on a homestead of one hundred and sixty acres in the vicinity of Cottage Grove. He resided there for five years and during that time cleared forty acres of his land, which he also fenced, and erected thereon a good house, barns and outbuildings. He subsequently sold his claim, realizing a good profit on the investment, and removed west of Walker station, where he bought one hundred and twenty acres of land. This he also sold after cultivating and improving it for four years, investing the proceeds in a hotel at Cottage Grove. The next year he was appointed deputy sheriff of Lane county and feeling that his official duties demanded his undivided attention he then sold his hotel and during the next four years gave his entire attention to his governmental responsibilities. After the expiration of his term of office he went into a hardware store in Cottage Grove, but withdrew from this a year later, in 1899, as he had been appointed forest ranger. He held this office for five years, then became special agent for the United States government, serving for a year in the land claim department. He next opened a cigar store in Cottage Grove that he conducted for a year, removing to Grants Pass at the end of that time. There he conducted a billiard hall for a time and during this period he was married again and two and a half years later he and his wife went to Waldo, where she owned a hotel which they operated for five or six months. Their next removal was to Eugene and during the period of his residence in that city Mr. Veatch worked at taxidermy. He first became interested in this work in 1901, and began his training under Professor Langenburg, of Roseburg, Oregon, continuing his studies until awarded a diploma from the Northwestern School of Taxidermy of Omaha, Nebraska. He has been very successful, possessing unusual skill in this direction, and his work can be found in some of the finest museums in the country. At the time of the Lewis and Clark Exposition at Portland in 1905 he received a gold medal for the best mounted animals, his specimens being a cougar and a head of a moose with horns. In addition to his fine specimens in taxidermy Mr. Veatch is also collecting Indian relics and curios and has the largest collection of peculiarly formed horns taken from a variety of animals in the world. Several years ago he refused an offer of twenty-one hundred dollars for a small collection of Indian relics and animals, which he has since increased at least a third. Mr. Veatch is assisted in his collecting by his daughter, Mrs. Churchill, who is also very fond of natural science and together they roam the forests and wander along the banks of the streams seeking new treasures for their collection. After a year's residence in Eugene, Mr. Veatch returned to Cottage Grove and bought the ranch where he now lives. Twenty-five of the sixty-six acres contained in his holding is devoted to the raising of grain and eighteen acres are set to apple trees which in a few years will undoubtedly pay handsome returns. The remainder is largely used for pasturage, as he makes a specialty of raising Jersey cattle and Angora goats. During the period of his ownership Mr. Veatch has wrought extensive improvements in his ranch, including the erection of a fine two-story dwelling and substantial barns and outbuildings, making it one of the valuable and attractive properties of the vicinity. In addition to his ranch, he still owns a residence in Eugene, which he is now renting.

On the 2d of March, 1884, Mr. Veatch was united in marriage to Miss Belle Parsons, a daughter of William and Phoebe (Walton) Parsons. Her parents crossed the plains to Oregon in 1853, settling in the vicinity of Eugene, where the father owned and conducted the second store that was opened in that city. The paternal grandfather operated a pack train from Jacksonville, this state, to Eureka, California, during the early 50's, but was finally compelled to give it up owing to the Indian troubles. Mrs. Veatch, who was one of six children born to her parents, passed away on the 1st of January, 1906. Three daughters were born to Mr. and Mrs. Veatch, as follows: Maggie, the wife of Benjamin Groff, a hardware dealer of Cottage Grove; Elizabeth, the widow of Fred Churchill, of Roseburg, Oregon; and Lottie, who is with the Pacific Telephone Company of Cottage Grove. The present Mrs. Veatch was Mrs. Ida Decker, the widow of Charles Decker, of Waldo, this state, by whom she had one child, Marie. Mr. Veatch and his second wife have one son, Robert, who was born on the 17th of December, 1908.

Mr. and Mrs. Veatch are members of the Presbyterian church, and in politics Mr. Veatch is a republican and was during his previous residence in Lane county actively identified with political affairs, but he has now practically withdrawn from public life and gives his entire attention to his private interests, although he is not remiss in the duties of citizenship.

FRANK DISS, who resides on a one hundred and sixty acre homestead near Selma, owns property in that city and also in California. Since the age of eight years he has earned his own living and has made a success in business. He was born in Ohio, February 2, 1865, a son of Antey and Mary (Martin) Diss, and is one of seven children in his father's family, five of whom survive. The mother died when her son Frank was eight years of age, the father passing away when the son had attained his majority.

Frank Diss, at the age of eight years, began earning his own living by working in the mines and although he has supported himself by hard work since that time he acquired a good common-school education. He migrated to Oregon in 1903 and settled upon a homestead of one hundred and sixty acres which he at once set to improving and cultivating. He also acquired property in California. Since taking up the homestead he has made that place his residence and is engaged principally in raising grain and hay.

Mr. Diss was married, December 15, 1885, to Mrs. Mary A. Christman. In his political faith he is an adherent of the republican party and although he gives his attention strictly to business yet he finds time to discharge conscientiously the duties of citizenship. He is a well known farmer of his community, is successful in his business management and is regarded as a citizen of uprightness and good character.

DANIEL A. WALKER, a prosperous and enterprising agriculturist of Yamhill county, resides on the homestead property where he parents located forty-six years ago and owns one hundred and seventy-five acres thereof, the farm being located six and a half miles west of Carlton. His birth occurred in Indiana on the 16th of February, 1852, his parents being John Hamilton and Mary (Simpson) Walker, both of whom were natives of Johnson county, Indiana. Leaving the Hoosier state in 1852, they removed to Iowa and there continued to reside until 1865, when they crossed the plains to Oregon. Settling in Yamhill county, they took up their abode on what is known as the James Shaw donation claim, six and a half miles west of Carlton. The property is now in possession of our subject and his sister, Mrs. May Bell Anderson. John H. Walker devoted his attention to general farming and stock-raising throughout his active business career and at the time of his demise owned three hundred and twenty acres of valuable land. Previous to his death he had sold a portion of his farm. He passed away on the 11th of April, 1893, while his wife was called to her final rest on the 12th of March, 1887. Their children were five in number, namely: William J., deceased; Daniel A., of this review; James A. and Gilbert E., both deceased; and Mrs. May Bell Anderson, of Yamhill county.

Daniel A. Walker, who was a youth of thirteen when he came to this state with his parents, remained at home until he was married at the age of twenty-seven years. Following that important event in his life he settled on the farm which he had previously purchased and continued its operation until 1892. In that year he disposed of the property and took up his abode on the old homestead, whereon he has remained continuously since. At the present time he owns one hundred and seventy-five acres thereof, forty acres being under a high state of cultivation. His farm is well improved in every particular and his undertakings as an agriculturist have been attended with a gratifying measure of success.

On the 19th of February, 1879, Mr. Walker was united in marriage to Miss Clarissa Dudley, who was born in Yamhill county, Oregon, on the 14th of March, 1859, her parents being John D. and Rebecca N. (Moore) Dudley, natives of Missouri. The father ran away from home in 1853, when a youth of thirteen, and joined an emigrant train en route to Oregon. The mother came across the plains with her parents in 1855. John D. Dudley and Rebecca N. Moore were married in Yamhill county on the 15th of February, 1858, and here spent the remainder of their lives, the former passing away on the 14th of February, 1898, and the latter on the 5th of May 1859. Mr. and Mrs. Walker had four children, as follows: Verna C., born April 9, 1880, who is now the wife of W. H. Bailey, of Carlton, Oregon; Mamie D., who passed away on the 12th of November, 1887, when three years of age; John D., born February 16, 1888, who has pursued a course of study in a business college and is still under the parental roof; and Ward A., born July 23, 1896, who is attending school.

In politics Mr. Walker is a stanch democrat and for almost thirty years has ably served as a member of the school board. Fraternally he is identified with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows at Carlton, Oregon, being a charter member of the lodge at that place. Both he and his wife are members of Moores Valley Grange, No. 362. They are people of the highest respectability, enjoying in large measure the friendship of those with whom they have been brought in contact.

GEORGE BANKS, now residing in Dayton, Oregon, was born in Armstrong county, Pennsylvania, March 19, 1853, the son of John and Nancy (McLaughlin) Banks, both of whom were born of Scottish parentage and were natives of Pennsylvania. The grandparents came from Scotland and located in Pennsylvania, where they died. The father was a farmer by occupation and both he and his wife resided all their lives in their native state. In their family were seven children: Lizzie, of Pennsylvania; William, deceased; George, of this review; Belle, who is the wife of John Montgomery, of Armstrong county, Pennsylvania; Maud, now Mrs. Robert McGraw, of Armstrong county, Pennsylvania; Sloane, who is a farmer in Armstrong county; and a child who died in infancy.

George Banks remained at home with his parents and attended the public schools until he was fourteen years of age. He then went into the timber regions of Pennsylvania and began working for himself, and after becoming acquainted with the lumber business he bought a mill and engaged in the manufacture of lumber. He followed that occupation for some time but was forced to give it up on account of ill health. He then pursued farming and various lines of work until six years ago, when he left his native state for the purpose of trying to regain his health in another climate. At first he went to California and then, coming to Oregon, located in Portland, while later he removed to Dayton, where he now resides. In spite of the ill health which he has had to guard against he has been very successful, owning fourteen acres of land near Dayton, and one hundred and ten acres of very valuable land in Pennsylvania, and to the former he gives his personal supervision.

In 1891 Mr. Banks was married to Miss Nancy J. Hancock, a native of Armstrong county, Pennsylvania. His political allegiance is given to the republican party and he has taken a very active interest in local politics in his home state, very few years of his residence there since coming of age having been spent without holding some office. Both he and his wife are members of the Presbyterian church. During Mr. Banks' residence in his adopted state his upright and honorable life has won for him many friends and well wishers.

RANDOLPH M. WARDLE is numbered among the enterprising merchants of Carlton, where he is engaged in dealing in hardware, implements and building materials. In this connection he is developing a good business, his enterprise and reliable methods gaining for him a liberal patronage. He was born in Los Angeles county, California, February 27, 1857. His father, John Wardle, was a native of England, born August 3, 1815. The ancestry of the family can be traced back as far as 1695, showing the family to be an old one in that country. In his youth John Wardle learned the shoemaker's trade but afterward devoted much of his life to farming. He came to America in 1840 and was married at Salt Lake City, Utah, in 1856, to Miss Emeline Baker, a native of Ohio. They remained for a brief period in Salt Lake and then removed to California, settling near Los Angeles, where they resided for a short time. They then took up their abode in another part of the state, living at different points in California until 1865, when they came to Oregon, settling in Yamhill county, where they resided until 1880. In the meantime Mrs. Wardle had passed away on the 3d of December, 1877. In 1880 Mr. Wardle went to Washington county, this state, and two years later took up his abode in the state of Washington, where he died at the age of eighty-five and one-half years. The children of his second marriage were eleven in number: Randolph M.; Roskelyn, who is living in Orting, Washington; Harriet, a resident of Centralia, Washington; St. Clair M., of the same state; Waverly M., whose home is in Portland; Deborah A., of McMinnville, Oregon; Nathan, who died at the age of two years; Olive, who died in infancy; Daisy A., of Portland; Alphonso W., who died when twenty-three years of age; and Emeline M., whose home is near Centralia, Washington. John Wardle had been married previous to leaving his native country, his first union being with Miss Harriet Ball, whom he wedded in 1837. They became the parents of seven children, of whom two are still living: Frances, a resident of Centralia, Washington; and Alice, whose home is in Little Rock, Idaho. The others were Margaret, Emma, Matilda, Charles and Anna, all of whom are deceased. After losing his first wife, John Wardle, as previously stated, wedded Emeline Baker.

At the usual age Randolph M. Wardle became a pupil in the public schools, continuing his studies until about twenty years of age, when he began learning the blacksmith's trade, which he followed continuously until 1907, engaging in that business at different times at Carlton, Oregon, and Tenino, Washington, and at Olympia and Tacoma. He also engaged in sharpening tools at the mines in Washington, in Baker county, Oregon, in Union county, Oregon, at Elma, Washington, and in McMinnville, Oregon. In 1907 however, he disposed of his shop and entered commercial circles in Carlton as a dealer in hardware, implements and building materials, which business he has now carried on successfully for more than four years. He owns the business block in which he is conducting his enterprise and he also owns a fine residence and other properties in Carlton.

Mr. Wardle has been twice married, having on the 1st of February, 1881, wedded Miss Nancy Ticknor, a native of the state of Washington and a daughter of J. T. and Elizabeth (Ford) Ticknor. Her father is now deceased but her mother still resides in Washington. Mr. Wardle's second marriage occurred in 1900, when he wedded Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Dodson, a widow, living in Yamhill county, and a daughter of George B. and Susan J. (Bush) Manning, both of whom were natives of West Virginia, where they spent their entire lives. Their family numbered eight children: Samuel, deceased; William M., who died in Oregon, at the age of sixty-four years; Rebecca J., the wife of R. W. Varley, of Washington county; Joseph, who is living in Moundsville, West Virginia; Mrs. Wardle; Henry C., of Tacoma, Washington; and W. L. and Frank P., both of whom are residents of Moundsville, West Virginia. The father of these children passed away at the age of seventy-six years and the mother when seventy-seven years of age.

By his first marriage Mr. Wardle had three children: Vida E., who was born December 17, 1881, and is the wife of Eldridge Crosno, of North Yakima, Washington; Ada E., who was born April 17, 1883, and died at the age of eight years; and Clarence W. who was born October 30, 1887, and is married and lives in Portland. Mr. Wardle's second wife, Mary Elizabeth (Dodson) Wardle, had been twice married before her union with him and had a daughter by her first marriage, Annie L., who was born in 1876, and is the wife of George Willis, of Carlton, Oregon, and a son by her second marriage, Frank C., of Carlton.

Mr. Wardle is a democrat in his political views and ever keeps well informed on the questions and issues of the day. His fellow townsmen, recognizing his worth and ability, have called him to a number of local offices: he served for a number of years on the school board, as clerk; and has been mayor and councilman of Carlton, in which connections he has exercised his official prerogatives in support of various progressive measures for the general good. He is also well known in fraternal circles, holding membership in both the subordinate lodge and encampment of the I. O. O. F. In the former he has filled all the chairs and is now past grand. In Masonry he has taken the degrees of the lodge and of the Royal Arch Chapter. His life exemplifies the beneficent spirit and purposes of those organizations, and in every relation in which he has been found he has proved his loyalty and worth, his progressiveness and his public spirit.

S. H. HATCH has been engaged in agricultural pursuits near Salem for many years. Although he was not among the earliest settlers of the county he came here in time to share actively and materially in the development of the fruit growing districts of Marion county.

S. H. Hatch is a native of Westbrook, Maine, born January 20, 1843. His parents were George and Emily (Higgins) Hatch, both natives of Maine, the state in which they passed their entire lives. To them eleven children were born, six of whom survive. S. H. Hatch remained at home with his father after completing his education

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY

MRS. S. H. HATCH

S. H. HATCH

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY

in the district schools until 1869, when he was twenty-six years of age. At that time he went to Missouri and for a short time was engaged in teaching school. After two years he returned to Maine and until 1889 carried on the farming operations on the homestead. When he gave this up he came to Marion county and purchased the farm upon which he now resides. He has improved this farm by his own efforts and labor and has made many modern improvements upon it, including farm buildings and adequate machinery for carrying on modern agricultural pursuits. He has ten acres planted to apples and pears, which yield him annually large harvests and increasingly remunerative returns.

On the 2d of January, 1873, Mr. Hatch was married to Miss Nancy Metzler, a native of Ohio. To them five children have been born: C. H., who is now living in eastern Oregon; Walter L., of Salem; and three who have passed away. Mrs. Hatch's death occurred on the 13th of April, 1909, and she was laid to rest in the Salem cemetery. She was a devoted member of the Methodist church. In politics Mr. Hatch gives his support to the republican party but has never sought office as a reward for party fealty excepting that of school director. He accepted this office because of his interest in the educational welfare of the community. He holds membership in the Independent Order of Odd Fellows of Maine. He is a man of noble qualities of character, of strong and resolute purpose, industrious and enterprising, and well known throughout the community for his uprightness and honesty, he merits and enjoys the respect and confidence of his neighbors and many friends.

BYRAM MAYFIELD, junior partner of the firm of Burnaugh & Mayfield, druggists, is one of the public-spirited and progressive young business men of Enterprise of which he has been a resident for the past eight years. He was born in Umatilla county, Oregon, on the 31st of March, 1877, and is a son of George E. and Amanda (Westerfield) Mayfield. For many years the father was engaged in ranching in this state, but he has now withdrawn from agricultural pursuits and is living retired in Elgin, Union county.

Reared at home in the acquirement of his early education, Byram Mayfield attended the public schools. Early deciding to become a druggist, he subsequently matriculated in the department of pharmacy of the Oregon State Agricultural College, being awarded the degree of Ph. G. with the class of 1903. Very soon after receiving his license he accepted a clerkship in a pharmacy at Ontario, this state, where he remained until the following October when he came to Wallowa county. The succeeding month he spent in a drug store at Joseph, but at the expiration of that period together with S. L. Burnaugh he purchased the pharmacy of E. J. Forsythe of this city, which they are still conducting under the firm name of Burnaugh & Mayfield. They are both excellent business men as well as first-class pharmacists and own and conduct one of the best equipped and most thoroughly modern drug stores to be found in a town of this size in eastern Oregon. They carry a good line of drugs, patent and proprietary medicines, also toilet articles, perfumes, stationery and such sundries as are to be found in a shop of this kind. Their business is conducted in strict accordance with the most highly approved methods of modern commercial practice, and as both proprietors are accommodating in the treatment of their patrons, they are succeeding in building up an excellent trade. From the beginning their receipts have shown a marked increase annually and they are now recognized as one of the firmly established and thriving enterprises of the town.

Fraternally Mr. Mayfield is identified with Enterprise Lodge, No. 94, K. of P., and Enterprise Lodge, No. 158, I. O. O. F. His political views accord with the principles of the democratic party, for whose candidates he casts his ballot. He takes an active interest in municipal affairs and is always willing to assume his share of governmental responsibilities and for the past two years has been a member of the town council. Since locating here Mr. Mayfield has manifested high standards of citizenship and has given his unqualified support to every progressive movement, that he has felt would tend to promote the commercial, moral, social or intellectual welfare of the community.

CHARLES V. WEAVER. A native son of Oregon and a man who has done much during the short period of his activity to promote the agricultural development of Douglas county is Charles V. Weaver. He was born in this county, July 27, 1887, and is a son of Edwin and Margaret (Dyer) Weaver, the former a native of Tennessee and the latter of Oregon. The father left his native state in 1852 for Oregon, making the trip overland with ox teams, spending six months upon the journey.

Charles Weaver received his early education in the public schools of his native district and remained at home with his parents until he was twenty years of age. He then started out in life for himself on the farm where he now resides. It is part of the three thousand acres of land which his father bought in Douglas county and he has cultivated and improved it along scientific lines. He makes a specialty of fruit farming and his prune harvests every year are among the most abundant in southern Oregon. For some time he has been engaged in the raising of high-grade cattle and he also keeps a few horses upon his farm. Another important branch of his activity is his hop yard to which he has given much time and attention during the past few years and has made it one of the largest of its kind in Douglas county.

Mr. Weaver gives his political support to the republican party and is a firm believer in the policies and principles for which that organization stands. He takes an intelligent interest in local affairs but has never sought public office for himself. He is a prominent member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and is vice grand of Myrtle Creek lodge, No. 38. Charles V. Weaver is only twenty-five years of age but has already shown himself a factor to be reckoned with in the agricultural circles of Douglas county.

WILLIAM T. KUTCH, who in the year 1911 retired to private life and now makes his home in Carlton, at the age of eighty-six years, was for many years closely associated with agricultural interests and contributed in considerable measure to the development of Yamhill county along that line. Working faithfully day by day, using the moments to the best advantage and carefully planning and systematizing his work, he at length reaped the reward of his labors in the acquirement of a considerable competence. He was born in Monroe county, Indiana, March 15, 1826, a son of Enoch and Nancy (Jones) Kutch, both of whom were natives of Kentucky, in which state they were reared and married and made their home until 1825. In that year they removed to Monroe county, Indiana, and soon afterward took up their abode in Hendricks county of the same state, where Mr. Kutch settled upon a tract of land of one hundred and sixty acres, which he afterward entered from the government. The family experienced the hardships, trials and privations of pioneer life in that district, but year by year the father carried on the work of developing the farm and made it a productive tract ere he sold it, in 1854. He then removed to Appanoose county, Iowa, where he purchased a section of land which he operated until his death, in 1862. His first wife had died when their son William was but six years of age and in 1834 Enoch Kutch had married again, his second union being with Elenor Alexander, a native of Kentucky. By his first marriage there were born seven children but only two are now living, William and James, the latter a resident of eastern Oregon. The five who have passed away are Elizabeth, Allen, America J., Jackson, and one who died in infancy.

The youthful days of William T. Kutch were spent upon the old homestead farm in Hendricks county, Indiana, and when he had reached the age of twenty years he started out on his own account, choosing as his life occupation the pursuit with which he had become familiar through his boyhood training and experience. Removing to Iowa, he there engaged in farming for nineteen years and then came to Oregon, arriving in this state in 1864. Investing in land in Yamhill county, he developed a farm which he cultivated year after year up to the time of his retirement, in 1911. He is now living in Carlton and the fruits of his former toil supply him with all of the necessities and many of the comforts of life.

In March, 1846, Mr. Kutch was married to Miss Lydia A. Sparks, a native of Rush county, Indiana, and a daughter of William and Polly Sparks. Mrs. Kutch passed away in 1862. To Mr. and Mrs. Kutch were born nine children: Enoch, a resident of Dayton, Washington; Allen, deceased; Mitchell, who is living in Farmington, Washington; Franklin, who has also passed away; Mary, the wife of C. G. Scott, of Yamhill county; Elizabeth, the wife of Edward Stevenson, of Yamhill county; and three children who died in infancy. Having lost his first wife, Mr. Kutch was again married, in 1863, his second union being with Miss Hannah M. McCutchens, who was born in Floyd county, Indiana, August 13, 1838, a daughter of William and Elizabeth (Galoway) McCutchens. Her father was born in Virginia and her mother in Kentucky, but they were married in Indiana, where they resided until 1850, when they went to Iowa, where her father followed farming until 1865. He then crossed the plains with his family, going direct to Oregon, and upon the farm which he purchased in Yamhill county both he and his wife spent their remaining days, Mr. McCutchens passing away at the age of eighty-four years, while his wife died when eighty-seven years of age. In their family were five children: Mrs. Sarah J. Nelson, now deceased; Hannah M., now Mrs. William T. Kutch; Mahala, the deceased wife of C. G. Scott, of Carlton, Oregon; William E., deceased; and one who died in infancy. Unto William and Hannah Kutch there were born ten children: William Eldon, who was born in Union county, January 14, 1865; George W., whose birth occurred in Yamhill county, March 7, 1867; Belle, the wife of Edward Bodle, of Carlton; Sarah Jane, the deceased wife of John McEachen; Underwood, living in Carlton; Cynthia, the wife of Charles N. Ducett, of Seattle, Washington; Lenora, the wife of E. N. Hudson, of Portland; Clara, the wife of William Calvin, of Carlton, Oregon; and two who died in infancy. Mr. Kutch was accorded only limited educational privileges but has given his children good advantages in that direction. Politically he is allied with the socialist party and he has filled the office of road supervisor for a number of years and for many years was a member of the school board. He has always been a champion of the cause of education, believing it to be not only largely the source of individual advancement, but also to constitute the bulwark of the nation's strength and progress.

JAMES CRUICKSHANK is the owner of a fine ranch of two hundred and eighteen acres in Yamhill county that he devotes to general farming and stock-raising. He was born in Aberdeenshire, Scotland, on the 15th of October, 1879, and is a son of James and Jane (Mitchell) Cruickshank. The parents were both natives of Scotland, and there the mother continues to make her home, but the father, who was a farmer, passed away four years ago. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Cruickshank numbered eight, as follows: David, who is living near Gaston, Oregon; Jane, who is in Scotland; Margaret, who is deceased; James, our subject; and William, John, Robert and Elizabeth, all of whom are still living in Scotland.

The first fourteen years of his life James Cruickshank spent under the parental roof, obtaining his education in the common schools. At the expiration of that time he began earning his own living and during the succeeding four years engaged as a farm hand. The lessons of the value of thrift and industry inculcated in his youthful mind were very useful in directing his future, and he carefully saved a portion of his wages each year until he had accumulated enough to pay his passage to America, so that when he was twenty he sailed for the United States. He was a most ambitious youth and desired to make more rapid progress than was possible in his native land. Upon his arrival in this country he made his way westward to Oregon, locating in Portland, but after remaining there a brief time he came to Yamhill county. He worked at various occupations when he first came here but in the second year of his residence went to farming, and has ever since followed agricultural pursuits. After working for others for two years he purchased a tract of land near Amity, but he sold this later and rented a tract of land that he operated for six years. The cultivation of this place proved to be so lucrative under his capable direction that he acquired the means to buy his present homestead. Mr. Cruickshank is a very practical and enterprising man and applies himself intelligently and painstakingly to whatever he undertakes, and as a result is meeting with success. In connection with general farming Mr. Cruickshank is making a specialty of raising thoroughbred stock, devoting the greater part of his attention to Cotswold sheep and Shire horses, and he now has an interest in a fine imported Shire horse. His investments in stock have proven to be very lucrative and he is rapidly becoming recognized as one of the prosperous agriculturists and stockman of the county. He has made such improvements in his property as he was able from time to time, and now has his land in a high state of cultivation, and the buildings on his place all in good condition.

In 1900 Mr. Cruickshank was married to Miss Lizzie Ross, a daughter of Duncan Ross, and they have become the parents of three children, Ross, Alex James and Annie Jessie. Fraternally Mr. Cruickshank is identified with the Masonic order at Dayton and both he and his wife are affiliated with the Order of the Eastern Star, also at Dayton. He is the type of citizen who is a most desirable acquisition in any community, his efforts always being directed toward the development of the general interests and the advancement of the public welfare.

JOHN A. CUNNINGHAM is now living retired in Carlton, where he owns and occupies a beautiful residence. There has come to him leisure in which to enjoy those things which afford him the greatest interest and pleasure, for the business activities of his former years have brought him to a position of affluence. He was born in Milton, Massachusetts, about eight miles from Boston, on the 19th of October, 1859, his parents being John A. and Alice (Hathaway) Cunningham, the former a native of Boston and the latter of New Bedford, Massachusetts. They were married in their native state and for eight years thereafter resided in Massachusetts, at the end of which time they removed to Hongkong China, the father being engaged in the tea business. For five years he remained a tea merchant of that city, transporting tea to various parts of the world. In 1864, however, he returned to Boston, where he continued in the tea trade until 1875, when he retired from commercial pursuits and took up his abode upon a farm in Worcester county, Massachusetts, where he devoted his time to the breeding and raising of high grade jersey cattle, thus passing the years quietly to the time of his death, in 1898. His wife, surviving him for about eight years, passed away in 1906. In their family were nine children, of whom eight are still living: Mrs. William R. Ware, a resident of Massachusetts; Charles D., living in Brookline, Massachusetts; C. L., whose home is in Milton, that state; John A. and Mrs. W. A. Howe, of Carlton, Oregon; Paul, who is located in Bolton, Massachusetts; Mrs. Andrew Nourse, also of Bolton; and Fred H., who makes his home in the same place.

Arriving at the age when the acquirement of an education became the principal thing in life, John A. Cunningham was sent to the public schools wherein he pursued his course until graduated from the high school. He then took up the occupation of farming, which he followed in Massachusetts for about fourteen years. He next went to New York city, where he engaged in business for two years, and in 1889 removed to Chicago, where he figured prominently in business circles until 1900, meeting with substantial success in his undertakings during that period. He then came to Oregon and has since made his home in Carlton, where he has erected one of the finest residences of the city. He became associated with W. A. Howe in a partnership for the building of a large store and the conduct of an extensive mercantile enterprise. As usual, success has attended him in this field. He has also been interested in the development and upbuilding of the lumber business but at the present time is practically living retired, devoting his time and energies merely to the supervision of his investments.

In 1898 Mr. Cunningham was united in marriage to Miss Sarah N. Ford, a native of Massachusetts and a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Ford, both of whom are now deceased. The children born to this marriage are: Dorothy A., whose birth occurred November 2, 1901; and Sarah, born December 28, 1903. The family are connected with the Episcopal church and Mr. Cunningham also belongs to the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the United Artisans. His political support is given the republican party and he is interested in the welfare and progress of the city, state and country, yet has never been an aspirant for office. He has progressed in his business life because he has made a wise use of his time, talents and opportunities and, gradually working his way upward, has at length attained a creditable and gratifying position, his efforts being crowned with the reward of earnest, persistent and honorable labor.

GEORGE WASHINGTON BAKER, who is numbered among the active and enterprising agriculturists of Washington county, owns a well improved tract of land two and a half miles southwest of Beaverton and within ten miles of Portland. His birth occurred in Blackhawk county, Iowa, on the 13th of December, 1862, his parents being Joseph and Leah (Stambaugh) Baker, who were born, reared and married in Pennsylvania. They maintained their home in that state for a number of years and then removed to Clinton, Illinois, where they resided for several years. Subsequently they spent a few years in Iowa and later removed to Missouri, where they remained until 1886. In that year they journeyed to California, settling at Santa Cruz, where Joseph Baker purchased city property and lived in honorable retirement until called to his final rest in November, 1893. His wife, surviving him for a number of years, passed away in 1905. They had ten children, five of whom are yet living, as follows: Mrs. Catherine Gibler, who is a resident of Jefferson City, Missouri; Silas, living at Santa Cruz, California; Eliza, the wife of W. K. Trayler, of Hillsboro, Oregon; Sarah, who gave her hand in marriage to Artemas Campbell and resides in Missouri; and George W., of this review.

The last named saw Oregon in its infancy, coming to this state with two of his sisters in 1869, when a lad of seven years. Six months later the father came to Oregon on a visit and took our subject back with him to Missouri. George W. Baker remained under the parental roof until twenty-four years of age and subsequently worked at different occupations for a period of thirteen years. At the end of that time he took up his abode on the farm which had previously come into his possession and on which he still resides. His present possessions embrace a tract of thirty-nine acres of land, one-half of which is under a high state of cultivation and improvement. The property is on section 28, two and a half miles southwest of Beaverton. His undertakings as an agriculturist have been attended with excellent results, the well tilled fields annually yielding golden harvests as a reward for the care and labor which he bestows upon them.

On the 4th of July, 1892, Mr. Baker was united in marriage to Miss Melvina Trayler, a native of Texas and a daughter of W. K. and Mary Trayler, who were born in Missouri and Iowa respectively. They were married in Texas and there resided for a number of years or until 1886, when they came to Clatskanie, Oregon. A short time afterward they took up a homestead claim, occupying the same for ten years. Subsequently they spent a few years in Mayger, Oregon, and then took up their abode in Hillsboro, where Mr. Trayler has since lived in honorable retirement. The demise of his wife occurred in 1905. Their children were seven in number, namely: Arlena and John W., both of whom are deceased; Mrs. Baker; J. R., who is a resident of the state of Washington; Mrs. Rosa Smith, living in Dayton, Oregon; and Mrs. Emma Larson and Mrs. Mattie Smith, both of whom have passed away. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Baker have been born four children, as follows: Jesse Silas, whose natal day was August 29, 1893; Lester L., Estella L. and Willie, all of whom died in infancy.

Mr. Baker is a republican in politics but has never sought nor desired office as a reward for his party fealty. He has strong prohibition tendencies, believing that the liquor traffic should be suppressed. His religious faith is indicated by his membership in the Methodist Episcopal church, to which his wife also belongs. Both Mr. and Mrs. Baker are well known and highly esteemed throughout the community as people of upright, honorable lives.

AMBROSE CLEMMER FUNK, filling the position of deputy sheriff of Umatilla county, has been continuously in the public service since the 1st of January, 1902, his special duties being in connection with the tax department. He was born January 11, 1872, in Clayton, Berks county, Pennsylvania, his parents being James B. and Susanna B. Funk. The father was born in Berks county and has made farming his life work, in addition to which he also owns and operates a gristmill at Clayton, in which city his wife was born. There they have made their home for many years and are among the well known and highly respected residents of that place.

After acquiring his early education in the common schools of his native state Ambrose C. Funk spent a year as a student in the West Chester State Normal School of Pennsylvania and afterward entered the Kansas State University at Lawrence, Kansas, from which he was graduated in June, 1900, with the degree of B. S. In the meantime he had made his initial step in the business world, being first employed in a clerical capacity. In his youth, too, he worked upon the home farm in Pennsylvania and early became familiar with the duties and labors incident to the cultivation of the fields and the care of the crops. Following his removal westward he located in Kansas City where he was employed by the Peck Dry Goods Company and also by Swift & Company, doing office work. He has been a resident of the northwest since 1901 and since the 1st of January, 1902, has been continuously connected with the sheriff's office in the tax department, his position being that of deputy sheriff. His official duties have ever been discharged with promptness and fidelity and he has made an excellent record in this connection, as is indicated by his ten years' retention in the office. He also has an interesting military record covering three years' service with the Oregon National

MR. AND MRS. G. W. BAKER AND SON

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASTOR LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS

Guard, his membership being with Company L, Third Regiment, of Pendleton.

In Masonic circles Mr. Funk is well known. He has attained the Knight Templar degree of the York Rite and at this writing, in 1912, is captain general of Pendleton Commandery, No. 7. He is also an Odd Fellow, belonging to Eureka Lodge, No. 92, and to the teachings and principles of both organizations he is loyal and devoted. His high purposes are further indicated by the fact that he leads a life in harmony with his professions as a member of the Presbyterian church, in which he is serving as elder. He has a wide and favorable acquaintance in this section of the state, being held in high regard wherever known and most of all where he is best known. He seeks the welfare and progress of the community in various directions and his cooperation can always be counted upon to further any movement for the material, intellectual, political and moral progress of his adopted state.

ALBERT W. KIME, M. D., who, since 1904, has been a successful medical practitioner at Cottage Grove and one of the six physicians of that place, has an excellent professional and personal reputation in the community. He has worked up an excellent practice since settling in Cottage Grove and was elected mayor of the city in 1910. He was born in Millersburg, Iowa, August 27, 1858, the son of James H. and Katherine (Zimmerman) Kime, both of whom were natives of Ohio, where they were married. Shortly afterward they removed to Iowa, becoming pioneers of that state. The father took up land in Iowa, which he farmed until 1858, when, leaving his family in that state, he crossed the plains to Pikes Peak, Colorado, for the purpose of mining gold. Not being successful, however, in finding the yellow metal in paying quantities he continued on to California, settling at Downieville, where he continued his gold-mining operations until 1868. The family, which had been living in Iowa, joined the father in 1865, making the trip to California by way of New York and the Isthmus of Panama and arriving in San Francisco on St. Patrick's day. The father removed to Vallejo, Solano county, California, in 1868, and, having tired of gold mining, was employed in the navy yard as a carpenter. He continued in this employment until 1870, when he removed to San Jose, California, and continued working at the carpenter's trade, building stations for the railroad. He was thus employed until 1874, when he removed to Oakland, where he continued at his trade and began contracting. He made the furniture for the First National Bank at Oakland, situated at No. 127 Broadway, and remained in that city until 1878, when he removed to Oregon and settled at Corvallis. There he continued contracting and constructed the Fisher building, spending two years in that city. He then retired from that vocation and started in the drug business with N. H. Thompson at Yakima Bay. After continuing in the business thus for six months Albert W. Kime bought Mr. Thompson's interest in the store and after one year they removed their drug stock to Portland, where the father and son conducted a drug business until 1884. In that year fire destroyed the store but it was immediately rebuilt. The father then purchased the entire business, which he operated until 1886 when he sold out and removed to eastern Oregon and opened the first drug store in Vale. This store was also operated by the father and son and the father began studying medicine, continuing until 1890, when he was graduated and settled in Bandon, Oregon. There he practiced his profession until 1897, when he went to Alton, Humboldt county, where he engaged in practice until his death, which occurred in 1908. The mother died at Vale in April, 1885. In their family were two children: Albert W.; and Charles L., of Coquille, Coos county, Oregon, who is interested in a machine shop and foundry at that place. While residing in Santa Clara, California, Mr. and Mrs. Kime adopted a daughter, Alice Rogers, who remained with them until her marriage. She now makes her home in eastern Oregon.

In company with his mother Albert W. Kime removed from Iowa to California when he was seven years of age and there they joined the father. The subject of this review received his education in the public schools of California and later engaged with his father in the drug business, continuing thus until 1892, when he removed to Bandon, Oregon, where he read medicine with his father for two years. He then, in 1894, entered the medical department of the University of Oregon at Portland, from which institution he was graduated on the 5th of April, 1897. He engaged in practice at Bandon, where he remained until 1904, and then came to Cottage Grove, where he has since resided, showing such skill in caring for his patients that he has built up a fine practice. He has a pleasant home in Cottage Grove and also owns property at Bandon and Portland.

Dr. Kime has been married three times. His second marriage was in 1885 and to this union three children were born: William, a resident of Westfall, Oregon; Harry P., of Coquille; and Albert James, also of Westfall. On July 5, 1902, Dr. Kime was again married, his third union being with Mrs. Kittie Rhoner, widow of Henry Rhoner. She was born in Brownsville, Oregon, November 1, 1872, a daughter of J. B. and Jennie M. Gross, of Bandon, Coos county, Oregon. In 1868 the parents crossed the plains from Iowa to Oregon, settling in Coos county, where they have since resided. The father is a veteran of the Civil war and served throughout the entire period of the war without receiving any serious wounds. In 1861 he enlisted in Company D of the Second Iowa Regiment of Volunteer Infantry for a term of three years and at the close of his period of enlistment he reenlisted and served until the close of the war. He was discharged July 12, 1865, at Louisville, Kentucky. In his family were seven children:

Ella, who died in infancy; Clara M., also deceased; Harvey H., a resident of Bandon; Kittie, now Mrs. Albert W. Kime; John B., deceased; and Gus and Fred H., both of whom reside in Bandon. By her former marriage Mrs. Kime was the mother of two children: Mamie J., born in 1892, who received a business-college education at Eugene, Oregon; and Claude H., who was born in 1900 and is attending the public schools. Mr. and Mrs. Kime are the parents of one child, Geneva Dentizel, born May 20, 1909.

In his political views Dr. Kime is a republican and he has given considerable attention to politics. He served as treasurer of Malheur county, Oregon, in 1891, was mayor of Bandon for one term, and also served as mayor of Cottage Grove in 1911. Fraternally he belongs to the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, having filled all the chairs in that order and is also a member of the grand lodge. He likewise holds membership relations with the Knights of Pythias, the Elks, the Modern Woodmen of America and the Foresters of America. Mrs. Kime is an active member of the Christian church and assists materially in making that denomination an effective force for good in the community. Dr. Kime and his family are valued citizens of Cottage Grove, are prominent in fraternal, church and social circles and have a most excellent standing in the community.

C. O. BAXTER. A valuable ranch of one hundred and five acres, located six miles from McMinnville, engages the entire attention of C. O. Baxter, who has wrought extensive improvements in the place during the period of his ownership. He was born in Green county, Wisconsin, on February 28, 1849, and is a son of John and Harriet (Spencer) Baxter, both natives of Ohio. In his early manhood John Baxter went from his native state to Wisconsin and later to Missouri, where he met the lady who subsequently became his wife, continuing to make his home in that state until 1861. In that year he, together with his wife and family, started to make the long, tiresome journey across the plains to Oregon, with a wagon and ox-team. Five months were spent en route and upon their arrival they located on a claim in Yamhill county, as farming had always engaged the energies of Mr. Baxter. There he continued to reside until his demise in 1908, at the venerable age of ninety-eight years. The mother, who was eighty-seven when she passed away, survived until 1910. Of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Baxter there were born fourteen children, of whom five died in infancy. Those who lived to attain maturity are as follows: Spencer, who is living in Dayton; Isabelle, the wife of James Carter, of Dayton; Sarah, who is deceased; C. O., who is our subject; George, who is also a resident of Dayton; Ann, who married John Watson, of Dayton; Cynthia, the wife of Edward Hadway, a resident of Dayton; John, who is a farmer; and Joseph, who lives in Dayton.

C. O. Baxter, who was twelve years of age when he removed with his parents to Oregon, obtained his education in the common schools, which he attended until he was fourteen. He then engaged in general farm work, continuing to follow this occupation until he was twenty-eight. During that time he not only became proficient in the tilling of the fields and care of the stock, but he accumulated sufficient capital to enable him to begin for himself. He first bought a place in Marion county, this state, which he operated for several years, meeting with very lucrative returns in his undertaking. He has always applied himself tirelessly and painstakingly to anything he has attempted, so intelligently directing his activities as to accomplish his purposes. About 1890 he bought his present homestead, which he has so thoroughly cultivated as to make it one of the very attractive ranches of the vicinity. Mr. Baxter always gives his personal supervision to everything connected with the operation of his land and the care of his stock, and naturally his fields yield abundant harvests annually. He is very practical yet progressive in his methods, always willing to lay aside the old for the new when assured of its superiority, but he is too conservative to adopt all the theories he hears advocated unless they appear to him feasible. In addition to the fine property on which he is living he owns forty-five acres located elsewhere in this county, making his holdings aggregate one hundred and fifty acres.

About thirty-five years ago Mr. Baxter completed his arrangements for a home by his marriage to Miss Marian Scott, who died when they had been married about fourteen years. To them there were born two children: Herbert, who is living in Dayton, and Ella, the wife of Warner Mills, of Newberg, Oregon. He subsequently married Miss Anna Morgareidge.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Baxter hold membership in the Methodist Episcopal church. Mr. Baxter gives his support to the policies and candidates of the republican party. He is one of the well known and highly esteemed pioneer settlers of Yamhill county, among whose residents he numbers many close friends.

FRANK A. GEDDES. Notable among the more prominent farmers and stock-raisers of Baker county living in the vicinity of Baker City, is Frank A. Geddes, former county clerk and deputy sheriff of the county in which he resides. He was born December 2, 1871, in Baker county, Oregon, his parents being J. A. and Eva J. Geddes, a sketch of whom appears elsewhere in this work.

Educated in the common schools of Baker county, Frank A. Geddes remained at home until he had attained his majority, when he engaged in the butchering business at Baker City for some time. He was later elected to the office of county clerk, a position which he filled for two terms, and afterward was appointed deputy sheriff of Baker county. After serving in that capacity he engaged on his own account in the butcher business and later purchased a ranch of one hundred and sixty acres, upon which he now lives. This farm he cultivated and improved until it is now among the more valuable agricultural properties of the county. Soon after becoming a farmer he took up the raising of stock as an important feature of his business, specializing in the breeding of Poland China hogs, a business which he has since followed.

On the 5th of April, 1899, Mr. Geddes was married to Miss Lulu M. Ebbert, a native of Springfield, Oregon, and a daughter of George and Elizabeth (Landis) Ebbert. Her father was born in Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, and the mother was a native of Iowa. The father emigrated to Oregon in 1852 and the mother arrived in this state in 1854, having crossed the plains with ox teams. They settled in Lane county, Oregon, where they lived until 1887, when they moved to Monmouth, where they at present reside. They were the parents of nine children, eight of whom are still living. Three children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Geddes, Otto E., Wilma E. and Joseph F.

Politically Mr. Geddes has always been a republican and has ever taken a lively interest in politics, having held one of the most important elective offices in the gift of the people of his county and also an important appointive office. Fraternally he is a member of the Elks and also of the Fraternal Union. Mrs. Geddes is a member of the Christian church. Mr. Geddes is one of Baker county's native sons and, having been a lifelong resident of this county and well known in political and business circles, he has formed an unusually large number of acquaintances, knowing practically every man in the county. In his present business he is continually brought in contact with the farmers of the county and he is very intimately known by them and thoroughly established in their esteem. He has always had the reputation of being honorable and upright in his dealings, is generous in his disposition, affable by nature, and courteous to all with whom he comes in contact.

ALEXANDER WHITE is one of the highly respected and successful agriculturists of Josephine county, where he is engaged in general farming. He was born in Michigan, November 19, 1841, and is the son of S. W. and Cynthia (McVay) White, the former a native of New York and the latter of Pennsylvania.

Alexander White was reared in his parents' home and received his elementary education in the public schools. In 1852, in company with his father, he emigrated to Oregon, crossing the plains with ox teams, and settled in Hillsboro, Washington county, where he remained for two years. In 1855 he removed to Josephine county, where his father filed upon a homestead upon which the subject of this review has since continued to live. He later purchased additional tracts of land and is now the owner of one hundred and eighty-two acres of fine agricultural soil, on which he is engaged in general farming.

Mr. White was united in marriage in 1877 to Miss Sarah E. Tyeer, a native of Oregon, and to them five children were born, all of whom are now living except Frederick C., whose death occurred in 1884. Those who survive are May, Ralph, Ray and Harold. Mr. White is affiliated with the republican party and at one time was a candidate for county judge of Josephine county, but his party's ticket was not elected. He is a faithful and loyal member of the Methodist Episcopal church of Kerby and is one of the well known and highly respected citizens of Josephine county.

JOHN T. THOMASEN, an agriculturist residing a half mile north of Carlton, owns and operates a tract of forty-four acres and also has charge of his father's homestead farm. His birth occurred in Yamhill county, Oregon, on the 1st of January, 1874, his parents being Peter and Christina (Petersen) Thomason, both of whom were natives of Denmark. They emigrated to the United States after their marriage and in 1870 settled in Blackhawk county, Iowa, where they continued to reside for three years. Disposing of their property, they came to Oregon and located near Amity, Yamhill county, where Peter Thomasen cultivated rented land for six or seven years. On the expiration of that period he purchased a farm of one hundred and twenty-five acres, which has since remained in his possession and which he operated until the time of his retirement in 1907. During the past four years he has lived at McMinnville, enjoying the fruits of his former toil in well earned ease. During his active business career he accumulated five hundred acres of finely improved land, all under a high state of cultivation. He himself cleared three hundred acres of the same, converting a heavily timbered tract into an excellent farming property. The period of his residence in this state now covers almost four decades and he has long enjoyed an enviable reputation as a substantial and esteemed citizen of his community. Mr. Thomasen is now seventy-six years of age. His wife was called to her final rest in 1884. Their children were seven in number, as follows: Amelia, who is deceased, as is also her husband, George Hanson; Peter E., who is a resident of Turner, Oregon; Carrie, the deceased wife of John Bakeman of the state of Washington; Mary, the deceased wife of Charles Bodle, of San Francisco, California; Anna, who gave her hand in marriage to George Kutch and resides at Klamath Falls, Oregon; John T., of this review; and Clara, the wife of Paul Hanson, of Medford, Oregon.

John T. Thomasen acquired his education in the common schools and when a youth of eighteen years started out as an agriculturist on his own account, later cultivating rented land for five years. In 1897 he purchased a tract of thirty-five acres but subsequently disposed of the place and bought the farm of forty-four acres which he now operates. In addition to this he has charge of his father's homestead property and in the work of the fields has met with excellent success, annually gathering bounteous harvests which find a ready sale on the market.

In 1898 Mr. Thomasen was united in marriage to Miss Lucretia Merchant, who was born in Yamhill county, Oregon, on the 12th of January, 1876, her parents being William and Martha Merchant. It was in 1847 that William Merchant came to Oregon with his father, settling on a donation claim two miles south of Yamhill, where he has resided continuously since. Unto him and his wife have been born eight children, namely: Abram, who is a resident of Crook county, Oregon; Henry, living in Reno, Nevada; Burns, who makes his home at Newberg, Oregon; George, of Yamhill county; Mrs. Thomasen; Winnie, the wife of Darwin Bockes, of Amity, Oregon; Thomas, who is in Manila, Philippine Islands; and Mila, the wife of Harold Dawson, of Newport, Washington. Our subject and his wife have two children, Gladys L. and Joyce T., who were born in the years 1900 and 1903 respectively.

Mr. Thomasen is a republican in his political views but has never sought nor desired office as a reward for his party fealty. He belongs to the Fraternal Brotherhood at Medford, Oregon. His religious faith is that of the Christian church, of which his wife is also a member. They are widely and favorably known throughout the county in which they have spent their entire lives and the hospitality of the best homes is cordially extended to them.

GEORGE N. FRAZER. The industrial activities of Eugene find a worthy representative in George N. Frazer, proprietor of the Eugene Iron Works. Since starting out in business he has engaged in this line of trade and his long experience, combined with unfaltering ambition and indefatigable energy, have placed him at the head of one of the leading industries of the city. He was born in Brockport, New York, June 12, 1851, and is a son of James Scott and Sarah (Kenworthy) Frazer. The father was born in Lancashire, England, and there learned the trade of an iron worker, following that pursuit until he came to America with his wife and two children, at which time he located in Brockport, New York. There he again worked at his trade until 1858, when he came to the Pacific coast, settling at San Francisco. A year later his family joined him, making the trip by way of the isthmus route. The father remained in San Francisco, employed at his trade, until 1868, when he arrived in Oregon, taking up his abode in Portland, where he embarked in business on his own account as owner of a foundry. His enterprise was conducted under the name of the Eagle Iron Works and the Pioneer Bell & Brass Foundry and as the years passed by the undertaking prospered, owing to his comprehensive knowledge of the business and his sound judgment. He was a member of the English Order of Odd Fellows.

George N. Frazer attended the public schools and learned the molder's and machinist's trade in San Francisco. He was associated with his father until the latter met death by drowning in 1873 at the foot of Main street in Portland. George N. Frazer cast the first bell, the first cannon and the first steam whistle ever made in Portland, the bell being used on Joe Knott's ferry boat. The second bell which he made was for a Methodist church at Hillsboro and he also cast bells for the fire department of Portland. In 1875 he left the Rose City and removed to Ashland, Oregon, where he established a foundry, and about twenty-eight years ago he left that place for Roseburg, where he engaged in business for a few years. In 1886 he arrived in Eugene, which then contained a population of about two thousand, and established his present business, which he has since conducted under the name of the Eugene Iron Works. He carries on a general machine business, which he has developed from a small beginning. He had a little plant at first and employed only one man beside himself. Today he employs about twelve men and does work for sawmills all over this part of the state. He is also the owner of another foundry at Springfield, Oregon, and he was one of the organizers of the Osborn Hotel.

In 1875 Mr. Frazer was united in marriage to Miss Ella E. Jackson, who was born in Millville, California, and they have two sons: George N., who is associated with his father in the Eugene Iron Works; and Arthur, a talented pianist located in Chicago. Mr. Frazer holds membership in Spencer Butte Lodge, I. O. O. F., of which he is a past grand, and he is also a past chief patriarch of Wimawhala Encampment, No. 6, and also a member of Canton Hovey, No. 4. He has likewise been a delegate to the grand lodge of the Odd Fellows and both he and his wife are connected with Eugene Lodge, No. 55, of the Order of Rebekahs of Oregon, in which Mrs. Frazer is past president. Mr. Frazer is also a member of Eugene Camp, No. 115, W. O. W. In politics he is a republican but has never sought nor desired office, preferring to concentrate his energies upon his business affairs. He is a self-made man, who has been very successful, having wide knowledge of the machinery business in all of its branches. His patronage is steadily growing, giving broad indication for the future, for the community is also growing and his operations are being continuously extended.

CHARLES BUTTS is the owner of a good farm of twenty acres situated a mile and a half northeast of Baker, and there he carries on general agricultural pursuits and the raising of vegetables and also makes a specialty of poultry raising. He was born near Forest Grove, Washington county, Oregon, April 20, 1864, his parents being Lewis and Mary (Constable) Butts, the former a native of Virginia, and the latter of Missouri. They were married in Washington county, Oregon, about 1862. Lewis Butts had crossed the plains with ox teams in 1845, accompanying his parents on their westward journey. His mother died, however, while they were en route and was buried at the peaks known as the Three Sisters in the Cascade range.

MR. AND MRS. G. N. FRAZER

THE NEW YOR
PUBLIC LIBRA
ASTOR LENOX A
TILDEN FO

The party were in the train that found what was called the Blue Pocket diggings, all trace of which has since been lost, although thousands of dollars have been expended in trying to again locate these diggings. On reaching Washington county, Oregon, the grandfather of Charles Butts secured a donation claim in the vicinity of the present site of Forest Grove. All that district was then wild and unimproved and he became one of the original settlers there. As the years passed he aided largely in the work of general development and remained a worthy and honored resident of the state until about 1890, when he passed away in the town of Gaston. Lewis Butts secured a homestead in Forestdale valley of Washington county, and at once began to clear and develop his place, which prior to that time was totally destitute of improvements. Not a furrow had been turned nor a rod of fence built. About 1862 he wedded Mary Constable, who had crossed the plains in 1850, at about which time her parents died. The death of Mrs. Butts occurred in 1870 and ten years later Mr. Butts passed away on the old homestead. He has two brothers, Festus and Jacob, and a sister, Mrs. Anita McClanahan, now living in Baker county. His eldest sister, Mrs. Mary Ann Wilcox, is now deceased, while another sister, Mrs. Melva McKinney, is now in Benton county, Oregon, and the youngest, Mrs. Sarah Hall, makes her home in Washington county, Oregon. Mrs. Lewis Butts had two brothers, James and Daniel Constable, the former residing near Idaho City, Idaho, while the latter, when last heard from, about 1902, was living in California. A sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Young, resides at Cedar Mill, Washington county, Oregon, while another sister, Mrs. Jane Halstead, is living in Seattle, Washington.

Reared in his native county, Mr. Butts was a pupil in the public schools there and his first employment was in connection with the operation of a sawmill, to which work he devoted about twelve years in Washington county. He met with a substantial measure of success in that undertaking until the financial panic of 1893-4, when he sold out. In 1896 he removed to Baker county, where two of his father's brothers and one sister were living. Here he purchased about twenty acres of land a mile and a half northeast of Baker and has since carried on general farming, which includes the production of vegetables and the raising of poultry. He has lived upon this place for about five years and in his business is meeting with a well merited degree of prosperity.

In Baker City, Oregon, on the 8th of August, 1900, Mr. Butts was married to Miss Ida Rosette Ward, whose mother died when she was about five years of age, after which she was adopted by Newton and Annice McClanahan, and took their name. Mr. McClanahan died in 1911 and Mrs. McClanahan now makes her home in Ashland, Oregon. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Butts have been born five children: Floyd and Claude, who are now attending school in Baker; Oscar and Rashiel, at home; and one who died in infancy when about two months old. The parents hold membership in the Christian church. Politically Mr. Butts is a democrat and keeps well informed on the questions and issues of the day but does not seek public office. He is interested in the material, intellectual and moral progress of his community and cooperates in all the various movements which contribute to advancement along those lines.

WILLIAM JORY. Among the substantial agriculturists of Marion county is William Jory, who resides near Salem. His birth occurred on the 20th of September, 1828, in England, his parents being Mr. and Mrs. James Jory. At the age of twenty-one years, after he had finished his education in the district schools and had spent several years assisting his father on the home farm, he joined the gold seekers leaving for California in 1849. After remaining in that state for one year he removed to Oregon, where he took up the homestead upon which he now resides. At that time it comprised three hundred and twenty acres and by conscientious and diligent labor and untiring energy he has improved and cultivated his lands and so profitable were the returns, that from time to time he has been able to add to his holdings and at present the tract comprises five hundred acres. Eighty acres of this has been planted to fruit and he has met with success in all of his ventures. In his farm work he is energetic and diligent, overcoming all difficulties and obstacles by perseverance and determination. All of the improvements which he has placed upon the farm are of an important character and because of the productivity of the soil which he has greatly increased by judicious cultivation he annually gathers a rich harvest of fruit.

In 1860 Mr. Jory was married to Miss Jane E. Moore, whose birth occurred in Canada, her parents being Christopher and Eliza (Crawford) Moore, both natives of Ireland. They came to Canada with their parents when they were very young and remained there until they crossed the plains with ox teams in 1852. They immediately settled in Oregon, locating upon a donation land claim of three hundred and twenty acres in Marion county. This property was their home until their deaths. Mr. and Mrs. Jory were the parents of four children: Ella E., deceased; Walter H.; Ada Estella, residing at home; and Edwin A., who is living at home and is married to Miss Grace Good. On the 5th of September, 1887, Mrs. Jory's death occurred and she was buried in the Odd Fellow's cemetery at Salem.

In politics Mr. Jory gives his support to the republican party and in religious faith he affiliates with the Methodist Episcopal church. In his eighty-fourth year, yet mentally alert, and hale and hearty in body like a man many years his junior, he has been a resident of the far west for sixty-three years and has made his home for three score years on his homestead. He came here on the dawn of a new epoch and helped materially in transforming a virgin land from a wilderness into bearing fields with ax and plow, a change which to the present generation may well seem like a wonder wrought by magic wand. Good use has he made of the riches nature so lavishly bestowed upon the northwest with generous hand and in this land of seemingly inexhaustible resources he has found the opportunity to develop his latent powers on a field of labor upon which he could expend his enthusiasm, ambition, industry and energy and turn them to good advantage. He has steadily worked upward and here he found and founded a home and attained success, and here he lives out a useful, eventful life in the precious possession of the friendship of many who admire him for his sterling qualities and esteem him one of the important factors that have made possible the prosperous conditions of the present.

DANIEL P. TRULLINGER, one of the prominent citizens and successful business men of the Sunset state, has owned and operated a flour mill at North Yamhill since 1875 with the exception of two years. His birth occurred at Mount Pleasant, Henry county, Iowa, on the 27th of April, 1840, his parents being Daniel and Elizabeth (Johnston) Trullinger, who were natives of Ohio and Tennessee respectively. The father was born in 1801, while Ohio was still a territory, and took up his abode in Indiana when that state was also yet a territory. About 1839, before it was admitted into the Union, he removed to Iowa and there made his home for nine years. In 1848 he came to the territory of Oregon and purchased another man's right to a donation claim of six hundred and forty acres eight miles east of Salem. At the end of a year or more he traded his claim for property in Milwaukie, Oregon, locating thereon in 1850. The following year he took up a donation claim of six hundred and forty acres fifteen miles northeast of Oregon City and continued to reside thereon until called to his final rest in 1869. His widow lived with her children for a time, spending her last days in the home of a daughter and passing away in 1887 when eighty-one years of age. They were the parents of ten children, as follows: Mrs. H. B. Morgan, who is a resident of East Portland, Oregon; Mrs. Eliza Mattoon, also living at East Portland; Daniel P., of this review; Gabriel J., who passed away in Clackamas county, Oregon, at the age of eighty-one years; Nathan H., who died in Portland when sixty-eight years of age; John C., whose demise occurred in Astoria when he had attained the age of seventy years; Mrs. Amanda H. Hodson, who died in Roseburg at the age of eighty; Mrs. Mary J. Falkner, who passed away at Sheridan, Oregon, when fifty-five years old; Mrs. Angeline Loe, who died in Salem when thirty-two years of age; and Mrs. Sarah Todd, who was sixty years old when she passed away at Oakland, California.

Daniel P. Trullinger, who was a lad of eight years when he came with his parents to Oregon, began earning his own livelihood at the early age of fourteen, working on a farm for two years. Subsequently he learned the trade of a millwright and carpenter under the direction of his brother and his work along that line included the building of bridges. He was awarded the contract for and superintended the construction of the second upper Clackamas bridge, which was built exclusively of wood and spanned one hundred and twenty feet. At that time he was known as the "boy bridge builder." In 1863, in association with a brother, he built the old Oswego sawmill but sold his interest therein at the end of a year. He next attended school at Portland, Oregon, for three winter seasons and later spent a year as a student at Forest Grove, Oregon. Mr. Trullinger then devoted another year to the construction of bridges and on the expiration of that period returned to Oswego, where he again operated the sawmill in partnership with his brother for two years. In 1868 he was elected to the legislature on the republican ticket and ably served his constituents for one term. After leaving the general assembly he became superintendent of Ben Halladay's sawmill, acting in that capacity for three years. He then operated a sawmill for his brother for one year and afterward superintended the operation of the Weidler sawmill for two years. In 1875 he purchased a flour mill at North Yamhill and has operated the same continuously since with the exception of two years, during which period he built four sawmills for different companies. He owns a tract of land comprising fifteen acres and also has a handsome residence in Yamhill.

In 1872 Mr. Trullinger was united in marriage to Miss Emily Wood, a native of Washington county, Oregon, and a daughter of Zina and Elizabeth (Shaw) Wood, who were born in Ontario, Canada, and Missouri respectively. They were married in Washington county, this state, in 1852, and resided on a farm until the father put aside the active work of the fields. Zina Wood is now eighty-five years of age and makes his home at Glencoe, Oregon, but his wife passed away at Hillsboro in 1907. Their children were four in number, namely: Mrs. Trullinger; Mildred, the wife of Joseph Connell, of North Plains, Oregon; Zina, who is a resident of Hillsboro, this state; and Dr. D. W. Wood, a resident of Hillsboro, who is now state senator.

Unto Mr. and Mrs. Trullinger were born four children. F. L., whose birth occurred on the 25th of February, 1874, is a graduate of the State Normal School at Monmouth and wedded Miss Grace Fox, a native of Oregon. He has served as postmaster of Yamhill for fourteen years and is one of the leading merchants of that town. Carl S., who was born November 9, 1875, and has a business college education, owns and operates the city electric light plant at Yamhill, making his home near that town. He married Miss Alice Laughlin, a daughter of William Laughlin. Mary L., who was born on the 28th of February, 1880, and is a trained nurse by profession, is now the wife of A. F. Henry and resides near La Fayette, Oregon. Grace, whose natal day was November 1, 1881, is a high-school graduate and also pursued a course of study in a business college. For fourteen years she has served in the capacity of assistant postmaster. Mrs. Emily Trullinger received excellent educational advantages and followed the profession of teaching for some years prior to her marriage. She passed away on the 14th of April, 1911, and her demise was the occasion of deep and widespread regret. Mr. Trullinger is a worthy exemplar of the Masonic fraternity, belonging to La Fayette Lodge, No. 3. The period of his residence in this state covers more than six decades and he is therefore largely familiar with the annals of the northwest, having witnessed the wonderful transformation which has been wrought as pioneer conditions have given way before the onward march of civilization.

U. G. CHINN. Diversified farming engages the attention of U. G. Chinn who owns and operates a fine tract of land containing eighty-five acres, located five miles east of McMinnville. He was born in Laporte, Indiana, on August 12, 1867, and is a son of James S. and Sarah M. (Stoner) Chinn. The father, who was also a native of Indiana, migrated with his wife and family to Carroll county, Missouri, during the infancy of our subject, whom the mother held in her arms, while driving a horse hitched to a light wagon, during the entire journey. Upon their arrival in Missouri Mr. Chinn located on a farm, in the cultivation of which he met with excellent success. In addition to owning his fine property he is now a stockholder in one of the local banks. The mother passed away about twenty-three years ago. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Chinn numbered twelve, those living being as follows: Marvin M., who is a farmer in the vicinity of Bosworth, Missouri; William, who is living in Kansas; Eliza, a resident of St. Louis; Irene, who is living in Kansas; Elizabeth, of Paris, France; Roy, who lives in Missouri; Walter, of Colorado; and U. G., who is our subject.

Reared on a farm, the boyhood and early youth of U. G. Chinn were not particularly different from those of other lads of that period who were residing in the more sparsely settled districts. He attended the common schools in the acquirement of an education, at the same time giving such assistance as he was able in the work of the farm. His duties and responsibilities increased with the passing years in accordance with the development of his strength and capabilities, and after laying aside his school books he gave his entire attention to farming. He remained at home until he was twenty three, and having by that time become a very capable agriculturist he felt qualified to begin for himself, so settled on a piece of land that he operated for two years. At the end of that time he removed to Oregon, locating in the vicinity of Eugene, where he resided for a time but subsequently removed to Portland. He spent six years in the latter city, then returned to Missouri, once more becoming a citizen of Carroll county, and remaining there for seven years. Deciding at the expiration of that period that he preferred the west as a place of permanent residence he again located in Portland, engaging in carpentry work until three years ago, when he located on the ranch where he now lives. Mr. Chinn has a very fertile tract of land and is meeting with good returns from his farming, the proceeds from which are largely going back into his homestead in the form of improvements. He is a man of practical ideas and is capable of adapting to his own particular requirements the more progressive theories of scientific agriculture, and as a result is making gratifying progress in his undertakings.

About twenty-three years ago Mr. Chinn established a home for himself by his marriage to Miss Mary Allen Busby, and unto them have been born five children: Bertram, who is living in the vicinity of Salem; and Flossie Geraldine, Earl Grant, Anneta Kathaline, and Virgil Hodson, all of whom are at home.

The family all affiliate with the Methodist Episcopal church in which the parents hold membership, and fraternally Mr. Chinn is a member of the Woodmen of the World. His political support he gives to the republican party but he does not take an active interest in governmental affairs, preferring to give his undivided attention to promoting his personal affairs. Success has attended his efforts in the development of his ranch, owing to his close personal supervision, unceasing diligence and the intelligent concentration of his energies, these all being indispensable factors in promoting any activity.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN WADE, who has resided within the borders of this state for more than four decades, was long and successfully identified with general agricultural pursuits here but since 1909 has lived retired at Yamhill. His birth occurred in Ohio on the 12th of March, 1842, his parents being Robert and Hannah (Miller) Wade, the former a native of Scotland and the latter of Kentucky. Robert Wade was brought to America by his parents when a child. He was married in Ohio and remained a resident of that state during the following twenty-five years, subsequently spending ten years in Indiana. He next settled on the west fork of the Des Moines river in Iowa and later took up his abode in Clarke county, that state, there continuing to reside until called to his final rest in 1880. His wife, surviving him for five years, passed away in 1885. Their children were eleven in number, namely: Isaac and John, both of whom are deceased; Robert, who is a resident of Indiana; Ezekiel G., who lives on the old homestead in Iowa; Minerva, who has passed away; George Washington; Hannah, who is deceased; Benjamin F., the subject of this review, who is a twin brother of Hannah; Abraham, who resides near the old homestead in Iowa; Emeline, who is married and also resides near the home place in Iowa; and Emeranca, who has pased away.

Benjamin F. Wade left the parental roof when eighteen years of age and made his way to Colorado, where for a few years he drove a freight wagon in the employ of a Mr. Fry. Subsequently he worked in the gold mines for a time and then went to Minnesota, where he was employed at a lumber camp for three years. On the expiration of that period he removed to Montana, prospecting and mining there. He came to Yamhill county, Oregon, in 1867 and has lived in various parts of this state continuously since. In 1871 he purchased eighty acres of land, cultivating the tract for three years and then disposing of the same. He next spent two years in eastern Oregon and then returned to Yamhill county, purchasing a farm of one hundred and sixty acres which he sold a few years later. General agricultural pursuits claimed his attention until 1909, when he put aside the active work of the fields, taking up his abode in Yamhill, where he owns a fine residence and an entire block of property. He likewise owns a tract of forty-five acres three miles northwest of Yamhill and is widely recognized as one of the prosperous and esteemed citizens of the community.

Mr. Wade has been married twice. In 1869 he wedded Miss Iola Grazer, a native of Yamhill county, Oregon, and a daughter of Jacob and Lucy (Griffin) Grazer, who took up their abode among the pioneer settlers of Oregon in 1849 and spent practically the remainder of their lives in Yamhill county. By his first wife Mr. Wade had one child, Emeranca, who died in infancy. The wife and mother was called to her final rest in 1871. Three years later Mr. Wade was again married, his second union being with Mrs. Rebecca Perry, a daughter of James and Nancy Laughlin. She was born in Missouri and when but a year old was brought by her parents across the plains to Oregon. Mr. and Mrs. Laughlin had twelve children, five of whom yet survive, namely: Washington, Mrs. Wade, Lucinda, Bertha and James D. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Wade have been born nine children, as follows: Seth H., whose birth occurred on the 19th of August, 1875, and who is married and lives in California; Benjamin Franklin, born in 1877, who has been a member of the police force of Portland for six years; Robert L., who died in California, leaving a widow; Lulu G., who was born in 1882 and resides in Portland; Mary E., born in 1884, who gave her hand in marriage to Warren Glanden, of Yamhill, Oregon; Jesse, who was accidentally killed when a youth of nineteen while in the service of the Carlton Cogging Company; Guy, whose natal year was 1889; Fayette, whose birth occurred in 1893; and one who died in infancy.

Since age conferred upon him the right of franchise Mr. Wade has supported the men and measures of the democracy, believing firmly in its principles. At one time he served as county supervisor and ably discharged the duties devolving upon him in that connection. His religious faith is that of the Christian church. No breath of suspicion has ever assailed his good name and on the contrary he stands as a splendid type of the honorable, reliable, successful man, the public-spirited citizen and the trustworthy friend.

OTHON CACHARELIS. Poets and writers have sung about the art of Greece as a thing of the past, but while attention is not concentrated today as it was in the regions of antiquity upon the development of the beautiful, the modern traveler in Greece finds that the spirit of enterprise is not dead. A notable example of the progressiveness of that country is found in the rapid upbuilding and improvement of Athens in the last quarter of a century. Among the sons of Greece exemplifying this same spirit of enterprise and advancement is Othon Cacharelis, who was born in that country, December 22, 1880, and who is now actively and prominently connected with business interests in Portland and Seaside. He is the only representative of his father's family to come to the United States. In his native land he completed the high-school course, after which he served in the army for four years, leaving the service with the rank of first lieutenant. He was a young man of twenty-two years when he heard and heeded the call of the western world, arriving in New York city in 1903. He spent two months in the eastern metropolis, after which he went to Pittsburgh, where he conducted a restaurant and theater for three years. He was previously time keeper with a railroad construction camp for one year at Robson, West Virginia, and then went to Pittsburgh, where he acted as sales agent for E. Thomas Baker & Company for a year. In 1906 he established a restaurant which he carried on for two years, when, in 1907, through the failure of a bank in which he was a depositor, he lost considerable money. He then sold his business in the east and for a time engaged in taking pictures. In 1908 he opened a theater at Donora, Pennsylvania, called the Marathon Theater, which he conducted for four months, when he sold out and removed to San Francisco. In that city he obtained a sub-contract for construction work with the Northwestern Pacific Railroad Company, being built from Willetts to Eureka. He finished this work in four months, after which he went to Portland and secured a sub-contract from the Pacific Navigation Company in building its line from Buckstan to Tillamook. In eleven months this was completed and on the 1st of March, 1911, he returned to Portland where he opened the New England restaurant at No. 24 North Third street. Of this he is still proprietor and is now successfully conducting the business. In May of the same year he came to Seaside and leased a lot for five years, with the privilege of renewing the lease for five more years. Upon this site he erected a large building in which he opened a moving picture show and restaurant, both of which are called the Orpheum. He conducts the best theater and restaurant in Seaside and both branches of his business are winning many patrons, while his establishment in Portland is prov-

OTHON CACHARELIS

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASTOR, LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS.

ing equally profitable. The improvements upon the property and the furnishings have cost him four thousand dollars. He maintains the highest standard of service in his business and his unfaltering industry, progressive spirit and practical ideas constitute the basis of gratifying success.

When Mr. Cacharelis came to the United States he had three hundred and fifty dollars clear after landing at Castle Garden. He speaks the English language fluently and, having resolved to make America his future home, he took out naturalization papers and soon became an American citizen. Studying the political situation and questions of the day, he became a republican and is now versed on the leading points which divide the country into two great political parties. While strongly attached to his native land he has never had occasion to regret his determination to come to the new world, for here he found the business opportunities which he sought and in their improvement has gradually worked his way upward.

ALBERT E. CASE, who was well known in Sumpter, Baker county, as the proprietor of a furniture and undertaking establishment, passed away March 9, 1912. He was one of the early pioneers who journeyed westward, settling in Washington while a young man. Leaving his native state of Virginia in boyhood, his earlier education having been received there, he engaged in active work in Washington at a period when methods were extremely primitive and the settlers had many hardships to encounter and overcome.

In 1882, in the state of Washington, Mr. Case was married to Mrs. Emma (Mullett) Hurley, the widow of C. F. Hurley. Shortly after his marriage Mr. Case removed to Sumpter, Oregon, and engaged in the furniture and undertaking business. By careful business management he succeeded in building up a good trade and became one of the well known and popular business men of Sumpter. His strenuous early pioneer life and later his business activities apparently overtaxed his strength and after 1909 he was an invalid and the business which he so ably built up in the days of his strength and vigor was after that time of necessity conducted by his wife. Mr. and Mrs. Case were the parents of a son, Earl, who is attending high school and is also assisting his mother in connection with the arduous duties devolving upon her as manager of her late husband's furniture and undertaking business. By her previous marriage Mrs. Case had become the mother of two sons: Ernest Hurley, who is connected with Milton College, of Milton, Wisconsin; and Carter Hurley, who resides in Iowa.

Mrs. Case is a member of the Order of Rebekahs, belonging to Lodge No. 128, in which she has twice served as noble grand, and she also belongs to the Woodcraft, her membership being in Camp No. 329 of Sumpter. The management of the furniture and undertaking business seems to have fallen into capable hands, as Mrs. Case is maintaining one of the neatest furniture stores in Baker county. Her business ability is here displayed in an unmistakable manner and in the successful conduct of the business she has shown herself to be one of the bright and able women of the community and one who enjoys a wide acquaintance, being regarded everywhere with the highest respect and esteem.

F. W. MARTIN. A highly cultivated farm of ninety acres, that was once a part of the donation claim upon which his father located sixty-seven years ago, is a tribute to the agricultural skill of F. W. Martin. He was born in Yamhill county on the 19th of February, 1855, and is a son of Nehemiah and Eliza Lois (Middick) Martin. His father, who was born in the state of New York on the 12th of November, 1805, migrated to Missouri in his early manhood, crossing the plains to Oregon with a wagon and an ox team in 1844. Upon his arrival here he settled on a donation claim adjacent to McMinnville, erecting thereon such crude improvements as were necessary for the immediate requirements of his family. With the returns netted from the successful operation of his land he was later able to place better buildings upon his ranch, the cultivation of which engaged his attention until his death on June 11, 1869. The mother, who was of German extraction, was born in Connecticut on December, 1, 1808, and passed away in Oregon on the 15th of January, 1888. Both parents were laid to rest in the cemetery at McMinnville. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Martin numbered eight: Mary S., who was born on January 31, 1833 ,and died on the 15th of February, 1893; John W., born on the 17th of July, 1836, and died on November 7, 1871; Nancy M., born in July, 1842, the wife of Alex Watt, of Washington; Jerome W., whose birth occurred on the 11th of April, 1846, now a resident of eastern Washington; Sarah C., born on the 24th of November, 1847, the wife of F. A. Ford, of Portland, Oregon; Isiah M., who was born on the 9th of June, 1850, and died on July 22, 1908; Henry Clay, born on December, 24, 1852, and died in California; and F. W., our subject. The family were all reared in the faith of the Christian church of which the mother was a member.

The educational advantages of F. W. Martin were limited to the district schools in the vicinity of his father's claim, which at that period were not of a very high standard, but he succeeded in acquiring a good, practical knowledge of the common branches of English learning. While pursuing his studies he also assisted in the operation of the home ranch, thus becoming familiar with the best methods of cultivating the fields and caring for the crops. When old enough to lay aside his text-books, his entire attention was given to agricultural pursuits in which he has ever since engaged. He left the home farm when old enough to begin for himself, locating on the place he now owns, this formerly having been a part of his father's holdings. During the long period of his occupancy Mr. Martin has effected extensive improvements in his homestead, and it is now one of the attractive and highly cultivated properties of the county.

On the 21st of February, 1875, was celebrated the marriage of Mr. Martin to Miss Algenora Snow, who was born in the vicinity of La Fayette, Oregon, on the 26th of August, 1855. Mrs. Martin is a daughter of H. H. and Nancy (Hembree) Snow, who were among the pioneer settlers of the state, having located here in 1843. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Martin there were born two sons. Cecil, who was born on December, 14, 1879, married Florence Dielschneider and is engaged in the clothing business in Boise, Idaho. Maurice M., the younger, was born on May, 27, 1882, and died in January, 1908.

His political support Mr. Martin gives to the democratic party, whose policy receives his unqualified indorsement, and fraternally he is a member of the Ancient Order of United Workmen, while his wife belongs to the Artisans, their membership in both organizations being in the McMinnville lodges. Having spent his entire life in the immediate vicinity of his present home, Mr. Martin is well known in the county, where he has many friends, among whom are to be found the comrades of his boyhood.

WINFIELD SCOTT GIBBS, a respected resident of Yamhill, was for a number of years actively engaged in general agricultural pursuits in the Sunset state but since 1906 has lived retired in the enjoyment of well earned ease. His birth occurred in Medina county, Ohio, in 1833, his parents being David S. and Ophelia (Hinmann) Gibbs, who were natives of Massachusetts and New York respectively. They were married in the Empire state and shortly afterward removed to Ohio, there continuing to reside for eighteen years. On the expiration of that period they took up their abode in Muscatine county, Iowa, and subsequently went to Buchanan county, Missouri, where they made their home for a number of years. David S. Gibbs then went to New Mexico with our subject and is supposed to have died in that state, for father and son became separated and the former was never heard from afterward. Mrs. Gibbs took up her abode near Kansas City, Kansas, and fifteen years later was married in the Sunflower state, where both she and her husband spent the remainder of their lives. By her first husband she had seven children, as follows: Rufus, whose demise occurred in Missouri; Winfield Scott, of this review; Charlotte, who gave her hand in marriage to Mr. Ogden and passed away in Kansas City, Missouri; Marow, who is a resident of Kansas; Laura, who died in the Sunflower state; Benjamin A., who died in the Soldiers' Home in California; and Oliver, whose demise occurred in Missouri.

Winfield S. Gibbs attended the common schools in the acquirement of an education and took his initial step in the business world when a youth of fifteen, learning the plasterer's trade and following that occupation in Missouri for a few years. Subsequently he came to this state, locating in Benton county, but soon afterward made his way to the gold mines of southern Oregon. Later he went to Idaho, spending altogether nine years in digging for gold. During the years 1855 and 1856 he participated in the Indian war of southern Oregon, which raged throughout Josephine, Douglas and Jackson counties. He fought in several battles and learned to speak the Indian language so fluently that he acted as an interpreter during the period of hostilities. In 1862 he returned to Benton county, Oregon, and there operated a farm for twelve years. He next spent two years in Oakesdale, Whitman county, Washington, and later resided for a short time in Oregon City. For a period of eight years he made his home at Peoria, Linn county, and in 1906 he came to Yamhill, where he has since lived in honorable retirement. He has disposed of all of his farms and now owns a handsome residence in Yamhill.

On the 16th of August, 1863, Mr. Gibbs was united in marriage to Miss Keziah Henderson, who was born in Jackson county, Missouri, on the 11th of May, 1843, her parents being Herman and Sarah (Trapp) Henderson, natives of Tennessee. They remained residents of that state for fifteen years after their marriage and then removed to Jackson county, Missouri, later going to Buchanan county of the same state. In 1853 they crossed the plains to Oregon, beginning the journey on the 12th of April and reaching their destination on the 11th of October following. Mr. Henderson purchased land in Benton county and was successfully engaged in general agricultural pursuits until his death, at which time he had accumulated six hundred acres of highly improved land. He passed away in his ninety-fifth year, having long survived his wife, who died in the seventy-sixth year of her age. Their children were twelve in number, namely: Rachel, who is now deceased; Martin, who is a resident of California; John, who died while crossing the plains and who was buried in eastern Oregon, where the town of Vale now stands; William, living in Corvallis, Oregon; Cynthia, who is deceased, as is also her husband, James Boonfield; Adaline, who died when a child; Louis, who makes his home in Benton county, Oregon; Mary, who died of cholera while crossing the plains; Harriet, who is likewise deceased; Mrs. Gibbs; James, of Benton county, Oregon; and one who died in infancy.

Unto Mr. and Mrs. Gibbs have been born ten children, as follows: Eveline, whose birth occurred on the 16th of July, 1864, and who is the wife of Thomas Coon of Benton county, Oregon; Harriet, born February 21, 1866, who is the wife of Frank Bumgardner, of Linn county, Oregon; Rachel, born in 1868, who gave her hand in marriage to George Coon, of Benton county, Oregon; one who died in infancy; Marow, whose natal day was October 27, 1869, and who makes his home in Yamhill county; Laura, born in 1871, who is the wife of George Fletchall, of Yamhill county; Cato, who is married and resides at Peoria, Oregon; William, who is married and makes his home at Oakpoint, Washington; Perman, born September 19, 1881, who is married and resides in Oswego, Oregon; and Cordelia, whose natal year was 1884. Mr. Gibbs is a socialist in his political views, casting his ballot in support of the men and measures of that party. His religious faith is indicated by his membership in the United Evangelical church, to which his wife also belongs. He has now reached the ripe old age of seventy-nine years and has spent the greater part of his life in the northwest, here having won a handsome competence and gained a host of warm friends.

L. P. HOPKINS is one of the active and prosperous farmers and stock-raisers of Marion county, and is conducting his business interests on a farm of fifty acres within a few miles of Salem. The farm's neat and thrifty appearance indicates Mr. Hopkins' careful supervision and practical methods, and he is justly accounted one of the substantial agriculturists of the district. He was born in Indiana on the 30th of January, 1848, his parents being William and Ruahann (Harding) Hopkins, the former a native of Maryland and the latter of Kentucky. The father's death occurred when he was eighty-four years of age and the mother's when she was eighty-six. To them six children were born: Sarah, who is the wife of P. Lawhead of New York state; E. E., a resident of Kansas; Fred, deceased; L. P., who is the subject of this sketch; and E. J., and M. W., both residents of Indiana.

Little occurred to vary the early life of L. P. Hopkins and his youth and boyhood were spent in attending school and assisting his father. He remained at home until he was twenty-one years of age and then engaged in the mercantile business in his native state for ten years. After disposing of this he removed to Kansas where he lived upon a farm for five years. In 1890 he again removed westward and came to Oregon, settling in Portland for a year before locating permanently upon the fifty acre farm which is his present home. During his twenty years' residence upon this property he has exerted every possible effort to bring his land under a profitable state of cultivation. It is at present planted to prunes and is yielding him adequate returns for the labor expended upon it.

In 1878 Mr. Hopkins was married to Miss Alice Cook, also a native of Indiana, and a daughter of John R. and Jemima (Cora) Cook. To Mr. and Mrs. Hopkins two children have been born: Cora E., who is the wife of E. Myers of Marion county; and Gladys, who is residing at home.

Mr. Hopkins casts his vote with the democracy and is an ardent and enthusiastic advocate of the principles of the democratic party. Although he has served for fifteen years as a member of the school board he has never sought office as a reward for party fealty, his service on the school board being prompted wholly by his interest in the educational development of his community. Mrs. Hopkins holds membership in the Baptist church. Industrious habits and straightforwardness have enabled Mr. Hopkins to maintain his standing in the community as a desirable and substantial citizen, and he is accorded the esteem and respect of his fellow agriculturists because of his conscientious life in accordance with the high principles which he holds.

FRANCIS B. MITCHELL. Among the younger men in professional circles in Baker county whose education, ability and commencement of their career give promise of large success in life, is numbered Francis B. Mitchell, who as a lawyer has recently entered upon practice in Haines, this county. He was born in California, August 5, 1883, his parents being James and Jennie Mitchell. His father was born in the state of Maine while his mother's place of nativity is Nova Scotia. The latter was brought by her parents to the United States when she was a young girl, arriving in California in 1876. The father arrived on the Pacific coast in 1878. After their marriage they settled in Baker county, Oregon, in 1884, where James Mitchell engaged in the lumber business in Baker City.

Francis B. Mitchell was the eldest of a family of five children. Early in life he indicated by his studious application to his text-books his eager desire to obtain a liberal education. He attended the common school in Baker City and later was graduated from the high school there. He then spent two years in the Oregon State University, after which he graduated from the University of Michigan in 1910. His studies in the Oregon and Michigin State Universities were with the view to his entering the legal profession, and immediately after his graduation from the law department in the latter institution he took up the practice of law in Haines. He moved to Baker in April, 1912, where he now has his office and where by skill, ability and integrity he is building up a very good practice.

As is common with the members of the legal fraternity Mr. Mitchell has taken a lively interest in politics, his allegiance being given to the republican party. In consequence of this activity and through the efforts of the many influential friends which he has made he has become a candidate for representative of his district in the state legislature. Fraternally he is a member of Bristow Lodge, No. 112, I. O. O. F., of Haines and belongs to Baker Lodge, No. 338, B. P. O. E., and in both of these bodies he is active and popular. He is numbered among the bright young men of Baker who are standing upon the threshold of useful professional careers, and few, if any, give promise of a more successful career in their chosen life's work. He brings to the practice of his profession a ripe scholarship gained in well established schools of learning where he has by his studious and diligent labors been graduated with honors. His acquaintance is extensive and he is welcomed in all of the best circles not only in Baker but throughout Baker county. He takes an active interest in all civic affairs of the community, and is interested in every movement for the advancement of the city and county of which he is a citizen.

C. C. McCLENDON. Among the rugged sons of the middle west who early in life cast in their lot with the pioneers to whom the Oregon of today is indebted for its development, civilization and splendid modern advantages, is C. C. McClendon, who has been identified with this great state since 1852. He was born in Tennessee, June 9, 1832, a son of Joseph B. and Jane (Londen) McClendon, the father having been a native of North Carolina and the mother of Virginia. The latter passed away in Tennessee, where the family lived for many years, after which the father went to Arkansas where his death occurred. In their family were twelve children, of whom the subject of this review is the only survivor. C. C. McClendon received a common-school education in Tennessee and Arkansas and after remaining at home until he had attained the age of nineteen years he crossed the plains in 1852 with ox teams, the journey requiring six months to complete. He settled in Douglas county, where he took up a donation claim and built a log cabin, residing there until 1864. While in that county he cleared a large part of his land and brought it under cultivation, spending some of the most strenuous years of his life in that occupation. He then removed to Jackson county where he purchased six hundred and four acres of land in the Sams valley, where he resided until in 1899, when he came to Ashland for two years and then settled at Gold Hill, where he is now living retired.

Mr. McClendon was married in Douglas county, Oregon, in 1856, to Miss Susan Brown, a native of Missouri, her birth having occurred in McDonald county, September 23, 1839. She was a daughter of John and Mary (Dodson) Brown, who were natives of Tennessee. They crossed the plains in 1852 with ox teams and settled in Douglas county where the father took up a donation claim of three hundred and twenty acres, upon which he resided until 1862. He then disposed of his holdings and removed to Josephine county, where his death occurred. The mother afterward became a resident of Jackson county and passed away at the age of eighty-seven years. Mrs. McClendon was one of ten children, and by her marriage she became the mother of eleven children, namely: William P., B. F. and Joseph B., all deceased; Mary J., the wife of George F. Learned, of California; Samuel W., of Gold Hill; Susanna and John H., who have also passed away; Rose M., who married W. H. Whybark, of Lovelock, Nevada; Lillie B., the wife of S. A. McIntosh, of Nevada; Nora B., who wedded J. H. Eastman, of Jackson county; and George W., who is married and resides in California.

Mr. McClendon in his political views is an adherent of the principles and platforms of the democratic party. He has been greatly interested in educational matters and has served on the school board, being an active member of that body. Mrs. McClendon is a member of the Christian church, being deeply interested in the work of that organization. Among the many respected and honored citizens of Gold Hill there are few if any who are entitled to more credit for an active, useful life than is Mr. McClendon. His long career as a pioneer during which he labored early and late to advance the interests of his community and build up his own private fortune, rendered him one of the valuable citizens of the state during its early days, a service which entitles him to the respect and esteem of all fellowmen. He has an extensive acquaintance in the communities where he has lived and has been regarded as one of the best citizens in those localities.

JAMES COUGHTRY, who since 1909 has lived retired at Yamhill, is now spending the evening of life in the enjoyment of a competence which he acquired in the course of an active and successful business career. His birth occurred in Scotland on the 22d of November, 1840, his parents being Nathan and Jean Smith (Candlish) Coughtry, who were born, reared and married in that country. The mother passed away in the land of hills and heather on the 1st of February, 1850. She was the niece of the famous Scotch clergyman, Dr. Candlish, who originated the Free Church of Scotland in association with Dr. Thomas Guthrie. Nathan Coughtry crossed the Atlantic to the United States in 1858, first settling near Rockford, Illinois, where he made his home until 1863. In that year he removed to Iowa, continuing to reside in the Hawkeye state until his demise, which occurred at Waterloo on the 13th of March, 1890. Unto him and his wife were born six children, as follows: Henry M., living in Waterloo, Iowa; Thomas, who passed away at Montreal, Canada; William, who was killed in the battle of Shiloh on the 6th of April, 1862; Isabelle, who passed away in Scotland on the 16th of August, 1857; James, of this review; and Ann, the wife of T. O. Scougall, of Portland, Oregon.

James Coughtry acquired a practical and thorough education in the schools of his native land and was a youth of eighteen when he accompanied his father on his emigration to the new world. At the time of the outbreak of the Civil war he was residing at Rockford, Illinois, and there volunteered for service in the Union army, joining the Fifteenth Illinois Infantry and remaining with that command for four years with the exception of a two months' furlough. On the 6th of April, 1862, however, at the battle of Shiloh, he received a wound which disqualified him for further active service. After being honorably discharged in 1864 he joined his father at Winthrop, Iowa, where the family home had been established while he was in the army. There he carried on general agricultural pursuits until 1872 and then removed

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASTOR LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS.

C. C. McCLENDON

MRS. C. C. McCLENDON

to Nebraska, where he maintained his residence until 1886. In that year he came to Portland, Oregon, and during the six years of his residence in the Rose city was engaged in contracting for street grading and excavating throughout the summer seasons, while in the winter months he worked in a cannery. Subsequently he took up his abode in Washington county and for six years cultivated rented land in that county and also in Yamhill county. In 1898 he returned to Dakota county, Nebraska, and there followed farming for ten years. In 1909 he put aside the active work of the fields and took up his abode in Yamhill, Oregon, where he owns a handsome residence and is now enjoying the fruits of his former toil in well earned ease.

On the 26th of July, 1866, Mr. Coughtry was joined in wedlock to Miss Mary Jane Beith, a native of St. Charles, Illinois, and a daughter of Thomas and Jean (Russell) Beith, who were born, reared and married in Scotland. In 1846 they emigrated to America, first settling at St. Charles, Illinois, while in 1857 they removed to Winthrop, Iowa. Thomas Beith there passed away in 1883. His widow, who still makes her home at Winthrop, has now attained the age of ninety-five years. Their children were ten in number, namely: Robert, who passed away in June, 1864, while serving as a soldier in the Union army; Hannah, the wife of Robert White, of Winthrop, Iowa; John and Margaret, twins, both of whom are deceased; Mrs. Coughtry; Thomas, living in Wakefield, Nebraska; George, who is a resident of Allen, Nebraska; Charles, of Wakefield, Nebraska; Agnes, the wife of Dr. Hoag, of Weir, Kansas; and one who died in infancy.

The marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Coughtry was blessed with twelve children, as follows: Robert B., born July 5, 1867, who is now a resident of La Fayette, Oregon; Nathan T., born December 6, 1868, who makes his home at Allen, Nebraska; Henry W., whose birth occurred on the 9th of October, 1870, and who is now a resident of Pike, Yamhill county, Oregon; James C., born November 7, 1872, who is married and lives at Yamhill, Oregon; Jean C. Candlish, born August 12, 1874, who is still under the parental roof; George H., whose natal day was April 15, 1876, and who is now living at Emerson, Nebraska; Hannah N., born January 25, 1878, who is the wife of Harry Englen, of Kadoka, South Dakota; Wheeler W., born November 15, 1879, who is still at home; Ernest E., born October 2, 1882, who passed away in the city of Dakota, Nebraska, on the 20th of September, 1901; Archie R., whose birth occurred on the 12th of August, 1884, and who is now living in Dakota county, Nebraska; Anna B., born March 31, 1886, who is still under the parental roof; and Flora E., born April 14, 1888, who is the wife of Eric M. Bierman, of Nebraska.

In politics Mr. Coughtry is a stanch republican, while his religious faith is indicated by his membership in the Methodist Episcopal church, to which his wife and children also belong. The salient qualities of his life have ever commended him to the confidence, good will and friendship of those with whom he has come in contact and he has always enjoyed the warm regard of a host of friends.

G. M. PATTY. General farming engages the attention of G. M. Patty, who owns and operates a hundred acre tract of Yamhill county's fertile land, located in the vicinity of Amity. His birth occurred in this county on October 3, 1872, his parents being G. M. and Lucy (Ruble) Patty, the former a native of Arkansas and the latter of Missouri, their marriage taking place after they had come to Oregon. In 1852 the father left his native state and crossed the plains to Oregon, first locating on the Willamette. He subsequently removed to Salem, whence he later came to Yamhill county, settling on a farm three miles south of Amity. The improvement and operation of this place engaged his undivided attention until his death in 1907. He was laid to rest in the cemetery at Amity. Of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Patty there were born five sons and two daughters: Henry, who lives in the vicinity of Amity; William, who is deceased; G. M., our subject; Winfield, who is deceased; Ray, who is living with his mother; Lucy, who is also at home; and June, the wife of Roy Shields, of Salem, Oregon.

The boyhood and youth of G. M. Patty did not differ in any marked degree from those of other lads of the period and like circumstances. He attended the common schools in the acquirement of his education, devoting such time as he was not engaged with his studies in assisting his father with the work of the farm. He remained at home with his parents until he was twenty-two years of age, when he decided that he was fully qualified to begin his independent agricultural career, so he located on the place where he now resides. His energies have been intelligently applied to the operation of this land for about seventeen years, and as a result he has a finely improved and valuable piece of property. Diversified farming under the capable supervision and intelligent direction of Mr. Patty has proven to be very lucrative, as is manifested by his fine barns, attractive residence, and well stocked pastures. A capable business man as well as agriculturist he has applied as rigid methods and adhered to as carefully outlined a system in the conduct of his affairs as he would have followed in a commercial pursuit. A man of progressive and practical ideas he has met with a gratifying degree of success, always having operated his fields under his personal supervision, and given every detail of his business the most careful attention.

About sixteen years ago Mr. Patty completed his arrangements for a home of his own by his marriage to Miss Anna Middleton and unto them have been born one daughter and two sons, Florence, Glen and Robert, all of whom are still at home.

The family attends the Methodist Episcopal church, in which Mrs. Patty holds membership. Fraternally Mr. Patty is connected with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. His political support he has always accorded to the republican party considering that their policy is best adapted to subserve the highest interests of the majority. Governmental affairs, however, have never engaged his attention to any marked degree as he has always preferred to devote his energies rather to the development of his personal interests. He is widely known in this vicinity and is held in the highest esteem by all who have had transactions with him, as he is a man of high standards and incorruptible integrity.

CLYDE B. AITCHISON, of Salem, has been almost continuously in public office in Oregon since 1905, and is now a member and chairman of the board of railway commissioners, in which connection he is rendering important service to the public. He has been a resident of the state since May, 1903, coming to Oregon to enter upon the practice of law in Portland. He was then a young man of about twenty-eight years, his birth having occurred in Clinton, Iowa, February 22, 1875. His parents were John and Mary J. (Nolan) Aitchison, the former a native of Scotland, whence he came to the United States in early manhood, making the long voyage across the Atlantic in 1854. He had been educated for the ministry in the University of Glasgow and after arriving in this country engaged in preaching in Brooklyn, New York, and afterward in Iowa, where he became recognized as one of the most prominent representatives of the Baptist ministry. The Central University of Iowa conferred upon him the Doctor of Divinity degree and he was accounted one of the most scholarly men and capable divines of that state. In 1894 he retired from active connection with the ministry and in 1903 he came to Oregon to take up his abode with his son in Portland, where he passed away in 1906. His widow still survives and yet makes her home with the subject of this review.

Clyde B. Aitchison, spending his youthful days under the parental roof, acquired his early education in the public schools, completing his course in the high school of Hastings, Nebraska, with the class of 1889. He was an honor graduate of that class and also the youngest graduate who ever finished the work in the Hastings high school. He afterward entered Hastings College, from which he was graduated in 1893, with the degree of B. S., and again he was the youngest pupil to complete the course in that institution up to that time. With a broad literary learning to serve as the foundation upon which to build professional knowledge he took up the study of law in the office of Tibbets, Morey & Ferris, of Hastings, and there continued for about eighteen months, after which he went to Council Bluffs, Iowa, resuming his studies in the office of Finley Burke. In 1896 he successfully passed the examination which secured his admission to the bar of his native state and entered upon practice in Council Bluffs. Although advancement at the bar is proverbially slow no dreary novitiate awaited him. He was soon accorded a large and growing clientage and was numbered among the successful practitioners of that city until he removed to the west. He was also honored by the profession in an election to the office of secretary of the Bar Association of Council Bluffs, acting in that capacity from its organization until he left the state. During that time he compiled Aitchison's Annotations of the Iowa Decisions, which was published by the Lawyers Cooperative Company of Rochester and had a wide sale throughout the state.

In May, 1903, Mr. Aitchison arrived in Portland where he resumed the practice of law, and in June, 1905, he was called to public office, being made clerk of the commission appointed to prepare a new tax code for the state. Later, in 1906, he was engaged to assist in drafting the present railroad commission bill, which was presented to the legislature and adopted by that body, after which, in February, 1907, Mr. Aitchison was appointed a member of the board of railway commissioners. In April, 1908, he was given the republican nomination for the office and was elected to that position, while in January, 1911, he was chosen chairman of the board, in which important capacity he is now serving. In this connection he has carefully safeguarded the interests of the people at large yet stands strictly for that justice which neither favors nor abuses the corporation nor the individual.

On the 5th of September, 1906, Mr. Aitchison was united in marriage to Miss Bertha Beatrice Williams, of Pacific Grove, Oregon, a daughter of E. B. Williams, of Iowa, in which state his death occurred. Mr. and Mrs. Aitchison have two children, Beatrice and Bruce. In his political views Mr. Aitchison has always been a republican and keeps well informed on the questions and issues of the day. He has never been a partisan but maintains a progressive attitude that seeks ever the welfare of the majority. He belongs to Portland Lodge, No. 142, B. P. O. E., is also a member of the University Club of Portland and vice president of the Apollo Club of this city. He is prominent and popular in the Rose City as well as in the state capital and in fact he has a wide and favorable acquaintance throughout Oregon. He is preeminently a man of affairs and one who has wielded a wide influence.

WILLIAM AMOS KING, secretary-treasurer of The Oregon Home Builders, to which position he was called January 2, 1912, had previously been connected with mercantile and banking interests in Newberg. Here he still makes his home. He was born in Portland, Oregon, October 11, 1882, and is a son of Edward Albert and Mary (Lumsden) King, who were married May 25, 1881. The former was a son of Amos N. King, an Oregon pioneer of 1845, who in that year located on the present site of Portland and took up a donation land claim of three hundred and twenty acres. His wife also secured a claim of equal size. When the boundaries of the city extended to include his property, he platted it and sold forty acres of it to the city for a park, receiving eight hundred dollars per acre, which at that time was considered a handsome price. His home in which his son Edward A. King and his grandson, William A. King, were born, is still standing. It was built in 1856 and the shingles, split from cedar blocks, on the roof have never been replaced and are apparently in as good condition as when put on fifty-six years ago. Edward A. King was the youngest son in a family of six children and was born in Portland, March 31, 1861. After attaining to manhood he had full charge of his father's real-estate and financial affairs and for several years was treasurer of the Multnomah Street Railway Company. He was also clerk of the board of bridge commissioners, to which office he was appointed by the circuit judge. He was engaged in dealing extensively in real estate and is now a retired capitalist. He wedded Mary Lumsden and they became the parents of two children who are yet living, the daughter being Lulu May, now the wife of George L. McPherson, of Portland, while the son is W. A. King of this review. The mother died when her children were quite young and the father afterward married Miss Anna Belle Brewer, who came from Michigan in 1888 and to the children took the place of their lost mother, being most devoted to them. Mr. and Mrs. King now reside in a magnificent residence on King street in Portland.

At the usual age W. A. King entered the Portland schools and passed through consecutive grades to his graduation. He was also graduated from the Holmes Business College of that city and in 1906 he entered commercial circles at Newberg, Oregon, as a hardware merchant, continuing in that line of business until 1909, when he sold out and entered the employ of the First National Bank of Newberg as assistant cashier. He was afterward elected vice president and later was chosen to the presidency of the bank, which he carefully managed and conducted until he sold his bank stock and resigned his position to accept the position of secretary-treasurer of the Oregon Home Builders on the 2d of January, 1912, in which connection he is becoming widely and favorably known for business ability, proving adequate to the conditions and emergencies that confront him in business life.

On the 13th of May, 1909, Mr. King was united in marriage at Newberg, Oregon, to Miss Julia Bernice Woodward, a daughter of E. B. Woodward, editor of the Newberg Graphic. The two children of this family are Edward Herman, who was born January 30, 1910, and Sybil Lulu, who was born December 18, 1911. In his political views Mr. King is a stalwart republican and served as city treasurer of Newberg from January 15, 1910, until January 15, 1911. Socially he is connected with the Multnomah Amateur Athletic Club and with the Portland Rowing Club. He has a very extensive circle of warm friends in the Rose City, where his boyhood and youth were passed and is becoming rapidly and favorably known in the section of the state in which he now lives. His energy and business capacity are standing the test of actual service in the business world and each year finds him in advance of the position which he occupied the previous year.

W. H. JOHNSON is numbered among the successful agriculturists of Jackson county, owning a choice and highly improved farm of one hundred and sixty acres. His birth occurred in Indiana on the 22d of November, 1849, and he is one of the four children born to Philander and February (Banker) Johnson. He was reared in his father's home and educated in the public schools of the district in which he lived. He remained with his parents until twenty-three years of age and, starting in life for himself, he made his first settlement in the state of Kansas, where he purchased one hundred and sixty acres of land and for some time was engaged in farming and improving this property. He later sold this farm and journeyed overland to Colorado, in which state he filed on a homestead in 1883. On this land he remained for a number of years and having largely improved it, he sold the property at a handsome profit. In 1895 he moved to Oregon, settling in Jackson county, near Buncom, where he purchased the farm of one hundred and sixty acres on which he now resides and to the development and care of which he gives his entire attention.

In 1883 Mr. Johnson was united in marriage to Miss Liya Rand, a native of Indiana. Unto them have been born two children: Rose, who died in Colorado in 1885; and Bryan, who still survives. In his political views Mr. Johnson has always been a loyal member of the republican party. His religious faith is indicated by his membership in the Baptist church. He is a man widely read in the affairs of his country and during the period of his residence at Buncom, Oregon, he has come to be recognized as a very desirable addition to the community in which he lives. He is an experienced and prosperous agriculturist, keeping abreast of all improvements as to farm machinery as well as modern methods of successfully growing and harvesting all classes of farming produce.

EDWARD OTIS PARKER, M. D., who has devoted his life to the two professions of teaching and medical practice, has qualified for the latter by comprehensive study and is continuously broadening his knowledge and promoting his efficiency by further reading and investigation. He has always lived in Oregon, his birth having occurred in Oakland, Douglas county, October 19, 1872. He is a son of Patterson C. and Sarah A. (King) Parker, both of whom are natives of Indiana. They came across the plains with their respective parents to Oregon, the father arriving in 1852 and the mother in 1870. Both families settled in the Umpqua valley in Douglas county and it was there that the parents of Dr. Parker were married. They settled upon a ranch where they resided until the sons were old enough to enter school, when in order to provide their children with better educational advantage they removed to Oakland where they resided for twenty years. There the mother's death occurred, on the 16th of May, 1907, and the father afterward came to Pendleton, since which time he has lived with his son, Dr. Parker. He is one of the honored pioneer residents of this state, having for sixty years made his home in Oregon, witnessing its marvelous growth and development and taking an active part in promoting its progress and interest as the years have gone by.

Dr. Parker pursued his education while spending his youthful days at home, being a pupil in the public schools of Oakland and afterward in the Central Oregon Normal School at Drain, this state. He was there graduated with the class of 1898, but long prior to this time he had entered upon the profession of teaching, accepting his first school in 1890. He taught both in Lebanon, and Yoncalla and while following that profession he also began reading medicine under the direction of Drs. Page and Gilmour, of Oakland. In the fall of 1900 he entered the medical department of the Willamette University at Salem and on the completion of a four years' course was graduated with the class of 1903. His training was thorough and he had applied himself so earnestly to the mastery of the principles of the profession that he was particularly well qualified for the duties that have since devolved upon him. Immediately after his graduation he located at Pilot Rock, Umatilla county, where he continued in successful practice until July, 1908, when he removed to Pendleton. The following year he went to New York city and pursued his studies in the Postgraduate University there. He then again came to Pendleton where he has since remained and his broad and comprehensive knowledge and well developed skill rank him with the foremost physicians of the city. He belongs to Pendleton City Medical Society, Umatilla County Medical Society, the Eastern Oregon Medical Society of which he was formerly president, the Oregon Stat Medical Society and the American Medical Association. Through the proceedings of these bodies he keeps in touch with the most advanced thought and work of the profession and experience is also constantly adding to his power and efficiency.

It was in 1898 that Dr. Parker was united in marriage to Miss Ella Spaulding, of Winnebago, and unto them was born one daughter, Alice Verne. The wife and mother passed away on the 29th of February, 1907, and on the 19th of October, 1911, Dr. Parker was again married, his second union being with Miss Florence Maud Simonds, of Collingwood, Ontario.

In his political views Dr. Parker has ever been an earnest republican but without ambition for office although he keeps well informed on the questions and issues of the day and at all times manifests a public-spirited devotion to the general good. His wife is a member of the Presbyterian church and Dr. Parker is identified with Pendleton Lodge, No. 52, F. & A. M.; Pendleton Chapter, No. 23, R. A. M.; Bushey Chapter, No. 19, O. E. S.; Integrity Lodge, No. 92, I. O. O. F.; Alita Lodge, No. 146, Rebekahs; Pendleton Lodge, No. 288, B. P. O. E.; Umabolis Tribe, No. 18, I. O. R. M.; and is a member of the Royal Order of Moose. He is also connected with many beneficial orders and in all enjoys the high regard of his brethren of the fraternities because his life is in keeping with their high and beneficial principles. He holds to advanced professional standards and his close conformity to the ethics of the profession has gained for him the regard of his brethren of the medical fraternity while his skill in practice is winning for him an extensive and gratifying patronage.

JAMES WESTLEY HAMMACK, who is living on his ranch located one mile east of Lostine, has always devoted his energies to agricultural pursuits, and has met with a goodly measure of success. His life record was begun in Knox county, Kentucky, on the 2d of April, 1838, his parents being James and Elizabeth (Moore) Hammack, both of whom are now deceased, the father having passed away in 1899 and the mother in 1905.

The early years in the life of James Westley Hammack were passed on the farm where he was born and in the cultivation of which he began to assist while still in his childhood. In common with many other lads reared in the country at that period he was given but a meager education, attending school only at such times as his services were not required about the farm. Under the capable supervision of his father he acquired a thorough knowledge of the best practical methods of tilling the fields and harvesting the crops, so that by the time he had attained his majority he was a skilled agriculturist. He subsequently left home and went out into the world to make his own way, but still continued to devote his energies to farming. Together with his wife and family he crossed the plains to Oregon in 1865 with an ox team, his destination being Yamhill county. He remained there for only two years, then went to Union county, where he acquired some government land which he cultivated with excellent success for thirty years. From there he came to Wallowa county, settling in the valley, where he resumed his agricultural activities. As he is a capable ranchman of enterprising and industrious habits he has prospered since coming here and is known as one of the substantial citizens of the county. At various times he added to his original tract until he had acquired two hundred and forty acres, but the cultivation of this involved much labor and close supervision, and of recent years Mr. Hammack has given some of his land to his sons. He retains a tract, however, that is well improved and highly productive, and despite the fact that he is seventy-four years of age he continues to superintend its cultivation. He has always led a very active life and although he is

MR. AND MRS. J. W. HAMMACK

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASTOR LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS

now able to live in retirement, having more than sufficient to provide for the needs of himself and wife, he is too energetic to relinquish his work.

In Wayne county, Iowa, in 1863, Mr. Hammack was married to Miss Sarah Miller, a daughter of John and Mahaly Miller, and they have become the parents of seventeen children, ten of whom are living, as follows: John L., James L., Josephine, Donald M., Effie, Emma, Carrie V., Hattie, Floyd and Bert. Those deceased are: Isabel, Thomas F., James W., Cora A., Elizabeth, William and Esther.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Hammack are members of the Christian church, in the faith of which they have reared their family, and his political prerogatives he has always exercised in support of the men and measures of the democratic party. Mr. Hammack has been a resident of Oregon for forty-seven years, and during that period he has been an interested observer of the state's development, and has enthusiastically contributed his quota toward forwarding its progress on every possible occasion. He is one of the loyal, enterprising pioneers to whose efforts the northwest is largely indebted for the position it holds in the agricultural world today, and he can relate many interesting reminiscences of those early days, when the Indians yet roamed on the prairies and skulked in the forests, where now are to be found highly cultivated ranches and thriving towns.

WILLIAM E. LEWIS owns and resides on an excellent tract of twenty acres of land which is situated near Montavilla, in Multnomah county. He was born in Crawford county, Illinois, on the 17th of June, 1864, a son of Daniel and Rachel Lewis, the former born in North Carolina in 1829 and the latter in Crawford county, Illinois, in 1833. The parents were married in Illinois and resided there until 1872, when they removed to Washington, locating at Chehalis river. Shortly afterwards they removed to Multnomah county, settling six miles east of Portland on the base line road where they purchased for five thousand dollars one hundred and sixty-three acres of land which the father operated until his death. He passed away in 1901 and the mother is still living, having now reached the age of seventy-eight years. To Mr. and Mrs. Lewis were born eleven children: Leander, who now resides on the old homestead; John, who died in infancy; Jimmie, who was accidentally drowned at the age of twenty-four; Anna, who is the wife of Fred Davis, of Centralia, Washington; Herman, who helps to operate the old homestead; W. E., of this review; Sarah, who is the wife of A. H. Belle, of Portland; Lulu, who is Mrs. J. W. Mills, of Portland; Edward and Frederick, who were twins, both of whom are now deceased; and George, of Portland.

William E. Lewis received his education in the common schools and remained at home with his parents until he was twenty-one years of age. He then started out in life for himself by engaging in farming and fruit-growing on a tract of twenty acres which belonged to his father's homestead and which he inherited. He was thus engaged until 1888 when he sold his land and rented for three years of J. H. Lamberts a fruit ranch of eighty acres. Subsequently he returned to Portland and purchased twenty acres of his father's old homestead, on which he is now living. He also owns various business buildings and other real estate, the interests of which he looks after, but he is otherwise now living retired.

In 1885 Mr. Lewis was married to Miss Effie M. Hassler, who was born in Depew, Illinois, a daughter of P. J. and Adeline Hassler, the father a native of Bureau county, Illinois, and the mother a native of Indiana. The parents resided in Illinois until 1888, when they came to Oregon, settling at Oregon City, and later removed to Multomah county where they purchased thirty acres of land six miles east of Portland. They resided on the same the remainder of their lives, the mother passing away in 1904 and the father in 1908. In their family were two children, Mrs. Lewis and a child who died in infancy. Mr. and Mrs. Lewis have become parents of four children. Chester E., the eldest, was born in 1887. He married Miss Elizabeth Spear and now resides on his father's farm although at the present time he is in the employ of the Southern Pacific Railway as mail clerk. He has a business college education. Lawrence P. was born in 1889, received a business college education and now is operating a milk depot in Portland, his place of business being at Seventy-ninth and East Stark streets. On May 3, 1911, he wedded Miss Cisly Starr. Walter was born in 1891, is a graduate of the public school and is now at home. Irene, who completes the family, was born in 1899 and is now attending school.

In his political views Mr. Lewis is a republican but has never sought nor cared for public office. He is a well known and highly respected citizen of the county where he has long made his home. In business his course has been pursued by the strictest fidelity to honest principles and he has many friends who entertain for him the highest regard.

JOSEPH BORTON. One of the well known farmers of Baker county is Joseph Borton, who was born in the state of New York, March 9, 1853. His father, Arthur Borton, was born in England and the mother, Mary (Martha) Borton, was a native of Ireland. They were the parents of seven children, six of whom are still living.

Joseph Borton started out to make his own way in the world at the unusually early age of ten years. He had had little education at that time. His first employment was with a pack train, it being his duty to ride the bell horse. At the end of a year he returned home and for a year attended school. At the age of thirteen he started overland with some freight teams, going going first to Boise, Idaho, where he remained a short time, then removed to Baker county, Oregon, where he worked on a ranch five years for one man. The following two years were spent in Rye valley, where he freighted for another year and then rented a ranch for three years. Later he took up a government claim of one hundred and sixty acres of land, upon which he still lives. At the time he settled on this farm there were only a few houses in Baker City. By industry and skill he has finely improved his farm and brought it under a high state of cultivation, so that it is now one of the best farm properties in the county.

Mr. Borton was married to Miss Clara Boldock, who was also a native of the Empire state but whose parents were natives of England. Mr. and Mrs. Boldock had a family of fourteen children, six of whom are still living. Mr. and Mrs. Borton have become the parents of thirteen children, twelve of whom are still living: Arthur, who was born October 6, 1874, and died January 24, 1877; Mary, born November 13, 1875; Ada, born November 24, 1877; Edward, born January 8, 1880; Bertha, born March 27, 1882; Pearl, born May 25, 1884; Fannie, born November 21, 1886; Charles, born March 16, 1888; James, born April 8, 1890; Frank, born April 19, 1893; Roy, born July 24, 1895; George, born October 8, 1897, and Nora, born February 12, 1900. All of the children reside in Baker county except a daughter, who makes her home in Portland.

Although not an old man, Joseph Borton, beginning life's work at an early age, has had a long business experience and his many years of toil have been rewarded, as he is now the possessor of one of the best farms in Baker county. He is numbered among the best citizens of the community and he and his family are well and favorably known in this county.

CHARLEY E. STILWELL, who is now living retired in Prosser, Washington, made his home at The Dalles in Oregon for about four decades, accumulating the competence which enables him to spend the evening of life in well earned ease. His birth occurred in New York on the 6th of April, 1839, his parents being Laben and Julia (Belle) Stilwell, who were born, reared and married in the Empire state. In 1843 they removed to Wisconsin, continuing to reside in that state for nine years. On the expiration of that period they crossed the plains to the northwest, first settling in Oregon City, where they spent the winter. The following summer they took up their abode in the Cathlamet valley on the Cathlamet river, where the mother passed away in 1866. Subsequently Mr. Stilwell removed to eastern Oregon and later to Walla Walla, Washington, where he remained until 1871. He then made his home with our subject until the time of his demise, passing away in the '90s when eighty-seven years of age.

On the 13th of March, 1871, Charley E. Stilwell was united in marriage to Miss Malissa Hawn, a daughter of Jacob and Harriet (Pierson) Hawn, more extended mention of whom is made on another page of this work in connection with the sketch of John M. Bunn, deceased. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Stilwell have been born eight children, as follows: Julia, born April 8, 1872, who gave her hand in marriage to Charles Severt of Yamhill, Oregon, and died at the age of thirty-two years; Charley A., whose natal year was 1875 and who is still under the parental roof; Minnie, who died in infancy; Jesse, born in 1878, who resides at The Dalles, Oregon; Mrs. Grace Wilder, whose birth occurred on the 10th of September, 1880, and who makes her home at Prosser, Washington; John, at home; Sherman, born August 19, 1884, who wedded Miss Hazel Lobaugh and resides at Prosser, Washington; and Howard, who was born on the 16th of July, 1887, and is still at home.

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Stilwell began their domestic life at The Dalles in Oregon and there continued to reside until 1904, when they took up their abode at Prosser, Washington, where they have since lived in honorable retirement. They have a fine home there and also own other city property. The religious faith of the family is indicated by their membership in the Christian church.

ROBERT R. PALMER is the junior partner in the firm of Palmer & Denham, widely known as the largest horse-raisers in the county. They have extensive ranch interests and keep on hand about two hundred and fifty head of Percheron horses. In this connection they are doing much to improve the grade of horses raised and used in Oregon, and their labors are therefore an element in the general progress as well as individual prosperity. Moreover, they are proprietors of a harness and saddlery business in Baker, and in other connections enjoy an enviable reputation.

Mr. Palmer was born in LaGrande, Oregon, October 9, 1868, and is a son of John and Myra E. (States) Palmer. Of their family of five living children Robert R. was second in birth. He resided in the place of his nativity for seven years, since which time he has lived mostly in Baker. He pursued his education in the public schools here and in the Portland Business College, from which he was graduated in 1888. He returned to LaGrande and there entered the harness business in connection with H. E. Denham under the firm style of Palmer & Denham, and in 1896 the store was removed to Baker where the business has since been conducted. They own a good business block here and carry a large line of harness and saddlery, in which connection the trade has assumed gratifying proportions. Moreover, they are the largest horse-raisers in Baker county, keeping on hand about two hundred and fifty Percherons on an extensive ranch.

Mr. Palmer has been twice married. In 1893 he wedded Miss Mande R. Starbird, a native of Maine, and a daughter of N. H. and Ada F. Starbird. She died in 1902, leaving a little daughter, Ruth M. In 1904 Mr. Palmer was united in marriage to Miss Ethel Russell, also a native of Maine and a cousin of his first wife. Her parents were Flavin R. and Rose Russell. Mrs. Palmer was a teacher of German in the high school at the time of her marriage. There has been one child of this marriage, Fern R., born June 23, 1909.

Mr. Palmer votes with the republican party and is prominent in its local councils. In 1900 he was elected county treasurer, and his capability and fidelity in office is indicated in the fact that he was three times elected, and served three terms, or six years. He belongs to the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks, the Modern Woodmen of America and the Woodmen of the World. He has a circle of friends that is constantly increasing as the circle of his acquaintance widens. He stands for all that is progressive in citizenship, for all that is public spirited in politics and for all that is enterprising and reliable in business affairs.

WILLIAM E. TAYLOR, who is station master for the Southern Pacific at Amity, Oregon, was born at Corsicana, Navarro county, Texas, on the 27th of September, 1872, and is a son of William B. and Clendora I. (Bishop) Taylor. His father was a native of Mississippi, his birth having occurred in the vicinity of Kossuth, whence he moved to Texas, residing there until 1889 when he came to Oregon, locating at Grants Pass. There he engaged in contracting and building and also sawmilling for about eighteen years. Subsequently he lived in various places, passing away in Portland four years later, and there he was laid to rest. When he was seventeen years of age William B. Taylor enlisted in the Civil war, spending three years at the front, during which time he participated in a great many closely contested and bitter engagements, receiving his discharge at the close of hostilities. His family originally came from Virginia, going from there to Kentucky and later to Mississippi. He removed to Texas in his early manhood and there he met and married Miss Bishop, who was a native of that state. She passed away in April, 1890, at Grants Pass. Of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Taylor there were born six children: William E., our subject; Anna, who married S. F. Cheshire, of Grants Pass, Oregon; John, who is deceased; Emma F. who died at the age of fourteen years; Isa, who died at the age of eighteen months; and Bishop B., who is operating at North Bend, Oregon.

Being a youth of seventeen years when he accompanied his family on their removal to Oregon, William E. Taylor acquired his early education in the common schools of his native state and later went to a school at Grants Pass, Oregon, of which Judge Benson was the principal. Remaining at home until he was twenty-one, he entered upon his first position in a sugar pine door and lumber company at Grants Pass, with which he was identified for three years. Withdrawing from their employ he entered that of another company engaged in the same business, remaining two years. About twelve years ago he engaged in railroad work at Grants Pass. From there he went to McCoy, Oregon, where he worked for the Southern Pacific for about eighteen months, when he came to Amity. He has entire charge of both the express and freight as well as the passenger business here, and is discharging his various duties with efficiency and in a manner highly satisfactory to the officials of the road.

In 1896 Mr. Taylor was united in marriage to Miss Minnie I. Dudley, a daughter of George W. Dudley, and unto them have been born four children: Edwin H., Cyril W., Harold B. and Lester D., all of whom are at home.

The family affiliate with the Baptist church in which the parents hold membership, and fraternally Mr. Taylor is an Odd Fellow and he belongs to the Encampment, while both he and Mrs. Taylor are members of the Rebekahs and the Circle, and he affiliates with the Woodmen of the World. Politically he is independent, giving his support to such men and measures he deems best qualified to subserve the interests of the majority. He does not take a prominent part in municipal affairs but served for a year as town recorder. Mr. Taylor is an energetic man, who conscientiously applies himself to the discharge of his duties to the very best of his ability.

LEWIS ASH, now in the seventy-sixth year of his age, has been prominently identified with the agricultural and mining development of Douglas county for almost half a century. He was born in Bedford county, Pennsylvania, January 7, 1836, the son of Henry and Nancy (Dickon) Ash, both of whom were natives of the Keystone state, where their entire lives were passed. They were the parents of seven children, only two of whom are now living.

Lewis Ash remained at home until he was twenty-one years of age and received his education in the common schools of his native state. He went to Minnesota and after three months removed to Washington county, Iowa, where he resided for three years. In 1859 he crossed the plains to California with a mule team and remained in that state until 1861, when upon the outbreak of the Civil war he enlisted in Company D, of the Fourth California Volunteer Infantry, and served for three years. He received his honorable discharge at Vancouver in 1864 and came immediately to Jackson county, Oregon, where he worked in a placer mine for thirteen years and became intimately acquainted with the details of this branch of the mining industry. In 1877 he moved to Douglas county and bought eight hundred and fifty acres of land in the Cow creek valley, where he has lived since that time. He has made extensive improvements upon his holdings, has built thereon a splendid residence and has added many new barns and outbuildings, built sheds for the protection of his grain and cattle and has equipped his farm with every new agricultural implement upon the market. He still engages in mining and has made a success of this branch of his occupation. He makes a specialty of stock-raising and keeps constantly on hand a large herd of graded cattle.

On September 3, 1875, Mr. Ash was united in marriage to Miss Idilda Harmon, a daughter of Powell and Mary Ann Harmon, both natives of Iowa. Mr. and Mrs. Ash became the parents of four children: A. H.; U. Y.; Clara F., now the wife of Joseph Mosthaf; and Martha, at home. The mother of these children died October 4, 1909. Politically Mr. Ash is a stanch republican and takes an active part in local party affairs. He served one term as county commissioner and for several years was a member of the school board. He is a prominent Mason and holds membership in Riddle Lodge of that order. He belongs to the Grand Army of the Republic and has been a commander in that body for the past three years. During the long period of his residence in the Cow creek valley he has built up for himself a reputation for integrity and ability in every relation of his life. He has made many friends during the forty-eight years of his residence in Douglas county and is now in the evening of a long, prosperous and worthy life.

TOLBERT T. GLENN, who passed away January 6, 1912, was for more than four decades actively identified with general agricultural pursuits in Union county, accumulating more than fifteen hundred acres of valuable land. His birth occurred in Wapello, Iowa, on the 22d of June, 1844, his parents being William S. and Maria (Yates) Glenn. The father, who was engaged in merchandising at Pleasantville, Iowa, for some years, crossed the plains to the northwest in 1862, locating in the Grande Ronde valley and taking up government land near Summerville, Union county. He divided his time between farming and freighting, hauling goods from Portland and Umatilla to the mines of Idaho. In 1871 he removed to the city of Malheur, where he was engaged in the mercantile business, and later organized the town of Vale. His demise, which occurred at Vale, on the 9th of May, 1900 was the occasion of deep and widespread regret, for he had won many friends during the long period of his residence in this state. It was while still a resident of Iowa that he lost his wife, who passed away in 1849.

Tolbert T. Glenn obtained his education in the schools of his native state and after coming to the Grande Ronde valley worked with his father in the freighting business until 1868. In that year he embarked in business as an agriculturist on his own account, taking up land a mile and a half from Summerville and turning his attention to the pursuits of farming and stock-raising, in which he was busily engaged throughout the remainder of his life. That he prospered in his undertakings is indicated by the fact that he accumulated some fifteen hundred acres of land, over one thousand acres of the same being under cultivation. In connection with the production of cereals he raised fine horses and cattle, and the secret of his prosperity doubtless lay in the fact that he was very industrious and painstaking as well as a man of excellent business ability. His fertile farm was most attractively located and royally responded to the care and labor which he bestowed upon it.

On the 20th of September, 1868, in the Grande Ronde valley, Mr. Glenn was united in marriage to Miss Sarah Meyers, a daughter of Henry and Louisa Meyers, who were natives of North Carolina and Maryland respectively. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Glenn were born the following children: C. Edwin; William; Arthur; Guy J., a sketch of whom appears below; Willard B., who is deceased; Hattie; Daisy; Mina; and Myra.

Mr. Glenn was a democrat in his political views and held the offices of supervisor and school director. He was faithful to those to whom he gave his friendship, was loyal in his citizenship and true to every trust, but his best traits of character were reserved for his own home and fireside and there it is that his loss will be most deeply felt.

GUY J. GLENN, the sixth child of Tolbert Thomas and Sarah (Meyers) Glenn, was born on the 20th of March, 1881, in Summerville, Union county, Oregon, where he acquired his early education. Later he pursued a course of study in the Holmes Business College of Portland. He remained under the parental roof until 1904, when he was married and established a home of his own. His initial experience as an agriculturist was gained on a part of the home farm of fifteen hundred and forty acres, but subsequently he secured a tract of eighty acres near Imbler and has since devoted his attention to its further cultivation and improvement. He raises principally wheat and oats and also handles horses and cattle. Mill Creek runs through his town property and also near his farm, which has a very beautiful location.

In 1904 Mr. Glenn was united in marriage to Miss Lula Childers, her parents being G. P. and Anna Childers, residents of the Alicel district in Union county. Mr. and Mrs. Guy J. Glenn have two children, Howard C. and Elmer Ford. The family resides in an attractive, modern home at Summerville. Mr. Glenn belongs to the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks and is also a valued member of the La Grande Commercial Club. Both he and his wife are well known and highly esteemed throughout the community in which they reside, having ever displayed those sterling traits of character which in every land and clime command confidence and regard.

TOM W. PERRY, who has maintained his residence in the Sunset state for almost six decades, has been long and successfully identified with agricultural and milling interests and still owns and operates a planing mill at Yamhill. His birth occurred in Wooster, Wayne county, Ohio, on the 26th of November, 1838, his parents being Robert and Martha (Rossiter) Perry, who were born, reared and married in England. Their wedding trip was the ocean voyage to the United States and for one year they made

TALBERT T. GLENN

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASTOR LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS

their home in New York. On the expiration of that period they removed to Ohio, residing at Wooster until 1852, which year witnessed their arrival in Oregon. Robert Perry took up a donation claim of three hundred and twenty acres four miles northwest of Yamhill and continued to reside thereon throughout the remainder of his life. He handled stock in connection with his farming interests and at the time of his demise owned six hundred and twenty-five acres of well improved land, eighty acres thereof being under a high state of cultivation. He was fifty-nine years of age when called to his final rest, while his wife lived to be seventy years old. They had seven children, the first four of whom died in infancy. The others were as follows: Tom W., of this review; Johnson O. H., who passed away at the age of twenty-six years, leaving a widow and one daughter; and Mary Ellen, the widow of F. D. Stott. The last named served as station agent for the Southern Pacific Railroad at Yamhill for twenty-seven years and now receives a pension.

Tom W. Perry, who acquired his education in the common schools, was a youth of fourteen when he come to Oregon with his parents. He remained under the parental roof until his father's death, after which he was married and had charge of the old homestead until his mother's demise. After the estate had been divided he occupied his share of the property until 1898 and then sold out. In connection with his agricultural interests he had operated a flour mill, which was destroyed by fire in 1884, as were also three large warehouses which he owned and which at the time of the conflagration held eight thousand bushels of grain. In 1899 he became manager, engineer and head planer in a sawmill, acting in those capacities for six years. At the end of that time he returned to Yamhill and built the planing mill which has since remained in his possession. His property holdings include a fine residence, three-fifths of a block in the business section of Yamhill and a tract of twenty acres at the foot of the coast range.

In 1864 Mr. Perry was united in marriage to Miss O. I. Torrance, who was born near Springfield, Massachusetts, her parents being Jedathan and Emma (Bartlett) Torrance, natives of the old Bay state. After their marriage they removed to Illinois and a short time later came to Oregon in 1855, spending the remainder of their lives in this state. Mr. Torrance lived to attain the age of seventy-eight and his wife was eighty-six years old when called to her final rest. The maternal grandmother of Mrs. Perry made the journey across the plains to Oregon when more than ninety years of age, being the oldest woman who undertook that arduous trip. Mrs. Perry was one of a family of six children who grew to maturity, her brothers and sisters being as follows: Mrs. Emma Cox, who resides near Forest Grove; Henry J., living in Dayton, Washington; Cora, the deceased wife of D. C. Richardson, of Portland, Oregon; Charles F., who makes his home near Forest Grove, Oregon; and Eunice, who is the widow of Thomas Stevenson and lives at Portland, Oregon.

Unto Mr. and Mrs. Perry were born eleven children, namely: Martha, the deceased wife of Joseph Arnold of Illinois; Elsie, who is the wife of Philip Withycomb, a tile manufacturer of Yamhill; Bessie, the wife of Ivan McDonald, of McMinnville, Oregon; Robert A., who is a resident of Yamhill; Zella, who died when ten years of age; Richard E., who died while serving in the war in the Philippines; Hope, who acts as deputy postmaster of Yamhill, Oregon; Ross B., also living at Yamhill; Elizabeth, the wife of Jack Eccleston, of California; Thomas P., an electrical engineer residing at Manhattan, Nevada; and Mina, the wife of Frank Johnson, of Portland, Oregon.

Mr. Perry gives his political allegiance to the democracy and his fellow townsmen, recognizing his worth and ability, have called him to various positions of public trust. He held the office of county commissioner for four years and at the present time is serving as an alderman of Yamhill and also acting as street commissioner. His life has been one of well directed effort and enterprise, resulting in the attainment of a creditable and gratifying measure of success. In all his relations he has enjoyed the respect and confidence of his fellowmen because he is honest, upright, persistent and determined.

JAMES GARFIELD KELLY, a well known and prosperous resident of Montavilla, devotes his attention to general agricultural pursuits in the management of the homestead farm. His birth occurred in Multnomah county, Oregon, on the 2d of October, 1882, his parents being Plympton and Elizabeth Aurora (Clark) Kelly. The father was a native of Pulaski county, Kentucky, while the mother was born in Michigan. Their marriage was celebrated in Oswego, Oregon, on the 4th of July, 1864. Plympton Kelly came to this state with his parents in 1848 and subsequently took up a land claim of three hundred and twenty acres which now adjoins the city limits of Portland. His wife came to Oregon in 1860 in company with her uncle, the Rev. C. S. Kingsley. Plympton Kelly remained on the old homestead until he passed away, his demise occurring on the 15th of September, 1906. His widow has since lived retired at Montavilla. During Mr. Kelly's business activities he was for two years captain on the steamer Independence but at the same time looked after his farming interests. At the time of his death his holdings included eighty acres of finely improved land. His sketch appears on another page of this work. Unto him and his wife were born six children as follows: Eudoxia A., who is the wife of Alfred Niblin and resides on the homestead farm; Calmet A., who passed away in February, 1892, at the age of twenty-four years; Clinton C., who died in September, 1887, when eighteen years of age; Mary P., who passed away on the 7th of June, 1907, at the age of thirty-five years, leaving a husband, T. R. Howitt, of Gresham, and one daughter, Harriet T., whose demise occurred in 1893; and James G., of this review.

The last named was reared and educated in Oregon. His common-school education was finished at Lents at the age of thirteen years and he then attended the Portland Business College for two years, after which he remained on his father's farm until the age of twenty-one. At that time he matriculated at the Oregon Agricultural College and attended for four years, being graduated from that institution on the 12th of June, 1907. During his attendance there, in the dairy department, he had charge of advanced registry testing under the American Jersey Cattle Club. His father's death occurring in 1906, Mr. Kelly took charge of the home farm immediately after his graduation from school in June, 1907. He continued to operate the place until September, 1911, when he removed to Montavilla. At one time he owned one hundred and four acres but has sold all excepting five acres, on which he expects to build his permanent home. His wife owns a fine home at Montavilla, Oregon, with a lot sixty by one hundred feet.

On the 27th of October, 1910, Mr. Kelly was united in marriage to Miss Ada Rider, who was born in Newton county, Indiana, on the 18th of August, 1880, her parents being John P. and Henrietta (De Armond) Rider. The father's birth occurred in Indiana, while the mother is a native of Hamilton county, Ohio. Their marriage was celebrated in Indiana, where John P. Rider passed away. His widow removed to Oregon in 1892 and has since resided in Multnomah county. In September, 1904, she was again married, becoming the wife of James Clark Miller, of Montavilla. By her first husband she had two children, namely: Ada, who gave her hand in marriage to James G. Kelly; and Blanche, who died in infancy. To Mr. and Mrs. Kelly was born a daughter, Euda Aletha, whose natal day was October 2, 1911. Mrs. Kelly enjoyed the advantages of a college education, followed the profession of teaching for eight years and has also taught music.

Mr. Kelly is a republican of liberal tendencies. He has never sought office, having no ambition in that direction. Both he and his wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal church and they also belong to Evening Star Grange, No. 27. With the fine scientific agricultural education which he possesses, together with many good qualities which have made him well known and popular among a large circle of friends, he is a valuable and respected citizen of Multnomah county.

JOHN BRITTON PARKER. In the year 1871, or more than four decades ago, John Britton Parker came to Portland, where he was identified with business interests for a considerable period, but retired in 1902. He was born in Hocking county, Ohio, March 30, 1840, his parents being Joseph and Julia (Holcomb) Parker. The father was a native of Virginia and in his boyhood days removed to Ohio with his parents. The mother was a native of New Jersey and a daughter of a Baptist minister. He removed westward with his family, also settling in the Buckeye state. The Parker family comes of English ancestry, the great-grandparents having been born in England, while the grandfather of our subject was a native of Virginia. He had a family of eight children, including Joseph Parker, the father of our subject. Others of the household were Washington, Jonathan and Samuel, all now deceased.

Both Joseph Parker and Julia Holcomb were reared in Ohio and in that state they were married in 1836. They became parents of six children. Caroline, the eldest, is the wife of Robert J. Yeoman, of Bellingham, Washington, and they have nine children, Joseph, Earl, Roth, Mary, Effie, Mattie, Nellie, Dora and Lute. John Britton is the next of the family. Mary is the deceased wife of John Wood, and their only child has also passed away. Josephus died leaving one child, Charles B., who is living at Washington Court House, Fayette county, Ohio. Charles Foster has also passed away, and Amanda Ellen, the youngest, died at the age of ten years.

The youthful days of John B. Parker were spent in his Ohio home, where he remained until twenty-three years of age, although he began earning his own living when eighteen years of age. Five years afterward he came to the west, settling first at Denver, Colorado, where he worked at the carpenter's trade for a month. He then proceeded on his way to Montana during the gold discoveries there and remained in that state for five and a half years. In 1868 he removed to California, and in 1871 came to Portland, becoming a prominent resident of this city. He first worked at the carpenter's trade, entering the employ of John Steffen, a boat builder. In the early days of the Oregon Locks & Navigation Company he worked at the old central dock and afterward worked for the Oregon Steam Navigation Company and afterward for the Oregon Railway & Navigation Company. For a time he was employed on steamboats and at different periods he worked as a carpenter, joiner and builder. In his later years he did work principally for John H. Johnston, a ship contractor, and in 1902, at the age of sixty-two years, he retired from active business. He retained his residence in Portland from 1871 until 1909, when he established his home in Montavilla. He owns both business and residence property and also deals in bonds and mortgages. In all business affairs his judgment is sound and his discrimination keen, and he carries forward to successful completion whatever he undertakes.

In 1871 Mr. Parker was united in marriage to Miss Mary J. Edwards. Some years later, after losing his first wife, he was married, on the 10th of September, 1892, to Miss Rebecca Long, who was born June 2, 1847, and was a daughter of John and Jane (Love) Long. In his family were ten children, of whom the eldest, Thomas and James were twins. The first named has passed away, while James is living in Ohio and has a large family. The other members of the family are: Walter, of New York; Alexander, who was lost when a passenger on board ship, which sailed for San Francisco; John, of Portland; Joseph, who is living in Salem, Ohio; Ann Jane, also a resident of Portland; Susan, who died unmarried; Susan 2d, who died in infancy; and Mrs. Parker.

Mr. Parker gives his political allegiance to the republican party but is not an office seeker. His religious faith is that of the Presbyterian church and his entire life has been spent in harmony therewith. He was always an industrious, energetic man up to the time of his retirement and his labors and energies constitute the salient forces in the success that now enables him to enjoy well earned rest without further recourse to labor.

R. J. HUTCHCROFT, who has remained a resident of Oregon since his parents established their home in the northwest about four decades ago, now conducts the leading mercantile establishment of Yamhill as a member of the firm of Johnston & Hutchcroft. His birth occurred in Wisconsin on the 7th of July, 1870, his parents being John and Margaret (Belle) Hutcheroft, who were natives of England and Scotland respectively. They were married in Canada and a year later crossed the border into the United States, settling in Wisconsin, where all of their nine children were born. In 1874 they came to Oregon, locating three miles west of Yamhill, where the mother still resides at the age of seventy-four years. John Hutchcroft here devoted his attention to the pursuits of farming and stock-raising and subsequently also became interested in the raising of hops, to which fifty acres of the homestead farm are planted at the present time. At the time of his demise, which occurred in 1897, he owned three hundred and seventy-eight acres of well improved land, two hundred and fifty acres thereof being under a high state of cultivation. At one time he likewise owned one of the finest tracts of timber land on the mountain twelve miles west of Yamhill, the place comprising one hundred and twenty acres and representing many million feet of lumber. Unto him and his wife were born nine children, the record of whom is as follows. Bella passed away when but sixteen months old. Bessie is the widow of John A. Powell and resides at Yamhill, Oregon. Mark is a walnut grower who makes his home at Bassett, near Los Angeles, California. In 1896 he removed from Oregon to California and for two years was employed in Bassett's lumberyard. Subsequently he worked on Bassett's walnut farm for eleven years and while in the service of that gentleman purchased thirty one acres of raw land at one hundred and fifty dollars an acre, improved the tract and planted it to walnut trees, which are now in bearing. At present he has an offer of twenty-five thousand dollars for his ranch. His wife bore the maiden name of Myrtilla May Roberts and is a native of Kansas. They have two children: Grace, the wife of Clyde Nash, of California; and Gladys, who is still at home. Joseph W. Hutcheroft is a resident of Yamhill. Matilda is the wife of William Petch, of McMinnville. Lavenia gave her hand in marriage to Fred Cane, of Yamhill, Oregon. Estella is the wife of George Throssel, a hardware merchant of Santa Monica, California, by whom she has four children: William, Joseph, Mark and Elsie. R. J. Hutcheroft, of this review, is the next in order of birth. George T. passed away in 1901 at the age of forty years.

R. J. Hutcheroft remained under the parental roof until twenty-two years of age, when he was married and started out in the business world on his own account. For seventeen years he was engaged in farming and hop-raising on a portion of the homestead property and during the last four years of that time conducted a general mercantile store in connection with his agricultural interests. He has been continuously identified with mercantile pursuits since 1905, becoming at that time a partner of George W. Epley, who in 1908 sold out to B. A. Johnston. The firm has since been known as Johnston & Hutcheroft and owns and conducts the leading general mercantile store in Yamhill. Mr. Hutcheroft owns a two-sevenths interest in the homestead of three hundred and seventy-eight acres, has a timber tract of one hundred and thirty acres three miles west of Yamhill and owns a handsome residence in that town. A man of excellent business ability, sound judgment and keen discrimination, his undertakings have been attended with a gratifying measure of prosperity.

Mr. Hutcheroft has been married twice. In 1892 he wedded Miss Sarah Fairchild, who was born in Yamhill county, Oregon, on the 18th of March, 1870, her parents being James and Katherine Fairchild, who passed away in this state. They had six children, all of whom still survive with the exception of Mrs. Hutcheroft, who died on the 1st of March, 1899, leaving three children, namely: Ethel M., born July 29, 1893, who is teaching in Yamhill county and is also studying music; Chester C., born May 27, 1896, who is a high-school student; and Hubert, born February 19, 1897, who is likewise attending school. In 1901 Mr. Hutcheroft was again married, his second union being with Miss Cecil Peckham, whose birth occurred at McMinnville, Oregon, in 1883. Her parents, J. A. and Julia Peckham, were born in Michigan and some years after their marriage removed to Nebraska. About 1876 they came to Oregon and have since remained residents of this state, now making their home at McMinnville. J. A. Peckham served as a member of the Union army throughout the entire period of the Civil war. Mrs. Cecil Hutcheroft has one brother, Charles, who is her senior. By her marriage to our subject she has a son, Kenneth S., whose natal day was June 20, 1906. She followed the profession of school teaching for two years and also has an excellent musical education.

In politics Mr. Hutcheroft is a stanch republican but his aspirations have not been in the line of office holding. Fraternally he is identified with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Woodmen of the World at Yamhill. His religious faith is that of the Methodist Episcopal church, to which his wife also belongs. He has made for himself a creditable name in business circles and at all times has been loyal to his convictions as regards political, fraternal and moral interests.

JOSEPH C. WILLIAMS, who now resides on his large and valuable farm six and a half miles northwest of Yamhill, is a native of Bristol, England, born January 1, 1847. His paternal grandfather served for twenty-four years in the British navy and his parents preferred to live in England even though several of their children sought homes in America. The father and mother, Samuel and Ann (Cole) Williams, were born in Bristol in 1821 and 1822 respectively and after their marriage in 1845 lived there for the succeeding eleven years. The following four years were spent in Staffordshire and at the end of that period they came to New York city, where they remained until 1875, when they returned to England, making their home there during their remaining years. To them seven children were born: Joseph C., of Yamhill county; Thomas, deceased; George, residing in New York City; Mrs. Eliza Harper, who has remained in England; Mrs. Sarah Fisher, a resident of New Jersey; John, of Boston, Massachusetts; and Elizabeth, who resides in England.

At thirteen years of age Joseph Williams learned construction of floral wire work, and thus began an independent career. For ten years he continued working at this trade, and then for a time led a sort of nomadic life, wandering over the world. Finally he landed in England to claim some money he had inherited from a relative and after spending this there, he returned to America about 1871 and for a year resided in New York city, conducting a small business of his own. He later removed his business to California, where he remained four months before coming to Oregon, finally settling in Gaston in 1872. From there he removed to Yamhill county, where he has ever since made his home, now devoting his time to agricultural pursuits. Although he did not take up farming until after he had been connected with several other lines of industry, he has made remarkable progress and his success has been due entirely to hard labor.

On the 12th of September, 1877, occurred the marriage of Mr. Williams and Miss Margaret Marilda Parsons, who was born in Dilley, Oregon, February 18, 1860, a daughter of Luther and Hester (Kingery) Parsons. In was in 1850 that her father came to Washington county, Oregon, and for some time was associated with his father in the milling business here, the latter having the distinction of starting the first flour mill in the county. In 1858 Luther Parsons married Hester Kingery, and to them were born seven children, namely: Mrs. Williams; William F., a resident of Yamhill; Daniel, of Forest Grove, Oregon; Mrs. Flora Roberts, also of Yamhill; Mrs. Emma Perkins, of Monmouth, Oregon; Mrs. Martha Spence, of Corvallis, Oregon; and Mrs. Daisy Carr, of California. The father of these children passed away in Yamhill county in 1882 and the mother died one year later. To Mr. and Mrs. Williams have been born eleven children, all of whom are residents of Yamhill county. They are as follows: Thomas T., Joseph L., Charles D., Hester Ann, Addison H., John E., George C., Harry F., Lawrence F., Elizabeth J. and Margaret K.

In politics Mr. Williams is a republican, believing that the principles of that party are best suited to the needs of the country in its growth and progress, but he has never held office, his farm demanding his whole attention. The Williams property comprises five hundred and sixty acres, of which two hundred acres are cleared. Mr. Williams is one of the largest hop raisers in Yamhill county, where hops are commonly cultivated. In addition to this distinction he is also well known as a most successful grain and hay grower. Among his neighboring farmers he is recognized as an agriculturist of superior worth and ability and, as his is an occupation which depends upon individual effort, he may feel proud of the achievement which is his.

M. L. AKERS. The industrial interests of Pendleton find a worthy representative in M. L. Akers of the Pendleton Iron Works. He has, during the last two years, constituted an important element in the growth and development of the project, and his laudable ambition and unfaltering enterprise augur well for future success. He was born in Decatur county, Iowa, March 4, 1870, a son of Harvey and Metta (Shelton) Akers, the former a native of Missouri and the latter of Iowa. They came to Oregon in 1877, settling in Morrow county, where the father engaged in farming for sixteen years, or until the time of his death which occurred in 1893. He had for about eleven years survived his wife who died in 1882.

M. L. Akers was reared at home, acquiring his education in the public schools of Iowa and of Oregon. When he was in his twenty-fourth year he sought and found employment in a drug store in Heppner, and for seven years thereafter was identified with the drug trade in that place and Pendleton. Subsequently, on account of ill health, he turned his attention to farming, hoping to be benefited by the outdoor life and exercise. He was connected with general agricultural pursuits until 1909 when he became an employe of the Pendleton Iron Works, there learning the machinist's trade. In May, 1901, he bought a half interest in the business, and three years later Mr. Akers became manager of the plant, in which capacity he has since served. Their work is that of repairing as well as manufacturing farm machinery, both a foundry and machine shop being conducted. This is one of the leading industrial plants of the

MR. AND MRS. JOSEPH C. WILLIAMS

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY

ASTOR, LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS.

city, constituting an important factor in the trade circles here.

In 1905 Mr. Akers was married to Miss Bethena Swaggert, of Athena, Umatilla county, and they are the parents of one daughter, Maurine.

Mr. Akers' political tendencies are along the line of socialistic thought. He is one of the leading business men of Pendleton, active, enterprising, determined, and whatever success he has achieved in life is attributable to his own labors.

CARL F. GENTNER. Many veterans of the war of the Rebellion as well as those taking part in other military operations of the United States have found their way to Oregon and prospered, among such being Carl F. Gentner, who after an active life is now living retired near Murphy. He was born in Germany, March 15, 1843, a son of Ludwig and Catherine (Seubert) Gentner, whose family consisted of six children. Mr. Gentner came to the United States December 1, 1864, and began working at the carpenter's and cabinet-maker's trade but shortly afterward enlisted for service under the flag of his adoption, his enlistment occurring February 2, 1865, in the Third Pennsylvania Cavalry. He remained in active service until the close of the war, when he was transferred to the regular army, as a member of the Fourteenth United States Infantry. He saw a great deal of service in connection with the Indian wars and while in the army spent one year carrying mail. During his service he participated in several important battles and on one occasion was severely wounded, being shot in the head. After his term of enlistment Mr. Gentner purchased eighty acres of land where he is now living and which he has finely improved.

Mr. Gentner was married shortly after leaving the army to Miss Amelia Dafferner, a native of Germany. After his marriage he settled at Virginia City, Nevada, where he remained for one year, and then removed to Oregon where he purchased land and where his home has since been. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Gentner were born five children, four of whom are still living, Carl T., Louis L., Emil and Emma. Otto, the youngest, passed away April 17, 1897. In his political views Mr. Gentner is a republican. He is an active and honored member of the Grand Army post and in his community has by his many excellent traits of character formed the acquaintance of a very large number of people and is greatly respected and esteemed.

GEORGE F. BARRINGER is a well known real-estate man of Portland, having opened the first office in that work in the Montavilla addition, in which place he has had charge of most of the property. He was born in Wisconsin, February 28, 1857, the son of Truman and Nancy (Jeffers) Barringer, both of whom were natives of New York. The parents were married in that state but afterwards removed to Wisconsin, being among the pioneers there. They took up a homestead near Reedsburg and at the time of their settlement had to go sixty miles for provisions. Mr. Barringer became very prosperous and he was a well known farmer throughout this vicinity. His wife passed away in 1876 and he now lives in South Dakota with his daughter, having sold his farm in 1907. In his family were twelve children, of whom seven are now deceased. They were Milton, Almond, Celestia, Ida, Charles and two who died in infancy. Those living are: Josephine, who is the wife of Myron Armstrong, of South Dakota; Cynthia, who is the wife of H. L. Nye, of Minneapolis, Minnesota; George F., the subject of this review; Zelbur, of St. Paul, Minnesota; and Melvin, of Muskegon, Michigan.

George F. Barringer received his early education in the country schools of his district and remained at home, working on his father's farm until he was twenty-three years of age. He then started out in life for himself and, going to South Dakota, he homesteaded a tract of one hundred and sixty acres, on which he resided for five years. Then, selling the same, he purchased another farm, which he operated for two years. Subsequently he went to Minnesota, where for five years he was engaged in the real estate business. Afterward he came to Oregon, settling in Portland, where he has ever since conducted a real-estate business. He opened his first office of that kind in the Montavilla addition to this city and has sold and handled, either directly or indirectly, nearly all the property at that place. He is still operating his real-estate office there. He has been very successful in the financial world and he owns a beautiful residence at Montavilla and also two and one-half acres in a summer home in the mountainous regions of Clackamas county.

On the 8th of January, 1885, Mr. Barringer was united in marriage with Miss Clara House, who was born in Iowa, September 17, 1857, the daughter of Jeremiah and Nancy (Cobb) House. The father was a native of New York and the mother of Canada. They were married in Wisconsin and immediately after removed to Fayette county, Iowa, where the father had previously owned land. They have since resided in that state but are now living retired at West Union. In their family were nine children, of whom Mrs. Barringer was the fourth in order of birth. The others were: Leonard, deceased; Emma, who is the wife of E. Webb, of West Union, Iowa; a child who died in infancy; George and Walter, of California; Lafayette, deceased; Jessie, who is the wife of John Grabner, of Missouri; and Nettie, who died in infancy. Mrs. Barringer received a common-school and university education and previous to her marriage was engaged in teaching school for ten years in Iowa and two years in Dakota. Mr. and Mrs. Barringer have become the parents of four children. G. Frank, born December 26, 1885, has a business college education and is now assistant manager of the E. C. Atkins Machine Manufacturing Company. He married Miss Edna Gore, a native of Oregon, and to this union has been born one son, George F. Cecil A. was born April 1, 1887, has a business college education and is now a painter by trade. He married Miss Gladys Ticer, who was born in Texas. Nancy Beulah was born in 1895 and is now a student in the high school and is also studying music. Ned M., the youngest of the family, was born November 22, 1899, and is now in school.

In politics Mr. Barringer is a republican but he has never cared to hold public office, preferring to give all his time to his business interests. Fraternally he is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and of the Foresters of America, belonging to the Portland lodges. Also he is identified with the Woodmen of the World, having filled all the chairs in the local lodge. He and his family attend the Baptist church. He is highly honored and well known in Portland, especially in the addition of Montavilla, with the development of which he has been so prominently connected.

R. G. WHEELER, a well known and prominent attorney of Vale, was born in Erie county, Pennsylvania, on the 1st of June, 1847, a son of Christopher and Emily (Weaver) Wheeler. The father was for many years actively engaged in agricultural pursuits, but during the later years of his life he lived in retirement in Bedford county, Iowa, his death there occurring when he was seventy-five years of age.

The fourth in a family of seven children, R. G. Wheeler was reared under the parental roof and in his native state received an excellent education. He attended the common school in the acquirement of his preliminary training and later was a pupil in an academy. Although he was but fourteen years of age at the time of the Civil war the spirit of patriotism was strong within him and he joined the Pennsylvania Home Guards, who, in anticipation of a battle, were foraging at night, and he was among the ten thousand reserves who at a distance of three miles were within plain view of the battle of Gettysburg. He remained with the guards for several months and then returned home, again pursuing his education which had been interrupted. He entered Hiram College, at Hiram, Ohio, during the administration of President James A. Garfield, but, his health failing, he was compelled to leave school. From an early day he had taken a deep interest in the study of law and had determined to make that profession his life work, and under the direction of Charles Cross, a graduate of Yale and a man of considerable wealth who took a deep interest in his studies, he prepared himself for his chosen calling. In 1868 he was admitted to the bar in Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, by the superior court of Pennsylvania, and when twenty-one years of age he left that state, removing to Illinois, where for three years he practiced his profession in Aurora, Kane county. He next took up his residence in Bedford, Iowa, where he followed his profession for eleven years, after which he spent a year in California. He then went to Nevada, where he remained for nine years practicing law in Paradise Valley, and on the 29th of March, 1891, came to Vale, Malheur county, Oregon, where he has since maintained a law office. Along with those qualities indispensable to the lawyer—a keen, rapid, logical mind plus the business sense and a ready capacity for hard work—Mr. Wheeler also possesses an excellent presence, an earnest manner, marked strength of character, a thorough grasp of the law and the ability accurately to apply its principles which, combined, have made him very effective as an advocate and have won for him the reputation of being a lawyer of merit.

In July, 1878, Mr. Wheeler was united in marriage to Miss Annie M. Neal, a native of Iowa and a daughter of John Neal. Mrs. Wheeler is a lady of fine intellect, possessing high literary tastes, and has taken a deep interest in educational matters, actively serving as a member of the school board for a number of years. She and her husband both hold membership in the Christian church, in the work of which they are helpfully interested, and Mr. Wheeler's fraternal connections are with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, in which lodge he has filled all of the chairs. Colonel Wheeler, as he is familiarly known in the community, is one of the strong, influential citizens of his district and for seven years served as mayor of Vale, his election to that office coming in recognition of his sterling worth and excellent ability. He is, however, without ambition for political preferment, choosing rather to devote his time to the pursuits of private life. During the twenty-one years in which he has been a resident of Vale he has through his excellent professional ability and his many attractive personal qualities become firmly established in the regard and esteem of his fellowmen who recognize in him a citizen of high order.

DANIEL B. TROUTMAN. One of the pioneer business men of Portland who was also a pioneer farmer in Oregon is Daniel B. Troutman, whose business is conducted at Seventy-fourth and East Glison streeets. His birth occurred in Kentucky in 1861, his parents being Benjamin F. and Mary (Bringle) Troutman, who were likewise natives of the Blue Grass state. The maternal grandfather of our subject settled in Oregon in 1849, being among the pioneers of the state. Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin F. Troutman removed from Kentucky to Oregon in 1872, first settling in Linn county, where they purchased one hundred and sixty acres of land, which still belongs to the heirs. Mr. Troutman there continued to reside until the time of his demise, which occurred when he had attained the age of seventy-eight years, while his wife was sixty-eight years old when called to her final rest. At the time of his death he owned two hundred and sixty acres of finely improved land, all under a high state of cultivation, located near Brownsville, Oregon. Unto him and his wife were born nine children, as follows: Nora, who still resides on the home place; Sophia, the wife of David Isom, of Linn county, Oregon; Daniel B., of this review; John, who is a resident of Portland; Lucy, who gave her hand in marriage to T. C. Cooper, of Linn county, this state; Minerva, who is the wife of Samuel Cooper, of Linn county, Oregon; Peter, who resides on the old homestead in that county; Charles, who makes his home in Linn county; and Florence, the wife of W. E. Burton, of Medford, Oregon.

Daniel B. Troutman received a common-school education in the schools of Kentucky and Oregon. He started out for himself in business at the age of twenty-four years, following farming for twelve years in Linn county, Oregon. Subsequently he embarked in the mercantile business, conducting his enterprise at Tallman, Linn county, for eight years. He then disposed of his interests there and removed to Portland, where he purchased property and again embarked in the general merchandise and feed business, which he has conducted continuously since from his present stand at Seventy-fourth and East Glison streets. In addition to his business property in Portland he owns a fine residence and other properties in this city. He also owns a two-ninths interest in the old homestead farm and two hundred and sixty acres and is likewise the possessor of a thirty-acre fruit and grain farm near Tallman.

In 1884 Mr. Troutman was married to Miss Lillie Farrow, a native of Oregon and a daughter of Steven and Maria J. Farrow, both of whom were born in Kentucky. The parents lived in Illinois until 1848, when they crossed the plains with an ox team, the passage requiring six months. They first settled in Clackamas county, where Mr. Farrow took up government land and lived for twenty years, after which he exchanged his property for a farm of two hundred acres in Linn county, there residing until he passed away in 1885. His widow survived him for a number of years, being called to her final rest in August, 1911. They were the parents of twelve children, namely: Albert, who is a resident of Lake county, Oregon; Laura, who makes her home in California; Charles, of Lethbridge, Canada; Emily, who is deceased; William, living in Lake county, Oregon; Minnie, who is the widow of M. S. Hubble and resides in Eugene, Oregon; Mrs. Lillie Troutman; Ralph of Hazeldell, Lane county, Oregon; John, who is a resident of Sacramento, California; Alice and Virginia, both of whom have passed away; and one who died at birth.

Unto Mr. and Mrs. Troutman were born four children, as follows: Mabel, who died at birth; Winifred, whose natal day was May 29, 1888, and who is still under the parental roof; Aileen M., whose birth occurred on the 4th of December, 1890; and Eugene F., who was born July 30, 1901. The mother of these children followed the profession of school teaching prior to her marriage.

Mr. Troutman is democratic in his political views and served for one term as postmaster at Tallman. He is among the well known business men and property owners of Portland, while his long residence in Oregon entitles him to distinction as a pioneer of this great state. Conducting a useful and lucrative business, he is a valuable man in commercial circles here and his geniality and good-fellowship have won for him a host of friends in this thriving city. His acquaintance outside of Portland is also extensive, he still having a large circle of friends in Tallman and community among those with whom he is on terms of closest intimacy.

EDWARD P. WALLACE, a retired agriculturist residing at Amity, has lived in the same house for the past twenty-six years. His career has been an eventful and exciting one, for he has crossed the plains to and from the northwest on thirteen different occasions. His birth occurred in Lagrange county, Indiana, on the 27th of September, 1829, his parents being Timothy R. and Roxcelana (Thurston) Wallace. The father, a native of Connecticut and a gentleman of Scotch extraction, resided on the frontier until his removal to Michigan, in which state his demise occurred in 1848. Throughout his active business career he followed general agricultural pursuits. His wife, who was born in Painesville, Ohio, and whom he married in Michigan, was called to her final rest in March, 1849. Their children were six in number, as follows: Edward P., of this review; Lewis K., who passed away at McMinnville, Oregon, in 1887; Collin A., living at Salem, Oregon; William Henry Harrison, who is deceased; David, of McMinnville, Oregon; and Roxcelana, the wife of A. B. Woodard, a practicing dentist of Olympia, Washington.

Edward P. Wallace obtained his education in the district schools of Branch county, Michigan, but his opportunities in this direction were meager. He remained at home until after the death of his parents and in 1852 began the overland journey across the plains by team and wagon in company with his brother, Lewis K. While en route David Donahue shot and killed William Pierce, another member of the party. The others of the party tried, convicted and shot the murderer and buried him in the same grave with his victim. Edward P. Wallace resided near Portland from October, 1852, until February of the following year and then took up a donation claim near Olympia, Washington, living thereon for four years. He also owned and operated a sawmill in the vicinity. At Olympia he enlisted for service in the Indian war of 1855-6 and was wounded during an engagement in Pierce county, thirty or forty miles from Seattle. Eleven of the soldiers were surrounded by Indians and our subject, who acted as corporal, was one of the two who survived the conflict. Leaving the state of Washington, he took the water route and by way of the Isthmus of Panama came to New York, whence he made his way back to Michigan. After his marriage, which was celebrated in that state, he journeyed by team to Iowa, where he was joined by a brother and sister. He remained in the Hawkeye state from March to November of 1860 and then again returned to Michigan in company with his wife and brother and sister, the men traveling by team and the women by train. In 1861 Mr. Wallace once more began the journey across the plains to Oregon, arriving in Yamhill county the following fall and taking up his abode within two miles of McMinnville. There he devoted his attention to the operation of a farm until 1868, when he again returned to Michigan by the water route, remaining in the Wolverine state for seven years. On the expiration of that period he once more came to the northwest, journeying by rail and boat to Olympia, Washington, where he made his home for about a year. After following farming on one place in Yamhill county for seven years he removed to another farm, where he spent three years and then took up his abode in Amity, Oregon, where he has resided continuously for the past twenty-six years. He owns real estate in the town and is well known and highly esteemed as a substantial and representative citizen.

Mr. Wallace has been married twice. In 1860 he wedded Miss Marian Murphy, by whom he had four children, namely: Mary, who is deceased; Nora M., the wife of Wilber M. Cook, of Woodlawn, Oregon; Edna L., who gave her hand in marriage to J. B. Wisner and resides in St. Johns, Oregon; and Lewis L., who has passed away. The wife and mother was called to her final rest on the 6th of October, 1898, and in 1901 Mr. Wallace was again married, his second union being with Miss Rosina J. Simpson, a native of Branch county, Michigan. She was the oldest in a family of eleven children and her parents were pioneer settlers of Oregon.

In politics Mr. Wallace is an independent republican of broad views, always taking into consideration the capability of a candidate rather than his party affiliation. He has strong prohobition tendencies and advocates the suppression of the liquor traffic. In religious faith he is a Spiritualist. He has now passed the eighty-second milestone on life's journey and his career has ever been such as to merit the regard and esteem which are uniformly accorded him.

WILLIAM NORRIS GRIFFITH. The late William Norris Griffith was for many years engaged in agricultural pursuits on a ranch of three hundred and twenty acres, located a mile east of Dexter and now owned by his widow. He was born in Charlestown, Indiana, on the 15th of August, 1825, a son of Elisha and Elizabeth (Finley) Griffith, the father of Irish and the mother of Welsh extraction. The parents were born, reared and married in Indiana and there they passed the first eight years of their domestic life. They subsequently located in western Illinois, residing there until 1845. In the latter year they started across the plains with an ox team for Oregon. Winter set in before they reached their destination—six months being occupied in making the journey—and the entire family, particularly the three younger members, who were still very small, suffered severely from the cold and exposure as well as from lack of suitable food, their stock of provisions running short. When they reached The Dalles the snow was so deep that it was impossible for them to proceed with the wagon, so they took a boat down the river to Oregon City. In 1848, they went to Brownsville, and there the parents passed the remainder of their lives. The father, who was seventy-six at the time of his death, was survived for two years by the mother, who died at the age of seventy-five. Eight children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Griffith, as follows: William N., our subject; Sarah A., the wife of William Hawk, of Brownsville; David and Mary M., both of whom are deceased; West, of Sand Point, Idaho; James M., of Oregon City; Delila, who is deceased; and Lydia, who died at the age of two years.

William Norris Griffith was early trained to the work of the fields and care of the stock and always followed the vocation of farming. He met with success in the operation of his ranch, containing three hundred and twenty acres located in Lost valley, near Dexter, and there he passed away on the 8th of March, 1901.

On the 14th of July, 1850, Mr. Griffith was united in marriage to Miss Nancy Spores, who was born in Ohio, on April 5, 1833. She is a daughter of Jacob and Eliza (Hand) Spores, who were married in New York. Twelve years later they removed to Illinois and located near Rockford for a similar period. There the mother passed away, and in 1847 the father and children joined an emigrant train to Oregon. They arrived in Oregon City in August and immediately started for Coburg, and located a hundred miles up the Willamette river, where the father filed on a donation claim of six hundred and forty acres. He engaged in the operation of his ranch during the remainder of his active life, increasing his holdings until at the time of his death he held the title to twelve hundred acres of land. In addition to his agricultural pursuits for many years he operated what was known as Spores' ferry and was one of the foremost citizens of that district during the pioneer period. He lived to attain a ripe old age, being ninety-five at the time of his death. Mr. Spores was twice married. To him and his first wife there were born thirteen children, of whom Mrs. Griffith is the only one now living. For his second wife he chose Nancy Orndorf, of Illinois, their marriage being celebrated in the latter part of 1844. They became the parents of four children, as follows: Louis, who is deceased; Henry, a resident of Coburg; Mary, the wife of William Bogard, also of Coburg; and Minnie, who married Alonzo Williams, of California. Mr. and Mrs. Griffith were the parents of nine children: Eliza E., the wife of George W. Bice, of Washington; Sarah Ann, the deceased wife of Milton A. Veach, of Lane

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASTOR, LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS

MR. AND MRS. WILLIAM N. GRIFFITH

JAMES M. GRIFFITH

county; H. R., of Yale, Washington; James M.; Adeline, the wife of William Breeding, of Alberta, Canada; William L., who is deceased; Cornelia, who married Samuel B. Amos, of Condon, Oregon; Mary J., now Mrs. Bowen, who is living at home with her mother; and Sabra, the wife of Howard Reed, of Portland. James M., the fourth in order of birth, is one of the most widely known men in the county and one of the most versatile. He is a wagon maker, blacksmith, carriage trimmer, carpenter and general mechanic. He has the happy faculty of accomplishing anything he attempts, and does it with the ease and skill only supposed to be achieved from thorough training and long years of experience. Much of his life has been passed in traveling through California, Washington and Oregon, but he has now settled down on a ranch of one hundred and sixty acres that he owns adjoining his mother's place. He has built the house, barns and outbuildings on his ranch, which is equipped with many conveniences of his own invention and manufacture.

Mr. Griffith was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church as is also his widow and family with the exception of one son, who is a Baptist. He voted the democratic ticket but was never identified with local governmental affairs. He was one of the prominent and enterprising pioneers of Lane county and participated in a number of the early Indian wars, among them the Cayuse Indian war and the Rogue River war. For his services in the latter his widow, who has nearly attained the venerable age of eighty years, is now awarded a pension. Mr. Griffith had many friends in Lane county and was one of the highly esteemed pioneers, who lived to witness in the country's wonderful development the fulfillment of his early prophecy regarding its future possibilities.

LOUIS S. NORMANDIN, one of the leading merchants of Mount Tabor, in which connection he has built up an extensive and profitable business, was born in Canada, in 1859, his parents being Loie and Armine (Miller) Normandin, who are also natives of Canada and of French and Scotch descent. They are still living in the Dominion and are well known in the locality which is their place of residence. They became the parents of sixteen children, twelve of whom are yet living. One of the sons is living in Massachusetts and the others, with the exception of our subject, are residents of Canada.

Louis S. Normandin is the only one who came to Oregon. He left home at the age of thirteen years and went to Vermont, there continuing his education as a pupil in the school near St. Albans. While thus pursuing his education he also worked in a grocery store for a year, making his own way all the time. He afterward went to Springfield, Massachusetts, where he secured employment in a brickyard in the summer, while during the winter months he was employed along mercantile lines. Not yet content with the educational advantages which were his, he devoted much of his time in the evening hours for two and a half years to study in night schools. Attracted by the opportunities of the west, he then made his way to Virginia City, Nevada, in 1876, and after a brief period went to Oakland, California, where he worked for a building contractor, having charge of the dock, barn and teams when but seventeen years of age. He came to Portland and on the 5th of February, 1879, when twenty years of age and after working in a sawmill for a month entered the brickyard of E. J. Jeffries, with whom he continued for three years. In the meantime he purchased ten acres of land on the section line road in connection with a partner, N. Remellard, and this they planted to small fruit, Mr. Remellard cultivating the land, while Mr. Normandin worked in the brickyard. He made the purchase of the ten acres on credit but by hard work he and his partner succeeded in meeting the payments on the property, which was his first investment in real estate on the coast. After devoting three years to brickmaking he became connected with the fishing industry at Astoria, where he remained through one season. He and his partner then went to work on the ten-acre tract and continued its further development and cultivation until 1889. The following year they sold this property for fifteen thousand dollars, realizing a very handsome profit, for the purchase price had been but fifteen hundred dollars. With the capital which thus accrued, Mr. Normandin then purchased a third interest in a grocery store owned by Brubaker & Kay, and two years later Mr. Kay sold his interest to his two partners, since which time Mr. Normandin and Mr. Brubaker have been associated in business, covering a period of twenty-two years. Theirs is one of the oldest partnerships of the city and within this period they have built up a large business, becoming well known as enterprising merchants of Mount Tabor. They have always carried a large and well selected line of goods and their reasonable prices and earnest efforts to please their patrons have secured for them substantial results in business. The relation between them has always been of a most harmonious character and the labors of one ably supplement and round out the activities of the other. As Mr. Normandin has prospered in his undertakings he has invested in property and has thus accumulated a good deal of real estate, including a summer home at Long Beach, Washington, and a farm in Washington county, in addition to other property in Mount Tabor.

On the 3d of July, 1890, Mr. Normandin was united in marriage to Miss Hedwig Wehlom, a daughter of Fred Wehlom of Mount Tabor. They have become parents of four children. Fred, born in 1891, acquired his education in the public schools of Mount Tabor and in the Portland Business College, thus equipping himself for the conduct of important commercial interests. He is now with his father in the management of the store. Herbert, born July 10, 1893, is a student in the Washington high school. Frank, born September 8, 1895, and Eva, born May 18, 1901, are also in school. The family residence is at No. 34 East Sixty-first street. The family attend the Methodist Episcopal church and are loyal to its interests and activities. Mr. Normandin votes with the republican party and while he has never been an office seeker, he has ever taken a deep interest in public affairs and several times served as a delegate to republican conventions. For twenty-one years he has been an exemplary representative of the Masonic fraternity and he is associated with the Woodmen of the World, the United Artisans and the Brotherhood of America. During the long years of his residence here he has gained a wide acquaintance in Portland, especially in the section of the city where he resides. He has won an unassailable reputation for business integrity and enterprise and his substantial qualities well entitle him to the high regard and to the success which is his.

ENSIGN VERNON REXFORD, a retired farmer and veteran of the early Oregon Indian wars, now lives quietly with his children in Portland. He was born near Woodstock, Canada West, on the 15th of August, 1831, his parents being John and Charity Rexford, natives of Steuben county, New York. There they were educated, grew to mature years and were married. After their marriage they settled in western Canada in 1831, where John Rexford bought land and lived until 1841, when he removed to Lee county, Iowa, where he also purchased land and resided until 1849, when, deciding to go farther west, he took his family by ox team across the plains to Oregon. They first settled on Sophia's island, where they lived until the following spring and then moved to Benton county, where the father took up six hundred and forty acres of government land located about twelve miles from where Corvallis now stands. He occupied this farm until 1865, when he sold it and retired. Rev. Rexford was a Baptist minister and throughout his career preached as opportunity offered, and after his retirement from the farm continued preaching until his death, which occurred in 1876, his wife surviving him until 1887. They were the parents of fifteen children, five of whom are still living, as follows: Mary, the widow of Thomas Blake, who died while on a vessel en route to Oregon; Ensign Vernon, of this review; Elizabeth, the wife of George Deal, of California; Jane, who is the widow of Abner Lloyd and resides in Colfax, Whitman county, Washington; Laura, the wife of Jack Steward, of Whitman county, Washington. Those deceased are, Letts, John, Charity, Luey, Charlotte, Ann, Jerome and three who died in infancy.

Ensign Vernon Rexford was given a common-school education and remained with his parents until he attained the age of twenty years, when he went to California and took up mining, which he followed for one year. Subsequently he returned to Oregon, here working at various occupations until he took up a quarter section of land in Benton county, Oregon, in 1854. There he lived for several years, improved his farm and erected the necessary buildings. Disposing of the property, he volunteered for service in the Indian war in September, 1855, becoming a member of Company C, under command of Colonel David Laton. He fought Indians that winter and then returned home but after a short time again volunteered for military service, becoming a member of Company H, with which he remained from April until October. He then returned to the plains with Kit Carson and continued with him three years, after which he came back to Oregon. During his experiences in the Indians wars he took part in a great many severe engagements and was twice wounded but not seriously. At the conclusion of the Indian campaigns he again took up farming, purchasing three hundred and twenty acres in Benton county, where he resided until 1872, when he sold out and went into the logging business in southern Oregon, an occupation which he followed for four years. Subsequently he went to Whitman county, Washington, purchased one hundred and sixty acres of land and again engaged in active farm work, continuing to live on that farm until 1896, when he sold his land and retired, having since resided among his children in Portland.

In 1861 Mr. Rexford was married to Miss Sarepta Hallock, a native of Oregon and a daughter of Herman and Lucretia Hallock, both of whom were born in New York. They were numbered among the pioneers of Oregon, having crossed the plains in 1845 and settled in Benton county, where they spent the remainder of their lives. Sarepta (Hallock) Rexford was one of a family of thirteen children and by her marriage to our subject became the mother of four children, namely: John, living in Benton county, Oregon; Annie, the widow of Ira Roe of Portland; Martha, who is the wife of Isaac Derick, of California; and Hannah, the wife of Alvin Lloyd, of Linn county, Oregon. Mr. Rexford and his first wife were legally separated, after which, in 1877, he wedded Miss McCormick, a native of Benton county, Oregon. Her parents, J. K. and Lucinda McCormick, both of whom were natives of Ohio, came to Oregon in 1851, settling in Benton county, near Corvallis, where they passed away. Their children were five in number, namely: Laura, who is the wife of James Bales and resides in western Oregon; Hardy, living in Benton county, this state; Ira, who makes his home in Brownsville, Linn county, Oregon; Mrs. Emma (McCormick) Rexford; and Fred, who is deceased. Mr. Rexford lost his second wife in 1871, and the two children born unto them are also deceased. For his third wife he chose Miss Linna Hoss, whom he wedded in 1883 and who was called to her final rest in 1892. She was a native of Marion county, Oregon, and a daughter of Peter and Martha Hoss, both of whom were born in Ohio. By his third marriage Mr. Rexford became the father of the following children: Georgia

A., born in 1885, who pursued a course of bookkeeping and now is the wife of Joseph Fowler, of Portland, by whom she has a daughter, Rosamond H., born January 16, 1910; Charity, whose natal day was February 22, 1887, and who is the wife of Albert E. Lee, of Dayton, Oregon; Peter V., born November 16, 1889, who is a resident of Hubbard, Oregon; Elizabeth, born April 9, 1891, who is the wife of S. S. Parker, of La Fayette, Oregon; Perry Isaac, who is deceased; and one who died in infancy. All of our subject's children enjoyed the advantages of a good business education.

Mr. Rexford is by political faith a republican and formerly held the office of sheriff of Coos county, Oregon. By his long and active business career in Oregon and also by his Indian campaigns he has been of great value in the development of this great state. A respected citizen well known to a large circle of friends and possessing the grit which is characteristic of the pioneer, Mr. Rexford has ever been of an active nature and his life has been one of toil, nor has his career been without its experiences of hardship.

B. A. JOHNSTON has since 1908 been the senior partner of the firm of Johnston & Hutcheroft, conducting the leading general mercantile store of Yamhill. His birth occurred in Missouri on the 24th of January, 1872, his parents being M. E. and Louisa (Leach) Johnston, who are natives of Michigan and Kentucky, respectively. He was a little lad of five years when he came to this state with his parents and attended school until a youth of seventeen. He then worked on a dairy ranch for five years and during the next ten years followed the profession of teaching, imparting clearly and readily to others the knowledge that he had acquired. During vacation periods he attended the Tualitin Academy at Forest Grove. After abandoning educational pursuits he became a clerk in the store which he is now conducting in association with R. J. Hutcheroft. It was in 1908 that he purchased a half interest in the business and became the senior member of the firm of Johnston & Hutcheroft, general merchants. They have built up an extensive and profitable trade and theirs is now the leading store of the character of Yamhill.

On the 1st of July, 1900, Mr. Johnston was united in marriage to Miss Bessie Rounds, a native of the state of Washington and a daughter of J. C. and Mary (Robb) Rounds, who were born in New York and Oregon respectively. The mother represents one of the old pioneer families of the northwest, her father being the late J. R. Robb, of Portland, who crossed the plains in the same party with F. X. Matthieu in 1842 and whose name is on the Champoeg monument, which was erected in honor of the fifty-two members that formed the provisional government of Oregon in 1843. The parents of Mrs. Johnston were married in Oregon and have lived here almost continuously since. After his marriage Mr. Rounds took up a homestead in Washington and there resided for a time, later coming to Portland, where he lived until 1893. In that year he purchased a farm near Gaston, Oregon, operating the same until 1901, when he disposed of the property and bought land near Forest Grove. Subsequently he sold that tract and took up his abode on another farm in the vicinity of Forest Grove, whereon he has since remained. Unto him and his wife were born five children, as follows: Bert, who lives near Yamhill, Oregon; Frederick, a merchant of North Yakima, Washington; Mrs. Johnston; Edward, who is still under the parental roof; and one who died in infancy. Mr. and Mrs. Johnston have had three children, namely: Ruth, who was born in May, 1901; Carl, born on the 22d of December, 1903, and who died when three months old; and Harold, whose natal day was February 15, 1906. Mrs. Johnston taught school for three years prior to her marriage.

Since age conferred upon him the right of franchise Mr. Johnston has supported the men and measures of the republican party. He has served as city recorder of Yamhill but has no desire for the honors and emoluments of office. Fraternally he is identified with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, belonging to Lodge No. 56 and also to the Rebekahs at Yamhill. He is likewise connected with the Woodmen of the World, being a member of Lodge No. 133 at Yamhill. His religious faith is that of the Methodist Episcopal church, to which is wife also belongs. The period of his residence in the northwest covers more than a third of a century and his life has been such that he has won the regard and esteem of all with whom he has come in contact.

F. E. ROTH is successfully engaged in business as the proprietor of a furniture and undertaking establishment at Amity. His birth occurred in Henry county, Iowa, on the 16th of June, 1878, his parents being Michael and Nancy (Goldsmith) Roth, both of whom were natives of Pennsylvania. The father removed to Iowa in early manhood and spent the remainder of his life in that state, passing away in 1904. Throughout his active business career he devoted his attention to general agricultural pursuits. His widow is still living and makes her home at Wayland, Iowa. Unto them were born four sons and six daughters, as follows: Emma, the wife of C. Egli, of Trenton, Iowa; Katie, who gave her hand in marriage to H. B. White and resides in Brighton, Iowa; Anna, the deceased wife of Joseph Reschley; Ella, the wife of Benjamin Hill, of Brighton, Iowa; Joseph, a sketch of whom appears below; W. B., a blacksmith of Wayland, Iowa; Lena, who is deceased; Otto E., who is associated in business with his brother Joseph; F. E., of this review; and Bertha, the wife of Walter Wood, of Wayland, Iowa.

F. E. Roth remained under the parental roof until nineteen years of age and then made his way to Oregon, here embarking in the machinery business and operating a sawmill, a thresher and other machinery. In 1909 he purchased a furniture establishment at Amity and later added an undertaking department and has won well merited success in both branches of his business. He carries an extensive and well selected stock of furniture and is able to meet and satisfy the demands of all patrons. His knowledge of his present line of business was obtained as an employe at Albany.

In 1900 Mr. Roth was united in marriage to Miss Maud Smith, a native of Polk county, Oregon. In politics he is an independent democrat, while his religious faith is indicated by his membership in the Christian church, in which he is now serving as deacon. His wife is likewise a devoted and consistent member of that church. Fraternally he is identified with the Knights of Pythias at Albany and the Woodmen of the World and the Independent Order of Odd Fellows at Amity. Both he and his wife belong to the Rebekahs. Mr. Roth is a member of the Funeral Directors Association of Oregon. His position in business and social circles is an enviable one and his many friends believe that a bright future lies before him.

JOSEPH W. ROTH is well known in business circles of Amity as the senior member of the firm of Roth Brothers, handling all kinds of building materials. His birth occurred in Henry county, Iowa, on the 19th of November, 1867, and in the common schools of Wayland, that state, he acquired his education. When fifteen years of age he began working as a farm hand, giving his earnings to his father until nineteen years of age. At that time he started out as an agriculturist on his own account, following farming in Iowa for five years on the expiration of which period he came to Oregon and settled in Yamhill county. After three years' residence here he opened a general store at Amity and successfully conducted the same for nine years. Subsequently he devoted his attention to agricultural pursuits for seven years and at the end of that time embarked in the lumber business, which he has since conducted in a most capable manner, handling all kinds of building materials. He has erected a new plant, operates a planing mill in connection therewith and also has a dry kiln. The enterprise is conducted under the name of Roth Brothers and the partners enjoy an enviable reputation for integrity and reliability. Joseph W. Roth owns and has improved a farm of one hundred and twenty-seven and a half acres near Amity and also owns a tract of forty-four acres near Corvallis in Benton county. He also built his handsome modern residence at Amity. Mr. Roth was one of the organizers and sold most of the stock of the Yamhill Valley Condensed Milk Company, also established every milk route and hired the necessary drivers. He was likewise one of the organizers of the Mutual Telephone Company of Amity. His success is all the more creditable by reason of the fact that it is attributable entirely to his own industry and enterprise, for he is a self-made man in the best and highest sense of the term.

When twenty-one years of age Mr. Roth was united in marriage to Miss Cora Martin, a native of Iowa, by whom he had three children, namely: Ethel, who died at the age of three years; Ola M., at home; and Earl C., who is a high-school student. Mr. Roth gives his political allegiance to the democracy and has been a member of the election board for years. His religious faith is that of the Christian church, to which his wife and children also belong and in which he has served as deacon and elder for seventeen years. For eleven years he has acted as clerk of the local organization of the Woodmen of the World at Amity. He is likewise identified with the Protected Home Circle at that place. His business career has been marked by a thorough understanding of each task which he has undertaken and by that continuous progress which logically follows constantly expanding powers and employment of opportunity.

GEORGE W. HYATT, who is president of the Wallowa National Bank of Enterprise, and also president of the Enterprise Mercantile & Milling Company, was born in West Unity, Ohio, February 5, 1863. He is a son of Henry S. and Maria (Brown) Hyatt, both of whom were natives of New York state but were married in Michigan, to which state they had removed in childhood with their parents. Shortly after their marriage they located in West Unity, Williams county, Ohio, where the father engaged in contracting and building with which occupation he was prominently identified until the time of his death. The mother still resides in West Unity, being now in her eighty-third year.

George W. Hyatt was reared under the parental roof, acquiring his education in the public schools of West Unity. However, upon attaining his sixteenth year he put aside his text-books and entered a general mercantile store in West Unity as clerk and general errand boy. He continued as clerk and bookkeeper for ten years and it was there he laid the foundation for his later successful business career. In 1889 he came to Oregon, locating in Enterprise, which was then a new village. He there entered the employ of the Island City Mercantile & Milling Company, and this was the connecting link which brought him to his present business interests. In December, 1893, he was one of the leading factors in the organization of the Enterprise Mercantile & Milling Company, which absorbed the Enterprise Milling Company's mills and the mercantile stock of the Island City Mercantile & Milling Company. The other members of the corporation were Reavis Brothers, J. F. Bater and the men connected with the Island City Mercantile & Milling Company. During the intervening years Mr. Hyatt has purchased the stock of Reavis Brothers, of Mr. Bater and of Mr. Steel, who had holdings as a member of the firm of Island City Mercantile & Milling Company. These changes gave Mr. Hyatt the controlling interest in the business. The

GEORGE W. HYATT

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASTOR, LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS

company handles dry goods, notions, groceries, clothing, boots and shoes, hardware, agricultural implements, vehicles, lumber, hay and grain and also does an extensive milling business. To Mr. Hyatt is due much of the credit for the building up of the large establishment of which he is now the able president.

In 1894 Mr. Hyatt married Miss Leone Blevans of Wallowa county, and to this union have been born three children, one of whom is deceased. The others are George Weldon and Robert Henry. In politics Mr. Hyatt is a republican and has served as a member of the town council. Fraternally he is identified with Enterprise Lodge, No. 94, K. P., and he and his wife are members of the Presbyterian church, he also being an elder in the same. Mr. Hyatt is greatly interested in the welfare of his town and in every movement for its advancement. In all his business ventures he has ever been alert and enterprising, using the most honorable principles, and as a result has become prominent in the banking world and has helped to build up one of the largest mercantile establishments in eastern Oregon.

JOHN H. HUTCHISON, who since 1905 has resided in his beautiful home, which is located at No. 352 East Fifty-seventh street, in Portland, was for many years prominently engaged in agricultural pursuits in northern Idaho. He was born at Albion Station, New York, on the 16th of March, 1857, a son of James and Jane (Morris) Hutchison. His father was a native of Edinburgh, Scotland, and was brought to Canada when he was a small boy. The paternal grandfather died while on board ship en route for Canada and the grandmother was married again, her second union being with a Mr. Grant. They both resided in Canada the remainder of their lives. The father, James Hutchison, remained in Canada until he was thirty years of age, when he removed to New York and two years later married there. He was a bridge builder by trade and followed that occupation, working for the Watertown Railroad, where he continued for ten years or until his death, which occurred in 1864. Later the mother and her family removed to Iowa, settling at Waverly, where she was engaged in keeping store for several years. Afterward she retired and lived with her children until her death, which occurred in 1905 at Centralia, Washington, to which place she had come six months before. To Mr. and Mrs. Hutchison were born two sons, the younger of whom is the subject of this sketch. The elder, James, passed away in 1909.

In early life John Hutchison resided in Rome, New York, but he received his education in the common schools at Waverly, Iowa, and was graduated from the high school there. He then engaged in teaching school in that state and also taught the first school on the American Ridge, in Idaho. He started out in life for himself when he was twenty-three years of age. His first trip west was made by way of San Francisco, thence to Portland and on to Colfax, Washington. This journey required twenty-six days. Subsequently he located on a farm and was engaged in the sheep industry for two years, and during this time he purchased a tract of one hundred and sixty acres and also proved up a tract of one hundred and sixty acres. He later purchased a half section in addition and then owned in all six hundred and forty acres of excellent land which was known as the Claremont Farm and was considered one of the most beautiful farms in northern Idaho. Mr. Hutchison operated this place for twenty-seven years. During this time he made a specialty of raising grain and of growing fruit. He had in connection with his farm a large fruit evaporator which dried from sixty to one hundred thousand pounds of fruit annually. In the grain industry he raised about ten thousand bushels annually, most of which was wheat. His farm was visited by all the prominent men of the state who were interested in agriculture. Besides his farming interests Mr. Hutchison was the promoter of the first farmers telephone on the American Ridge, and of the rural mail system. He was instrumental in building one of the county roads from the American Ridge to Kendrick. He also established the Roach Dale system of this town which has been a great success and is still in force. Mr. Hutchison resided on this place until July, 1905, when he sold the same and came to Portland where he has now one of the most beautiful homes in his neighborhood. It is located at 352 East Fifty-seventh street, which is one of the prominent residence streets of West Mount Tabor. He also owns other real estate in Portland.

In 1890 Mr. Hutchison was married to Miss Clara Ella Barker, who was born in Janesville, Wisconsin, March 27, 1853, a daughter of William F. and Helen M. (Blount) Barker. The father was born in New York, of English and Scotch lineage, and the mother in North Danville, Vermont, of English ancestry. They were married in Wisconsin, in 1852, when that state was yet a territory. They resided there until 1862, when they removed to Waverly, Iowa, where the father operated a general merchandise store and also a flour mill and a hotel. He continued there until a short time before his death, which occurred in 1883. The mother passed away in 1892. To them were born six children, the eldest of whom is Mrs. Hutchison. Mr. and Mrs. Hutchison have one adopted son, Edward Williston, who was born in Portland, October 21, 1906.

In politics Mr. Hutchison is a republican but he has never sought nor cared for public office and on many occasions has refused the senatorship in Idaho. Also he has refused to hold several county offices there. Fraternally he is a member of the Knights of Pythias, belonging to Central Lodge, No. 23, at Kendrick, Idaho. Mr. Hutchison has always taken an active part in the development of the community with which he was identified and has always been a leading citizen. He is a member of the Baptist church and his wife is of the Episcopalian faith. They are people who have a large circle of friends and a life of well directed activity has gained for Mr. Hutchison a creditable place in the business world.

C. F. LOVELACE ranks among the scientific farmers of this portion of Oregon and his highly developed ranch of one hundred and sixty acres, located in Josephine county, is one of the show places of this portion of the state. His birth occurred in Grayson county, Virginia, on the 24th of February, 1857, his parents being Jeremiah E. and Elizabeth (Grubb) Lovelace, who were natives of Tennessee and Virginia respectively. Jeremiah E. Lovelace was engaged in agricultural pursuits in Virginia at the time of the breaking out of the Civil war, at which time his adopted state cast her fortunes with the Confederacy, and he was one of the thousands who, in defense of the principles involved in that titanic internecine struggle, enlisted in the Confederate service and loyally followed his command until the close of the war. He passed to his reward in the year 1886. His wife died in 1908, in Nebraska, where she was making her home with a son.

C. F. Lovelace was reared in his parents' home and acquired his early education in the public common schools. On reaching his majority he became an apprenticed millwright and continued to serve as such until he had acquired a full knowledge of that craft. In the spring of 1882 he removed to the northwestern Pacific coast, stopping first at Tacoma, Washington, where he was engaged for three months in the occupation of a carpenter, after which he removed to Skamokawa, Washington, where he remained for two years employed as a millwright. He then entered the bridge-building department of the Northern Pacific railroad and during the four years immediately thereafter he conducted the building of practically all of the railway bridges from Pasco to the Sound. At the end of four years' service in the employ of the railway company he removed to Coos bay, where he engaged in the sawmilling business. He built at Coos bay a large sawmill plant which he owned and operated for four years and then disposed of his entire holdings in that property. In March, 1892, he removed to Wilderville, Josephine county, this state, locating on what had formerly been a ranch belonging to the mother-in-law of Mrs. H. D. Jones. That property he acquired in 1900. He established his permanent home thereon and is now engaged in the scientific development and operation of high-grade agricultural pursuits.

In 1891 Mr. Lovelace was united in marriage to Miss Edwina Jones, a native of Jackson county, Oregon. Her parents were Alexander and Hannah (Hoxie) Gillson Jones, the former a native of Ohio and the latter of Massachusetts. The mother, who was a daughter of O. D. Hoxie, also a native of Massachusetts, was the widow of Herbert Gillson. The father was a captain and after his retirement he removed to this state, locating his home in Jackson county. He was among the very earliest pioneers, having settled there before the days of the Indian wars. To Mr. and Mrs. Lovelace eight children have been born: Fred, Alice, Anna, Mildred, Lois, Francis, Willard and Lile. All of the children are still at home with their parents.

Mr. Lovelace is a member of the democratic party and has served four years as county commissioner of Josephine county—from 1904 to 1908. In 1910 his friends persuaded him to run on an independent ticket for the office of sheriff. He felt at the time that there was little hope of his election but he consented, however, to allow his name to be used in the interests of morality and good government. Mr. and Mrs. Lovelace are both members of the Methodist Episcopal church. C. F. Lovelace is a highly respected and useful citizen of his state and county. His reputation for honor and truthfulness has never been questioned and he is always ready to associate himself in any public enterprise that seeks the advancement and improvement of the people of Oregon, his adopted state.

REV. CHARLES H. HOXIE. Although a minister of the Methodist Episcopal faith for nearly half a century, the Rev. Charles H. Hoxie has followed in connection with his ministerial labors the vocation of a farmer, as well, for the most of his life. He owns property in Medford, which he is renting, and makes his home with his sister. He was born in Massachusetts, December 22, 1838, the son of Obadiah D. and Eliza Ann (Stevens) Hoxie, the former a native of Massachusetts and the latter of Rhode Island. The father, who was a whaler, went to San Francisco in 1849 by way of Cape Horn, plying his trade en route and disposing of the whale oil in San Francisco. The mother, in company with her two sons, Charles H. and J. W. Hoxie, removed to San Francisco on November 1, 1855. From that city they made their way by steamer to Portland and thence by river boat to Benton county, continuing their journey to the Rogue river valley by means of horses. This was during the Indian war of 1855 and 1856 and travel in that section was fraught with so many dangers owing to the hostility of the Indians that they were given an escort from Roseburg to the Rogue river valley.

Charles H. Hoxie attended the common schools and later took a course in an academy, preparing himself for the ministry as well as for the other activities and labors of life. For twelve years he was a member of the Oregon Methodist Episcopal conference and served as pastor in various parts of the Rogue river valley. He later settled on a farm which his father had homesteaded and continued to make that his place of residence for thirty-two years. At the end of that period he disposed of the farm and removed to Medford, where he purchased property which he still owns. He is now making his home with a sister in Wilder-ville. For forty-eight years he labored as a minister of the gospel, preaching principally in the Rogue river valley but also supplying pulpits or holding regular pastorates in other parts of the state.

He chose as his helpmate and life companion Miss Laura M. Averille, a native of Maine, who passed away February 26, 1911, her remains being interred in Phoenix, Jackson county. Mr. Hoxie is independent in politics, casting his vote for such candidates for public positions as he deems best fitted to fill the places to which they aspire. He has never been an office seeker but has devoted the greater part of his time to his ministerial and agricultural labors. He is among the highly respected citizens of Josephine county, which he has made his home for so many years. He has an extensive acquaintance throughout the valley and is a welcome guest in innumerable homes.

WILLIAM HUTCHINSON. One of the large owners of valuable city properties in Portland is William Hutchinson, who was born in Scotland, April 8, 1839. His parents were William and Catherine Hutchinson, both natives of Scotland. They came to America in 1840, first settling in Rhode Island, where they lived for some time, later moving to the state of New York and still later to New Jersey, and then back again to New York, where the mother passed away in 1854. The father died at sea in 1866, off Acapulco, Mexico, while on a trip from South America. They were the parents of three children: William; Mrs. Jane Kerwin, who was a resident of Salt Lake City, Utah, both she and her husband being now deceased; and George, who passed away in Brooklyn, New York, at the age of seven years.

William Hutchinson was reared and received his education in the schools of the eastern states and, being ambitious to secure a thorough education, he attended night school for a considerable period. He started out in life for himself at the age of seventeen years, at the time of his mother's death, going to Newark, New Jersey, where he learned the jeweler's trade. In 1861 he responded to his country's call and volunteered as a member of the Second New Jersey Infantry, his period of enlistment being for three years. Throughout his three years' service during the war he was with the Army of the Potomac throughout all of its campaigns, taking part in all the battles in which it participated. At the end of his term of enlistment he was honorably discharged at Newark, New Jersey. After his return to Newark he determined to cast his lot with the pioneers of the Pacific slope and went by steamer via the Isthmus of Panama to San Francisco, where he began working at his trade, that of a jeweler, continuing in that employment for four years in San Francisco. He then sold his business and in 1874 bought fifteen acres of land which is now included in the city of Portland, it being practically all built up. When Mr. Hutchinson purchased his fifteen acre farm about two-thirds of it was covered with timber, the remainder being suitable for cultivation. He paid for it one hundred dollars per acre and at the present time it would bring seventy thousand dollars. Mr. Hutchinson is still the owner of the greater part of it, he having sold off thirty lots, known as the Hutchinson addition to Portland. This was laid ont in lots and included within the limits of Portland in 1906.

In 1872 Mr. Hutchinson married Miss Augusta F. Crites, a native of Wisconsin and a daughter of Joseph Crites, of Pennsylvania, who died in Plattsmouth, Nebraska, in 1901. The mother passed away four years previously. Mrs. Hutchinson is a well educated woman, having graduated from the Wisconsin high school and having also received two years' training in the Young Ladies' Seminary of Rochester, Wisconsin. Previous to her marriage she had some school-teaching experience but her educational work was materially hindered on account of the fact that her mother was an invalid. Mrs. Hutchinson is the second in order of birth in a family of five children born to her parents, the other members of the family being: A. W., a lawyer, of Nebraska; Delia and Dora, twins, the former being the wife of William Foxwell, of Lincoln, Nebraska, while the latter is deceased; and Libby, the wife of Basil S. Ramsey, of Plattsmouth, Nebraska. Mr. and Mrs. Hutchinson are the parents of three sons. George W., the eldest, was born May 23, 1874, and received a high-school education. He resides on a part of his father's estate with his wife and family of two children: Frederick W., who was born in March, 1908; and Dorothy May, born in May, 1910. Joseph D. Hutchinson, the second son, was born in 1877 and resides with his father, being the owner of property in Portland and also at Vancouver, Washington. He is married and has one child, Elinor, who was born June 26, 1908. Edgar W. Hutchinson, the youngest son, was born in 1879 and also resides at home. He is a gradnate of the high school and also pursued an architectural course. He is a jeweler by trade and is also an architect, contractor and builder.

Mr. Hutchinson is a republican in his political faith but has never been desirous of holding public office. He has, however, served as a member of the Portland school board, and he and his family are members of the Methodist Episcopal church. Mr. Hutchinson, who for nearly forty years has been a resident of Portland and with whom fortune has dealt so kindly, is a man honored in his city and respected throughout all circles, where he is widely known. Being possessed of that far-sightedness which has characterized so many of our successful business men, he at an early date in Portland's development, seized the opportunity to acquire at a comparatively small cost the estate which has become so valuable. Knowing that "There is a tide in the affairs of men Which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune," he threw himself upon the crest of the wave which brought him into the possession of his large interests. He took a deep interest in the progress of Portland commercially, educationally and religiously and has been a material factor in the development of this city.

ALBERT ALFORD is one of the early pioneers of this state and during the Indian wars of 1855 and 1856 he was one of the ready volunteers to expose himself to the dangers and hardships of camp life among the unsettled, mountainous districts in which the savage red man of the north had established his almost inaccessible haunts. He was born in Sheridan county, Missouri, on the 4th of May, 1833, and is the son of Thomas and K. (Culp) Alford, both of whom were natives of Tennessee. His mother died when he was but a small child. In 1850 Thomas Alford emigrated to the state, crossing the plains with ox teams. He arrived in Oregon late in the season and at The Dalles the members of his party took boats down the Columbia river and made their first settlement in Linn county. The cattle were driven down the trail from The Dalles. On reaching Linn county Mr. Alford filed upon a donation claim of three hundred and twenty acres, upon which he established his home and continued to reside until the time of his death, which occurred in the ninety-third year of his age. He was three times married. He chose as his second companion in life Miss Polly Williams, who unfortunately met her death on the plains during the time of their emigration to this state. He later was united in marriage to Miss Gaily, of Linn county.

Albert Alford was reared in his father's home and acquired a limited education in the common schools of Missouri. He remained under the parental roof until he attained his twenty-first birthday. He then filed upon a donation claim of three hundred and twenty acres of land in Linn county. On this land he established his home and for many years was devoted to its development and agricultural pursuits. While a resident at that place the Rogue River Indian wars became a menacing element to the settlers on the Pacific seaboard and he at once became a volunteer, enlisting in Captain Keeney's company, of which he was an orderly sergeant, and later became a part of the command of Captain Blakeley's company in 1856. This campaign was often attended with great hardships, and at one time during the winter of 1855 his company was snowbound in the mountains and for seven days were without food supplies of any kind. At the close of his service in the Indian wars he returned at once to his home in Linn county and reengaged in the improvement of his place. Here he continued to reside until 1869, when he disposed of the property at a handsome profit and removed to Jackson county and for five years lived upon a rented place at Tolo. He then purchased a farm of one hundred and sixty acres adjoining the town of Talent and on that place he continued to live until 1910, at which time he sold the property and built for himself and family a handsome home in Talent, where he is now living a retired life. He is one of the principal stockholders of the First National Bank of Medford.

In 1853 Mr. Alford was united in marriage to Miss Catherine Brinker. Mrs. Alford is a native of Missouri and from that state emigrated to Oregon in the same train in which Mr. Alford was himself an emigrant in company with his parents to the Pacific coast. To Mr. and Mrs. Alford four children have been born: Russell, now at Klamath Falls; Moses, the first cashier of the First National Bank of Medford; Alice, the wife of L. F. Willetts, of Klamath Falls; and Ollie, the wife of C. W. Walters, of Talent, this state.

Mr. Alford is affiliated with the republican party and has served two terms as county commissioner and was a member of the county board at the time of the building of the new courthouse. Both he and his wife are members of the Baptist church. Albert Alford is indeed one of the hardy pioneers of this state and among all his associates and friends he is known to be a man of integrity. His moral influence upon the community in which he lives is distinguished for its salutary and helpful nature in maintaining and building up a healthy community life among the people.

DARR D. PHELPS, who is engaged in the plumbing business here, was born in Jasper county, Iowa, on the 4th day of July, 1870, being a son of Frank R. and Jennie (Westbrook) Phelps. His parents were both natives of Ohio, and there resided until 1868, when they removed to Iowa, settling in Jasper county. The mother passed away in 1884 and the father subsequently returned to Ohio and has ever since resided there. They were the parents of six children, four of whom are living.

Darr D. Phelps was reared at home and attended the public schools until the death of his mother, which occurred when he was a youth of fourteen years. This event caused a great change in his young life and laying aside his text-books he began earning his own living. On starting out for himself he first worked at any kind of work that came to hand, continuing to be thus employed for two years. At the expiration of that time he apprenticed himself to the plumber's trade, but two years later he abandoned this for carpentry. He followed this for three years and then learned the machinist's trade, being identified with the latter occupation until 1896. He first located in Pendleton in 1887 and during the first two years of his residence here was superintendent of the water works. After giving this up he followed the machinist's trade for a year, following which he entered the hardware store of W. J. Clark, remaining in his employ for ten years. After leaving this concern he worked for R. F. Kirkpatrick for a year, and on the 1st of September, 1911, he became associated with Alexander Burt in the establishment of a plumbing concern, that they are still

ALBERT ALFORD

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY
R, LENOX AND
DEN FOUNDATIONS.

conducting. This enterprise is of very recent origin, but both proprietors are well known men of recognized skill and will unquestionably make a success of their undertaking. They keep a good supply of materials and are well qualified to do any work in their line, being capable and efficient representatives of their trade.

In 1893, Mr. Phelps was united in marriage to Miss Minnie Murphy, a native of Illinois and a daughter of John R. and Mary A. Murphy, and they have become the parents of one son, George F., who is now attending business college here. Both Mr. and Mrs. Phelps are communicants of the Roman Catholic church and he is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America. In politics he is a republican, but has never held public office. Mr. Phelps has many friends in Umatilla county who are most desirous of seeing him succeed in his new undertaking, knowing him to be a highly deserving man and capable mechanic.

GEORGE O. WALKER is devoting his entire attention to agricultural pursuits and stock-raising at Walker, where he owns five hundred acres of land. His birth occurred in the vicinity where he is now living on the 17th of January, 1874, his parents being John F. and Mary Jane (Chrisman) Walker. The father was born in Bedford county, Virginia, in 1827, and there he lived until he had attained the age of eighteen years. In 1845 he went to Missouri, but after seven years' residence there decided to continue his journey westward, so in 1852 he joined an emigrant train coming to Oregon, Lane county being his destination. When he first came here he located on a claim of three hundred and twenty acres five miles east of Cottage Grove, that he energetically cultivated for nineteen years. At the expiration of that time, in 1872, he went to Creswell and bought a quarter section, and subsequently moved on to five hundred and seventy acres at Walker, belonging to his wife, upon which he has ever since lived. The mother of our subject is the second in order of birth of the seven children born to C. E. and Phoebe Flaury Chrisman. The other members of the family are as follows: C. F.; P. G. and Sarah Ann, both of whom are deceased; Nelson P., who is living at Cottage Grove; Winfield S., whose residence is at Dorena, this state; and Gabriel R., of Eugene. To Mr. and Mrs. Walker have been born seven children, as follows: Mary Ann, the wife of N. B. Walden, of Chester, Montana; Robert E., of Cottage Grove; Phoebe and Elizabeth, both of whom are deceased; Martha J., the wife of J. R. Wiseman, of Weiser, Idaho; John W., who is living in Waldport, Oregon; and George O., our subject.

Practically the entire life of George O. Walker has been passed in the immediate vicinity of his present home. After completing the course of the common schools he attended the Drain Normal School, from which institution he was graduated at the age of seventeen and for two years thereafter engaged in teaching. In common with all country lads while engaged in the mastery of his lessons he was also laying the foundation for an agricultural career by assisting his father with the work of the fields and care of the stock. At the age of nineteen years he was thoroughly familiar with every detail connected with ranching and began his independent career as an agriculturist by taking the entire responsibility of farming the home place containing five hundred acres. He subsequently rented his land and turned his attention to business activities by opening a general store at Walker station. During this time he also became associated with his brother John W. in the erection and operation of a sawmill. This venture did not prove to be remunerative and they abandoned it at the end of a year. Mr. Walker continued to conduct the store for six years, from the time he opened it, and at the end of that time withdrew from commercial activities and returned to ranching. He has ever since been devoting his entire energies to the cultivation of his land, his holdings now aggregating five hundred acres. One hundred and seventy-five acres of this has been brought into a high state of productivity but the remainder is in timber and pasture. One hundred and fifty acres of the land he is cultivating is entirely devoted to grain and annually yields abundant harvests. In connection with his general agriculture Mr. Walker also raises stock and is now milking ten cows that yield him a profitable income and he has a nice herd of Angora goats and a large number of hogs. He is meeting with lucrative returns from his various undertakings and as he is able is making further improvements on his place, and is adding to his equipment.

On the 8th of November, 1893, Mr. Walker was united in marriage to Miss Dollie S. Morningstar, a daughter of Abraham and Sarah J. (Watkins) Morningstar. They removed to Oregon from Illinois in 1877 and bought a ranch in the vicinity of Drain, where they continue to live. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Morningstar numbered eleven, as follows: Olive M., the wife of J. B. Powrie, of Eugene; Albert, who is deceased; Charles F., of Drain; Lewis, who is deceased; one who died in infancy; Mrs. Walker; one who died in infancy; John E., who is living at Creswell; one who died in infancy; Sibyl C., the wife of F. C. England, of Walker; and William R., of Drain. Mr. and Mrs. Walker have had nine children: Icie, who was born on the 26th of November, 1894; Valta V., whose natal day was November 13, 1896; Echo G., who was born on the 30th of August, 1899; Gale W., born on April 10, 1901; Ansel E., whose birth occurred on the 13th of April, 1903; Boyd F., born August 19, 1905; Sibyl T., whose natal day was the 4th of February, 1907; Mary J., born April 10, 1909; and Bonnie B., who was born on the 5th of February, 1912.

The family attend the Primitive Baptist church in which the parents hold membership, Mr. Walker being a minister of that faith, and in politics he is a republican, and for the past six years has been a director of the school board. He is a man of pronounced enterprise and activity and is intelligently concentrating his energies upon the development of his interests and is meeting with a corresponding degree of success.

ERNEST A. BREYMAN, who now lives retired in Portland, was born in Germany on January 13, 1840. His parents were Carl Frederick and Magdelena (Miller) Breyman, both of whom spent all their lives in Germany, the former passing away there at the age of fifty-four and the latter at forty-nine. The father was in the military service of Germany from his early youth until the time of his death. In his family were thirteen children, three of whom are now living. They are: Ernest A., of this review; W. E., of Salem; and Mrs. Bertha Sohst, a widow residing in Germany.

Ernest A. Breyman was baptised in the Lutheran church at Bockenem, Hanover, Germany, his godfather being the king of Hanover, who was an uncle of Queen Victoria. He received a good education in a high school in Germany and also obtained a diploma from a navigation school. In 1854, at the age of fifteen, he went to sea where he served in the capacity of cabin boy for two years. Afterwards he became an ordinary seaman and later was an able seaman for four years and filled every position on board including that of captain. He served on various vessels and went into many different ports of the world. The entire period of time in which he served as a seaman covered twelve years. In 1886, giving up his life as a sailor, he located at Salem, where he was employed in a store by his brother for one year. Afterwards he became engaged in the general mercantile business at Fairfield, Oregon, where he operated a store for thirteen years. Subsequently selling the same he came to Portland and was engaged in the grocery business on Front street for six years. Afterwards he went to Colfax, Washington, and bought a general merchandise store but after three years sold the same and returned to Portland, where he purchased three acres of land within the city limits, on which tract he is now living retired. His property is located in what is known as South Mount Tabor, on Fifty-fifth and Division streets.

Mr. Breyman, on July 3, 1874, was united in marriage to Miss Mary E. Eldridge, who was born in the village of Parkersville, in Marion county, Oregon, the daughter of F. E. and Anna (Cosgrove) Eldridge, the father a native of Pennsylvania and the mother of Canada. The mother was brought to Oregon by her parents in 1847 and the father crossed the plains in 1848 to California, in which state he was engaged for a short time in gold mining. He then came to Oregon, settling in Parkersville where he operated a general store and also a sawmill and flour-mill for some time. He owned the mill in partnership with Mr. Parker, for whom the town of Parkersville was named. In 1856 the father sold his business and purchased what was known as the old Gervais farm where he lived until his death in 1890. The mother passed away six years later. To Mr. and Mrs. Eldridge were born ten children: Mrs. Breyman; James E., who resides near Champoeg, in Marion county; Margaret E., who is a sister of St. Mary's Academy; Virginia P., who is the wife of A. M. Brown, of Marion county; Elsie A., who is now Mrs. Goulet, of Seattle, Washington; Annie G., who died at the age of twenty years; Hugh G., living east of Gervais, in Marion county; Emma C., now deceased, who was the wife of M. G. Green, of California; Freeman J., of Portland; and Adelia, who is the wife of W. H. Lawlor, who is engaged in mining in Nevada. Mrs. Breyman received her education in St. Mary's Academy, a convent of Salem. Mr. and Mrs. Breyman have become parents of seven children. Ella May, who was born May 4, 1875, has a high-school, college and musical education and is the wife of George H. Brownell, who is engaged in the furniture and undertaking business in Spokane. Frederick E., born January 13, 1877, has a good business education and now operates a marble mine in Tokeen, Alaska. Anna L., born in 1879, has a college and musical education and has been engaged in teaching school for the past five years in various parts of the state. Ralph Werner, born in July, 1881, has a business-college education and is engaged in the roofing and contracting business. Emma V., born March 23, 1883, is the wife of J. O. Throll, who is a traveling salesman of Spokane. She is a high-school graduate and also has a musical education. Albert E. was born in 1885, has completed a business-college course and is now engaged in the wholesale crockery business in Portland. Gretchen Elsie, who completes the family, was born in 1899 and is now at home.

In his political views Mr. Breyman is a republican but has never sought nor desired public office. Both in his work as a sailor and in his farming interests he has been very successful and his life record has at all times been a creditable one. Moreover, he has ever displayed the qualities of honorable and upright manhood and in the evening of his life his is a useful old age, giving of its rich store of wisdom and experience for the benefit of others.

GWIN S. BUTLER. Among the great developing agencies which have made the west the magnificent country which it is today, probably the most important, after the pioneers who opened the country and made the first inroads upon its primitive wildness, are the lives and exertions of the sons of these pioneers, natives of the west, whose careers have been important factors in its development and progress. Prominent among men of this class is Gwin S. Butler, of Ashland, who has the distinction of being the second oldest living native son of Jackson county. Since his birth there on January 19, 1854, Mr. Butler has had his home in this county, and all his efforts and energies, which are always factors to be reckoned with, have been devoted to the improvement and development of this section of the country.

Gwin S. Butler is a son of Ashman J. and America E. (Rollins) Butler. The father was a native of Illinois, and the mother's early home was in Kentucky. They were married in Des Moines, Iowa, in 1850, and two years later set out with ox teams for the long and arduous journey across the continent to the west. For five months they struggled with all the hardships of primitive travel, and when winter overtook them they had reached Yreka, California, where they remained for the winter. In January, 1853, the journey was continued over the Rogue river valley into Jackson county, Oregon, where Mr. Butler took up a donation claim of three hundred and twenty acres which now adjoins the city of Medford. Ashman J. Butler died on this claim in 1859. The mother and son remained on the claim, and on October 10, 1865, the mother was again married. Her second husband was Jacob Thompson, a pioneer of 1847, and at the time of his death one of the influential and prominent men in the county. A more extended account of him is given on another page of this work. Mr. and Mrs. Thompson died within three months of each other, she in November, 1910, and he in February, 1911, both in the eighty-fifth year of their age.

Gwin S. Butler was reared on his father's claim and acquired his early education in the common schools. This was later supplemented by a course at the Ashland Normal School. After finishing his education, he returned to the ranch and spent five years in farming, acquiring a practical working knowledge of the details of western ranching which has been invaluable to him in the operation of his present holdings. Mr. Butler removed to Ashland in 1879 and engaged in the mercantile business with which he was prominently identified for five years. The same qualities of business sagacity and acumen which had made his ranching successful, operated also in his mercantile career, and when he left it to join his stepfather in the stock-raising business, he had attained a degree of success which we are accustomed to associate with a long period of activity. Gwin S. Butler and his stepfather, Jacob Thompson, owned at this time valuable ranch lands both in Klamath and Jackson counties, and in 1884 they joined their resources and their energies and engaged in stock farming on a large scale. The venture was successful. Both Mr. Butler and his stepfather were keen and shrewd business men, well acquainted with the details of the business in which they were engaged, and had an accurate and practical knowledge of the natural conditions of the country in which they were working, to aid them in their activities. Mr. Butler kept his holdings in the stock farm until 1905, when he sold his interests in it and devoted his entire attention to looking after those of his parents.

On November 4, 1879, Gwin S. Butler was married to Miss Alice Barron, a native of Jackson county, a daughter of Major Barron, one of the pioneers of Jackson county, of whom a sketch appears elsewhere in this work. Mr. and Mrs. Butler have no children.

Mr. Butler is essentially a public-spirited man. He takes an intelligent interest in the politics of his section and has served several times in public capacities. He is consistently republican in his political affiliations. He was for four years county commissioner of Jackson county, and served one year as mayor of Ashland. He is at present an active and efficient member of the Ashland town council. He is very active in fraternal organizations, holding membership in the Ashland Lodge, No. 23, A. F. and A. M., in the Siskiyou Chapter, No. 4, R. A. M., and in Malta Commandery, No. 4, K. T. He is also a member of the Hillah Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S. of Ashland, and of the Woodmen of the World, besides being active in Ashland Lodge, No. 944, B. P. O. E.

Gwin S. Butler is one of the most prominent and active business men in Ashland today. He is well known in commercial circles and is an active factor in the commercial life of the city. His various commercial activities include a directorship in the United States National Bank, the presidency of the Granite City Savings Bank of Ashland, and the vice presidency of the Ashland Ice and Cold Storage Company. He is secretary of the Ashland Improvement Company and secretary and general manager of the Butler & Thompson Company.

Mr. Butler's career has been rewarded with well deserved success. A man who combined the qualities of strict integrity, honorable methods, and fairness in all business transactions, with commercial acumen and business instinct of a high order, has in his mental equipment and moral character the foundation of quick and sure success.

AMOS W. BOTKIN, M. D., one of the well known medical practitioners of Portland who previous to his coming had a wide experience gained in other parts of the country, is Dr. Amos W. Botkin, with offices at 74 East Sixty-third street. He was born in Keosauqua, Iowa, June 24, 1864, a son of Oscar F. and Agnes (Watt) Botkin. The father was born in Ohio and came of English and Dutch ancestry, while the mother is a native of Scotland. They were married in Iowa, where they lived until 1868, when they took up their abode in Barton county, Missouri. Oscar F. Botkin followed farming in Iowa. He also bought land in Barton county, Missouri, and while living there took up the study of medicine at St. Louis and later practiced his profession in Barton City. In 1876 he moved to Jersey county, Illinois, where he practiced his profession until 1883, when he decided to cast his lot with the people of Oregon and removed with his family to the Pacific coast, locating at Mount Tabor, then a little settlement adjacent to Portland. Here he continued the practice of medicine, but also bought and sold land, thus accumulating considerable property. He followed his profession until about 1911, when he retired from active practice. He owns a fine residence property and other valuable interests in Mount Tabor and in other parts of the state of Oregon, his home at present being in Cherryville, Oregon, where he also has property. Having attained the age of seventy years, he is practically living a retired life. Unto him and his wife were born six children, as follows: Amos W., of this review; two daughters who are deceased; Jessie, the wife of W. W. Sibray, of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, who is employed by the government in the department of commerce and labor; Ida, who is the wife of Thomas Graham, a druggist of Mount Tabor; and James O., who is still under the parental roof.

Dr. Amos W. Botkin received a common-school education in Illinois and while attending to his school duties read medicine in his father's office, later entering the medical department of Willamette University, from which he was graduated in 1890. Subsequently he entered the government service as a physician and in 1892 went to Philadelphia, where he took a post-graduate course in the Jefferson Medical College, being graduated therefrom in 1893. He then journeyed to Portland, Oregon, where he practiced until 1897, when he went to Alaska, following his profession at Dawson City for one year. Returning to Umatilla county, Oregon, in 1898, he practiced there for six years and then settled in Mount Tabor, where he has since continued his professional career.

In 1889 Dr. Botkin was married to Miss Mabel Delano, a native of Portland and a daughter of H. H. and Ella (Peters) Delano. Her father was born in East St. Louis, Illinois, and her mother in St. Joseph, Missouri. The mother's parents started to cross the plains for Oregon when she was only ten days old, the family emigrating here in 1853. H. H. Delano came to Oregon in 1870 and in this state wedded Miss Ella Peters. They have since remained in Oregon and have resided in Portland throughout almost the entire period. Mr. Delano was an accountant but, having a fine education, taught school for a considerable period. He was also a journalist but his principal life's work was that of an accountant. Unto him and his wife were born five children, namely: Mabel, who is the wife of Dr. Botkin; William, who died in infancy; Helen, the wife of Rufus V. Shuman, who is engaged in the nursery business at Mount Tabor; Chester, who died in infancy; and Miriam, who is still at home and is fitting herself for the office of librarian. Unto Dr. and Mrs. Botkin have been born three children: Maurice D., whose natal year was 1902; Willeen A., whose birth occurred in 1907; and Eleanor J., born in 1908.

Dr. Botkin gives his political allegiance to the republican party. In a fraternal way he is connected with the Masonic order, belonging to Mount Tabor Lodge No. 42, in which he has filled all the chairs. He is also affiliated with the United Artisans, being a member of Lodge No. 36 at Portland. Dr. Botkin is a successful representative of his profession, enjoying a large and lucrative practice. His extensive professional career has well fitted him for the large medical practice which he now enjoys and he is well known among the progressive and efficient physicians of Portland. He owns a beautiful and well appointed residence and numerous other properties in the city and also some acreage property at Sandy, Oregon.

BRADFORD C. TROWBRIDGE, of John Day, Grant county, Oregon, has for many years been a prominent ranchman. He was born in Broome county, New York, September 20, 1836, a son of Augustus and Lucy (Bierce) Trowbridge. The father was a native of the state of New York while the mother was born in Rhode Island. The parents were married in New York and after living there until about 1846 they removed to Lee county, Illinois. The father was a farmer and shoemaker and purchased land about six miles from Dixon, upon which he made his home until his death, which occurred in 1869.

Bradford C. Trowbridge was reared at home and received his education in the common schools of New York and Illinois. His first work in Illinois was breaking prairie with four or five yoke of oxen. In 1859 he determined to cross the great American plains and make his home on the Pacific slope. Accordingly he set out with ox teams in the spring and after six months' travel arrived in California where he became a miner, working first at Spring Gulch and later in Henley. In 1862 he removed to Oregon, arriving in John Day valley on July 19, and on the next day located the land which constitutes his present ranch, the first to be settled upon along the John Day river, taking it up under the preemption act. He built a log house on the place that fall, cut a quantity of hay for the winter and soon became comfortably settled in his wilderness home. Upon this ranch he has since continuously made his home and it is now one of the fine ranch properties of Grant county. He owns altogether two thousand, one hundred and forty-six acres. He has for several years made a specialty of the horse and cattle business and in this connection has become well known in various parts of the state.

Bradford C. Trowbridge was married twice, his first union in 1864 being with Margaret McGilvlay, a native of Scotland. He was married for the second time on the 1st of January, 1888, to Mrs. John Herburger, formerly Miss Marjory Milnie, who was also a native of Scotland, born in Banffshire. To his second wife were born three children, of whom only one survives, Charles Augustus, who is attending high school in John Day. Mr. Trowbridge is a republican and is prominent in the party in Grant county. He is a member of the county board of commissioners, and is serving his second term. Not only is he one of the first pioneers who settled in Grant county having been fifty years on his present ranch but he is also a man of ability, public spirit and enterprise. His successful farming operations have given him promi-

MR. AND MRS. B. C. TROWBRIDGE

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASTOR, LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS.

nence and his excellent qualities as a citizen have made him greatly respected by all of the people with whom he is acquainted. He takes great interest in the affairs of the county and in his official as well as private capacity has rendered great service to his community where he is recognized as one of the most prominent men.

ALONZO P. MEAD. One of the older residents of Portland, a retired lumberman and more recently an operator in Portland realty, is Alonzo P. Mead, who was born in Michigan, July 16, 1838. His parents were Jabez and Caroline Mead, both of whom were born in the state of New York, where they were married and lived for a short time, afterwards removing to Oakland county, Michigan, where the father bought land. Both the father and grandfather owned large tracts in Michigan, where the former died at the age of eighty years, the mother passing away at the age of seventy-five. Jabez and Caroline Mead were the parents of nine children: Lafayette, deceased, who was a soldier in the Civil war, holding the rank of captain; Alonzo P.; Melissa, who became the wife of a Mr. Bennett, of Michigan, and is now deceased; Lucy, whose first husband died in Libby Prison and who afterward married a Mr. Cusick, of Ashland, Oregon; Phoebe, who became the wife of Frank Fournia, of Michigan, and is now deceased; Helen, who is the wife of Hiram Cusick, of Le Roy, Michigan; Emmeline Roach, a widow, who resides at Ashland, Oregon; Sarah, who passed away in Michigan at the age of six years; and Annie, deceased, who married Frank Cusick.

Alonzo P. Mead received a common-school education and was reared in Saginaw, Michigan. At an early age he began working in a planing mill and when seventeen years of age was placed in charge of the mill, where he worked for twelve years. He then bought an interest in a mill, which he operated for seven years, or until it was destroyed by fire. He then removed to Cleveland, Ohio, and in company with Messrs. Wiggins and Howry, engaged in the lumber business. Three years later he sold his interest in the firm and returned to Saginaw, Michigan, where he was again employed for a time in a mill. He next removed to Buffalo, New York, and in partnership with W. R. Burt, of Michigan, built a planing mill, which he operated for five years. He then became interested in the Buffalo Planing Mills Company of Buffalo, New York, which became the largest concern of its kind in the United States, dressing annually thirty million feet of lumber. Mr. Mead was superintendent of this plant for seven years, when he sold his interest in it and removed to Oregon in 1890, settling at Mount Tabor, now in the city limits of Portland. Here Mr. Mead led a comparatively retired life, although he operated extensively in realty, still owning considerable property in Portland. He also owns the fine home in which he lives and is a well known man in his community.

On the 16th of July, 1861, at Saginaw, Michigan, Mr. Mead was married to Miss Amelia Johnson, who was born in Blenmon, Canada, October 6, 1841, a daughter of Moses and Mary (McGarvin) Johnson, both of whom were natives of Canada. While living in Canada Mr. Johnson was a district judge and a political leader of ability and prominence. He remained in Canada until 1860, when he removed to Bay City, Michigan. After living there for a time he retired and continued to live in Michigan until his death, which occurred when he was ninety years of age. The mother also attained a ripe old age, passing away in the same state, at the age of eighty-eight. They were the parents of eight children: Henry, who served throughout the entire period of the Civil war and passed away at the age of seventy-five; Mary Ann, who married Henry Rogers, both of whom are now deceased; George, who died in Portland, Oregon, at the age of seventy-five; Alfred, who was eighty-three years of age and resided in Michigan until his death; Clark, who was a thirty-second degree Mason, and passed away in St. Paul, Minnesota; Phoebe, who died at Bay City, Michigan, at the age of twenty-five; and Arvilla, the widow of John A. Brewer, who resided in Michigan.

Mr. and Mrs. Mead have no children of their own but have reared and educated two children. Jennie Mead, whom they adopted, was born in 1861 and died at the age of sixteen, while attending Oberlin College, at Oberlin, Ohio. They also reared and educated Laura Mead, who was a graduate of Hamilton College, at Syracuse, New York. She became the wife of Harlow Munsell, of Buffalo, New York, and passed away at the age of twenty-four years. Mr. and Mrs. Mead also reared William Mead, looking after his education and training him from his eleventh to his twentieth year, when he was returned to his mother. They also reared two other girls, looking after their education until they were graduated from college. On July 16, 1911, Mr. and Mrs. Mead could look back upon fifty years of marital life—fifty years of faithful companionship spent in true understanding and perfect sympathy with each other—fifty years filled with joys and sorrows jointly borne. Many friends, neighbors and church associations gathered around the family on this auspicious occasion of a golden jubilee—in all over a hundred—to offer to this worthy and venerable couple sincere wishes for many a year of happiness to come.

Mr. Mead is a republican in politics although he is not and never has been an office seeker. He and his wife are members of the First Baptist church (the White Temple) of Portland. It is fitting that when a man has arrived at the ripe age of Mr. Mead, having been actively engaged in the strenuous labors of life for so many years, that he should retire to the solitude of his own home and the society of his friends and neighbors. His life's labors have been for the most part strenuous and not only lucrative to himself but of great use to the community at large. The labor of love which Mr. and Mrs. Mead performed in the rearing and educating of children not of their own flesh and blood indicates the magnanimous spirit which possesses them and was an undertaking of no small moment. The wordly possessions of Mr. Mead in Portland are not inconsiderable and because of them and also in view of his long residence in Portland, his generous spirit, his affable temperament and his well ordered life, he is placed among the prominent people of this great city.

MARION VEATCH, a well known dealer in musical merchandise in Cottage Grove, also conducts an undertaking establishment and has for many years been associated with the business interests of the city. He was born in Missouri, October 9, 1873, the son of Francis M. and Amanda (Swearingen) Veatch, the former a native of Illinois and the latter of Kentucky. The father, who was a farmer by occupation, removed with his family from Missouri to Oregon in 1890. He passed away on the 15th of July, 1907, and the mother, who is still living, makes her home at Buena Park, California. In their family were three children. Marion, of this review, is the eldest. John W. Veatch, who is a stockman of Cottage Grove, is married and has two children, Sylvia and Sibyl. Nora M. is a resident of Buena Park, California, and her mother, Mrs. Amanda Veatch, is a member of the household. The daughter is now Mrs. L. Caspar Lee and has a family of three children, George, Audrey and Grace.

Marion Veatch remained at home with his parents until he attained the age of twenty-four years. He then went to the gold mines of Josephine county, Oregon, where he remained for four years. He was successful in his mining operations and invested his savings in mining claims until he became the owner of several. He never made any phenomenal strikes but his success was above that of the average miner. After several years spent in mining he settled in Cottage Grove and for three and one-half years was engaged in the butchering business. He then sold out and bought a furniture and undertaking establishment which, after conducting for a time, he sold and engaged in the sale of musical instruments, retaining the undertaking department he had previously owned. His business is a lucrative one and he has an excellent standing in business and social circles.

On November 7, 1897, in Lane county, Mr. Veatch was married to Miss Myrtle F. Ostrander, a daughter of James E. and Mary B. (Lovelace) Ostrander, both natives of Illinois. The Ostrander family lived for many years in Minnesota, where Mrs. Veatch was born, but removed to Oregon in 1894, the father being a barber by trade. They were the parents of two children: Myrtle F., now Mrs. Marion Veatch; and Nina, the wife of Charles Humphreys, manager of the Postal Telegraph Company at Astoria, Oregon. Mr. and Mrs. Veatch have a son, Roy Neil, who was born January 12, 1901, and is now attending the public schools.

In his political views Mr. Veatch is liberal, giving his support to such candidates for public office as he deems best suited for the positions to which they aspire. In his fraternal connections he belongs to the Masonic order, the Order of the Eastern Star, the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Knights of Pythias and the Woodmen of the World. Both he and his wife are members of the Presbyterian church of Cottage Grove and are much interested in church work, contributing liberally toward the support of that denomination. Having long been identified with the business interests of Cottage Grove Mr. Veatch has become well acquainted with everyone in the city and community. He bears an excellent reputation for integrity and business acumen and by devoting his attention to his business, a habit which he formed early in life, he has accumulated a comfortable competence. He is respected by the entire community and has long been regarded as one of the leading citizens of Cottage Grove.

EMERY W. GOSSLER owns and operates a ranch of ninety-one and a half acres located two and a half miles southeast of Springfield, where he has resided for about five years. He is a native of Iowa, his birth having occurred in Jefferson county, that state, on August 26, 1872, and is a son of William Henry and Charlotte (Weaver) Gossler. The parents were born, reared and married in Pennsylvania and there passed the first years of their domestic life. They came to Iowa in 1861, first locating in Van Buren county, but they subsequently purchased a farm in Jefferson county, which the father operated for thirteen years. Disposing of this he invested the proceeds in a quarter section of unimproved and uncultivated land in Ida county, Iowa. Twelve years later he likewise sold this and removed with his family to Oregon, settling on a ranch of one hundred and sixty acres in the vicinity of Eugene. He operated this for twelve years and at the expiration of that time disposed of it and retired to Eugene, where he is now living. The mother is deceased, having passed away in Iowa on the 22d of February, 1893. Ten children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Gossler, seven of whom are still living, as follows: Nelson B., who is living on Camp Creek, Oregon; Phillip M., a resident of Springfield; Josephine, the wife of Moses Curtis, of Cherokee, Iowa; Maggie, the wife of the Rev. D. T. Day, of Bellingham, Washington; Charles, who is deceased; Catherine, the wife of Judge Wintermore, of Eugene, Oregon; Emery, the subject of this sketch; Mazie, who married B. F. Goodpasture, of Eugene; Harry, who is deceased, and one who died in infancy.

The education of Emery W. Gossler was obtained in the common schools of his native state, whence he removed with his father to Oregon. He remained at home until he was married at the age of twenty-six and then took up a homestead near Cottage Grove, Oregon. During the succeeding seven years he gave his undivided attention to the cultivation of that tract, which contained one hundred and sixty acres. Disposing of it at the end of that time he purchased ninety-one and a half acres two miles south of Springfield, and here he has continued his agricultural pursuits. He has wrought extensive improvements on his ranch during the period of his ownership and is annually realizing a good income from its cultivation. Twenty-five acres of the land has been brought into a high state of cultivation, and he has good, substantial barns and outbuildings and a comfortable residence on his place.

In October, 1899, Mr. Gossler was united in marriage to Miss Katie Brown, whose birth occurred in Kansas on February 3, 1877. She is a daughter of Samuel and Jennie (Mortimore) Brown, the father a native of Ohio and the mother of Iowa. They were married in Kansas and lived there until 1886, when they removed to Washington. Two years later they went to Idaho and resided for a similar period and then came to Lane county, settling in the vicinity of Springfield. From there at the end of one year they went to Cottage Grove, where the father passed away in 1892, but the mother is still living and now makes her home in Eugene. Five children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Brown, as follows: Nellie, the wife of Ray Scroggin, of Eugene; Mrs. Gossler; Fannie, the wife of N. H. Champion, of Eugene; Harry, who is living in Eugene with his mother; and Bessie, the wife of Leroy Buley, of Portland. Mr. Brown went to the front during the early days of the Civil war and remained in the service for three years. Mr. and Mrs. Gossler have had four children: Kenneth, who was born on July 15, 1900; two who died in infancy; and Loy, whose birth occurred on the 20th of February, 1905.

The family attend the services of the Methodist Episcopal church, in which they all hold membership, and Mr. Gossler votes the republican ticket. Although he leads a very unobtrusive life he is not at all remiss in matters of citizenship but takes an active and helpful interest in all movements that he feels will promote the progress of the community or the development of its various public utilities.

RICHARD McMAHON is one of Erin's venturesome sons who in early youth saw the superior advantages offered by America to the honest toilers of the old world and emigrated to the United States when but fifteen years of age. He was born in Ireland, May 10, 1867, a son of John and Katherine (Madden) McMahon. He was educated in Ireland and when free from school work he rendered such assistance as was within his power to his parents in the home. When he had attained the age of fifteen years he left school and, bidding farewell to his parents and friends, sailed for America. On landing in New York he settled temporarily in the metropolis, where for two years he was employed at various occupations, and then went to New Jersey, where he worked for one year, and afterward migrated to Oregon, where he settled in Portland. After being employed in that city for about three years he removed to Condon, where he took up one hundred and sixty acres of government land, which he began to clear and cultivate with energy and good judgment, adding such improvements as were necessary and as he could afford to place upon his farm. He gave the strictest attention to his duties and his efforts were so well directed that it was not a great while until he was able to purchase two hundred acres more land, and he has been successfully engaged in agricultural pursuits, living on his farm near Condon, since first settling there. Although since coming to Oregon he has been obliged to learn most of what he now knows about farming he showed remarkable adaptability to that occupation and has followed it with almost uniform success from the beginning. He follows general farming and does not specialize in any particular branch, but is always alert to acquire new and improved methods with a view to bettering his condition and rendering his farm more fertile and valuable.

In his political tendencies Mr. McMahon is an adherent of the democracy and renders his political support unreservedly to that party. He regularly attends the services of the Catholic church, being a devout member of that religious body. He has resided on the farm which he now owns for many years and has become well acquainted in Condon and vicinity and is greatly esteemed for his many good traits of character which render him a most desirable citizen. Although an assiduous worker on his farm, to which he gives the most of his attention, he still finds time to devote to the social side of life and is popular in social as well as business circles, having long since been recognized as one of the most respected members of the community.

WILLIAM LAUGHLIN, who is living retired in Yamhill, was for many years successfully identified with general agricultural pursuits in this state and is now the owner of seven hundred and forty acres of valuable land. His birth occurred in Missouri on the 13th of October, 1830, his parents being Samuel and Nancy (Doty) Laughlin, who were natives of South Carolina and North Carolina respectively. They were married in Missouri and remained residents of that state for nineteen years or until 1847, when they came across the plains to Oregon, stopping on Wapato lake in Yamhill county. Subsequently Mr. and Mrs. Laughlin each took up a donation claim of three hundred and twenty acres but the latter died before proving up her claim and, owing to a new law which was passed about that time, her land was returned to the government. Samuel Laughlin, however, resided on his claim and successfully carried on farming until called to his final rest in 1869. Unto him and his wife were born seven children, as follows: Wil liam, of this review; Lee, who is a resident of Yamhill; Samuel, who passed away in 1911 at the age of seventy-six years; Delia, who is also deceased; Nancy, who is the widow of Jacob Capps and resides in Portland, Oregon; and Lucinda and Mary, both of whom have passed away.

William Laughlin acquired but a limited education in his youth but constantly augmented his knowledge by reading, experience and observation until he became a well informed man. When eighteen years of age he left the parental roof and in 1849 made his way to California in search of the precious metal, remaining in the Golden state for two years and three months. On the expiration of that period, in 1851, he returned to Oregon and took up a donation claim in Yamhill county, disposing of the property, however, four years later. He next bought a tract of two hundred acres and was actively engaged in its cultivation for a period of thirty-five years. At the end of that time he purchased and took up his abode on a farm of one hundred and ninety-five acres, residing on the property for twelve years and then selling it to one of his sons. Since that time he has lived retired, making his home on a tract of fifteen acres in Yamhill, where he owns a fine residence. His holdings embrace seven hundred and forty acres of well improved land, two hundred and fifty acres thereof being under a high state of cultivation.

In April, 1857, Mr. Laughlin was united in marriage to Miss Phoebe Roberts, a native of Indiana and a daughter of Henry and Dinah (Behart) Roberts, who were born in Pennsylvania and Indiana respectively. In 1848 they began the journey across the plains to Oregon, intending to settle in Yamhill county, but the mother passed away when within a hundred miles of their destination. Henry Roberts took up a donation claim of three hundred and twenty acres near what is now Yamhill, continuing to reside thereon until his death in 1872. His surviving children are two in number, namely: Mrs. Laughlin; and Jacob, living in Wasco county, Oregon.

Unto our subject and his wife were born sixteen children, as follows: Bedford Henry, fifty-three years of age, who resides at Forest Grove, Oregon; Charles, who is fifty-one years old and makes his home near Roseburg, Oregon; George, forty-nine years of age, who is a resident of Fairbanks, Alaska; Abraham, forty-four years old, who is living in Yamhill county, this state; Mary, forty-three years of age, who is the widow of William P. Tait and resides in Roseburg, Oregon; William R., who is forty years old and lives on the homestead; Samuel, a sketch of whom appears on another page of this work; Benjamin F., who makes his home in Yamhill county and is thirty-six years of age; Alice, thirty-four years of age, who is the wife of Carl Trullinger, of Yamhill; Leona, thirty-two years old, who is the wife of M. A. Holder and makes her home in California; Delia, thirty years of age, who is the wife of A. L. Richardson, of Portland; Crystal, twenty-nine years of age, who also makes her home in Portland; Effie, Elmer and Edith, all of whom are deceased; and one who died in infancy. All of the children enjoyed excellent educational advantages, some of them being graduates of the State Normal School at Monmouth and following the profession of teaching.

Mr. Laughlin is a stanch republican in politics but has never sought nor desired office as a reward for his party fealty. He has now passed the eighty-first milestone on life's journey and enjoys the respect and veneration which should ever be accorded one who has traveled thus far on his earthly pilgrimage and whose career has been at all times upright and honorable. Coming to the west when a youth of seventeen, he has since remained in this part of the country and has gained an enviable measure of success in the utilization of its opportunities.

EDWARD WOOD, who is now spending the evening of life in honorable retirement, was for a number of years actively and successfully identified with general agricultural pursuits in Washington county and is still the owner of a valuable farm of one hundred and forty acres, located four miles southeast of Beaverton. His birth occurred in Canada, on the 17th of March, 1837, his parents being Robert and Jane (Lee) Wood, both natives of Canada. Following the demise of his wife, which occurred in Canada, in 1847, Robert Wood removed to Minnesota, where he passed away. He was the father of four children, three of whom are yet living, namely: Edward, of this review; Henry, who is a resident of Minnesota; and Jane, of Canada.

Edward Wood obtained his education in the common schools and in 1847, when a lad of ten years, accompanied his uncle to Iowa, working in that state until nineteen years of age. Subsequently he devoted his attention to the cultivation of rented land until 1859, which year witnessed his removal to California, where he was employed in a sawmill for two years. On the expiration of that period he returned to Iowa and again cultivated rented land until 1864, when he moved westward to California and there remained until 1866. In that year he came to Oregon, settling in Washington county, where he proved up a claim of one hundred and sixty acres and later purchased a tract of similar size. The land was covered with a dense forest growth, but he resolutely undertook the task of clearing and developing it, eventually transforming the place into one of the finely improved farms of the community. Through the successful conduct of his agricultural interests he acquired a handsome competence and in 1902 withdrew from the active work of the fields, that he might enjoy the fruits of his toil in ease. The farm of one hundred and sixty acres, within ten miles of Portland, is still in his possession.

In 1857, in Iowa, Mr. Wood was united in marriage to Miss Ann Grabel, a native of Pennsylvania. Her father crossed the plains to Oregon in 1864, first settling in Washington county and later in Tillamook county. Subsequently he took up his abode in Hillsboro, where his demise occurred in 1899. His wife was called to her final rest in 1902. Three of their children are still living, but Mrs. Wood passed away in 1892. To our subject and his wife were born five children, namely: Charles and Arvin both of whom are deceased; Hannah, the wife of C. Christenson, of Washington county, Oregon; Edward, living in the state of Washington; and Clint, also a resident of Washington county, Oregon.

MRS. EDWARD WOOD

EDWARD WOOD

Since casting his first presidential ballot for Stephen A. Douglas, Mr. Wood has supported the men and measures of the democratic party, believing firmly in its principles. He has been identified with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows for thirty-five years and is also a charter member of Butte Grange, which was organized in 1874. Mr. Wood has now passed the seventy-fifth milestone on life's journey and enjoys the veneration and respect accorded one, who has traveled thus far on this earthly pilgrimage and whose career has been at all times upright and honorable. The period of his residence in this state covers forty-five years and he is therefore largely familiar with its annals from the pioneer period down to the present time.

MRS. MAY DE LAMTER, the manager of the Baden Hotel, has been a resident of Baker for eighteen years. She was born at Ogden, Utah, and is a daughter of George A. and Elizabeth Richardson, the father a native of the state of New York and the mother of Pennsylvania. They crossed the plains to Ogden, Utah, during the early pioneer days, making the journey with ox teams. Later they removed to Nevada, and there the mother passed away in 1880, following which the father became a resident of Baker, his death occurring here in 1910. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Richardson numbered nine, seven of whom are still living.

Mrs. May Richardson DeLamter was reared to womanhood in her native city. In 1887 she became the wife of Frank DeLamter, who was born in California, whence he came to Ogden. Soon after their marriage they located in Nevada, remaining there until 1893, when they came to Baker. Here Mrs. DeLamter subsequently took charge of the Baden Hotel, and has ever since been conducting this hostelry. It is a first-class hotel in every sense of the word and is provided with all modern conveniences. The rooms are pleasant and comfortable while the table and service is better than is to be found in the average hotel in towns of this size. It is conducted strictly on the American plan, and under the capable supervision of Mrs. DeLamter is bringing good returns.

The family of Mr. and Mrs. DeLamter numbers five, as follows: Myrtle, the wife of B. W. Corbett, of Westfall, Oregon; Clara, who married Harry Badabough, of Baker county; and George, Homer and Leola, all of whom are at home.

Mrs. DeLamter is a member of the church of the Latter Day Saints, and has reared her family in that faith. She is an unusually capable business woman, and manifests much sagacity and foresight in the conduct of her affairs. As she is industrious and enterprising in her methods she is meeting with success, and has every reason to feel gratified with her achievements.

JUDGE W. H. PACKWOOD. The last surviving member of the state constitutional convention, Judge W. H. Packwood, came to the Pacific coast in 1849 and there is no notable experience of any kind connected with the upbuilding of the northwest with which he has not been actively associated, from the subjugation of the Indians to the reclamation of the arid lands through the conservation of the water supplies. No history of the state would be complete without extended reference to him and his life work. Tradition gives the origin of the family name of Packwood as follows: In Colonial days there was a flood in the Potomac river valley in Virginia, on which occasion a small boy too young to know or tell his name was taken by some boatmen from an immense drift tree. They reared the little lad and called him Billy. He was a strong, vigorous boy and would carry big loads of wood to the boat. Because of this it was proposed that he should be called Packwood, which name was adopted. He became a large stockman, married, settled on the James river and reared a family, from whom all of the Packwoods known to the judge have been descended. This story of his ancestry came to him from his father's first cousin, "Uncle" Elisha Packwood, whom he met in 1864 and who died some years ago in Washington. In 1854 he had visited his old grandmother, then more than one hundred years of age, well cared for by two negro slaves, there being about three hundred on the plantation. His grandfather had willed that the negroes should have all they made on the plantation from his to her death and that all that would emigrate to Texas should be free. This will was undoubtedly made before the admission of Texas to the Union. An old Scotchman, Archie Downey, in Baker county said his people joined the Packwoods in Virginia and that the name of the subject of this review should be Duncan, for he claimed that at the time of the flood when a boy was found on a tree it was known that four families had settled well up the river and that all were drowned save perhaps this one boy, for it was known that a family of the name of Duncan had a boy of about the age of the one picked up and it was believed that he was the Duncan boy.

Larkin Packwood, the grandfather of Judge Packwood, was born in Virginia and afterward went to Kentucky and to Tennessee. He married, had ten sons and two daughters, including Larkin Canada Packwood, who was one of the youngest and was born in Tennessee. The grandfather removed to Illinois and, owning slaves, at the admission of the state to the Union, removed into the Ozark country of Missouri. Larkin C. Packwood did not go with him but remained in Illinois and on October 31, 1831, married Elizabeth Cathcart Stormont, who was born in South Carolina, a descendant of the Cathcart family of Scotland, and came to Illinois about 1826.

The son of this marriage, William Henderson Packwood, was born on Jordans Prairie, north of Mount Vernon, Illinois, October 23, 1832. His middle name was in honor of his grandmother's family, the Hendersons of Kentucky. The father, Larkin C. Packwood, first followed farming and was afterward foreman for R. G. Shannon, a prominent merchant of Sparta, Randolph county, Illinois, for seven years or more. His son William was there sent to school for about eighteen months or two years, acquainting himself with the "three R's," which was all the schooling he ever had. His father then removed about four miles east of St. Louis and conducted a dairy. Early in 1844 he went to Collinsville, where his wife died on September 8th of that year. She had become the mother of two sons and four daughters, of whom one son and two daughters died in very early life. Mary became the wife of a physician of Quincy, Illinois, and died in early womanhood. Agnes, the other daughter, was married twice and her death occurred in Coos county, Oregon, about thirty years ago. After losing his first wife Larkin C. Packwood married again and removed to St. Louis. He hauled wood to the city and made trips as a peddler to southern Missouri, usually accompanied by his son William, who well remembers being frequently called upon to read and write for groups of old men and women, young men and girls, who regarded it as a wonderful thing to see a boy of twelve or thirteen years read and write as well as he did. He spent one summer on the farm of Ed. Dews, twenty-five miles east of St. Louis, and a winter and part of one summer at the home of his grandfather Stormont in Jefferson county, Illinois. He then joined his father, who had removed to Springfield, and in the winter clerked in a grocery store, while in the summer he worked on a farm, being thus employed until September, 1848. He frequently met Abraham Lincoln, for they both followed the same road in going to the business section of Springfield—Lincoln on his way to his law office and Judge Packwood to his place as clerk in the store.

On the 23d of September, 1848, having secured the reluctant consent of his father for his enlistment in the Mexican war, he attempted to join the army as one of Captain J. B. Backenstos' Mounted Rifles, the captain agreeing to accept him on the promise that he would "never desert." He was then in his fifteenth year and by hard stretching could reach the standard of five feet three inches. The recruits were sent to Jefferson barracks in December, 1848, and were then examined as to their physical fitness to become soldiers. They stripped and the examining physician, thumping Judge Packwood on the breast, said he would not live to be twenty-two. That this was a death blow to his hopes must have shown in his face, for as he went out Colonel W. W. Loring, commanding the United States Mounted Rifles, approached him and in a low tone asked: "Do you want to go?" He said that he did and the next day when the rejected were reexamined by a board of doctors Colonel Loring, again standing near the door, came up to him with one of the examiners. He was not asked to undress but was sent out, passed. He was assigned to Company B, United States Mounted Rifles, under Captain Noah Newton, and marched overland to Forth Leavenworth, Colonel Loring establishing Camp Sumner about five miles west of the fort, where he drilled the regiment. On the 10th of May they broke camp and began the long march to Oregon with General Wilson, commissioner of Indian affairs for the Pacific coast, Captain R. M. Morris of the Rifles, Lieutenant Haynes of the Artillery and twenty-five men of Company D acting as an escort. On the 5th of June they broke camp and marched across the plains to Sacramento, spending five months on the trip, and proceeded to Fort Kearney, thence to Fort Laramie, on to Fort Bridger, to Salt Lake City, and to Haughton, now Placerville, California. They frequently saw Indians and many herds of buffalo, one herd being estimated at five thousand head. Cholera was prevalent along the route and there were many desecrated graves. All of the privations and the hardships of campaigning across the plains in 1849 were experienced. The winter was spent at Sonoma, during which time Colonel Joe Hooker was tried by a general court martial. Judge Packwood was detailed as orderly for the court, which lasted ten or more days, during which he met many men who afterward won distinction in the Civil war. By April only three or four of the original escort remained, the others having gone to the mines. These were put on board the revenue cutter Ewing bound for Astoria, Oregon, and they were in a heavy storm lasting about ten days. As they approached the Columbia river night drew on but there was no wind and Captain McArthur secured a whaling boat, put in a crew and towed it over the bar. From Astoria they pulled up the river to Fort Vancouver and joined the regiment. At Astoria Judge Packwood saw the timber that was gotten out by D. M. Frost for the keel of the first steamboat ever built on the Columbia river. It was named the Columbia and came up to Fort Vancouver in July, 1850.

In 1851 the command to which Judge Packwood belonged was sent to California. Their steamer, the Massachusetts, stuck on the bar and had to put back into Bakers bay but the next day was more successful in making the ocean and proceeded to San Francisco and thence to Benicia, where the troops remained on attached service with the infantry then at the post. Judge Packwood served with Major Wessels as escort for Colonel Roderick McKee, commissioner, making treaties with all the California Indians from Clear Lake to Scotts valley and from the Trinity and Klamath rivers down the Sacramento valley by Reddings and on to Benicia, where he served until transferred to Company C, First United States Dragoons. In 1851 there was trouble with the Coquille and Coast Indians and Judge Packwood's command was put on the schooner Lincoln at San Francisco with First Lieutenant Stanton in command, bound for Port Orford. A heavy December storm wrecked the boat, which was driven ashore opposite to the present site of Empire City on Coos bay, January 3, 1852. The wind and tide drove them high on the beach. No lives were lost but the vessel was a total wreck. With the help of the Indians, however, they saved their supplies and made a camp near the beach, whence they went overland to Port Orford in May. Judge Packwood was soon afterward promoted to corporal and later to sergeant and quartermaster sergeant of the post. He was out with scouting parties and was with Lieutenant Stanton in July, 1852, in a fight with the Indians at Big Bend, on the Rogue river. His headquarters were at Port Orford until he was discharged, September 23, 1853, having served the full five years. Mines had been found along the seaside and he and a partner, George H. Abbott, purchased horses and followed packing. They also took up mining claims which they later sold and went up the Coquille river, securing a ranch. The Indians causing trouble, a company was formed of which Mr. Abbott became captain and Judge Packwood lieutenant. After some of the Indians were killed peace was declared. The partners then followed mining, packing and merchandising until December, 1854, when Mr. Abbott went on a prospecting trip to California, Judge Packwood remaining on the Coquille river. In 1855, on the outbreak of the Indian war, a company was formed of which he was elected captain, afterward receiving a commission as captain of the Coquille Guards from George L. Curry, governor of Oregon. By making an active and aggressive campaign in which two Indians were killed he brought about the surrender of all three tribes, turning them over to Ben Wright, Indian agent. He then discharged his company after fifty-three days' service. He next went to Coos bay, joined Captain W. H. Harris of the Volunteers, and was elected sergeant. They had been in the service over one hundred days when the war closed. Judge Packwood then made up reports for S. S. Mann, quartermaster, and B. F. White, acting assistant commissary, receiving sixteen dollars per day in war script for eighty days' work. He then went to the Sixes river mines and in 1857, when an election was held to choose members to form a state constitution, Judge Packwood, who was then not twenty-five years of age and had not voted up to that time, was unanimously chosen to represent Curry county. He had previously taken part in making laws in mining camps and even presided as chairman at miners' meetings but had no other experience qualifying him for the position. Stating this fact to his old partner, the latter gave him the advice: "Be yourself." He took his place as a member of as distinguished a body of men as ever met in Oregon, two becoming governors, four United States senators, two congressmen, one a federal judge, six judges of the state courts, one attorney general and one of the United States and mayor of Portland and still another mayor of Portland, while another enjoyed the distinction of being successively congressman, governor and United States senator. At the beginning Judge Packwood knew only two members, Judge Deady and David Logan. He was instrumental in having the elk placed on the seal of the state, where it can be seen now, and for over fifty years past has appeared on the first page of "Every Oregonian." Judge Packwood is now the only living member of that convention.

After its adjournment he visited his old friend Abbott at Siletz and Yaquina bay, where he was subagent for the Indians. That winter Judge Packwood clerked for Metcalf, the Indian agent, and in the spring resumed the raising of cattle and horses at Coquille. He was elected assessor of Coos county, not knowing that he was a candidate until the day of election. In 1862 he lost his ranch, cattle and horses and started for the mines of eastern Oregon, discovered in the fall of 1861, arriving at Blue Canyon on June 12 and helping lay out the town of Auburn the following day. There he began merchandising, freighting and packing, becoming a member of the firm of Knight, Abbott & Packwood, and in connection with Ira Ward and others he organized the Auburn Water Company and located the water rights about August 30, 1862. They built some miles of ditches and sold out in November at twenty-five per cent profit. The work was completed at a cost of about two hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars and the water rights are now owned by Baker as the water supply for the city. He was one of three men selected to act as judges for the miners in September to try a Frenchman who was later hung for poisoning his partners. The other judges were a Mr. Able and James R. McBride, afterward appointed consul to the Hawaiian islands by President Lincoln. The trial was by jury.

On October 16, 1862, Judge Packwood married Miss Johanna A. O'Brien, who came across the plains with her sister and brother-in-law, Daniel McLaughlin. She taught the first school in Omaha and with the assistance of the miners had a schoolhouse built and opened a school in Auburn, the first in eastern Oregon, remaining as teacher until her marriage. In September the legislature created Baker county and Judge Packwood was appointed school superintendent, issuing to Mrs. Stafford the first teacher's certificate in the county. He also signed the first call for the union republican party in Baker to send delegates to the convention to nominate a ticket for the ensuing election. The full ticket was nominated and elected in June and he canvassed and made speeches in favor of Lincoln in every precinct in the county. In 1863, with Rufus Perkins and others, Judge Packwood built Clark's creek ditch and put to work the first hydraulic claims on the creek. He owned a fourteen twenty-fourths interest in this. In 1863 and 1864 he was interested with Knight and Abbott in merchandising and in freighting to Idaho City and Booneville but the Owyhee mines failed and Judge Packwood's loss, for he paid the debts, was fully forty-five thousand dollars. In 1864 he began the construction of the Burnt river ditch to extend to Clark's creek and after paying out three thousand dollars afterward sold it for six hundred dollars. The same year he was the principal in locating the Burnt river ditch to extend to the Eldorado mines. After building and running water fifty-seven miles to Eldorado the company sold out. After various changes, lawsuits and agreements Judge Packwood finally completed the ditch in 1874 and ran water to Fourth of July gulch, about one hundred and thirty-five miles. The ditch cost at least five hundred thousand dollars but Judge Packwood was practically swindled out of his rights and left with a worthless judgment in his wife's name for purchase money that now with interest amounts to over one hundred thousand dollars. In 1870 with Alexander Stewart he located the Eagle creek ditch to run to the Koosta mines, being associated in this enterprise with Rufus Perkins, I. B. Bowen, Sr., and E. P. Cranston. In 1871 they built the Eagle canal at a cost of ninety thousand dollars and the following year he and Mr. Stewart sold out their interests at a net profit of twenty-one thousand six hundred dollars. They then bought and operated a ten stamp steam mill and a five stamp water power mill and built the summit and other quartz mines near Sanger, in Union county. About April, 1865, Judge Packwood purchased a three-quarters interest in the Washoe ferry and incorporated the Oregon Road, Bridge and Ferry Company, capitalized at three hundred thousand dollars. They owned the Olds, Central and Washoe ferries and built and controlled about seventy miles of road. Judge Packwood was secretary, treasurer and practically general manager. The ferries in those days were the haunts of bad men—horse thieves and highwaymen—and the Washoe had a bad name, harboring men who afterwards met justice at the hands of the vigilantes. It was this condition of affairs that practically governed Judge Packwood's ownership of the ferry, for in February, 1864, ten or twelve men came from Payette, Idaho, and took Stewart and Byron, owners of the Washoe ferry, some ten miles into Idaho and locked them in a cabin, intending to hang them the next morning, but they picked the lock, swam the Snake river in February at Washoe, obtained their canoes and escaped. Later Judge Packwood met Byron going to Walla Walla and he said he could never go back and also that Stewart was at Auburn and that he, Packwood, should have the ferry. On reaching Auburn he learned the true situation; the Washoe was the key to the ferrying on Snake river for the Boise Basin mines from the fact that it cut off the ferrying of the Weiser and Payette rivers in Idaho and that the real cause of the kidnaping of the two men was to obtain control of the ferry. When Stewart and Byron had come from Washington to Nevada Judge Packwood had befriended them, had given them food and supplied their needs, so without a dollar in exchange they made over the ferry to him although some time afterward he paid them five thousand dollars for their share of the property. When he left Auburn to go to the ferries bets were freely offered that he would be mobbed, etc., but he fearlessly faced the situation, Olds and Parton came to his terms, there was no more mobbing and by July the harboring of horse thieves had become a thing of the past. He operated the ferries until 1868, when he sold out, for the building of the Union Pacific railroad had diverted trade to other centers. He had cleared about thirty-six thousand dollars in thirty-two months.

Judge Packwood next went to Eldorado, devoting his time to the building of the Burnt river ditch from 1874 until 1887. The following year he was elected police judge and clerk for Baker City and for five successive years, although he is a republican and the council is democratic, he held the office. He then went to the coast, near Port Orford, to try beach mining and a year later began survey work on the Daly creek ditch to Snake river. He afterward worked on the Northwestern railroad down Snake river, keeping accounts for Taylor, a subcontractor. When the work was closed there he went to the Pacific & Idaho Northern railway and secured a position as leveler on Friends division under Colonel Moore, chief engineer, but found the cross-sectioning on the Weiser river canyons below Salubria was too hard on him. He next became an accountant for Taylor, the contractor, until the work closed in December, when he returned to Baker. In a few days he became bookkeeper for the Columbia Gold Mining Company, acting in that capacity for seven or more years. But the snow was deep and the winters long at the mines, forcing him to change his position. Returning to Baker, he became assistant postmaster and remained in the office until between seventy-seven and seventy-eight years of age, when he resigned. He has surveyed many ditches all over the country, has worked at leveling and cross-sectioning the railroad from Cove to Union in Union county and has been closely connected with much of the pioneeer work in the northwest. His last military survey was under Major General O. O. Howard, who appointed him chief of scouts for the Malheur country in the Bannock Indian war of 1877-78. His ranch and cattle interests for various reasons that no one could foresee proved almost a total loss. At the time of the Civil war he was a member of the Union League, which is the only order to which he ever belonged.

Judge and Mrs. Packwood have two sons and three daughters. Mary Elizabeth, born in August, 1863, became the wife of Charles F. Hyde, and died about three years ago, leaving two sons and five daughters, the eldest daughter being now the wife of Dr. F. C. Vaughan, of Portland. William H. Packwood, Jr., a lawyer, has been married and has a son and daughter. Jefferson Carter, the third of the family, is an accountant. Edith Gonzaga is the wife of ex-State Senator John L. Rand, a lawyer of Baker, and has two sons. Martha Amelia is the wife of Dr. L. G. Wheeler, a mining promoter, now at Winnemucca, Nevada, and has a daughter. There are four living children and twelve grandchildren. Mrs. Packwood and children are of the Catholic faith. The Judge's people were Covenantors and he joined the Christian church long years ago. While not an active church worker he has tried to be a practical Christian, attempting to live rather than to preach Christianity. Honorable principles and worthy purposes have guided him throughout his entire life. He has always endeavored to upbuild the state and he was instrumental in inducing Dr. Hennan, now deceased, to bring a colony of Germans from Baltimore to settle on the Coquille river in Coos county. His entire life has been full of interesting events. In nearly every enterprise in which he has engaged he has been the controlling spirit and on most occasions success has attended him. If he has experienced failure it was because he had too much confidence in his fellow men. While he has had hundreds of men in in his employ he has never missed a pay day nor had a strike. He is, as previously stated, the last surviving member of the state constitutional convention and with one exception the last survivor of the Mounted Rifles that came to Oregon in 1859. He belongs to the Oregon Pioneer Association, has for several years been a member of the Oregon Historical Society, is an Indian war veteran and may well claim to be one of those pioneers who have blazed the way for the march of civilization and who "Belonged to the legion that never were listed,

They carried no banner nor crest;
But, split in a thousand detachments,
Were breaking the ground for the rest."

G. W. RUCKMAN, who is deputy sheriff of Union county, resides in a fine modern home in Imbler and owns a magnificent six hundred and eighty-acre farm near that place, partly bounded by the Grande Ronde river. His farm is a splendid property and has upon it, together with other fine improvements, one of the most elegant farm dwellings of the county. Mr. Ruckman was born in Wapello county, Iowa, April 2, 1848, a son of William and Mary (Miller) Ruckman, the father a native of Northumberland county, Pennsylvania, and the mother of Tippecanoe county, Indiana. When a young man the father removed to Indiana, where his wedding was celebrated, and in 1828 to Iowa. He later came to Oregon and settled at Agency, in Union county, where he lived for some time, after which he bought a ranch a mile and a half from that town. He made that property his home until he bought a farm seven miles east of his first Oregon property, upon which he lived until 1872. He next settled on the Grande Ronde river twelve miles northeast of LaGrande, where he resided until the time of his death, which occurred in 1891. He was a blacksmith by trade, an occupation which he followed in connection with his agricultural pursuits.

G. W. Ruckman was one of seven children born to his parents, being the sixth in order of birth. His boyhood and schooldays were spent in Iowa, where he received a common-school education. He remained under the parental roof until 1866, when he was married. In 1871, he came to Union county, Oregon, by wagon from Ogden, the trip to that city having been made by rail. On arriving in this state he settled on state land which he purchased two miles south of Imbler, where he is now residing in a fine modern house.

Mr. Ruckman was married in 1866 to Miss Lucretia Neville, a daughter of E. P. and M. J. Neville, and to them have been born six children, as follows: William Ruffman, a rancher; J. T., deceased; R. J., operating the New York Dental Parlors at Walla Walla, Washington; S. G., residing on the home ranch; Mary J., the wife of E. D. Peel, living on Prairie creek, in Wallowa county; and Hattie, deceased. Mr. Ruckman has taken an active part in political and other affairs which tend to improve the conditions of this community and until the silver question became the paramount party issue he had been affiliated with the democratic party. Since that time, however, he has been a republican. He is at present deputy sheriff, an office which he has held for a number of years. He takes an active interest in educational matters and for a number of years has been a member of the school board. He has always been very charitably inclined, has done many things to alleviate the suffering of people around him and has contributed to many good causes. He is a prominent man in his community and does not believe in putting his light under a bushel basket. He has an extensive acquaintance, and is highly esteemed by a large number of personal and political friends.

WILLIAM E. BRAINARD, a pioneer of Oregon and one of Portland's most respected citizens, was born in Milan, Ohio, December 5, 1832, and died in Portland, July 22, 1911. He was the only son of John and Sallie (Sherman) Brainard, of old New Hampshire and Vermont families. His mother died when he was a boy of ten and thereafter his father placed him in the home of his uncle, with whom he lived for several years. At the age of nineteen he left Ohio for the west, joining a wagon train leaving St. Joseph, Missouri, in the spring of 1852. After an eventful journey across the plains he reached Oregon in the winter of that year. Shortly after he went to southern Oregon, where he soon engaged in steamboating on the Umpqua river as captain and later as owner of the steamer Washington. This was the first steamboat to ply in Oregon waters, and was shipped to Oregon from the east by way of Cape Horn.

Later Mr. Brainard became interested in a tannery in Scottsburg, Oregon. Disposing of his interests in Southern Oregon, he went to Canyon City, where he operated a placer mine for eighteen months with fair success. While there he entered into partnership with C. W. Gay. They went to Portland together, purchasing one hundred and sixty acres of land east of Mount Tabor, where Mr. Brainard farmed and made his home until 1888, when he sold the property and moved to the present family residence, at Fifty-fourth and East Morrison streets. From this time until his death he dealt in real estate. Mr. Brainard was one of the organizers and first directors of the Citizens Bank of East Portland, continuing to be a director until his death. He was an Indian war veteran, serving all through the Indian troubles in Oregon in Company T, of the Second Regiment, Oregon Mounted Volunteers.

Mr. Brainard was married October 30, 1867, at Brooks, Oregon, to Miss Eliza Maria Brooks, only daughter of Linus and Eliza Brooks, pioneers of 1850. To Mr. and Mrs. Brainard three children were born: Clara, who died in infancy; Sherman Humiston, a business man of Portland; and Linus Brooks, a civil engineer, also a resident of Portland.

E. H. TULLEY, whose venturesome and bold spirit led him in his prime into many situations that inured him to the hardships and privations of frontier life, acted for many years as a freighter in the great west. He later became a land owner, fruit grower and cattle man in Oregon and after a life of toil and economy is now living retired in Wallowa, enjoying the fruits of his life's labors. He was born in Piatt county, Illinois, January 28, 1838, a son of Addison and Mary Tulley, both parents being now deceased. He was educated in the district schools of his native county near his father's farm, pursuing his education until he attained the age of fourteen years. His advantages in that direction, however, were limited as it was necessary for him to work during the spring, summer and fall of the year in order to contribute to the livelihood of the family and himself. When he was eighteen years of age he removed to Kansas and took up one hundred and sixty acres of what was then called neutral land. He immediately began working on this land, introducing such improvements as were absolutely necessary, and remained thereon until the Civil war broke out, when off and on he acted independently for the Union army during the entire war but did not enlist. At the close of the war he entered the freighting business, operating between Kansas City, Missouri, and Denver, Colorado, and made in all seven trips across the plains. On reaching Denver on the last trip he decided to push on to Oregon, and, doing so, settled temporarily in the Grande Ronde valley, where he bought one hundred and sixty acres of fine valley land and also preempted one hundred and sixty acres. He shortly afterward again entered the freighting business, operating between Umatilla and points in Washington and Idaho. This business he continued for three years, after which he began prospecting and mining, a business which he followed for one and a half years. After that experience he went to Arizona, where for two years he followed agricultural pursuits, and then returned to Grande Ronde valley and shortly after that came to Wallowa and was the first man to build a residence there. In that valley in company with his brother he engaged in the cattle business, which he followed with increasing success until 1898. In the meantime he had planted an orchard which was at one time one of the largest in the valley, and from 1898 until 1905 that property required practically his entire attention. In 1906 he retired from active life, removing to Wallowa, where he has since resided.

Mr. Tulley was married on April 28, 1881, to Miss Bessie A. Lent, a daughter of James and Sarah Lent, of Wallowa. To this union four children have been born, namely: Walter A., engaged in the real-estate business in Idaho; Pearl, residing at home; Clara, the wife of Ira Martin; and Olive G., a high-school student. In his political faith Mr. Tulley is a republican and although not an active politician takes an interest in matters affecting the public welfare. His life has not only been one of much activity and hardship but he has performed a great service in the west where his strenuous labors added much to the comfort of many hundreds of people whom he served in his capacity as a freighter, enabling them to obtain the necessities of life. He assisted very materially in developing those communities in the far west of which he was for many years a resident, and it is fitting that a life so strenuous with labor should be rewarded by the good things of the world with which he has surrounded himself in later years. He has a large number of acquaintances and close personal friends with whom he has surrounded himself, his many estimable traits of character endearing him to the entire community where he is greatly respected.

RICHARD L. DURHAM, well known in financial circles and prominently identified with organized movements for the exploitation of Oregon's resources with a view to the upbuilding and promotion of the interests of the state, was born in Oregon City, on the 23d of November, 1850. His father, Albert A. Durham, was a native of New York and in 1847 came to Oregon and settled at Oregon City. In 1852 he removed to Oswego, where he built a lumber mill and took up a claim. He operated both until 1869, when he sold out to the Oregon Steel Company and went to Washington county, where he built a mill which he operated until his death. He remained an active factor in the field of business to the age of eighty-three years, when in 1901 he was called to his final rest. His wife, who bore the maiden name of Miranda A. White, was born in Canada, near Niagara Falls, and died in 1907 in her ninetieth year. Mr. and Mrs. Durham were among the early pioneers of Oregon and the former was a member of the territorial legislature.

E. H. TULLEY

The boyhood and youth of Richard L. Durham were passed in his parents' home in the acquirement of his early education, which was supplemented by study in Willamette University, at Salem, and also in the Portland Academy. He became a resident of Portland in July, 1870, when he accepted the appointment of deputy county clerk under C. W. Parrish, continuing in that position until 1876, when he resigned to become deputy city auditor by the common council and was continued in that position for five consecutive terms. In 1882 he resigned and accepted the position of teller in the Portland Savings Bank and thus entered financial circles, in which he has since played an important part, his efforts being a potent element in the upbuilding and conservation of the financial resources of the city. He continued as cashier in the Portland Savings Bank until 1886, when the Commercial National Bank was incorporated and Mr. Durham became cashier and vice president of the latter institution. In 1896 the Commercial National sold out and he became vice president of the Merchants National Bank, in which position he has since remained, contributing in large measure to its successful conduct.

Thoroughly understanding modern finance, having mastered all the intricacies of banking business, he has labored effectively to broaden the scope of the institution with which he is connected and to give it that substantial standing which is considered a sure foundation upon which to upbuild the great west. He was also vice president of the Merchants Savings & Trust Company for six years and was one of its organizers. In addition to his other interests he is also the vice president of the Oregon Land Investment Company and president of the Portland Clearing House Association. He is also a director of the Beaver Lumber Company, of the Banfield Veysey Fuel Company and is interested in various other enterprises.

In June, 1872, Mr. Durham was united in marriage, in Portland, to Miss Hannah T. Gault, a native of Oregon and a daughter of Pembroke Gault, who came from Vermont to the Pacific coast, arriving in this state in 1852. Three children have been born unto Mr. and Mrs. Durham: Lillian, the wife of W. E. Jones, of Boston; Roy Gault; and Gilbert H., who is secretary and treasurer of the Beaver Lumber Company of Portland. The family residence is on Riverside drive, south of the city, on the banks of the Willamette river. Mr. and Mrs. Durham hold membership in the First Congregational church and are prominent in the social circles of the city. His fraternal relations connect him with the Masons, the Odd Fellows and the Ancient Order of United Workmen, and in the last named he has been grand receiver for over twenty-five years. But while prominent in these connections he has given comparatively little time to social interests. Outside of business he has concentrated his energies largely upon the improvement of Portland and the exploitation of the natural resources of this section of the country with a view to building here a city that shall rival in its industrial and commercial importance the metropolitan centers of the east. He was chosen vice president of the state board of emigration which was organized in 1881 for the purpose of disseminating knowledge concerning the state. In the attainment of this end exhibition cars were equipped with a collection of Oregon products and with literary descriptions of the country, and these cars were sent throughout the east, being a practical and tangible demonstration of what could be accomplished in the west. The Chamber of Commerce, of which he was one of the organizers, has long found him an able and effective worker. He was also one of the organizers of the Commercial Club and served as its treasurer from its inception until 1898, and also as a member of its board of governors until 1890. He was also a member of the finance and building committees at the time of the erection of its new building. Preeminently public spirited, his interests and cooperation can always be aroused in behalf of any project for the welfare of city or state. His efforts are of a most practical character, the sound judgment of an active business man being manifest in all of his opinions concerning the best methods to improve the city along lines of material and intellectual progress and municipal growth.

HENRY J. ROSENBERG is numbered among the native sons of Umatilla county, his birth having occurred on October 11, 1884. He is the son of Claus H. and Anna Rosenberg, both of whom were natives of Germany and came to America in 1871. They located in Iowa and in 1876 came to Oregon, settling in Umatilla county, where they purchased land. The father is now living in Pendleton, the mother having passed away in August, 1908. In their family were seven children, five of whom are now living.

Henry J. Rosenberg received a common-school education and remained at home until he reached his majority. He then took charge of the old homestead, which consists of fourteen hundred and forty acres, and is still operating the same.

Mr. Rosenberg wedded Miss Clara Hudemann, the daughter of Julius and Margaret (Eggers) Hudemann, both of whom are natives of Germany. The parents came to America, settling in Oregon, and are now living in Pendleton. To Mr. and Mrs. Rosenberg have been born two children, Henrietta Clara and Glenn J. Mr. Rosenberg is a republican in his political views. Fraternally he is identified with Pendleton Lodge, No. 52, A. F. & A. M., and also with the Farmers Union. Both he and Mrs. Rosenberg are zealous members of the Lutheran church and their lives are guided by its teachings. Mr. Rosenberg is a capable and enterprising farmer, highly honored in his native county.

REV. J. NEILSON BARRY. Ordained to the ministry of the Episcopal church by Bishop H. C. Potter, in New York city, June 9, 1895, the Rev. J. Neilson Barry has since been actively engaged in the work of the ministry, spending most of the time in the northwest. In August, 1907, he came to St. Stephen's parish at Baker, Oregon, as rector. He was born in Wilmington, North Carolina, November 26, 1870, and comes of a family prominent in Ireland as the owners of lands and castles and the possessors of titles, the original ancestor having been William de Barri, who was with William the Conqueror. Mr. Barry's ancestral history includes the name of Walter Flandiensis, Lord Patteshall, created Baron de Woodhull by William the Conqueror in 1066; Robert de Blakeland, of Wiltshire, England, 1286; Rev. William Walton, of Exeter, England, who was a Church of England clergyman during the reign of Queen Elizabeth; and Alexander Livingston, portioner of Falkirk, of the house of Dunfrace. The first ancestor of Mr. Barry to come to America arrived in 1630, since which time various ancestors have held prominent positions in Massachusetts, New Jersey and New Amsterdam (New York), taking a leading part in civic and military matters. Some of the most prominent were: Petrus Stuyvesant, governor of New Amsterdam from 1647 until 1664, previous to which time he had been governor of Curacao in 1634; Cornelis Melyn, patroon of Staten Island; Jan Jansen Bleeker, of the Saratoga patent, 1658; Samuel Edsall, of Jamaica, Long Island, 1663; Robert Livingston, first lord of the Manor of Livingston, New York, 1688. There were those who lost their lives owing to Indian hostility and pioneer conditions, including Catrina, the wife of Major Abraham Staats, who was killed by the Indians during the Esopus war in 1664; Lieutenant John Sharpe, who was killed by the Indians at Sudbury in 1676 during King Philip's war; and his father, Robert Sharpe, who lost his life during the Canadian expedition in 1690. The family was represented in the war for independence by Colonel Nicholas Fish, General John Neilson, Captain Johannes Voorhees and others. Major Robert Peabody Barry, father of the Rev. J. Neilson Barry, and formerly of the Sixteenth United States Infantry (Regulars), now resides at Clifton Farm, Fauquier county, Virginia. He was twice wounded at the battle of Stone River, or Murfreesboro, December 31, 1862, and was promoted for gallantry on the field of action. His wife, who bore the maiden name of Julia Kean Neilson, was a niece of Hamilton Fish, secretary of state during President Grant's administration, for whose wife, Julia Kean, she was named. She was a first cousin of Edward H. Harriman, of the Union Pacific, and also of Stuyvesant Fish, former president of the Illinois Central railroad. Her father was John Neilson, a son of Dr. John Neilson, and a grandson of General John Neilson. The last named was the son of Dr. John Neilson, who came to America from Ireland, his birth having occurred in Belfast in 1717. His father was a Scotch officer in Londonderry during the noted siege of 1689. Mrs. Barry died November 27, 1910.

The Rev. J. Neilson Barry devoted seventeen years of his life to the acquirement of an education. He attended public and private schools in Virginia, being a student in the preparatory department of the Virginia Theological Seminary and also, in 1895, in the General Theological Seminary at Chelsea Square, in New York city. In the meantime, from 1888 until 1890, he had been engaged in clerking in connection with the cotton business, serving as account-of-sales clerk with George L. Arps & Company, cotton commission merchants of Norfolk, Virginia. Desiring, however, to enter the ministry, he pursued his theological courses of study as previously indicated and was ordained in New York city on the 9th of June, 1895, and advanced to the priesthood February 13, 1896, at Palouse, Washington. He was in charge of Holy Trinity church there from June, 1895, until April, 1899, and during that period obtained land and erected Holy Trinity church, the parish house and rectory rooms. During the summer of 1898 he was acting curate at St. Agnes chapel, Trinity Parish, of New York city. On the 2d of November of the same year he took charge of Trinity church at Spokane, Washington, and while there inaugurated the work that resulted in the building of a wing and the introduction of other improvements to the church property. The rectory was built, land was obtained and on it the parish house was erected. His labors there continued until the 26th of December, 1904. He was rector of Trinity, an old colonial parish in Charles county, Maryland, from January 15, 1905, until October 1, 1906, having his residence at the Good Will Glebe, Charlotte Hall, Maryland. On the 1st of November, 1906, he became vicar at St. Columba in St. Alban parish, Washington, D. C., where he continued until August, 1907, and then came to Oregon.

Mr. Barry was registrar of the district of Spokane from 1898 until 1904 and registrar of Eastern Oregon from 1908 until 1910. As previously stated, he accepted the position of rector of St. Stephen's parish in Baker, Oregon, in August, 1907, and during his ministry here Nevins Hall, the parish house, has been built and the church has been improved. In addition to his other labors Mr. Barry is a chaplain of the Actors' Church Alliance. He has done considerable literary work, being the author of numerous articles relating to church and to local historical matters in Virginia, Maryland, Oregon and elsewhere.

In St. Ignatius church, New York city, on the 10th of October, 1899, Mr. Barry was married to Miss Mildred Eldridge Pegram, who was born in London, England, and was reared in Paris and New York city, her father being Orlando A. Pegram, of New York. She is a representative of an old Virginia family, several members of which were prominent during the Civil war. They have one son, Eldridge Dighton Barry, who was born July 16, 1903.

RODERICK D. ALLEN, a man of enterprise and more than ordinary ability, who throughout his career has made good use of his opportunities, is now county clerk, figuring prominently in business and political circles of Marion county. He was born in this county on the 25th of March, 1855, his parents being Henry and Frances (Rockwood) Allen, the former a native of Tennessee and the latter of Illinois. The father's birth occurred on the 21st of July, 1828, and after spending his early life in the eastern part of the country he came to Marion county as a pioneer in 1852. He removed westward with the gold seekers of 1849, but after three years' residence in California came to Oregon where he purchased a farm upon which he resided until his retirement a short time before his death in 1908. The mother's birth occurred on the 22d of February, 1833, and she is still living at Silverton. Her four brothers served in the Civil war and one was killed in one of the important engagements in which he took part. To Mr. and Mrs. Henry Allen five children were born: Timothy D., who is a resident of Silverton; Alwilda J., who is the wife of L. F. Mascher, also of Silverton; Adella, now Mrs. T. W. McGrath; Harvey L., deceased, who is survived by a widow and one son; and Roderick D., who is the subject of this review.

The last named received his education in the common schools of Silverton and subsequently in Willamette University. After having completed his education he spent five years teaching school and thus began his active career. Subsequently he engaged in farming and fruit growing until 1899 when he accepted the position of head bookkeeper at the State Hospital for the Insane. His superior educational opportunities and advantages ably qualified him for clerical work, and for six years he satisfactorily occupied that position. In 1906, however, he resigned after his election as county clerk of Marion county. Both in 1908 and 1910 he was reelected, and he is still holding the position. In addition to his clerical work he is also carrying on fruit growing and dairying to some extent near St. Paul, Oregon. To whatever he undertakes he devotes thought, energy and industry and so wins a good degree of success, and the present state of his various undertakings gives promise for even better returns in the future.

On the 4th of January, 1881, Mr. Allen was married to Miss Hattie Knight, whose birth occurred in Michigan on the 20th of June, 1863, and who is a daughter of Daniel and Elmira (Weed) Knight, both deceased. The father had engaged in agricultural pursuits throughout his active career. To Mr. and Mrs. Allen six children have been born: Leona, who is the wife of John Miller of Donald, Oregon, and who has two sons; May, who is married to Thomas Norwood, of Chemeketa, Oregon, and has two sons; Virgil, who is residing at home on the farm; Daniel H., who is an attorney at Silverton; Victor, who is married and living on a farm which he cultivates; and Bertha, who is the wife of Clifford Benson, the son of ex-Governor Benson, and who is residing at Gardner, Oregon.

In politics Mr. Allen gives his support to the republican party. He has frequently been elected to public office and has served as school clerk and road supervisor in his home district. Since 1879 he has held membership in the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, in which organization he has held every office including past grand. He also holds membership in the Woodmen of the World. He is one of the most enterprising men in the vicinity, always ready and willing to do what he can for the general improvement of the county, and is held in high respect as a congenial and progressive citizen.

J. C. McKERN has been engaged in business as a blacksmith of Yamhill for more than a quarter of a century and now owns the leading shop of the town. His birth occurred in Decatur county, Iowa, on the 19th of October, 1856, his parents being Henry P. and Katherine (Collins) McKern, who were natives of North Carolina and Pennsylvania respectively. They were married in Indiana and later removed to Iowa, there continuing to reside until the spring of 1862. At that time they crossed the plains with an ox team to Walla Walla, Washington, where they made their home until 1865, which year witnessed their arrival in Linn county, Oregon. There Mrs. McKern passed away in August, 1867. The following year Henry P. McKern took up his abode near McMinnville, Yamhill county. His demise occurred at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Maddux, in 1888. His children were twelve in number, as follows: Mrs. Sarah Waldrip, who resides in Eastsound, Washington; Abraham P., living in Bellingham, Washington; William, who makes his home at Dee, Oregon; Mrs. Emma Wells, of Ashland, Oregon; Samantha Clementine, the wife of William Mellis, of Wapato, Washington; J. C., of this review, who is a twin brother of Samantha C.; Jane, Lawson, Spencer, Mary and Katherine, all of whom are deceased; and one who died in infancy.

J. C. McKern acquired only a limited education in his youth but by reading, experience and observation has become a well informed man. When a youth of thirteen he secured employment on a neighboring farm and was actively engaged in the work of the fields until 1881. Subsequently he spent three years as an apprentice at the blacksmith's trade in Yamhill and in 1885 opened a shop of his own, having conducted the same continuously since. His business has steadily grown until his establishment is now the leading one of that character in Yamhill. He owns his place of business and his residence and also has other property interests.

On the 28th of January, 1885, Mr. McKern was united in marriage to Miss Martha F. Hunsaker, who was born near Salem, Marion county, Oregon, on the 18th of April, 1864, her parents being Thomas H. and Elizabeth Jane (Miller) Hunsaker, natives of Missouri. The father's birth occurred in 1827, while the mother's natal day was January 1, 1831. In 1847 they crossed the plains with their respective parents, settling in Marion county, Oregon, where they spent the remainder of their lives. At the time of his demise Thomas H. Hunsaker owned eight hundred acres of valuable land in that county. He lived to attain the age of seventy-three years, while his wife was seventy-two years old when called to her final rest. Their children were eight in number, namely: Angeline and Elizabeth, both of whom are deceased; George Washington, who is a resident of Marion county, Oregon; Jasper, who has passed away; Lieurgus, living in Polk county, Oregon; Naomi, who is deceased; Mrs. McKern; and Cora, who makes her home in Salem, Oregon. Prior to her marriage Mrs. McKern followed the profession of school teaching.

In politics Mr. McKern is a democrat of liberal views. He ably served as city treasurer of Yamhill for a period of sixteen years and is now the president of the council. Fraternally he is identified with the Masons, belonging to La Fayette Lodge, No. 3, of Yamhill, of which he is now serving officially as senior warden. At present he is also district deputy grand master of Lodge No. 56, I. O. O. F., of Yamhill, and acts as inner guard of the grand lodge of Oregon. His religious faith is that of the Christian church, to which his wife also belongs. Over the record of his entire career there falls no shadow of wrongdoing or suspicion of evil but on the contrary his example is one worthy of emulation, showing as it does the force of hard work, close application and unfaltering integrity in the acquirement of notable and gratifying success. He stands today strong in his honor and good name, strong in his ability to plan and perform and with the confidence and good will of all who know him.

GEORGE IRVING HAZELTINE is one of the respected pioneers of Canyon City, Grant county, where he resides and is at present serving the public in the office of city treasurer. He was born in Cattaraugus county, New York, May 4, 1836, and is a son of Asa and Fanny (Bancroft) Hazeltine, both of whom were natives of Vermont, the mother being a relative of George Bancroft, the historian. The father at an early date removed to Illinois, making the journey by way of New York where he remained for a short time and later reached the city of Chicago, in which place he was offered a whole section of land located in what is now the heart of the business district in exchange for a horse and blanket. After looking the place over carefully he concluded that Chicago was so unhealthy that he would be a loser in the deal and so declined the proffered opportunity. He continued his journey westward and settled on the banks of Fox river where now stands the city of St. Charles, and there he lived until the time of his death which occurred in 1864. Mr. and Mrs. Asa Hazeltine were the parents of eight children, of whom the subject of this review is the sixth child in order of birth.

George Irving Hazeltine was reared at home and received his early education in the public schools at St. Charles, Illinois. In the spring of 1853 he started overland for California, by way of Mexico. On learning later that the Mexicans were still unfriendly owing to the late war, he discontinued his westward journey and returned to his home at St. Charles where he remained until the autumn of 1853. In October of that year in company with his brother Martin M., he started for the Pacific coast this time by way of New York and from there by steamer to the Isthmus, which they crossed by the Nicaragua route and arrived in San Francisco in December, 1853. They reached New York at the time of the Crystal Palace Exhibition, which they visited before sailing for the west. George Irving Hazeltine and his brother, Martin M., had learned the art of photography some years previous and on reaching San Francisco they at once established themselves in the photographic business, making what was known at that time as the daguerreotypes. He continued in that partnership until 1855 at which time he sold out his interest and engaged in mining on the south fork of the American river at the town of Coloma, which is the site of the first discovery of gold in California made by Mr. Marshall. At the time Mr. Hazeltine reached Coloma Mr. Marshall was still there as was also Sutter's mill which has become famous in the history of California as the place in which Mr. Marshall was engaged in sawing lumber at the time of his great discovery of gold. Judge McKenna, of the United States supreme court was also a resident of Coloma at the time of Mr. Hazeltine's arrival there and the two men became much attached to each other. From the time of Mr. Hazeltine's arrival at the point above named until the spring of 1857, he was engaged in mining on Live Oak Bar and was very fortunate in his findings. He later invested in mining property and suffered a heavy loss by virtue of the failure of the properties to make good and also suffered loss through the Adams Express Company in 1855. After losing nearly all of his accumulated gold dust he established himself independently in the photographic business in which he continued for a few years. He later started for Oregon having the Salmon river basin as his objective point. He followed the trail of emigrant parties who had left some two weeks previously, bound for the same part of the state. The emigrant train referred to was headed by a man whose name was McGruder. The company making the trip was composed of thirty-five Americans and twenty-five Mexicans and their means of travel and transportation were pack horses. On reaching the Pitt river they followed it to Goose lake and on their way prospected for gold, finding colors but no pay dirt until they reached Canyon creek. On the journey the Indians gave them little or no serious trouble except by stealing a few of the Mexicans' horses. They arrived at

MR. AND MRS. G. L. HAZELTINE

Canyon creek July 4, 1860, at the time when the miners were holding a miners' meeting for the purpose of electing officers. Mr. Hazeltine at this time was associated in partnership with his brother-in-law, and also P. Van Middelsworth. They built a log house and located a claim and at once began mining operations. Mr. Hazeltine was then delegated to go to The Dalles in Oregon and there purchase a winter supply of provisions. The journey extended over something less than two hundred miles and he used pack horses with which to accomplish his mission. In the spring of 1863 he received a letter from his wife whom he had left in California and as a result of the information contained in that message he repaired at once to California by way of Portland and later, following the trail by which he had come there, in company with his wife and family and his father-in-law, he returned to his location on Canyon creek. During this journey they were attacked by Indians and one member of the party was hit by an arrow. They saw many graves while en route and a skeleton of a man who had been killed by Indians. During his absence a friend by name Kennedy, who had been left in charge of his claim had sold it for one hundred and fifty dollars, Mr. Hazeltine receiving as his share an "invaluable" piece of furniture in the shape of a well worn cookstove. He had, however, brought along with him his photographic outfit and knew how in times of misfortune and distress to turn the knowledge of his trade to good account. He accordingly at once built a house and in that wilderness established himself as a photographer. In the following year he engaged also in mining operations. In 1864 in company with others he established a pack-train service operating between Canyon City and The Dalles, but the Indians later stole all their horses and the enterprise was abandoned. In the spring of 1865 he and his father-in-law, A. R. McCallum built a flour mill at John Day, Oregon, that being the first mill in eastern Oregon. In that business he engaged until 1874 at which time he sold his interest in the property and confined himself to the photographic business until 1878. During the summer of 1874 he with his wife and two children paid a visit to his old home at St. Charles, Illinois, after which he returned to his home and business interests in Oregon. In 1878 he was elected county judge, serving four years in that office. He afterward engaged in photographic work until 1890 when he was again elected to that office serving from 1890 to 1894. In 1896 he was elected county treasurer serving for a term of two years. After his term expired he followed the brokerage business until 1905. At present Mr. Hazeltine is ably serving as city treasurer of Canyon City, an office which he has held for the past ten years. In 1900 Mr. Hazeltine built the stone building which is now occupied by the First National Bank of Canyon City, retaining an office for himself in that building.

George Irving Hazeltine was united in marriage April 13, 1862, in Shasta county, California, to Miss Emeline C. McCallum, her birth having occurred on the Brandywine near the site of the famous battle of Brandywine in Schenectady, New York. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. R. McCallum, the former of whom was a native of Vermont, and of Scotch descent, and the latter a native of Scotland. To Mr. and Mrs. Hazeltine four children have been born: Edith, the wife of Judge Clifford of Baker City, Oregon; Mabel, the deceased wife of John Biggs, of Burns, Oregon; Irving Bancroft, who is engaged in the mining and telephone business in eastern Oregon, and has his headquarters in Canyon City, Oregon; and Mildred, the wife of Professor Linden McCullough, who is engaged in teaching history in the high school of Baker City, Oregon.

George Irving Hazeltine has been a member of the Canyon City Masonic Lodge, No. 34, for the past thirty-six years, and has been secretary of that lodge for thirty-four years. He is also a member of Blue Mountain Chapter, No. 7, R. A. M., and of Blue Mountain Council, No. 10, R. & S. M. He is the secretary of each of the last named lodges. He is a member of Hobah Lodge, No. 22, Independent Order of Odd Fellows and of Excelsior Encampment, No. 3, I. O. O. F., of both of which he is the secretary.

Mr. Hazeltine is one of the most interesting among the surviving pioneers of Oregon. His varied career of repeated success and failure in business is remarkable and particularly so as it resulted ultimately in final and assured prosperity crowned with the honor of being elected to many offices of public trust by his grateful constituents. He has been an active man all of his life and has devoted many years to unremunerative duties and public positions for the sake of the community in general. Despite his age of seventy-six years he is as industrious and active as ever. He is a man highly esteemed for his uniform and unquestioned integrity of character and this was given expression to on the 13th of April, 1912, at the time of the celebration of their golden wedding when both he and his wife were the recipients of many valuable remembrances presented by their large circle of acquaintances.

ELLIS B. FLETT, who has been successfully engaged in the practice of dentistry for the past six years, is now serving as mayor of Yamhill, having been elected to that office on the 4th of April, 1911. His birth occurred in Yamhill county, Oregon, on the 3d of December, 1872, his parents being John B. and Sarah F. (Hutt) Flett, who were likewise born in that country. The father's birth occurred in 1844, while the mother's natal year was 1851. John B. Flett followed general agricultural pursuits throughout his entire business career and shortly after his marriage, which occurred in January, 1869, he took up a homestead one mile east of Wapato Station, where he resided until called to his final rest in 1897. His brother, W. George Flett, of Olex, Gilliam county, Oregon, was born near Newberg, Oregon, in 1842, and is one of the oldest native-born sons of this state. The mother of our subject is still living on the old homestead place and has attained the age of sixty years. She had seven children, Ellis B. being the second in order of birth. The others are as follows: George W. and Hemming C., both of whom reside on the old homestead; Ethel May, who is the wife of Bud Rolston and also lives on a portion of the home place; William T., who likewise resides on a part of the homestead property; one who died unnamed; and Lyle E., who passed away at the age of fourteen years.

When but a lad of eight years Ellis B. Flett became a jockey and continued to ride race horses until sixteen years of age, when he was no longer able to keep his weight down to the prescribed number of pounds. He first rode for Jerome Porter, of Forest Grove, and with a horse called Laura D. he got a start of almost a quarter of a mile in a mile race at Walla Walla, Washington, which is claimed as the world's record. For one season Mr. Flett also rode for J. B. Haggin, of California, at that time one of the most prominent owners of race horses in the world. During the year in which he rode for James Bybee he won all races in which he started throughout the season. For two seasons he acted as a jockey for Baker & Kuykendall of Montana, where he rode horses with world records. His earliest experiences included a few match races for Thomas Tongue, of Hillsboro, Oregon. When nineteen years of age he entered the Oregon State Agricultural College at Corvallis, there pursuing his studies for one year. Subsequently he continued his education in the State Normal School at Monmouth, being graduated from that institution in 1893. During the next two years he followed the profession of teaching, imparting clearly and readily to others the knowledge that he had acquired. He then operated his father's farm for three years and on the expiration of that period entered the North Pacific College of Dentistry at Portland, from which he was graduated in 1905. Opening an office at Yamhill, he has there practiced his profession continuously since and has enjoyed an extensive and gratifying patronage. He still owns an interest in the old homestead property, has a fine home in Yamhill and also has a fifth interest in property in Gilliam county, Oregon.

On the 10th of December, 1906, Mr. Flett was united in marriage to Miss Delma Matheny, who was born near Salem, Oregon, her parents being Samuel and Eva Matheny, natives of Missouri and Maryland respectively. The parents of Mrs. Matheny were among the pioneer settlers of this state, being passengers on the first boat that went around Cape Horn. The parents of Mrs. Flett were married in Oregon and here continued to reside throughout the remainder of their lives, Samuel Matheny passing away at the age of seventy-seven and his wife at the age of forty-four years. The former participated actively in the war against the Indians. Mrs. Flett was one of a family of five children, the others being as follows: Catherine, who is deceased; Mamie, a resident of California; Samuel, who makes his home at Silverton, Oregon; and Estella, the wife of P. P. Allen, of Lone Tree, Washington.

Mr. Flett is a republican in politics and his fellow townsmen, recognizing his worth and ability, have called him to several positions of public trust. For two terms he held the office of road supervisor and at the same time acted as deputy assessor of his township. For three terms he served as city recorder and during one term acted as councilman. He was elected mayor of Yamhill on the 4th of April, 1911, and his administration has been characterized by many measures of reform and improvement. Fraternally he is identified with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, in 1894 joining Wapato Lodge, No. 40, in which he has passed through all the chairs, while in 1897 he attended the grand lodge. He is a charter member of Yamhill Lodge, No. 98, K. P., in which he has filled all of the chairs, while in 1909 and 1910 he was a representative to the grand lodge. The lodge of the Yeomen at Yamhill also numbers him among its valued members. A strong minded, generous-spirited man, he stands as a high type of American manhood and an embodiment of that progress which in the last half century has drawn to this country the admiring gaze of all nations.

A. C. McKINNON, a retired resident of Amity, was successfully identified with general agricultural pursuits in Oregon throughout his active business career and is still the owner of seven hundred acres of valuable land. His birth occurred in Nova Scotia, Canada, on the 3d of February, 1857, his parents being Charles and Mary (McKinnon) McKinnon, both of whom were natives of Pictou county, Scotland. The father emigrated to America in early manhood and was married in Canada, spending the remainder of his life in that country. His demise occurred in 1906. He was an agriculturist by occupation and also took a deep interest in politics, being a leading worker in the local ranks of his party. His first wife passed away when our subject was but a year and a half old. The children of that marriage were five in number and all are deceased with the exception of Mr. McKinnon of this review. Their names were Alex, John, Annie, Alex, the second of the name, and A. C. For his second wife Charles McKinnon chose Miss Jeannette McDonald, by whom he had eight children.

A. C. McKinnon attended the common schools in the acquirement of an education and remained on the home farm until nineteen years of age. At that time he crossed the border into the United States and took up his abode in Polk county, Oregon, here being employed as a farm hand for three years. Subsequently he operated a rented farm in Polk county for five years and then purchased a tract of partially improved land near Perrydale, there carrying on his agricultural interests until he came to Amity in 1898. Disposing of his farm in Polk county, he purchased another south of Amity and also one to the west. His property holdings embrace seven hundred acres of farming land, all of which he leases. He likewise has other real-estate interests and owns stock in the Yamhill valley Milk Condensing Company at Amity, which he assisted in organizing and of which he is a director.

In April, 1897, Mr. McKinnon was united in marriage to Mrs. Emma Hawley, a native of Oregon. By her first husband, Horace Hawley, she had two children, namely: Lepha who is a trained nurse of Portland; and Orace, who is attending school at Corvallis.

In politics Mr. McKinnon is a stanch democrat, while fraternally he is identified with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows at Amity. His religious faith is indicated by his membership in the Unitarian church, while his wife belongs to the Christian church. The period of his residence in the northwest covers more than a third of a century and he is well entitled to representation among the substantial and esteemed citizens of Oregon.

EDGAR D. SUMMERS, who has been actively identified with industrial interests as a carpenter and contractor for the past thirty-one years, came to Oregon in 1890 and has erected most of the buildings in the town of Beaverton, where he now makes his home. His birth occurred in Grundy county, Illinois, on the 16th of September, 1860, his parents being John A. and Matilda (Somers) Summers, the former a native of Dutchess county, New York, and the latter of Medina county, Ohio. They were married at Morris, Illinois, and there continued to reside until 1882, when they sold their property and removed to Douglas county, South Dakota, where they took up land and made their home for about nine years. In 1889 they came to Portland, Oregon, where they resided for two years and then rented a tract of land in Washington county, John A. Summers devoting his attention to its cultivation for six years. On the expiration of that period he purchased a quarter block of city property in Beaverton and there made his home until called to his final rest in 1898. His widow, who survives him, resides in Beaverton and has attained the age of seventy-five years. Their children were eight in number, namely: Clara C., whose demise occurred in May, 1904, when she was forty-nine years of age; Fred E., who is at home with his mother; Hortense, who gave her hand in marriage to Charles A. Keith and resides in Dover, Oregon; Edgar D., of this review; Emily, the wife of Edwin C. Keith, of Seattle, Washington; Harry, who is also at home with his mother; Helen, the wife of Michael Ford; and John E., living in Beaverton, Oregon, who wedded Miss Carrie Pike, a native of this state and a daughter of Lorenzo Pike.

Edgar D. Summers made his initial step in the business world when a young man of twenty and during the intervening years has devoted his attention exclusively to carpentering and contracting, following those pursuits in Illinois, the Dakotas and Oregon. The year 1890 witnessed his arrival in this state and for five years following he made his home in Portland. Subsequently he spent three years in Kenton, Washington county, and then came to Beaverton, where he has since won an enviable reputation as the leading carpenter and contractor, having erected most of the buildings in the town. He owns a fine home in Beaverton and also has two other modern residence properties there.

On the 8th of December, 1887, Mr. Summers was married to Miss Mary C. Benner, a native of Marion, Iowa, where she lived until fourteen years of age. Her parents, Israel A. and Catherine R. Benner, are both deceased. They had two children, the brother of Mrs. Summers being Robert L., who has passed away. Our subject and his wife also have two children, namely: Robert R., born September 9, 1889, who is a graduate of the public schools and is still under the parental roof; and Mabel C., born June 17, 1891, who is likewise a public-school graduate and also has a good musical education.

Though a republican in his political views, Mr. Summers is not strictly partisan, considering the ability of a candidate rather than his party affiliation. Fraternally he is identified with the Masonic order, the Artisans and the Woodmen of the World, in each of which he has filled all the chairs. He and his family attend the Congregational church, though Mrs. Summers is an Episcopalian in religious faith. Unfaltering industry and perseverance have constituted the key that has unlocked the portals of success for Edgar D. Summers. The principles which have actuated him in all of his relations with his fellowmen are such as establish confidence and regard in every land and clime.

M. E. BURGESS, a well known real-estate dealer of Amity, has for the past three years enjoyed an enviable clientage in this connection. His birth occurred August 12, 1874, near Sheridan, Oregon, on the farm which was homesteaded by his grandfather, his parents being C. O. and Sarah A. (Branson) Burgess. The father is a native of Missouri and the mother was born on the same farm where the birth of our subject occurred. C. O. Burgess, an agriculturist by occupation, came to Oregon about forty years ago. For the past fifteen years he has been engaged in the real-estate business. Unto him and his estimable wife have been born seven children, two sons and five daughters, as follows: M. E., of this review; Helen, the wife of R. P. Howard, of Albany, Oregon; Myrtle, who gave her hand in marriage to Guy Fendle, of Willamina, Oregon; Pearl, the wife of Gary Price, of Tillamook, Oregon; Ora, whose demise occurred in 1897; and Lovey and Rex, both at home.

M. E. Burgess attended the common schools of this state in the acquirement of an education and remained under the parental roof until he had attained his majority. Starting out as an agriculturist on his own account, he began the operation of a farm near Sheridan and in connection with the work of the fields devoted considerable attention to real-estate negotiations. Three years ago he came to Amity and has since given his entire attention to the real-estate business, handling both local and foreign lands. He also writes fire insurance and has built up an extensive business in these connections. He has disposed of his farm but is heavily interested in real estate at Amity.

In 1901 Mr. Burgess was united in marriage to Miss Retta Morgan, a daughter of A. C. Morgan. He gives his political allegiance to the republican party, while his religious faith is indicated by his membership in the Baptist church, to which his wife also belongs. Fraternally he is identified with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, belonging to the encampment, and both he and his wife are connected with the Rebekahs. Mr. Burgess likewise belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America. His entire life has been spent in the Sunset state and his standing in business and social circles entitles him to a place among its substantial and representative citizens.

CLARK BENSON, who was born on the 16th of February, 1867, is one of Baker county's native sons and a well known farmer and dairyman here. His parents were Lev and Catherine (Clark) Benson, both of whom were born in Missouri. Possessing that spirit of enterprise which characterized practically all of the pioneers, they left the state of their nativity in 1863 and with ox teams crossed the great plains to the Pacific coast, where they located on a homestead in Baker county. For eleven years this worthy couple bore the hardships of pioneer life, cleared their land, brought it under cultivation, improved their farm and reared their family. They continued to be honored residents of Baker county until 1874, when both passed away, the mother's death preceding that of the father by only two weeks. Seven children were born to them but three are now deceased. Of the surviving members Clark Benson is the eldest, the others being: Catherine, the wife of Asa Brown; Claude, a resident of Idaho; and D. R., also living in that state.

Clark Benson was reared on the home farm and educated in the public schools of this county. At the age of sixteen he began working on the farm, thus paying his own way in the world. After several years spent in farm work he decided to go to Idaho, being attracted thither by the gold excitement which was then prevalent. He labored in the mines of that state for four years with varying success and then returned to Baker county and settled upon the ranch which he still owns and upon which he now lives. He cleared the land and brought it under cultivation, adding good improvements and taking up the business of dairying. His work has been successful, his dairy products giving satisfaction to his customers, and thus Mr. Benson's business has prospered. He owns eighty acres of valuable farm land and forty acres of timber land, and is numbered among the progressive and prosperous agriculturists of this locality.

Mr. Benson was married, in 1889, to Miss Charlotte Dealy, who was born in Colorado and is a daughter of D. R. and Nancy Dealy, who reside in Haines, Oregon. To Mr. and Mrs. Benson were born nine children but the two eldest died in infancy. The others are as follows: Myrtle, the wife of L. H. Newton; Flo, Cecil, Clyde, Lottie, Garnet and Cloyce, all yet at home.

The political allegiance of Mr. Benson is given to the democratic party. He takes an active interest in civic affairs and especially in educational matters, being clerk of his school district, a position which he has filled for ten years. Fraternally he is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, belonging to Lodge No. 12, at Haines. He is also affiliated with the Haines Camp of Woodmen of the World. Both he and his wife are earnest and conscientious members of the Methodist Episcopal church, of which they are regular attendants and liberal supporters. In the prime of vigorous manhood the subject of this review is contributing in no small degree to the welfare of Baker county in general and the city of Haines in particular. He is a man of steady, diligent habits, having in view not only the pecuniary welfare of his family but also their educational advantages. Besides the time consumed by his arduous farm duties and those devolving upon him in connection with his position as clerk of the school district, he finds time to devote to social intercourse with his friends whom he meets in the lodges to which he belongs and also to take an active part in church work. He has an extremely large number of personal friends and in fact is acquainted with practically everybody in the community, being held in high esteem among all classes.

C. JOHN HILLSTROM is one of the enterprising and successful agriculturists of Coos county. He was born in Finland, January 5, 1868, and is a son of Matts and Marie L. Hillstrom. Both of his parents were natives of Finland and in that country they were united in marriage and their children were born and reared to maturity. The father, who is deceased, followed farming and carpentering for a livelihood. The mother is still living in the land of her nativity. They were the parents of eight children: Matts, now of Marion county, Oregon; Louisa, now Mrs. Anderson, of North Bend, this state; Anton, deceased; C. John, of this review; Matts, who died in infancy; Mary, who passed away at the age of fourteen years; and two who died in infancy.

C. John Hillstrom emigrated to America in the year 1887 and first settled in the Coos bay country at Marshfield, this state. At once, upon establishing his residence in that place, he accepted a position in a sawmill, in which employment he continued for a brief time and then established himself in the business of rafting timber down the river to the mills. In that business he continued to be occupied for a period of five years, after which he engaged in farming, conducting his operations in agriculture at a point eleven miles from the city of Marshfield, and later, in 1900, he purchased the farm upon which he now lives, ten acres of which property is now included within the city limits of Marshfield. He is the owner of a very fine home and conducts a small dairy business. He is also one of the principal stockholders in a cooperative grocery company of Marshfield.

Mr. Hillstrom was united in marriage in the year 1899 to Miss Alina Kankkanen. Mrs. Hillstrom is a native of Finland and is a daughter of John and Louisa Kankkanen, both of whom are natives of Finland and are still living in that country. To Mr. and Mrs. Kankkanen ten children were born, eight of whom are now living: Alina, who is the wife of C. John Hillstrom; Mary, who resides in Africa; Otto, Selma, Willie, Lydia, Verner and Edla, all of whom are living in Finland, and Alfred and Hildur, both of whom are deceased. To Mr. and Mrs. Hillstrom five children have been born: Rudolph J., born in 1900, Elsie A., 1902, Arthur C., 1903, Ruth R., 1906, and Alphons M., 1910, all of whom are still at home with their parents.

Mr. Hillstrom is politically affiliated with the democratic party. He is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows of Marshfield and also a member of the Finnish Beneficial Order, in which he has filled all of the chairs. Both himself and wife received in their native land a liberal education in the public schools and are members of the Lutheran church of Marshfield. Mr. Hillstrom is one of the reliable and highly respected citizens of the county in which he lives and has always given the benefit of his influence to every public measure designed to improve the educational and religious citizenship of the people among whom he has established his home.

EUGENE O'CONNELL is numbered among the successful and highly respected citizens of this state. His name is justly entitled to a place on the pioneer roll of Oregon, in the development of whose resources he has taken so conspicuous a part. He is now living in comparative retirement in his beautiful mansion, Kittyville, located on a most picturesque spot one and one-half miles from Marshfield. He was born November 17, 1841, in County Cork, Ireland, and is a son of Eugene and Julia (Kelly) O'Connell. His father was by occupation a farmer and both he and his wife died in their native land when the subject of this review was but a child. Five children were born to his parents: Cornelius, of San Francisco; Dennis, who died leaving one son and one daughter, both of whom are residents of New York city; Eugene, of this review; Theodore, deceased; and Julia, who has also passed away.

Eugene O'Connell was reared in his father's home and received his early education in his native land. He remained under the parental roof until he was seventeen years of age, at which time he emigrated to America. His leaving Ireland at the time above noted was the result of financial reverses which unfortunately attended his father's business interests immediately following the death of his mother. He came to America, where employment was awaiting him, that having been secured by his brother Dennis, who had preceded him to this country some time before and with whom he made his home at once after reaching American shores. He started as errand boy in the employ of the Erie Railroad Company. His faithful attention to business and his trusty and careful methods of work soon attracted the attention of officials of the company and he was later advanced to the position of shipping clerk, in which position he continued for some time. While in the fulfillment of his duties in that office he decided to try his fortunes in the mining fields of British Columbia and for that purpose he took ship for the Pacific coast, in due time arriving at San Francisco, only to find to his disappointment that the mining fever had subsided and few people were looking hopefully toward the gold fields for fortune. He concluded to give his attention to other lines and obtained employment at steamboating, being so occupied for one year, after which he removed to Coos Bay and settled in Empire, which at that time was but a small village in Coos county. Immediately after he became a resident of Empire he formed a partnership with Major Kenny and the firm engaged in the meat and butcher business, continuing to care for the interests of their business for the two years following. At the end of that time Marshfield was just entering upon its first healthy development period and Mr. O'Connell and his partner, believing that place to be one offering great advantages to their line of business, immediately purchased real estate and built thereon the first pioneer meat market of the town. Their establishment was located on Fourth street and to this enterprise they gave their entire attention and energies for a period of three years, after which Mr. O'Connell sold his interest for ten thousand dollars cash and with the proceeds he built the first hardware store in Coos county, which he successfully operated for some time and later he established branch stores in Coquille and Empire. To the successful conduct of these three stores he gave his personal attention for the long period of thirty-three years. The business during that time was incorporated and later Mr. O'Connell retired from the active management of the concern and he has recently disposed of all his interests in the business. He, however, still owns the real estate and buildings in connection with the business in Marshfield. The stores and real estate connected with the business in Coquille and Empire he sold some years ago. To Mr. O'Connell belongs the credit of having built the first modern apartment house in Marshfield. This handsome and profitable property he still owns and he is also the owner of a beautiful country home located on fourteen acres of land half way between Marshfield and North Bend. This property bears the unique name of Kittyville and is one of the show places of this portion of the state. It is modern in all its appointments and its picturesque surroundings justly entitle it to be known as one of the handsomest of Oregon's residences. It is so located as to overlook the bay, which adds materially to its elegance as a most desirable site for a country home of a retired gentleman. In addition to the above named holdings of Mr. O'Connell he also owns a one-third interest in the town site of Bandon, this state, and is possessed of other valuable properties located in various parts of this state.

On the 16th of June, 1876, Mr. O'Connell was united in marriage to Miss Rose Hague, who was a daughter of Samuel and Mary (Lee) Hague, both of whom were natives of England. She was born in Lancashire, England, and with her parents when a child of seven years emigrated to America and settled in Pennsylvania, where her father was engaged in the manufacturing business. To her parents nine children were born: Rose, who became the wife of the subject of this review; Elizabeth and William, both deceased; Nancy, who married Gustus Steffin, of New York city, and has two children, Gustus and May; Clara, the wife of Jack Minto, of Victoria, British Columbia, and the mother of one child, May Bell; Eliza, who married Thomas Minot, of San Francisco, by whom she has one daughter, Mary; Samuel, who resides in Vancouver, British Columbia; Frank E., who makes his home in Marshfield, and Mary, who is living in San Francisco, California. To Mr. and Mrs. O'Connell five children were born: Edna, who became the wife of Dr. B. N. Richardson, of Portland, and has two children, Rosemary and Joseph Eugene; Mabel, the wife of E. K. Jones, of Marshfield, and the mother of one son, Eugene; Letta Elizabeth, who married William Ford, of Portland, Oregon, and has one child, Mabel E.; one who died in infancy, and Rose, who also died in infancy.

Mr. O'Connell is a loyal member of the democratic party and to that political organization he consistently gives his support. He has served three terms on the city council of Marshfield but has never aspired to political preferment of any kind. He has been a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Knights of Pythias and the Knights of Columbus. Both himself and wife are members of the Catholic church. Mr. O'Connell is one of the representative men of the state of Oregon. He has devoted his life during all his active business years to the development of the resources of his adopted state and is universally recognized among his associates as a man of strict integrity, reliable in all his business transactions and always to be found associated with every new enterprise seeking the improvement of the people. For many years past it has been his custom to spend from four to six weeks each summer with his wife in camping and fishing and this period of rest from the cares and toil of business has undoubtedly contributed very much to his clear thinking and to the annual renewal of tired nerves and an overtaxed physical system.

J. W. BYBEE, who is one of the prominent landed proprietors of Jackson county, owns eight hundred acres of excellent ranch land in one solid body located one mile from the city of Jacksonville on the hill road. He is also identified with the business interests of the city, being a stockholder in the Bank of Jacksonville. He was born in this county, on the farm which he now owns and upon which he resides, his birth having occurred October 28, 1856. He is the son of William and Elizabeth A. (Walker) Bybee, the former a native of Kentucky and the latter of Missouri. The father crossed the plains as a young man, locating in Oregon in 1851, while the mother emigrated to this state with her parents in 1852, their respective families settling in Jackson county. Captain Jesse Walker, the father of Mrs. Bybee, on entering the valley made entry of a donation claim, a portion of which has since become a part of the real-estate holdings of the subject of this review.

Immediately following the marriage of William Bybee, he purchased a part of his father-in-law's farm and being unusually successful in his agricultural affairs he continued to add by purchase to his home ranch until at one time he was the owner of two thousand acres of rich agricultural land, all in one body. Establishing his home, he spent the remainder of his days here and closed his earthly pilgrimage in November, 1908, at the age of seventy-eight years, his wife having preceded him in death in October, 1899, being sixty-one years of age at the time. He was a stanch adherent of the democratic party and a man of great influence in the councils of its local organization. He served for two terms as sheriff of Jackson county and during his entire active life he was counted among the safe and progressive leaders in all matters relating to public affairs. He was a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows for many years.

J. W. Bybee was reared in his father's home and acquired his early education in the public district schools. On reaching manhood he identified himself with his father and engaged with him in farming. In 1899 he acquired a homestead in his own right and this he at once improved and cultivated, meeting from the beginning with gratifying results. He has continued to enjoy prosperity and has been able to add to his original homestead from time to time until he is now the owner of eight hundred acres of excellent farm and ranch land advantageously located within one mile of the city of Jacksonville and to the care and improvement of this property he gives his undivided attention.

Mr. Bybee is affiliated with the democratic party and at one time was placed in nomination as candidate for the office of sheriff of his county. He is a member of the Warren Lodge, No. 10, A. F. & A. M., of Jacksonville. He is unmarried and well known and popular in social and fraternal circles of the community. One of the best known men in this portion of the state he is regarded as one of the enterprising, practical and successful agriculturists of southeastern Oregon.

WILLIAM BYBEE

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY

ALONZO LONG. One of the notable pioneers of Oregon, who by successful business management has long since been enabled to retire from active work is Alonzo Long, residing in Haines, Baker county. He was born in Mercer county, Illinois, July 31, 1847, the son of Lewis and Sarah Ann (Hesser) Long, the former of whom was a native of Virginia. In 1854 the parents decided to cross the plains to seek their fortune on the Pacific coast. The trip was made with ox teams and required six months. They arrived in the fall in Polk county, where they spent the winter, and in the spring of 1855 settled in Linn county, where they took up land upon which they erected a cabin with puncheon floor and doors, the latter being equipped with string latches. Here the parents resided during the remainder of their lives. In their family were nine children: Mary J., of Baker City, who is the widow of W. M. Ross; Jonathan C., deceased; Alonzo; Phoebe Ann, of Linn county, who is the widow of H. Owen; Ransom, deceased; Peter, who resides on the old homestead; and Gabriel, Columbus and William S., all residing in Washington.

Alonzo Long remained at home with his parents until 1869, when he began farming on his own account in Linn county. He remained in that county following agricultural pursuits until 1872, when he removed to Baker county and bought a ranch near Haines. This ranch which he still owns and which he has finely improved and brought under an excellent state of tillage, consists of five hundred and sixty acres and is one of the most valuable pieces of farming property in Baker county. On this magnificent ranch Mr. Long lived and labored until 1899, when he retired to the fine residence which he now owns in Haines.

On May 13, 1869, Mr. Long was married to Miss Julia Ann Taylor, a native of Linn county, her birth having occurred September 6, 1853. She was a daughter of James and Elizabeth (Smelser) Taylor, the father being a native of Indiana and the mother of Illinois. In 1852 her parents crossed the plains, locating in Linn county, Oregon. Subsequently they removed to Lane county but in 1872 took up their residence in Morrow county, removing in 1879 to Baker county, where they passed the remainder of their lives. In their family were eight children: William H., of Linn county; I. T., of Baker county; Susan J., the wife of S. P. Herring, of Baker county; Melinda Ann, the wife of Joseph L. Savage, of Baker county; John J., deceased; Julia Ann, now Mrs. Alonzo Long; Mary E., the wife of J. D. Simons, of Baker county; and Minnie L., the wife of J. M. Burnsides. Mr. and Mrs. Long have become the parents of fifteen children: Ida B., who was born April 26, 1870, and died in September, 1905, and who was the wife of William Jackson; Charles D., of Baker county, who was born March 16, 1872; Clara M., born February 24, 1874, the wife of W. J. Welch, of Haines; John R., who was born February 20, 1876, and resides in Baker county; Viola A., born January 7, 1878, who is the wife of R. P. Anderson, of Baker county; Thomas A., who was born December 31, 1878, and died July 21, 1879; William O., who was born April 7, 1880, and is a resident of Baker county; Alford M., who was born February 12, 1882, and died June 27, 1883; James L., who was born July 6, 1883, and died October 15 of the same year; Lee C., of Baker county, who was born March 10, 1885; Archie J., of Baker county, who was born April 23, 1886; Ray, who was born July 20, 1888, and died September 8th of the same year; Lora E., born September 17, 1889, who is the wife of S. W. Loy; George E., who was born September 17, 1890, and died August 22, 1891; and Rose O., born April 11, 1894, who is now the wife of John Joseph Long.

Besides raising his own family Mr. Long has also brought up his grandson, Charles Emery Jackson, who at present is ten years of age. He was two years and four months old when his mother, Ida B. Jackson died, and four years when he joined Mr. Long's family.

In his political faith Mr. Long is a democrat but he has never paid a great deal of attention to politics. He takes a lively interest in educational matters and served for some time on the school board. He is an active member of the Farmers Union, the only fraternal organization to which he belongs. Both Mr. and Mrs. Long are earnest and consistent members of the First Baptist church, being among the most prominent of those affiliated with that religious body in Haines. By the long residence of Mr. Long in Baker county, the arduous pioneer labors which he performed and the large family which he reared he has rendered valiant service in the upbuilding of the agricultural interests and the public institutions of Baker county. His life being that of a pioneer, he and his family in the earlier days were compelled to submit to many hardships which the younger generation is fortunate in escaping. He was always industrious, economical and frugal and his estimable wife is deserving of much of the credit for the success of her husband. Members of the Long family are well known throughout this entire section and Alonzo Long is numbered among the most esteemed and respected citizens of Haines, where he is now living in retirement, enjoying the fruits of his earlier life of toil as a pioneer.

XAVIER ANTONE GASSNER, an enterprising and progressive young business man of Reedville, conducts a general mercantile establishment in association with his brother Alois. His birth occurred in Portland, Oregon, on the corner of Second and Oak streets, October 2, 1874. His parents, Alois and Justina (Lampert) Gassner, are mentioned at greater length on another page of this work in connection with the sketch of Alois Gassner, a brother of our subject. He supplemented his early education by a course of study in St. Michael's Business College of Portland, of which institution he is a graduate. In 1909, when a young man of thirty-five years, he started out in business life on his own account, becoming a partner of his brother in the conduct of a general mercantile store at Reedville. He owns a half interest in the enterprise, which under the able management of himself and his brother has grown to extensive and profitable proportions. He also has an interest in the store building and likewise owns a tract of land comprising fourteen acres within six miles of Portland.

In September, 1909, Mr. Gassner was united in marriage to Miss Vronie Bany, who was born at Oregon City, Oregon, in 1890, her parents being Sylvester and Emma Bany, natives of Ohio. A few years after their marriage they left the Buckeye state and came to Oregon City, Oregon, there residing for five years. On the expiration of that period they took up their abode in Washington county, where they have remained continuously since. Their children are six in number, namely: Charles and West, both of whom are residents of Washington county, Oregon; Mrs. Gassner; and Frank, Clara and Joseph, all yet at home. Mr. and Mrs. Gassner have one son, Robert, who was born on the 5th of February, 1911.

Since age conferred upon him the right of franchise Mr. Gassner has supported the men and measures of the republican party and for many years he ably served in the capacity of school clerk. His fraternal relations are with the Catholic Order of Foresters and the Modern Woodmen of America, while both he and his wife are faithful communicants of the Catholic church. They have spent their entire lives in the Sunset state and enjoy an extensive and favorable acquaintance in the community where they reside.

JOHN CALDWELL, who devotes his attention to the pursuit which George Washington designated as "the most useful as well as the most honorable occupation of man," is the owner of a farm of three hundred and twenty-five acres situated four and a half miles southwest of Beaverton. His birth occurred in Wellington county, Ontario, in 1856, his parents being William R. and Elsie (Rennie) Caldwell, both of whom were born in Scotland, the former in 1826 and the latter in 1827. William R. Caldwell emigrated to Canada in 1844 and resided in Ontario until 1865, when he took his family to Kankakee, Illinois. There he remained for a period of fourteen years or until 1879, which year witnessed his arrival in Washington county, Oregon. He purchased the John B. Kellogg donation claim of three hundred and twenty-five acres and made his home thereon throughout the remainder of his life, his demise occurring in 1891. At that time he had cleared fifty acres of his land and had brought the tract under a high state of cultivation. His wife, surviving him for a number of years, was called to her final rest in 1907. They had two children: John, of this review; and Annie S., who passed away when forty-eight years of age.

John Caldwell, who acquired his education in the common schools, was about twenty-two years of age when he came with his father to Oregon. He obtained a half-interest in the home farm of three hundred and twenty-five acres and operated the same in partnership with his father until the latter's death, when he came into full possession of the property. The further cultivation and improvement of the place have claimed his time and energies continuously since, and it is now one of the attractive and valuable farms of the community. A tract of one hundred acres is under a high state of cultivation, one hundred and fifteen acres is merchantable timber and the balance is pasture land. Mr. Caldwell also owns forty acres of unimproved land at Little Falls, Washington.

In 1891 Mr. Caldwell was united in marriage to Miss Ada M. Frewing, a native of England and a daughter of George and Mary Frewing, who emigrated to Canada when Mrs. Caldwell was but two years of age. After a residence of two years in Canada her parents took up their abode in Chicago, Illinois, where Mr. Frewing followed the carpenter's trade for one year. Subsequently he spent two years in Denver, Colorado, and then removed to Oakland, California, there remaining for five years. On the expiration of that period he came to Washington county, Oregon, and at the present time resides in Portland. He has five living children, as follows: Mrs. Caldwell; Mrs. H. I. Crockett, who is a resident of Portland, Oregon; B. S., living at Tigardville, Oregon; H. W., also of Tigardville; and A. F., who makes his home at Tigardville. Mr. and Mrs. Caldwell have four children, Elsie G., Millard E., Mabel Ruth and Eleanor M.

In politics Mr. Caldwell is a stanch republican but his aspirations have not been in the line of office holding. He is, however, a warm friend of the cause of education and has served as a member of the school board for seven years. Both he and his wife are devoted and consistent members of the Methodist Episcopal church, taking an active part in its work.

HON. WILLIAM GALLOWAY. The practice of law and service upon the county and circuit bench have at different times claimed the attention of the Hon. William Galloway and he has also aided in framing the laws of the commonwealth as one of the state legislators. At the present time he is serving as circuit judge, with residence in McMinnville. He was born in Dodgeville, Wisconsin, June 10, 1845, and comes of Scotch-Irish ancestry. His great-grandfather came from Scotland to the United States while this country was still numbered among the colonial possessions of Great Britain and settled in Virginia, where his son, William Galloway, the grandfather of the Judge, was born and reared. With the outbreak of the Revolutionary war the latter espoused the cause of independence and aided in the establishment of the republic. Charles Galloway, the father of Judge Galloway, was born in Virginia but at an early age became a resident of Illinois and subsequently of Missouri, while later he made his home in Iowa county, Wisconsin. There he worked in the lead mines and also followed farming. In 1832 he served in the Black Hawk war under Governor Dodge. Twenty years later, in 1852, accompanied by his wife and eight children, he crossed the plains from Wisconsin with ox teams, being upon the road for seven months, during which time one of the children died. At length reaching his destination, Charles Galloway secured a donation land claim in Yamhill county, Oregon, near Amity. This he at once began to develop and improve and in time converted it into a valuable and productive property. His political allegiance was given the democracy but he preferred the quiet of private life to the turmoil of office. He died in 1884 and in the same month his wife, Mrs. Mary Galloway, was called to her final rest. She was a daughter of Terrence Heeney, who was a resident of New York city, where his death occurred. Eleven children were born of this marriage and, with the exception of two, all reached adult age, while three sons and three daughters are now living.

William Galloway, the youngest of the sons, was educated in the public schools and in the Willamette University, from which he was graduated with the degree of B. S. in the class of 1868. He first provided for his own support by teaching school in Yamhill county following that profession for several years, after which he took up the study of law. Later he engaged in farming and since 1892 he has been actively interested in horticultural pursuits, owning and developing an eighty-acre orchard near McMinnville. Judicial service, however, has claimed much of the time and attention of Judge Galloway. Politically he is a democrat and was first called to office when in 1874 he was elected to represent his district in the lower house of the state legislature. Four years later he was again chosen for that position and proved one of the active working members of the legislative body, serving as chairman of the committee on ways and means. Again in 1880 he was chosen representative and his labors have been a potent force in shaping the policy and molding the destiny of the state and winning for it the prominent position which it now occupies as one of the leading states of the Union. His position upon any vital question has never been an equivocal one and while in the general assembly he stanchly espoused every cause which he deemed of worth in promoting the interests of the state. In 1890 he was called to the bench, serving as judge of Yamhill county for a term of four years, and on the expiration of that period he was made the democratic candidate for governor, his opponents being W. P. Lord, the republican candidate, and Mr. Pierce, the populist. In February, 1896, Mr. Galloway received from President Cleveland the appointment of receiver of the United States land office at Oregon City and he continued in that position under three presidential administrations. On his retirement from office on the 16th of July, 1902, he resumed the private practice of law, opening an office in Oregon City, although retaining his legal residence in McMinnville, Yamhill county. He is now serving as circuit judge and has made a most creditable record on the bench, his decisions being characterized by clearness and perspicuity, by correct application of the law, by fairness and by equity. While long regarded as an able member of the Oregon bar and a prominent leader in democratic circles, he has at the same time continued as a factor in the agricultural and horticultural development of the state and has ever been in the vanguard of those who are promoting progress along these lines. He is a life member of the Oregon Horticultural Society, of which he has served as a director for many years, and he was also a member of the state board of agriculture from its organization until 1897, during which time he served for three terms as its president.

Judge Galloway was married in Yamhill county to Miss Emma Baker, who was born in Dodge county, Wisconsin, December 28, 1851, a daughter of Varranus Baker, deceased. Her mother and the family came with an uncle across the plains to Oregon in 1865, following the father's death. Unto Judge and Mrs. Galloway have been born three children: Zilpha V., who is a teacher in the high school in Albany, Oregon; Charles V., a graduate of the University of Oregon and at one time the youngest member of the state legislature and now state tax commissioner; and Francis V., who is also a graduate of the State University and now the junior member of the law firm of McCain & Vinton, at McMinnville, Oregon.

Judge Galloway holds membership with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the United Artisans and his wife is entitled to membership with the Daughters of the American Revolution, for among her ancestors were those who fought in the war for independence. She belongs to the Rebekah lodge, the ladies' auxiliary of the Odd Fellows, serving as president of the assembly in 1907-8 and is at present secretary of the Odd Fellows' home board. She is also a member of the Woman's Relief Corps, in which organization she is prominent, having been department president in 1901-2 and also a member of the national executive board. Judge Galloway is a life member of the Oregon Historical Society, is ex-president of the Oregon Pioneers Association and took an active part in establishing the Soldiers' Home at Roseburg, serving for two terms as a member of its board. Both Judge and Mrs. Galloway are prominent and active in organizations which affect the general interests of society and which reach out along broadening lines of activity that affect the welfare and progress of the race. In his profession his work has been of substantial worth and merit and in public office he has made a record which has shown him to be ever faultless in honor, fearless in conduct and stainless in reputation.

HOWARD A. PERKINS is one of the influential and respected citizens of Josephine county where he is engaged in the cultivation of his ranch containing one hundred two and one-half acres of land located on Wolf creek. He has the distinction of having served in the regular army as a scout under the immortal General Custer. He received his honorable discharge and was mustered out of service two years before the Custer massacre occurred. He was born in Wisconsin, February 20, 1855, and is the son of William E. and Lucretia A. (Gilson) Perkins. The father was a native of Canada and the mother of Massachusetts. William E. Perkins settled in Wisconsin in 1842 and some time later removed to Minnesota where he remained for six years. In 1887 he removed to Oregon and settled first in Wallowa county and later removed to Ashland in Jackson county where he lived for some time and then established his residence at Central Point and there continued to live until the time of his death, which occurred at the age of eighty-three years. Mrs. Perkins also having died in their home at the age of eighty-three years. To this union twelve children were born, six of whom are still living.

Howard A. Perkins was reared in his parents' home and received his early education in the public schools of the district in which he lived. At the early age of twelve years he left the parental roof and was employed as a common laborer for a number of years in Wisconsin. He later established himself upon a farm, making a specialty of truck gardening and continued to devote his attention to that industry for a number of years. In 1885 he moved to western Oregon and two years later he settled in Jackson county, that state, where he continued to reside for seventeen years. He then purchased a ranch of one hundred two and one-half acres in Josephine county on which he has since continued to reside and devote his attention to its cultivation.

Mr. Perkins was united in marriage September 19, 1875, to Miss Lillian King, a native of Wisconsin and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. L. King, and to them seven children have been born: Ada, the wife of A. C. Spence, of Glenn county, California; Gerald L., a resident of The Dalles; Elver and Elmer, who are twins and still reside with their parents; two children not named, who are deceased; and Hazel L., who married W. D. McIntosh, of Josephine county, Oregon.

Mr. Perkins is affiliated with the republican party and has served for some time as a member of the school board of the district in which he lives. He is an enterprising and industrious citizen of Josephine county and a man who is highly respected for his integrity among all his friends and business associates.

WILLIAM S. ALLAN, a resident of Yamhill county since 1891, is now the owner of ninety-three acres of excellent land and is extensively engaged in the cultivation of apples and prunes. His place is most appropriately named the Park Hill Orchards and in the midst of his land stands a fine residence and many modern improvements and equipments. He was born in Aberdeenshire, Scotland, June 17, 1865, and is a son of Alexander and Isabella (Sang) Allan, who spent their entire lives in Aberdeenshire, where the father was a granite worker. He married a farmer's daughter and they became the parents of ten children, seven sons and three daughters, of whom William S. Allan is the fourth in order of birth. The members of the household were: Alexander, who is now a resident of Illinois; Peter, whose demise occurred in Dundee, Oregon; Mary, who is likewise deceased; William S., of this review; Isabella, who has passed away; James, living in Vancouver, British Columbia; John, who likewise resides in Vancouver; Christine, who is deceased; Robert, of London, England; and Alfred.

William S. Allan spent his youthful days in the home of his parents, remaining in Scotland until seventeen years of age, when he came alone to the new world, making his way to Illinois about 1882. He left home on the 8th of June, desiring better opportunities than he could secure in his native country. He was ambitious to make the best use of his time and talents and for four years he worked as a farm hand in Lake county, Illinois. He then went to Minnesota, where he entered the employ of J. J. Hill, the railroad magnate, caring for his herd of Angus cattle. He continued for a year and a half with Mr. Hill and then entered the employ of T. W. Harvey, of Nebraska, as a cattle man, handling blooded stock. A year later he took charge of the Shorthorn herd of B. O. Cowan in Holt county, Missouri, there remaining for three years. In 1891 he arrived in Clarke county, Washington, where he spent four months, since which time he has been a resident of Yamhill county. He made his way first to Dundee and purchased ten acres of his present home farm. In the spring of 1892 he planted an apple orchard and in 1893 set out his first prunes. He bought and improved his first land and planted his orchards and subsequently he purchased some improved property. He now has ninety-three acres, of which ten acres are planted to apples and fifty acres to prunes. The remainder of the tract is set out to other fruits and to trees, and the Park Hill Orchards is one of the fine country places of this section of the county. He has recently erected a fine residence and has many other modern equipments and improvements on the place, including an evaporator. He evaporates the products of fifty acres and dries on an average of about sixty tons of prunes annually. He is thoroughly conversant with the best methods of prune production and of the care of the fruit after it is gathered and his business is proving profitable. His home is situated about a mile west of Dundee, yet his land extends to the corporation limits of the village, which at the time of his arrival contained only one store and the station, but is now a thriving town. Mr. Allan was one of the original prune men of this section and the industry has developed the town of Dundee and largely been the source of the upbuilding of this part of the country. He is the oldest prune grower "in the hills" and his success demonstrates what may be accomplished through energy, perseverance and the use of intelligent and scientific methods.

MR. AND MRS. H. A. PERKINS

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY

ADELBERT McKEE, who was for many year engaged in mining, has recently retired from that industry and is now a resident ranchman located on Big Applegate creek in Jackson county. He is a native of Missouri, having been born in Sullivan county on the 15th of March, 1852, and is the son of John and Mariam (Bowen) McKee. In early life the father followed the occupation of a school teacher. His parents emigrated from Missouri to Oregon in 1854, crossing the plains with ox teams. On reaching this state John McKee located in Jackson county, four miles southeast of Medford, and later removed to a ranch on Forest creek, where he established his home and continued to live for the succeeding sixteen or seventeen years. He later removed to Butte creek and subsequently to Eagle Point, where his death occurred February 15, 1911. His wife was called to her final rest on the 22d of October, 1907. For many years prior to his death John McKee was a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. He was affiliated with the republican party and was one of the influential men in that political organization.

Adelbert McKee was reared in his father's home and acquired his early education in the public schools of the district in which he lived. His studies, however, were greatly interrupted on account of the very limited public school facilities in an early day in his portion of the state. In his youth he became interested in and identified with placer mining and continued in this industry for many years, the field of his operations being principally confined to Forest creek and Applegate creek in Jackson county, although during the later years he has been giving his attention largely to agriculture and stock-raising.

In December, 1878, Mr. McKee was united in marriage to Miss Leila De Long, of Jackson county. Twelve children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. McKee, eight of whom survive, namely: Adelbert, at home; Edna T., the wife of Charles Raymond Phillips, of Applegate Creek, Jackson county; Verna B., now the wife of C. W. Culy, residing in the Applegate valley; Fort A.; Luella L.; Leonard R.; Doris T.; and Dorothy R.

Mr. McKee is a pronounced and loyal member of the republican party and is enthusiastically identified with the political movements and triumphs of that great political organization. Fraternally he is identified with the Improved Order of Red Men, belonging to Jacksonville Lodge, No. 1. His long residence in this portion of the state has made him one of the well known citizens of Jackson county. He is always interested in issues of a public nature looking to the advancement and betterment of the conditions of the people and is regarded as one of the up-to-date, thrifty ranchmen of the Applegate valley.

W. H. HUMPHREYS, JR., a well known and highly esteemed agriculturist residing four miles east of Salem, on the Macleay road, divides his time and energy between his farm and the Automatic Call & Advertising Clock Company of Portland. His birth occurred on his father's donation land claim in Marion county on the 8th of July, 1867, his parents being William and Penelope (Wilson) Humphreys. They were both natives of Tennessee and were married in that state before crossing the plains in 1853 and taking up a one hundred and twenty acre donation claim, which was located twelve miles directly east of Salem. This property has been his residence for nearly sixty years and at the time of his death in March, 1910, comprised three hundred and sixty-three acres. To Mr. and Mrs. Humphreys the following children were born, namely: Margaret, deceased; J. M., who is an extensive landowner and stock-raiser in Morrow county; Taxana Bellzora, who is the wife of J. M. Rogers and resides in Portland; A. M., who is engaged in the real-estate business in Portland; Ida, who is the wife of R. G. Ashby, an agriculturist of Marion county; Mary L., the wife of J. B. Ashby, who is also engaged in agricultural pursuits in Marion county; W. H., the subject of this sketch; Carrie and Minnie, twins, the former the wife of C. L. Rogers and the latter deceased; and Harry, who is acting as agent for the Automatic Call & Advertising Clock Company, of Portland.

W. H. Humphreys, Jr., received his early education in the country schools near his home and then attended the Monmouth Normal School and the Portland Business College. His first enterprise when he started out upon his independent career was to engage in the abstract business, but he soon disposed of this to A. A. Lee and set out for eastern Oregon, where he purchased three hundred and sixty acres of land, which he devoted to stock-raising. For ten years he was thus engaged and at the end of that time, after he had sold out to his brother, he returned to the family homestead, where he remained for a short time before removing to the small farm four miles east of Salem which is his present place of residence. In addition to cultivating this property Mr. Humphreys is also actively interested in the Automatic Call & Advertising Clock Company, of Portland, of which he is an agent. In whatever he undertakes he shows an aggressive spirit and an ability capable of meeting the demands made upon it.

In 1891 Mr. Humphreys was married to Miss Hattie Ashby, who is a native of Marion county, Oregon, and a daughter of Joseph and Mary Ashby, both of whom are now deceased. In the family of Mr. and Mrs. Humphreys are two children, namely: Lola Lucile, who was born October 15, 1892, and is a high-school graduate; and Mary Grace, whose birth occurred February 10, 1900, and who is at present in school.

In politics Mr. Humphreys is a stanch republican and is much interested in the success of his party, giving it loyal allegiance although never seeking nor accepting office. He is also a member of Camp No. 118, Woodmen of the World, of Salem, and Mrs. Humphreys holds membership in the circle of this camp and also in the Evangelical church. Their noble qualities of character and their interest in the welfare of others have given Mr. and Mrs. Humphreys a high standing in their community.

FRANK JOHNSTON owns a blacksmith shop in Provolt which he has conducted for the past several years. He has an honorable military record, having served for many years in the regular army, the greater part of his service being in the Spanish-American war in connection with the Philippine campaign. He was born in Ohio, September 6, 1878, a son of John and Alice (Vamoorhis) Johnston, in whose family were three children. His youth was passed for the most part in Ohio, where he was given a good common-school education, and in early manhood he came to Oregon, where he lived for a time and in 1901 went to Washington. Early in life he enlisted in the regular army of the United States and after serving for three years reenlisted for three years in 1898, after spending some time in Oregon. After this period of service had expired he settled in Oregon, where he took up a homestead in Klamath county. After living upon that farm for a time he came to Josephine, where he engaged in blacksmithing, a trade which he had learned in the east. He owns his shop and is doing a very satisfactory business.

Mr. Johnston was married July 7, 1907, to Miss Bessie Carlisle, and to them were born two children, Alice M. and Thelma. Mr. Johnston is a socialist and although taking considerable interest in political matters devotes the most part of his time and attention to business. Fraternally he is a member of the Woodmen of the World camp and belongs to the United Spanish War Veterans. Being a workman of skill and a business man of ability he has succeeded in building up a very satisfactory business and his customers are increasing in number from time to time. He is a man of affable demeanor and, being well acquainted with many subjects as well as having a broad experience in travel incident to his military career, he has become the center of a large group of friends who mingle on terms of close intimacy. He has won the respect and confidence of the entire community and is held in high esteem by his large circle of acquaintances and patrons.

JACOB BOSSHART. The citizenship of the northwest has drawn its coterie from all sections of the world. Among the residents of Warrenton who came from the land of the Alps is Jacob Bosshart. He was born in Switzerland, October 2, 1858, and was there reared to adult age, securing his education in the public schools. He remained in his native land for twenty-eight years, or until 1886, when he came to America and established his home in Warrenton, Clatsop county, Oregon. Here he is at present engaged in conducting a saloon. He has been very successful since arriving here, accumulating quite a fortune, and is numbered among the substantial residents of the town.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN RHODES, president of the Oregon Fire Relief Association, has in various connections been prominently identified with the business, professional and public interests of McMinnville and has become well established in the regard of his fellow townsmen by reason of his loyalty and fidelity to duty, whether of a public or a private nature. He was born in Madison county, Missouri, January 15, 1860, a son of John and Eliza (Graham) Rhodes, both of whom were natives of the same county, where they were reared and married. They later took up their abode upon a farm in that locality and there the father devoted his time and energies to general agricultural pursuits until September, 1873, when he came with his family to Oregon. This was about two years after the Union Pacific Railroad was built and even with the railroad transportation, such as it was then, it required three weeks to make the journey. On his arrival he settled in Monmouth, Polk county, but after a few months—in January, 1874—removed to Portland, where he worked at the carpenter's trade for about a year and a half. He then returned to Polk county and settled upon a farm, but in the fall of 1879 removed to McMinnville, where he resided until his death, which occurred August 15, 1900, when he had reached the age of sixty-six years, three months and four days. While a resident of Missouri he became a member of the Masonic fraternity and was ever afterward one of its exemplary representatives, upholding the principles and purposes of the craft. His wife died February 1, 1890, when fifty-nine years of age. Both were consistent members of the Baptist church and all who knew them entertained for them high esteem.

Benjamin F. Rhodes spent the first thirteen years of his life in his native county and then accompanied his parents on their removal to Oregon, his education being acquired in the public schools of the two states and in the McMinnville College and the Portland Business College. Liberal advantages well qualified him for later responsibilities which have come to him. In his teens he was employed by neighboring farmers, working in that manner until twenty-three years of age, but after completing his college course he took up the profession of teaching, giving the succeeding four years to educational work. While thus engaged he devoted the hours which are usually termed leisure to the study of law. During the last two years of his teaching he read law under W. D. Fenton, then of McMinnville, but did not complete his course of reading at that time. Instead, he turned his attention to the real-estate and insurance business in connection with his brother, M. D. L. Rhodes in McMinnville. Three years later he resumed the study of law and in June, 1896, was admitted to the bar. His brother, M. D. L. Rhodes, had been admitted a year previous and again in a partnership relation they entered upon law practice under the firm style of Rhodes & Rhodes. In April, 1901, however, the brother removed to Seattle and Benjamin F. Rhodes continued in practice alone. Gradually he worked his way upward until he stands well in the profession. In 1902 he was elected to the office of county judge and served upon the bench until April, 1906, when he resigned to accept the presidency of the Oregon Fire Relief Association, which had been tendered him. He has since served in this important capacity, in which connection he is well known in McMinnville and this part of the state.

On the 9th of July, 1889, Mr. Rhodes was united in marriage to Miss Mary I. Collard, a daughter of J. J. and Martha F. (Henderson) Collard, of McMinnville, who came to Oregon in its pioneer days, making their way from Missouri to the northwest some time in the '40s. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Rhodes have been born four children. Veda E., who is now a freshman in McMinnville College; Doda A., who is a junior in the high school of McMinnville; John Alvin, attending the grammar school; and Lola Frances.

Mr. Rhodes is well known in various connections outside of business and professional lines. He is a valued member of Union Lodge, No. 43, A. F. & A. M., and of Taylor Chapter, No. 16, R. A. M. He is a past master of the Masonic lodge, having presided in the east for two years, and has served for three years as lodge secretary. He also belongs to McMinnville Camp, No. 128, W. O. W. In politics he has ever been a democrat and was elected to the office of county judge on that ticket by a majority of two hundred and forty-two, although the county at that time had a normal republican majority of two hundred and fifty. His election was certainly a compliment to him, indicating his personal popularity and the confidence reposed in him by his fellow townsmen. He and his wife are helpful and active members of the Baptist church, in which he is serving on the board of trustees and at the present time is president of the board. He is now serving in the fourth year as president of the board of trustees of McMinnville College and has been a member of its board altogether for more than sixteen years. He belongs to the Commercial Club and to the Kono Club, a social organization of McMinnville. The consensus of public opinion places Mr. Rhodes in a prominent position among McMinnville's citizens and his abilities well fit him for the place of leadership which he occupies. He stands for those things which are always best in individual and community development, holds to high ideals and is ready to meet any obligation of life with the confidence and courage that come of conscious personal ability, right conception of things and an habitual regard for what is best in the exercise of human activities.

VICTOR H. COFFEY. For the greater part of twenty-seven years Victor H. Coffey has been a resident of the northwest and possesses the alert, enterprising spirit which has wrought such wonderful development in this section of the country, resulting in the building of a "western empire" that rivals the east in all that indicates business activity, intellectual, moral and social progress. He was born in Morgan county, Indiana, May 30, 1858, his parents being J. W. and Louisa (Norman) Coffey. In 1864 the family removed to Washington county, Iowa, settling upon a farm which continued to be the father's place of residence until his death in 1897. His widow still survives and is now living with her son Victor at the advanced age of eighty-five years. They were pioneer settlers of the northwest and through their influence and efforts contributed to the substantial development and improvement of the section of the state in which they lived. Their family numbered eight children: L. M., who is living in Clatsop county; I. T., who follows farming in the same county; B. F., and J. N., who are residents of Hammond; J. L., who is living in West Chester, Iowa; Victor H., of this review; and two who have passed away.

In taking up the personal history of Victor H. Coffey we present to our readers the life record of one widely and favorably known in the northwest. He was but a young lad of six years when with his parents he came to Iowa and until eighteen years of age remained at home with his parents, after which he began clerking in a store in Dayton, Iowa, where he spent four years. He afterward located at Wellman, Iowa, where he devoted two years to clerking, after which he went to Shelby county, Iowa, where he filled the office of deputy sheriff. In 1885 he removed to Oregon and secured a claim in Clatsop county, on which he resided for a year. Much of the land in that district was still wild and unimproved and in the intervening years he has taken an active and helpful part in the work of progress and upbuilding. He remained upon the farm for a year and then removed to Astoria, where he served as county assessor for one term. On his retirement from office in 1887 he turned his attention to general merchandising, conducting a store in Astoria for seven years, after which he sold out and removed to Warrenton. Here he opened a general mercantile establishment and is still engaged in business. He keeps a carefully selected line of goods and his well appointed establishment and honorable business methods insure him a liberal patronage. He has prospered as the years have gone by and is now an active and valued factor in commercial circles in his adopted city. Nor has his activity been confined alone to individual interests. He has been closely associated with public affairs and for three terms has served as mayor of Warrenton, giving to the city a businesslike and public-spirited administration, characterized by many needed reforms and improvements.

On the 18th of December, 1881, Mr. Coffey was united in marriage to Miss Anna M. Brandt, who was born in Trenton, New Jersey, August 7, 1862, and is a daughter of Philip J. and Mary (Raisner) Brandt. Her parents were both natives of the north of Germany and came to America in the early '50s, first settling in New Jersey, where they lived for a number of years. They afterward became residents of Johnson county, Iowa, where the father died in 1896, while the mother is now living in Iowa City at the age of eighty-one years. In their family were eight children: Henry Brandt, who is now living retired in Iowa City; Mrs. Coffey; and six who are now deceased. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Coffey have been born seven children: P. H., at home; Katie M., who is now a milliner of Astoria; Charles, who was born March 5, 1887, and died on the 28th of July of the same year; and Mary L., Nellie H., Java H. and Victor H., all yet under the parental roof. In addition to an attractive home in Warrenton Mr. Coffey owns a good ranch of one hundred and fifty acres. His wife is a member of the Lutheran church and he holds membership with Dayton Lodge, No. 149, A. F. & A. M., of Wellman, Iowa. He has not affiliated with the order in Oregon, however, yet is in full sympathy with the beneficent spirit of the craft and its principles concerning mutual helpfulness. He is preeminently a business man, active, alert and energetic, and as the years have gone by he has met with a substantial measure of success, which is the merited reward of earnest, persistent labor. The history of the northwest is largely familiar to him, as he has been a witness of much of its growth and development and at all times he has stood for that which is best and most progressive in the business life of the community and in the advancement of its moral, intellectual and social interests.

FRANCIS MARION ALFRED. At the age of eighty years Francis Marion Alfred is living retired in Baker, and his is a well earned and well merited rest, for through a long period he was actively connected with business interests, which not only brought to him a comfortable competence but also proved factors in the substantial progress of this part of the state.

He was born February 17, 1832, in Pike county, Illinois, his parents being Alonzo and Nancy (Wilson) Alfred, both of whom were born in the east and died there. The son is indebted to the public-school system of his native state for the educational privileges he enjoyed. Illinois was largely a frontier district during the period of his boyhood and youth. He continued a resident of that state until he reached the age of twenty-two years, and in 1854 he started westward to California, attracted by the discovery of gold on the Pacific coast and the opportunities he believed might be there obtained. He engaged in prospecting until 1859, when he came to Oregon and took up his abode in Oregon City. He there spent six years engaged in clerking and in the apple business. In 1864 he removed to Auburn, where he assisted in building the big ditch and also followed mining and other pursuits. The year 1870 witnessed his arrival in Baker, at which time he began driving stage between this place and La Grande, continuing in that work until his retirement about 1900. He formed a very wide acquaintance, and his genial nature and cordiality made him popular with the patrons of the stage line and with all the people residing along the route.

Mr. Alfred is the only survivor of the family of five children, and has reached the age of eighty years. He wedded Miss Mary E. Hoffman, a daughter of William and Martha Hoffman and one of a family of nine children, of whom two are now living: Nancy, who is the wife of Milton White of Portland and has four children; and Thomas Hoffman, of Baker. Mr. and Mrs. Alfred had one child, a son who died in infancy, and Mrs. Alfred died in September, 1905.

In his political views Mr. Alfred has been a republican since the organization of the party. For a half century he has held membership with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, belonging to Baker City Lodge, No. 25, and he stands very high in the order, being a member of Canton No. 2. He has been through all of the chairs in the local lodge and he has long been a devoted and faithful member of the Presbyterian church. He has never sought to figure prominently in any public connection, but his sterling worth, geniality and cordiality have been salient features in winning for him a large circle of friends. He is now one of the venerable citizens of Baker county, held in high esteem by young and old, rich and poor.

FRED O'KELLY is one of the enterprising merchants of Williams, Josephine county, where he is successfully engaged in the conduct of a general merchandising establishment and is also the postmaster of that place. He was born in Iowa, November 2, 1887, and is the son of LaFayette and Ellen S. (Burwell) O'Kelly, both of whom are natives of Iowa. LaFayette O'Kelly, shortly after his marriage, removed to Missouri

F. M. ALFRED

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY

where he was engaged in general farming for a period of seven years, after which he removed to Colorado where he was engaged in mining until 1908 and then removed to Josephine county, Oregon.

Fred O'Kelly was reared in his father's home and received his early education in the public schools of the district in which he lived. He remained under the parental roof until 1910, when he accepted employment as a clerk in a store at Williams where he remained for one year. He then purchased the entire establishment including the real estate and stock of goods and has since devoted his attention to the operation of that business.

Mr. O'Kelly was united in marriage at Grants Pass, in 1910, to Miss Edna Tryer, a native of Oregon, and to this union one child has been born, Burwell. Mr. O'Kelly is a member of the republican party and as a representative of that political organization is now serving in the office of postmaster of Williams. He is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America and also of the Ancient Order of United Workmen. He is a man held in high repute among the citizens of his county where he is engaged in the successful conduct of his mercantile business.

FRANCIS WESLEY LIVERMORE, who owns a fine ranch of two hundred and eighty acres, three miles southwest of Beaverton, that he is improving, has been operating a sawmill in Oregon for the past eighteen years. He was born in Iowa, his natal day being the 3d of November, 1863, and his parents were Theodore and Mary Ann (Wells) Livermore. The father was a native of Bloom county, New York, and the mother of Indiana, but they were married in Iowa, where they resided for ten years before they removed to Wisconsin. There the mother passed away in 1889, while the father died in Oregon on a visit to our subject on the 22d of July, 1907. Ten children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Livermore: Emma, the wife of B. J. Walker, of Wisconsin; Francis Wesley, our subject; George, who is living in Corvallis, Oregon; Ernest, a resident of Beaverton; Leona, the wife of Samuel Ensign, of Duluth, Minnesota; Mattie, the wife of B. J. Jackson, of Roseburg, Oregon; and Melvin, Eunice, Elvira and Gertrude, all of whom are deceased. Mr. Livermore had been previously married and by his first union there was born one son, Joshua, who is a resident of Wisconsin.

Reared at home Francis Wesley Livermore received a common-school education and began to make his way in the world at the age of twenty-four years. In 1893 he built a sawmill in Clackamas county, this state, that he operated for eight years and then removed it to Washington county, where he has ever since continued its operation. Here he acquired two hundred and eighty acres of land covered with an excellent growth of fine timber, all of which he has cleared, having realized a handsome dividend on his lumber. He is placing improvements on his ranch with the earnings it yields him and is now operating forty acres, which he has brought under a high state of cultivation. Mr. Livermore has met with success in his undertakings and is one of the prosperous citizens of the county and the owner of what promises to be a very valuable ranch.

On the 23d of June, 1889, was celebrated the marriage of Mr. Livermore and Miss Esther Steel, who was born in Iowa, on the 11th of June, 1871, and is a daughter of Abraham and Catherine (James) Steel. The parents were both natives of Pennsylvania but they were married in Iowa, where they resided until 1885, when they came to Coos county, Oregon, where the mother passed away on the 15th of October, 1887. The father, who is now seventy-eight years of age, continued to make his home in that county until 1902, when he removed to Washington county, and has ever since lived with his daughter, Mrs. Livermore. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Steel numbered five, as follows: Alice, the wife of John Lamp, of Idaho; Mrs. Livermore; and Melvin, Mary and Laura, all of whom succumbed to diphtheria within one week. To Mr. and Mrs. Livermore have been born three children: Ivy May, whose birth occurred in June, 1897; Francis S., who was born on the 22d of December, 1900; and John W., born on September 19, 1909. All the children are still in school and the daughter is also studying music.

The fraternal connections of Mr. Livermore are confined to his membership in the Woodmen of the World, his local affiliation being with the camp at Beaverton, and his political support is given to the republican party. Although he has never been an aspirant to public honors or the emoluments of office, Mr. Livermore has for the past five years been a member of the local school board. He is meeting with a goodly measure of success in his enterprises and is accorded the esteem of his community, by reason of his integrity and high sense of honor in all business transactions.

WILLARD N. SMITH. For more than a quarter of a century Willard N. Smith has been a resident of Oregon and for some years has been successfully engaged in the conduct of a general plumbing and heating business, being now located at No. 621 Commercial street, Astoria. Massachusetts claims him as a native son, his birth having there occurred on the 1st of November, 1857. His father, Nelson Smith, was born in the Old Bay state in 1810 and devoted his life to farming until his labors were ended in death. His wife, who bore the maiden name of Salina Burnett, also lived and died in Massachusetts. Their family numbered nine children, of whom two passed away in early life, the others being: Mary, who married Watson Williams, of Massachusetts; Eliza, the wife of George Harris, also of Massachusetts; and Louis B., Osman and Harvey G., all of Massachusetts; Willard, of this review; and Edson L., likewise residing in Massachusetts.

Mastering the common branches of learning as taught in the public schools and attending the high school of South Hadley, Massachusetts, Willard N. Smith devoted his energies to the work of the home farm for a few years. Subsequently he learned the tinner's trade at South Hadley Falls, following that pursuit for about four years. He was at different times in Holyoke and Springfield, Massachusetts, after which he went to Connecticut and Rhode Island. Gradually he made his way westward and spent two or three years in Kansas City. In 1883 he came to Oregon and the following year established his home in Astoria where he has since remained. After coming here he worked at his trade in the employ of E. R. Hawes for several years and subsequently was made superintendent of the waterworks, which position he filled for four years, from 1892 until 1896, when he utilized the capital he had saved from his earnings in the establishment of a business of his own. He opened a shop in partnership with C. H. Gribble, with whom he continued for a year, and then bought out his partner's interest, since which time he has been alone, conducting a general plumbing and heating business at No. 621 Commercial street. His thorough knowledge of the trade, excellent workmanship, capability in managing others and his carefully formulated and well executed plans have constituted the chief features in his progress in industrial lines. He has real-estate holdings in Astoria and well merits the prosperity which his labors have brought him.

On the 3d of September, 1884, Mr. Smith was married to Miss Jennie Hadden, who was born in Kansas, a daughter of Levi and Eliza Hadden. Her father was a farmer previous to the advent of the railroad, after which he engaged in hauling freight between Kansas and Missouri. Mr. and Mrs. Smith are now the parents of a daughter, Lena E. Their circle of friends is an extensive one and Mr. Smith is also well known among the Elks and Artisans, holding membership in both organizations. His political views are manifest in the support which he gives at the polls to the republican party. He is an excellent type of the enterprising young man of New England who seeks the opportunities of the far west and by improving his advantages reaches a position among the substantial citizens of his district.

ISAAC LAMBRIGHT is well known in McMinnville and throughout this portion of the state as the president of the Star Flouring Mills and is also a prominent factor in agricultural circles, owning and cultivating extensive tracts of land. His business is capably managed and that his judgment is sound and his plans of practical character is indicated in the success which has attended his efforts. He was born in Jefferson county, Virginia, August 16, 1844, his parents being Henry and Elizabeth (Kidwiler) Lambright, who were also natives of the Old Dominion and were of Pennsylvania Dutch stock, their respective families having removed from Maryland to Virginia. Early in the '50s the father took his family to Hardin county, Iowa, settling on a farm, which he continued to cultivate until his death, which occurred in 1869, resulting from the effects of an injury received while operating a threshing machine. His widow afterward removed to Henry county, Missouri, where her death occurred about 1874.

The youthful days of Isaac Lambright were spent upon the home farm and the common schools afforded him his educational opportunities. Ambitious to make the most of life and believing that better advantages were to be obtained in the far west, he joined a wagon train of fourteen wagons in 1865 and with it crossed the plains to Oregon. The Indians were on the rampage and while the wagon train was passing through Wyoming, within two miles of the Laramie river, the party was surrounded by a band of more than three hundred red men and was forced to go into corral about two o'clock. They were without water and undoubtedly all would have been massacred had not a large wagon train of freighters who had preceded them come to their rescue. All the members of a small wagon train had but a short time before been massacred just a little distance ahead of the party in which Mr. Lambright traveled and the wrecks of the wagons which had been burned together with the bones of the dead cattle and people were strewn over the plains.

After journeying for six months across the plains, over the hot stretches of sand and through the mountain passes, during which period many difficulties and dangers were encountered, Mr. Lambright at length reached Oregon, making his way to the present site of Newberg, in Yamhill county. Later he went to the French prairie in Marion county and a year or so afterward made his way to the Florence mining district in Idaho and for one year worked in the mines. He then returned to Yamhill county, where he has resided continuously since. For sixteen years after his return he engaged in the sawmill business and has since given much of his time to farming and to industrial pursuits. He is now the owner of a valuable tract of land of two hundred and six acres nine miles southwest of McMinnville and four hundred acres west of the town. These are cultivated under his supervision and annually bring forth good harvests, so that the financial return therefrom is a gratifying one. He continued to reside upon one of his farms until the fall of 1910, when he took up his abode in the city. In the spring of 1908 he purchased an interest in the Star Flouring Mills, at which time the company was reorganized and incorporated, Mr. Lambright becoming vice president. In December of the same year the president, Henry M. Daniel, died and Mr. Lambright succeeded him in the presidency, in which capacity he is now serving. He has also been identified with mining interests for the past three years and owns valuable mining property at Sumpter, this state. In addition to his other interests he is a stockholder in the United States National Bank of McMinnville.

In October, 1873, Mr. Lambright was married to Mrs. Melinda S. Stow, the widow of Marian Stow, a sawmill man of Yamhill county. Before her first marriage she bore the maiden name of Miss Downing. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Lambright have been born two children: Olive May, now the wife of Walter Macy, who operates one of her father's farms; and William H., at home. Politically he is a democrat and socially is connected with the Patrons of Husbandry. McMinnville places his name high on the roll of her leading and representative citizens. He forms his plans readily, is determined in their execution and by the intelligent direction of his affairs has won a most gratifying and creditable position in commercial, industrial and financial circles. He allows no obstacle or difficulty to brook his path if it can be overcome by persistent, earnest effort, and, moreover, he readily recognizes and improves the opportunities which many others have passed heedlessly by. His work has been a direct force for good to the community as well as a source of individual success.

W. T. BOSTWICK has long been a citizen of this state and of Jackson county. He is the superintendent of a large ranch of which he has entire charge, directing all its agricultural and stock interests, and in addition to this position he follows diversified farming on his home ranch, located in the Upper Applegate valley in Jackson county. He is a native of California, his birth having occurred in that state, October 31, 1867. He is the son of William H. and Eva (Dunn) Bostwick, his father being one of a family of thirteen children born to his parents.

W. T. Bostwick was reared in his father's home and received his education in the public schools. He remained under the parental roof until he attained his majority at which time he removed to Oregon and in this state he has since been prominently identified with the ranching business. For the past seven years he has been the sole director and manager of one of the large ranches located in this county, giving his special attention to its management and in addition he follows diversified farming, his crops including hay, garden truck, beans and fruit.

Mr. Bostwick has been twice married. Miss Rhoda Dulop, a native of this state, was his first wife. Her earthly pilgrimage was closed June 1, 1889, and she was buried in Logtown cemetery in Upper Applegate valley. Mr. Bostwick was later united in marriage to Miss Gussa Snyder and to this union five children have been born, Josephine, Earl, Henry, Everett and Harold, all of whom are at home with their parents. He is affiliated with the republican party and is one of the stanch supporters of the principles of this dominant political organization. He is a man who is highly esteemed wherever known and his life of devoted attention to business matters committed to his trust has gained for him the well merited reputation of being a man of ability and unquestioned integrity. In all public issues looking to the development of his county and state Mr. Bostwick's support is always to be relied upon, and he cheerfully contributes both of his time and means to the success of any worthy cause.

FRANK HOLMES, who since the 1st of June, 1907, has been engaged in the practice of law at Salem, where he is recognized as an able and rising young attorney, was born at Dallas, Polk county, Oregon, June 1, 1871, his parents being D. J. and Mary Ellen (Lewis) Holmes. The father was born in Pike county, Illinois, July 1, 1839, and was a son of H. M. V. and Nancy (Porter) Holmes. The great-grandparents of Frank Holmes in the paternal line came from Dublin, Ireland, and settled in Virginia, where the great-grandfather died, while his wife afterward removed to Pulaski county, Kentucky, and there reared her family. Her son, H. M. V. Holmes, was born in Wythe county, Virginia, and after reaching years of maturity wedded Nancy Porter, also a native of Virginia. They were residents of Pike county, Illinois, at the time of their marriage, and there resided until 1848, when they crossed the plains with ox teams to Oregon, settling in Polk county, where H. M. V. Holmes secured a donation claim of six hundred and forty acres twelve miles north of Salem. Both he and his wife died upon that place. He followed farming and also speculated in cattle, horses and sheep. In his political allegiance he was a stanch democrat and several times was elected a member of the legislature, serving in the general assembly both before and after the admission of the state to the Union, representing Polk county. He also filled the position of justice of the peace for a number of terms and in that connection rendered decisions which were strictly fair and impartial. As assemblyman he left the impress of his individuality upon the laws of the state and it was a widely recognized fact that he ever stood for progress and advancement. He was reared in the faith of the Methodist Episcopal church but afterward became a Swedenborgian. His death occurred when he was more than seventy years of age. In his family were seven children: D. J., the father of Frank Holmes; Nancy Jane, deceased; A. M., who is living on the old homestead in Polk county; J. P., who also resides on the old home place; William Henry, an attorney of Salem, Oregon; Horatio Reese, who became a physician and surgeon and died in Portland; and Mary A., who died in Polk county in infancy. The first four were all natives of Pike county, Illinois.

D. J. Holmes, father of our subject, was but a young lad when in 1848 he accompanied his parents on their journey across the plains. Much of his life has been passed in Polk county but he and his wife are now living in Salem. For a long period he followed farming and he is still the owner of a tract of twenty acres a mile west of Salem in Polk county. In addition to the cultivation of the soil he engaged in raising sheep but in 1889 suffered the loss of several thousand sheep that perished in a storm, the flock being snowed under five feet in Wasco county. It was in 1869 that D. J. Holmes wedded Miss Mary E. Lewis, who was born in Marion county, Oregon, and is a daughter of J. H. and Ellen (Gilliam) Lewis, who came to this state in 1847 and settled in Polk county, adjoining the county seat. Mr. and Mrs. D. J. Holmes are the parents of four children: Webster, who is now an attorney of Tillamook; Frank, of this review; Estella, who is the wife of Joseph D. Fontain, of Baker county; and Ella, the wife of T. O. Shonkewiler, of Victor, Montana.

Frank Holmes spent a portion of his childhood in Polk and in Wasco counties upon stock farms which his father was conducting. He pursued his education in the public schools and in Willamette University at Salem and, taking up the study of law, which he carefully pursued, was admitted to the bar on the 1st of June, 1907, since which time he has practiced in that city. He now has a good clientage which is continuously growing in volume and in importance. He is careful and painstaking in the preparation of his cases and his presentation of his case indicates a thorough understanding of the points under consideration and the law applicable thereto.

On the 1st of August, 1907, Mr. Holmes was married to Miss Josie Adamson, a native of Silverton, Oregon, and a daughter of Sarah and Edward Adamson. They have two children, Frank, Jr., and Philip.

Mr. Holmes is well known in Salem where he has lived since his student days and his unfeigned cordiality and geniality have been factors in winning him a large circle of friends, while his thorough study and unfaltering devotion to his clients' interests are gaining him success as a lawyer. He now holds membership in the Marion County Bar Association.

HARRY CHRISTENSEN, arriving in America when a youth of seventeen years, has become thoroughly imbued with the American spirit and especially the spirit of the west, where the air seems rife with enterprise and determination to do and to dare. He was born in Denmark, January 24, 1854, his parents being Kristen and Katrina Christensen, who were also natives of Denmark, where they always resided. The father's death occurred there in 1886 and the mother died in the year 1908. They had a family of ten children, of whom four sons and two daughters are still living, all yet being residents of Denmark save the subject of this review and John, who resides upon a ranch near Oregon City. The others are Bodilmarie, Stine, Karoline and Resemine.

It was in the year 1871 that Harry Christensen left his native country and crossed the broad Atlantic to the new world. He first settled at San Francisco, California, and was afterward employed in the lumber woods of Mendocino county, California, for three years. Later he became a sailor and in 1876 took charge of the boat Harry, of which he was captain for three years. On the expiration of that period he went to Alaska, where he spent one summer, and next took a position as bartender in San Francisco, where he remained until 1881. Carefully saving his earnings he then came to Astoria and turned his attention to the salmon fishing business, in which he continued for four years. As proprietor of a saloon he was again connected with the business interests of San Francisco until 1901, when he sold out there and removed to Astoria, where he established a saloon, which he has since conducted, owning a fine place at No. 640 Commercial street. He also owns an attractive residence property where he lives.

Mr. Christensen has been married twice. In 1887 he wedded Miss Amelia Erickson, who was born in Norway and died in 1892. In 1897 Mr. Christensen was again married, his second union being with Miss Mary Berry, who was born in California. Her mother died during the childhood of Mrs. Christensen, but her father is still living in the east. She was one of six children, all of whom yet survive.

Mr. Christensen took out naturalization papers in 1876. He has always voted with the democratic party but has never sought nor desired office. His fraternal relations are with the Red Men and with the Owls of Astoria and in both organizations his genial manner and unfeigned cordiality have won him the high regard and good-will of his brethren.

ARTHUR S. KLEINHAMMER is one of the enterprising and successful farmers in Little Applegate valley, having his residence on an extensive ranch of four hundred and ninety-four acres which he owns, located on Applegate creek, in Jackson county. He was born in the county where he now resides, May 22, 1870, and is the son of Claus and Frances (Saltmarsh) Kleinhammer, his father being a native of Germany and his mother of the Willamette valley, this state, her parents having settled in Oregon in 1849. Claus Kleinhammer was identified with mining interests at Sterling continuously for a period of twenty-six years. He was one of the early gold seekers who emigrated to California in 1849, from which state he removed to Oregon in 1851, locating in Sterling, where for twenty-six years he was interested in mines and mining. He removed later, however, to the Rogue river valley, settling two miles south of Medford, where he purchased a farm of one hundred and fifty acres. He continued to live upon this place and improve it until 1904, at which time he sold this property and removed to Ashland, in Jackson county, where he spent the remaining years of his life, his death occurring in Ashland in 1908. Mrs. Kleinhammer is

MR. AND MRS. HARRY CHRISTENSEN

THE
PUBLIC
ASTOR, LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS.

still living and maintains her home in Ashland.

Arthur S. Kleinhammer was reared in his father's home and educated in the public schools. He remained under the parental roof until he was twenty years of age, at which time he began his business career. He has, however, been deeply interested in stock-raising since he was a boy of sixteen, and has spent his entire business life in Jackson county, engaged continuously in the stock business. His fine ranch of four hundred and ninety-four acres has been improved during the years until now it is regarded as one of the most complete and best equipped ranches of its kind in this part of the state. His beautiful residence recently finished, is equipped with all modern conveniences, including hot and cold water.

Mr. Kleinhammer was united in marriage to Miss Mary E. Anderson, of Jackson county, on August 8, 1900, and to this union three children have been born, Esther F., Dorris C. and Claus T. He is a member of one of the fraternal orders of his locality and he and his wife are church members.

Mr. Kleinhammer is interested in all measures affecting the industrial and moral advancement of the people and is well known throughout his county as being a successful stockman and a friend of every just and worthy cause.

ENOS L. McCORMICK, closely associated with business activity in Hillsboro as proprietor of a music and jewelry store, has found that success is ambition's answer. Prompted by a laudable desire to progress in commercial circles, he has bent every energy toward the upbuilding of his business and is enjoying an extensive and growing patronage. Many of Oregon's native sons have found in this state the opportunity for the attainment of prosperity. Among this number is Enos L. McCormick, whose birth occurred in Polk county, April 6, 1865. His father, William H. McCormick, was a native of Indiana, born in 1840, and in 1859, when a young man of nineteen years, he came to Oregon, where he has since made his home, now residing in Washington county. Throughout the greater part of this period he has been identified with farming. He married Lovina Hodson, of Iowa, who was born in 1841, their wedding being celebrated in 1859. They have lived to celebrate their golden wedding and as the years have passed by they have reared a family of ten children two of whom died: Frances J., now the wife of J. S. Robinson, of Washington county; Enos L.; Laura, the wife of D. M. McInnis, of Marion county, Oregon; C. M., who is living at Newberg, Yamhill county; Christina, the wife of William Davis, of Yamhill county; Maud, the wife of J. A. Messenger, of Yamhill county, whose people came to Oregon in the '60s; J. W., who is at home with his parents; and Ira G., who married Olga Peterson, of Washington county.

At the usual age Enos L. McCormick began his education as a public school pupil and afterward became a student of the Pacific College at Newberg, Oregon. He then took up the profession of teaching which he followed for eight years in different public schools of this state, or until elected recorder in 1894. He has made his home in Hillsboro since 1894 and was first identified with business affairs here as a dealer in sporting goods and furniture, but eventually sold out to G. A. Patterson and six years ago opened his present music house and jewelry store. He carries a large and well selected line of jewelry and of musical instruments of the best make, and his trade in both branches of his business places him with the successful merchants of the city.

On the 13th of November, 1895, Mr. McCormick was united in marriage to Miss Geneva Helen Birdsell, of Portland, who was born in Iowa, and they now have one daughter, Eva Helen. The parents occupy an enviable position in social circles and the hospitality of the most attractive homes of Hillsboro is cordially extended them. In his political views Mr. McCormick is a republican and ever keeps well informed on the issues and questions of the day, for he believes it the duty as well as the privilege of every American citizen to support the principles which he deems of most value as factors in good government. The only office that he has ever held is that of county recorder, which position he filled from 1894 until 1898. He is a prominent and popular member in the Odd Fellows Society of Hillsboro, has filled all of the chairs and is now serving as grand patriarch. In manner he is approachable and genial and those who are closely associated with him find that his friendship is to be depended upon under all circumstances.

FRED C. WILSON, proprietor of a splendidly equipped photographic studio in Astoria, his native city, was born here on the 30th of August, 1888, and is one of the representative young business men of northwestern Oregon. His father, John Wilson, a native of Finland, was born in 1849 and became a resident of Astoria in 1880, since which time he has engaged in the fishing business. Unto him and his wife, Johanna Wilson, were born five children who are yet living: Sandra, the wife of William Pantaja, a resident of Berkeley, California; Edward, who is living in Reedley, California; William, of Astoria; Fred C., of this review; and Richard, at home.

At the usual age Fred C. Wilson entered the public schools, passing through consecutive grades until he put aside his textbooks to become an active factor in the business world. For some time he was assistant to A. A. Saari, a photographer, and eventually purchased the studio of H. S. Carter in January, 1909. He is still proprietor of this establishment and has built up a gratifying business. The studio contains four rooms, well equipped for carrying on photography according to the latest processes. He had but little capital when he began business for himself but was soon accorded a liberal patronage because of the excellence of his work and has discharged all indebtedness on his studio and now has a profitable business.

In his political views Mr. Wilson is a republican and keeps well informed on the questions of the day. His religious faith is that of the Lutheran church and his fraternal relations are with the Foresters. He also belongs to the Four A Athletic Club. He is interested in music and his personal talent in that direction finds expression in his membership with the Pacific Orchestra, with which he was connected for seven years, when the demands of his business left him no time for active participation in musical circles. For a time he was a piano player of the orchestra and later had the snare drums. His musical ability and attractive social qualities have gained for him many friends and he is rapidly making for himself a most creditable position in business circles of his native city.

GEORGE W. McQUEEN. One of the enterprising citizens of Cottage Grove who is well known in business circles is George W. McQueen, a dealer in real estate and prominently connected with the North Fairview Mining Company of Eugene and the Grizzly Mountain Mining & Production Company of Cottage Grove. He was born in Iowa, in 1874, a son of George W. and Kate R. (Brown) McQueen, the father being a native of Ohio and the mother of New York. The father passed away in 1898 but the mother survives and is making her home in Montana with her son Ivan. Six children were born unto this worthy couple, namely: Ivan, of Montana; Mary L., the wife of Solomon Davidson, of Portland, Oregon; William, teaching school in Bloomfield, Montana; George W., of this review; Zaida, who married Charles Morrow, a farmer of Marcola, Oregon; and Viola, deceased.

George W. McQueen started out in life for himself at the early age of seventeen years to earn his living and make his way in the world when he came with his parents to Oregon, and on arriving here secured a position in the store of Eakin & Bristoe at Cottage Grove, which he continued to fill for thirteen years. At the end of that time he purchased an interest in a livery business, with which he was connected for two years. He then sold out and opened a confectionery store which he conducted for five years, and then, in November, 1909, engaged in the real-estate business with which he has since been connected. He owns a half interest in a two-story business block on Main street, also his home, which includes a quarter of an acre, two blocks on Main street worth twenty-five hundred dollars, besides a residence property which he rents. He is also general manager of the North Fairview Mining Company of Eugene and secretary and treasurer of the Grizzly Mountain Mining & Production Company of Cottage Grove, both mines being located in the Bohemia district. A considerable part of his attention is necessarily given to these properties.

In his political views Mr. McQueen is a republican but has never been an office seeker, his only public service having been as a member of the city council for one term. He received the appointment of postmaster at one time but refused to accept the position. He has always taken an active interest in the affairs of Cottage Grove being actively associated with every project calculated to advance the city's interests. His brother Ivan, of Montana, was state representative from Lane county for two terms and the McQueen family is well known in Oregon. In his fraternal connections he is a member of the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks and the Knights of Pythias. In his religious views he is liberal, holding to no particular sect. Mr. McQueen is one of the most active, influential and valuable business men and citizens of Cottage Grove, having lived for over twenty years in that city. During all this time he has been actively engaged in business, he has become known practically throughout the entire community and is thoroughly respected by all with whom he has come in contact.

S. H. WILLET, who conducts a general plumbing and gas and steam-fitting business in Astoria, was born in Adams county, Pennsylvania, on the 27th of September, 1855. He was an infant at the time of his father's death. His mother bore the maiden name of Elizabeth Auger and S. H. Willet is the only surviving child. At the usual age he entered the public schools of his native state and was first employed at farming in Pennsylvania, engaging in the tilling of the soil for several years. In 1870, however, he turned his attention to industrial pursuits, becoming connected with the plumbing business in Kentland, Illinois. He devoted two and a half years to learning the trade and in 1873 came to Oregon. He first went to Portland but after a brief period removed to Astoria. Here he soon became a member of the fire department and also worked at the plumber's trade. Later he took a trip to his old home in Pennsylvania, spending a year in the east, and then again came to Astoria. In 1891 he opened a plumbing shop and now conducts a general plumbing, gas and steam-fitting and contracting business. He is a practical heating engineer, thoroughly familiar with all the different branches of his trade, and his labors have been very satisfactory to all who have employed his services. He has succeeded in winning a liberal patronage and has ever endeavored to please his customers, recognizing the fact that satisfied patrons are the best advertisement.

In 1896 Mr. Willet was married to Miss Augusta Vass, who was born in Germany, whence she was brought to America by her parents, who settled in Oregon. Her father is now deceased but her mother is still living. Mr. and Mrs. Willet have one daughter, Nora, who was born in Astoria and is now in school. Both Mr. and Mrs. Willet have many friends in the city where they reside and it is a well known fact that his cooperation can be secured for the advancement of any project or measure calculated to promote the public good. He is a republican and wide reading has made him familiar with the chief political issues of the day. He never falters in the expression of an honest conviction, yet is never bitterly aggressive in politics. In fact, he displays many sterling qualities in all the relations of life and this accounts for the large circle of friends whose regard is so freely given him.

IVAN L. DANIEL. Early realizing the fact that industry, close application and strong purpose are indispensable elements in success, Ivan L. Daniel has utilized those qualities in winning for himself the enviable position which he now occupies in industrial circles as the secretary and treasurer of the Star Flouring Mills of McMinnville. He was born in Fillmore county, Minnesota, February 2, 1863, and the ancestry of the family in America can be traced back to a colonel of the English army who was sent to St. Augustine, Florida, on a government mission. There in a subsequent battle he was wounded and receiving his commission he located near St. Augustine, becoming the founder of the family in the new world. The great-great-grandfather of Ivan L. in the Daniel line served as a sharpshooter under General Scott in the battle of Lundys Lane in the War of 1812 and was wounded in that engagement. Congress afterward voted him a gold medal for meritorious conduct on the field. Two brothers of the family served as sharpshooters and fought with their father in the battle of Lundys Lane and both were killed by his side. John W. Daniel, of Lynchburg, Virginia, was a first cousin of Henry M. Daniel, the father of our subject. One of the great-grandmothers of Mr. Daniel belonged to the Henry family and was a direct descendant of Patrick Henry. Two uncles of Ivan L. Daniel were soldiers throughout the Civil war.

His parents were Henry M. and Sarah A. (Driskell) Daniel, who were natives of Virginia and Kentucky respectively. They were married in the latter state, whither Henry M. Daniel had gone as a young man. In early life he learned the distilling and milling business, having wealthy relatives in Kentucky who operated distilleries and flouring mills. In their establishment he learned the business, thus laying the foundation for the success which came to him in later life in connection with the milling industry. About three years after their marriage they removed to Missouri and Henry Daniel, who was a carpenter and millwright, followed those trades in that state for three years, after which he took his family to Minnesota, settling in Fillmore county, where he operated a grist and sawmill for eighteen years. In 1873 he came west to Seattle, Washington, and soon afterward made his way to Yamhill county, settling in North Yamhill, where he engaged in the sawmill business, with which he was identified for twelve years. He next turned his attention to the manufacture of flour at Yamhill, operating the Trullinger Mills for two years, his son Ivan L. being a partner with him in this enterprise. Father and son then purchased a half interest in the La Fayette Flouring Mills, which they operated for three years. Subsequently they cultivated a farm near Yamhill for one year, the father having acquired this property while engaged in the sawmill business in Yamhill. In September, 1891, he traded his farm for a half interest in the Star Mills at McMinnville and again entered into active connection with the milling business, Ivan L. Daniel working with him. In June, 1902, the father became sole owner of the mill and a month later sold a half interest to his son Ivan, their business connections as equal partners continuing until August, 1908, at which time they incorporated as a stock company, Henry M. Daniel becoming president, with Isaac Lambright as vice president and Ivan L. Daniel as secretary and treasurer. In December following the father, then in his eightieth year, died and Mr. Lambright succeeded to the presidency, while Ivan L. Daniel continued in the same position which he had hitherto filled. Ever since acquiring an interest in the business in 1902 he has practically been in charge as business manager, while his father supervised the actual milling processes. Father and son were more like two brothers than parent and child. Each consulted the other on all business arrangements and the close bond of interest between them was one seldom seen. Henry M. Daniel was one of three men who had the courage to go to the polls in Fillmore county, Minnesota, during the Civil war and there give expression to his honest opinion in voting the democratic ticket. He strongly believed in the principles of that party although he was an ardent anti-slavery man. In 1872 he was elected state representative, the first member of his party ever chosen to the office after the territory was admitted as a state. Following his arrival in Yamhill county he remained a stanch democrat until the campaign of William Jennings Bryan, when he could not support the free silver policy of the Nebraska candidate and affiliated with the republican party. This was characteristic of Mr. Daniel, who never faltered in the support of what he believed to be for the best interests of his country. He held membership in the Masonic fraternity from 1861 until his death and was regarded as one of its exemplary representatives. In Yamhill county he had a wide acquaintance and was esteemed by all who knew him.

Ivan L. Daniel was reared under the parental roof and from early youth was familiar with the milling business. In his boyhood it was a matter of interest to him to watch the process that was carried on as the grain was converted into flour and as the years passed his labors became an effective force in the work of the mill. The common schools afforded him his educational privileges, yet his opportunities in that direction were very meager, being limited to attendance during the winter months prior to his twelfth year. However, he has been a broad reader and has become a reasonably well informed man, learning many valuable lessons in the school of experience. As previously indicated, his life has been given to the milling business and as his father's associate he received thorough training in early life and later proved his worth in the capable management and conduct of a milling business as his father's partner.

In 1895 Mr. Daniel was married to Miss Bessie Perry, of North Yamhill, and unto them have been born seven children, of whom six are living, Elaine, Remus, Perry, Alice, Maggie and Nellie, all yet at home. In his political views Mr. Daniel is a republican yet has never sought or desired office, preferring to concentrate his energies upon his business affairs. He belongs to Union Lodge, No. 43, A. F. & A. M.; to Taylor Chapter, No. 16, R. A. M.; and to the Woodmen of the World. The place he has made for himself in business circles and in public regard is a creditable one. He is now justly numbered among the representatives of industrial activity in McMinnville, being today at the head of one of its most important industrial concerns.

COLUMBUS COLE, a pioneer farmer now living retired in Marcola, Lane county, was the first merchant and postmaster of this city in which he has always been a leading and much respected citizen. After a long and successful business career he is now living retired and enjoys the fruits of his earlier labors. He was born March 26, 1842, in Knox county, Ohio, a son of Henry E. and Levina (Beach) Cole. The father was a native of Connecticut and the mother of Pennsylvania, but with their respective families they removed, in early life, to Ohio, where they were married. The Cole family is well represented in Knox county, Ohio, for at an early date two of the father's brothers also took up claims adjoining, but all are now deceased. In the family of Mr. and Mrs Henry E. Cole were six children, the order of birth being as follows: William, of Kansas; Columbus; Mary, the widow of a Mr. Wilson, of Mount Vernon, Ohio; Henry, a resident of Red Wing, Minnesota; Clara, the wife of Columbus Wilson, of Iowa; and Wheeler, residing on the old homestead farm in Ohio upon which his grandfather settled on removing west from Connecticut.

Columbus Cole was reared on the farm of his father in Ohio and in that state received a common-school education and assisted his father in the farm work until attaining the age of nineteen years. In 1861, shortly after the great Civil war cloud darkened the whole country, he enlisted in the Union army and his regiment was assigned to Sherman's command. He participated in the battle of Shilo or Pittsburgh Landing and fought at Fort Donelson and in a number of lesser skirmishes, also enduring great hardships and privations on many of the trying marches. In the following year, being seriously wounded in battle, he was discharged from the service and returned home. His physical condition was so serious, however, that he was not able to work for several years. In 1870 he emigrated to Missouri and settled near Wellsville, where he bought land which he cultivated and upon which he lived until 1874, when he crossed the plains to Oregon and took up a government homestead of one hundred and sixty acres in the Mohawk valley, sixteen miles east of Eugene. Soon after settling there a postoffice was established and he was appointed postmaster. He also opened a general merchandise business which he conducted for many years, developing it until he had a very fine store and a good stock of goods. Mrs. Cole for the most part took care of the postoffice and store while her husband cleared his land and engaged in general farming. He also operated a sawmill at what was then called Isabelle, but when the railroad was built the name of the place was changed by the railroad officials to Marcola, in honor of Mrs. Cole, the word being a contraction of her name, Mary Cole. Mr. Cole continued in active business until in 1906, when he sold out his general mercantile stock but still owns the building in which the business was conducted and which still accommodates the postoffice. He also owns other residence and business property in Marcola.

In June, 1865, in Ohio, Mr. Cole was united in marriage to Miss Mary Hart, a daughter of Samuel and Margaret (Thrailkill) Hart, whose father was a native of Pennsylvania and whose mother was born in Ohio. Mrs. Cole is the eldest of a family of nine children, the others being: James, deceased; Lorena, the wife of William Bates, of Ohio; William and Francis, both deceased; George, of Missouri; John, also of that state; Eva, deceased; and Charles, of Missouri. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Cole one child was born, Nellie, who was born in 1866, in Ohio, and is now the wife of T. J. Whitmore, of Bickleton, Washington. She has three children, Delano, Hazel and Beryl, all attending school. Mr. Cole is a republican and although he has always been a leading citizen of his community he has never sought nor held public office excepting that of superintendent of the school board. Since the time he settled at the place where Marcola is now located he has always been a leading spirit in the community and the citizens, all of whom are friends and neighbors, have always left to him to take the initiative in everything pertaining to the public good. He has now reached the close of his active business life and is enjoying in the seclusion of his own home, surrounded by friends, the fruits of a well spent life.

JOHN E. WICKS. Probably no resident of Astoria has made more rapid progress in his vocation during the past seven years than John E. Wicks, who is a competent and highly successful architect. He is a native of Finland, his birth having there occurred on the 13th of July, 1878, and a son of

COLUMBUS COLE

MRS. COLUMBUS COLE

Erick and Lessie (Nasman) Wicks, both of whom continue to make their home in the native land. Of the eight children born to Mr. and Mrs. Wicks but two have become residents of the United States: John E., our subject and Alfred, who is engaged in the grocery business in Seattle.

John E. Wicks was reared at home, obtaining his education in the common and high schools of Finland, where he spent the first twenty-one years of his life. Being attracted toward the United States, recognizing its greater opportunities and better advantages for an ambitious and enterprising young man, in 1899 he took passage for this country. He first located in Denver, where he obtained a position on the railroad. Being entirely unfamiliar with both the customs and language of the country, those first few years were extremely trying and almost hopelessly discouraging, but he had started out with the determination to win, so steadily but determinedly plodded on. From the very simplest occupation he advanced to the position of foreman of bridge builders in an incredibly short time for one so handicapped as he had been. His spare moments were diligently applied to the mastery of the language and the acquiring of a knowledge of architecture and construction. Later he pursued a private course in the latter subjects at Bethany College, Kansas. As soon as he could qualify he obtained work at drafting in the office of a Denver architect, subsequently following the same occupation in other cities of the west. He continued studying all of the time he was working, not being satisfied with having touched the bottom rung of the ladder, but resolved to have an office of his own and create a place for himself among the members of his chosen profession. In 1904 he came to Astoria and established an office, and believing in himself he inspired confidence in others and almost from the first has met with most gratifying success. He designed the new Astoria high-school building, which was erected at a cost of one hundred thousand dollars, and he also made the plans for and supervised the construction of Dr. Kinney's twenty-five-thousand-dollar residence. During the seven years he has been engaged in business here, he has designed and constructed many buildings for both private and public purposes, as well as private residences. He has a keen appreciation of architectural values, symmetry and proportion, at the same time his buildings always meet the practical requirements for which they were intended. Doubtless one of his most valuable assets is his faculty to design a residence that can be constructed within the limitations of moderate means, and yet not necessitate the sacrifice of the artistic to the practical, nor carry the suggestion of having procured its effects through cheap imitations or substitutions. To Mr. Wicks has been awarded the contract for designing and supervising the construction of the centennial buildings.

In 1905 was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Wicks and Miss Marie O. Cederberg, also a native of Finland. To them have been born two daughters, Ethel Marie and Esther Anne.

Their religious views Mr. and Mrs. Wicks manifest through their affiliation with the Lutheran church, and fraternally he belongs to the Knights of Pythias and the Masonic order, having taken the degrees of the blue lodge. He has become a naturalized citizen of the United States and his political support he always accords those men and measures he deems best adapted to meet the exigencies of the situation. His endeavors have been most substantially rewarded and he is meeting with financial success in his profession and in addition to his other interests is now a stockholder and director of the Scandinavian Bank. Mr. Wicks' record since settling in the United States is but one more proof of the fact that influence and capital are not essential to success in this country, where there are willingness, determination and tenacity of purpose that compel recognition of merit.

EDWARD MARVIN BROOKS is one of the partners in the firm of Brooks Brothers, general merchants at Scholls, and in the conduct of his business he is displaying a spirit of enterprise and progress that brings substantial results. He is a native of Michigan, his birth having occurred in Lenawee county, on the 23d of September, 1873, his parents being Emory E. and Almira (Smith) Brooks, who, leaving the middle west in 1875, made their way to Washington county, Oregon. Here the mother is still living but the father passed away in 1908.

Their son Edward spent his youthful days under the parental roof. He was only two years old when the family came to the northwest, so that his education was acquired in the public schools of this section of the state, with one term at Philomath College. When twenty-one years of age he entered upon the profession of teaching, which he followed for seven years, contributing much to the intellectual progress of the communities in which he labored, for he possessed the ability to impart clearly and readily to others the knowledge which he had acquired. However, thinking to find a more profitable field of labor in merchandising, in 1901 he engaged in the jewelry business in Oakland and was prominently identified with commercial interests there for nine years. In 1910 he removed to Scholls, where he joined his brother, Rollin H., in organizing the present firm of Brooks Brothers for the conduct of a general mercantile store. They carry a large and well selected line of goods and the business is bringing to them a gratifying return, because their straightforward dealing and earnest efforts to please their customers have gained for them a large patronage. In addition to their commercial interests they own and operate a farm of eighty-five acres, pleasantly situated about a mile and a half from Scholls.

In 1905 Edward M. Brooks was married to Miss Ida Gray, of Oakland, Oregon, a daughter of Joseph and Mary (Buffington)

Gray, both of whom were natives of Douglas county, this state. The father died in 1901, but the mother is still living and now makes her home in Oakland. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Brooks have been born two interesting little daughters, Wanda and Phyllis. In his political views Mr. Brooks is a republican and, while a resident of Oakland, served for five years as city recorder, discharging his duties in a prompt and faithful manner. He belongs to Oakland Lodge, I. O. O. F., and is highly regarded by his brethren of that fraternity because of his fidelity to its principles. He is interested in all projects for the public good and to such gives his active and hearty cooperation. He is justly accounted one of the leading and representative business men and citizens of Scholls and this section of the state.

WILLIAM SORENSEN. Among the highly respected retired citizens of Jackson county is William Sorensen, who made a moderate fortune through a placer mine which he owned and for many years operated. He has been a resident of the Pacific coast since 1853 and is well acquainted with the rigors incident to frontier and mining life. He was born in Denmark, August 11, 1833, a son of Matais and Catherine (Christianson) Sorensen, both natives of that country. In the family of his parents were six children, all of whom were given the best educational advantages consistent with the circumstances of the family in the early days.

William Sorensen emigrated to California in 1853, sailing around Cape Horn in 1850, and settled temporarily in Chile, South America, later sailing up the coast to the Golden Gate in 1853. In his younger days he was a sailor and for seven years sailed the high seas. Also early in life he became a miner and was employed by various mine operators until he subsequently acquired a rich placer property of his own, from which he made a comfortable fortune. After that he purchased the farm of one hundred and sixty acres which he still owns and which he has brought under a high state of tilth and splendidly improved. He purchased this property in 1871 and has since lived upon his farm where he has raised cattle and horses for many years. He is now living a retired life on his farm which he leases.

Mr. Sorensen chose as his life companion and helpmate Elizabeth Woody, a daughter of James and Elizabeth (Logden) Woody, who was one of nine children in her parents' family. The Woodys were a southern family and emigrated to Oregon at an early day. In his religious faith Mr. Sorensen is a member of the Lutheran church, an organization to which he gives his fidelity and which he assists liberally in its work. He has long been one of the most respected citizens in his community and as he leads a retired life, enjoying the fruition of his earlier labors in the seclusion of his own home, surrounded by his family and friends, he is entitled to the respect and esteem of all who know him. His has been a life of toil and in his younger days he was not unacquainted with privation and hardship, but with a courageous heart and determined spirit he pursued his various callings most assiduously and by his well directed efforts and fortunate selection of properties acquired a very comfortable competence.

MILES CANTRALL is one of the landed proprietors of this state and is deeply interested in all matters of a public nature having in view the improvement and development of his county and state. At the earnest solicitation of the people of Jackson county he has served as the representative of his district in the state legislature for both the long and the short term. His home at present is located on Big Applegate creek in a rich portion of the Applegate valley. He was born in Jackson county on the 29th of August, 1868, and is the son of John and Sarah A. (Newlin) Cantrall, both of whom emigrated to Oregon in 1854 and located in the Willamette valley. They were united in marriage in the Butte valley and in 1864 removed to the Applegate valley where for the succeeding four years John Cantrall was engaged in mining at Sterlingville later locating upon a farm in that vicinity.

Miles Cantrall was educated at Jacksonville being graduated from the high school in that city with the class of 1887, after which he pursued a two years' course of study in the Oregon State University and finished with a business course in the Business College of San Francisco, being graduated from that institution with the class of 1893. After completing his studies he was engaged as the principal of the old North school in Ashland, a position in which he served the public for one year and later acted as vice principal of the Jacksonville high school for two consecutive years. In 1894 he was the candidate on the democratic ticket for county recorder and notwithstanding he ran three hundred votes ahead of his party ticket, he was nevertheless defeated in the election by the populist landslide which occurred in that year. In 1902 he was nominated by his party for the state legislature, representing the district in which he lives. He was elected by a very complimentary majority and served the people as their representative in both the long and the short term of the succeeding state legislature.

In 1896 Mr. Cantrall was united in marriage to Miss Mary A. Devlin, of the Applegate valley, her father, John Devlin, being the owner of the farm which is now operated by the subject of this review. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Cantrall have been born three children: Otto L., John Leland and Miles Harlan.

Mr. Cantrall has been a loyal and lifelong member of the democratic party, following this great political organization in its fortunes in both national and state campaigns. Fraternally he is identified with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the United Artisans. He is at present engaged in dairying and diversified farming, and is a highly cultivated gentleman of a retiring disposition but a man unusually equipped intellectually to be trusted with the most important and sacred interests pertaining to the varied affairs of business and social life. His work both as a dairyman and farmer is recognized by the people of his community as constituting an object lesson of a very high order and of incalculable value to the dwellers in a rural community. He enjoys the respect and confidence of the wide circle of his friends and is well known and highly esteemed throughout the entire valley and county in which he resides.

DR. MARTIN GIESY, retired physician and surgeon of Aurora, Marion county, was born in Allegheny county, Pennsylvania, January 15, 1835, a son of Andrew and Barbara Giesy. The parents, both natives of Switzerland, were married in that country, and came in 1817 to America, settling in Allegheny county, Pennsylvania, where they lived until 1845, when they moved to Shelby county, Missouri, residing there until 1855. At that date they removed to Washington, making the trip by way of the Isthmus of Panama, and on their arrival first settled near the Willapa river, where the father passed away in 1860. The mother then came to Marion county, where she died in 1866. In their family were fifteen children, of whom only the subject of this sketch now survives.

Martin Giesy received his early education in the common schools and afterward became a student in the Medical University at Salem, Oregon, from which institution he was graduated with the class of 1868. Soon after he located at Aurora, where he remained in active practice for over thirty-three years. He is now living in this city retired, although he still owns and has under his supervision a well stocked drug store. He has been an extremely successful physician, is well known throughout this city and the neighboring country, and during his active years had an extensive practice. He owns some real estate in Aurora and in Portland, and also owns seven hundred acres of land near Aurora in Clackamas and Marion counties, and has presented each of his children with one hundred acres of excellent land located in either Marion or Clackamas county.

In 1870 Dr. Giesy wedded Miss Martha Miller, who was born in Ohio in 1842, the daughter of Samuel and Sarah Miller, both of whom were natives of Pennsylvania. After several years of residence in their native state, the parents moved to Ohio, where they lived until 1844, when they repaired to Missouri where the mother passed away in 1845. In 1863, crossing the plains, the father came to Oregon, settling in Clackamas county, but shortly afterward removed to Marion county. He was the leader of the Brethren Colony in Oregon, which was organized in 1855, and consisted of about nine hundred people. The father remained in Oregon until his death, which occurred in 1886. In his family were seven children: Mary A., deceased; Jacob, of Aurora; Sarah, deceased; Katherine, of Aurora; Martha, now Mrs. Giesy; Joseph, of Marion county, and Peggy, deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Giesy have become parents of seven children, only four of whom are now living. They are: Julius M., who was born June 6, 1871, and is now in the custom house; Benjamin F., who was born in February, 1873, and is now a practicing physician in Aurora; Ida Sarah, who is now Mrs. Eugene Musbarger, of Woodburn; and Grover Cleveland, who was born in 1886 and is still at home. Those deceased were: Alfred A., who died at the age of three months; James M., who died at the age of two and a half years; and Lela M., who died at the age of six months. All of Dr. Giesy's children who are now living have received college educations. The son, Dr. Benjamin F. Giesy, is a graduate of Portland Medical College, of the Oregon University, and also a graduate of Jefferson Medical College at Philadelphia.

Dr. Martin Giesy is a democrat in his political views, but he has never sought nor desired office, preferring to devote his entire time and attention to his professional duties. Fraternally he belongs to the Champoeg Lodge, No. 27, A. F. & A. M., at Butteville, Oregon. Both he and his family are members of the Lutheran church. For more than forty-three years Dr. Giesy has resided in Aurora, and during that time he has won a gratifying position in professional circles, as a result of his skill, knowledge, ability and untiring efforts.

LOUIS J. CORL, identified with mechanical interests in Forest Grove, was born June 3, 1858, in McHenry county, Illinois, a son of Henry D. and Mary A. (Schryver) Corl. The father's birth occurred in Schenectady, New York, August 2, 1814, and the mother was born in Dutchess county, New York, on the 18th of March, 1818. Their family numbered seven children: John Henry, deceased; Albert S. and Sarah J., both living at North Crystal Lake, Illinois; David S., deceased; and Louis J. Two died in infancy.

In his youthful days Louis J. Corl attended the graded and high schools of Dundee, Illinois, graduating in 1878 and entering upon the profession of teaching in that locality, devoting six years to the work in Dundee and vicinity. He then turned his attention to merchandising, which he followed for a time in Dundee, but later engaged in agricultural pursuits for fifteen years, giving his attention to the cultivation of the crops best adapted to soil and climate and also to dairy farming. In 1904 he arrived in Oregon and spent five months in Albany, after which he resided for six months in Monmouth before coming to Forest Grove, where he has since engaged in business .

On the 9th of February, 1881, Mr. Corl was married to Miss Rose E. Perry, of Dundee, Illinois, whose parents were Francis and Julia A. (Haas) Perry, of that place, although the father and mother came originally from New York. Unto the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Corl nine children have been born seven of whom are living, namely: Mary J., now at home; Oliver A., who was married December 2, 1908, to Miss Bessie M. Mills, of Forest Grove; Edna L., the wife of W. R. Cook, a farmer of Forest Grove;

Leland D., Frances H., Miriam E. and James A., all four now attending school. Those deceased are Francis H. and Ralph E., both passing away at about the age of two years.

Politically Mr. Corl is a republican but without ambition or desire for office. He is well known in fraternal connections, holding membership with the Masonic lodge and the Eastern Star, being now worthy patron of the latter. He is also connected with the Patrons of Husbandry, of which he is a past master; the Modern Woodmen camp, in which he has held all the offices, serving at the present time as past consul; and of the Royal Neighbors of America. In all matters of citizenship he is progressive and public-spirited and gives active and helpful support to many measures for the general good. He served five years as clerk of the school board of Forest Grove and was city treasurer three years, discharging the duties of each position with fidelity and ability.

MARTIN FRANCISCOVICH. The northwest is cosmopolitan in its citizenship, as from all parts of the world come the men and women who are building up the great empire of the Pacific coast. Martin Franciscovich is a native of Austria, his birth having occurred in Crovacia on the 10th of November, 1865. His parents, Martin and Elizabeth Franciscovich, were also natives of that country. The mother is now deceased but the father is still living in Austria, at the age of seventy-six years.

Martin Franciscovich, one of their family of three children, came to the United States in 1891, settling in Astoria, where he followed fishing for five years. He then conducted a restaurant for four years, after which he engaged in the wholesale liquor business. Finding this a profitable source of income, he has continued in this line and has built up a trade of large proportions.

Mr. Franciscovich was married, in Austria, to Miss Barbara Pauletich, a native of that country, and by their marriage they have become parents of the following children: Francis, who is now attending college at Los Angeles; Mary, Elizabeth and Katherine, all of whom are students in the parochial schools of Astoria. Mr. Franciscovich and his family are communicants of the Catholic church. Politically he is a stanch republican and an active worker in the party ranks and is now serving as one of the commissioners who are building the sea wall at this point. Fraternally he is connected with the Knights of Pythias and with the Austria Benevolent Society, also the Order of Moose, of which he has been the treasurer for the past seven years.

JAMES A. MOTT, one of the prominent and prosperous citizens of Washington county, was for twenty-three years identified with the police department and has for more than a quarter of a century owned the farm of seventy-five acres on which he now resides and which is located a mile and a half east of Beaverton. He is a leading factor in financial circles as the president of the Bank of Beaverton and is likewise the chief executive officer of a company conducting a brick-yard. His birth occurred in St. Lawrence county, New York, on the 9th of May, 1847, his parents being A. A. and Isabelle (Wood) Mott, who were natives of Massachusetts and Canada respectively. They celebrated their marriage at Cornwall, Canada, and there spent the remainder of their lives, the father passing away in 1855 and the mother in May, 1853. Unto them were born six children, four of whom grew to maturity, namely: Maria, who is the widow of David Wright and makes her home in Bay City, Michigan; Henry W., whose demise occurred in Milwaukee, Wisconsin; James A., of this review; and Isabelle, the wife of Walter S. Harsham, of Detroit, Michigan.

James A. Mott attended the common schools in the acquirement of an education and began earning his own livelihood when a youth of twelve, working for two years on a dairy farm in New York at six dollars per month. Subsequently he was employed in Pennsylvania for a time and then went to northern Wisconsin, where he worked at logging until 1876. That year witnessed his arrival in Oregon and for a period of six years he remained in the service of the Oregon Transfer Company. Later he became identified with the police department and was connected therewith for twenty-three years. On the expiration of that period he took up his abode on the farm where he now resides and which has been in his possession for twenty-six years. His property is located near Beaverton, Washington county, and originally embraced ninety-four acres but at the present time comprises seventy-five acres—all under a high state of cultivation. He likewise owns several business properties in Portland and a fine residence. In addition to his agricultural interests Mr. Mott owns stock in a brick concern and acts as its president. In financial circles he holds a prominent position as the president of the Bank of Beaverton, and he is also a director of the Scholls Telephone Company, a local and long-distance line confined to Oregon. His various undertakings have been attended with a gratifying measure of success, for he is a man of excellent business ability, sound judgment and keen discrimination.

On the 16th of September, 1869, Mr. Mott was united in marriage to Miss Matilda Stitt, who was born near Ottawa, Canada, her parents being John and Catherine Stitt, natives of the north of Ireland. They were married in Canada and there continued to reside until Mr. Stitt passed away. His wife, surviving him for many years, died in Portland, Oregon, in 1904. Their children were eight in number, namely: George, who is a resident of Washington county, Oregon; John, deceased; Sarah, who is the widow of John Cromhie and lives in Portland; Mrs. Mott; William, living in Portland; Rebecca, the wife of Frank Parker, of Portland; Mrs. B. J. McAllister, who makes her home in northern Wisconsin; and James, of Portland. Mr. and Mrs. Mott became the parents of

MR. AND MRS. JAMES A. MOTT

PUBLIC
ENOX AND
OUNDAT ONS,

four children. Isabelle, born October 26, 1880, is a high-school and normal-school graduate and also has an excellent musical education. She is now the wife of Nelson Walker of Portland. Kathryn, whose natal day was February 1, 1884, is a high-school graduate and also has a musical education. She gave her hand in marriage to Daniel A. Bowman of Portland, who is the manager of the Mowyer Clothing Company and also conducts a clothing store of his own. Edith, born in 1886, passed away at the age of two years and eight months. Edna M., whose birth occurred on the 10th of November, 1890, has a high-school education and also pursued a commercial course in the Oregon Agricultural College. She has likewise been educated in music and is still under the parental roof.

In politics Mr. Mott is a staunch republican, loyally supporting the men and measures of that party but neither seeking nor desiring office. Fraternally he is identified with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Ancient Order of United Workmen. His religious faith is indicated by his membership in the Presbyterian church, to which his wife and children likewise belong. Mr. Mott is well entitled to the proud American title of a self-made man, for all that he today possesses has been acquired through his own labor, economy and well directed efforts. His strong and salient characteristics are such as endear him to all who come within the close circle of his friendship, while wherever he is known he is respected and honored.

CHARLES H. MIMNAUGH, who has been identified with the lumber interests of the state of Oregon for more than twenty years, is manager of the Nibley-Mimnaugh Lumber Company, one of the leading industries of this county, the mills having a capacity of some ten million feet of lumber annually. He was born in Eau Claire, Wisconsin, November 4, 1873, a son of Patrick and Theresa (Roach) Mimnaugh. The father was a native of Ireland, having been born near Londonderry. The mother's birth occurred at Staleybridge, near Manchester, England. They were brought to the United States by their respective parents when they were but children and their marriage occurred in Lake City, Minnesota, where the father followed the blacksmith's trade. Subsequently they removed to Stillwater, Minnesota, where they remained for about two years before locating in Eau Claire, Wisconsin. In the latter place the father successfully conducted a blacksmith shop until 1889, the year in which he came to Oregon. He was a member of a party which also included L. C. Stanley and other Wisconsin men, with whom he was associated in the organization of the Grande Ronde Lumber Company, which erected the first big lumber mills built in eastern Oregon. This company had several mills, located at Perry, Union county, and their operations were very extensive. Patrick Mimnaugh was closely associated with the firm for many years, being a stockholder in the company and its purchasing agent. In 1906 he removed to Wallowa and the following year was identified with the organization of the Nibley-Mimnaugh Lumber Company. His death occurred in 1908, his wife dying the following year.

Charles H. Mimnaugh was reared at home, acquiring his education in the public schools, and after having successively completed the branches which they taught he entered the Eau Claire high school. In 1890 he came to Oregon with his mother and her family and located in Perry, where the father awaited them. After a residence of about sixteen years in Perry they removed to Wallowa. From the time of his arrival in Oregon, Mr. Mimnaugh has been identified with the lumber industry. Soon after he came here he accepted employment in the mills at Perry, in which his father was heavily interested, and in 1907 he was one of the organizers of the Nibley-Mimnaugh Lumber Company, the other partners being James Mimnaugh, C. W. Nibley and George Stoddard. The present mills are located at Wallowa. C. H. Mimnaugh was made manager of the business at the time of its inception and he has since served in that capacity. He has been engaged in the lumber business throughout his entire active career, beginning in an unimportant position. In the course of years he has helped to build up a large and successful enterprise, devoting his attention and energies to the management of a business which, owing to his keen discernment and capable control, has grown to be one of large proportions.

In 1902 Mr. Mimnaugh was married to Miss Gertrude Arnold, of La Grande, and to this union three children have been born, George, Frank and Bryan. In politics Mr. Mimnaugh is a progressive democrat. In all of the relations of citizenship he is honorable and upright and in business circles he has made continuous and creditable advance, recognition being accorded him by leading business men as one who deserves classification in their ranks.

EDWARD D. STEWART. Of hardy Scotch ancestry and of the courage and industry for which his countrymen are noted, Edward D. Stewart of Rogue River, Oregon, followed for many years the calling of the farm employe, but has recently acquired an interest in the Pleasant Creek Mining Company, owning valuable property. He was born in Pennsylvania, April 1, 1848, a son of James and Anna Stewart, both natives of Scotland. The parents emigrated to the new world in early life and settled in Pennsylvania, where they resided until 1853. At that time they crossed the plains with ox teams to California and continued to make that state their place of residence until the time of their death. In their family were thirteen children, seven of whom survive.

Edward D. Stewart received his education in the common schools of California but at the early age of fifteen years he laid aside his text-books and left the comforts of home to make his own way in the world. For many years he followed agricultural pursuits but in 1910, on coming to Jackson county, Oregon, he took up a mining claim. He has since been actively engaged in the mining business and at the present time owns an interest in the Pleasant Creek Mining Company.

In his political faith Mr. Stewart is a republican, rendering unqualified allegiance to that party. He is associated fraternally with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows of which he is an active member. Being reared in the Presbyterian faith he attends the services of that denomination. Mr. Stewart is well and favorably known in the community and is recognized as one of its estimable citizens. Although he does not take an active interest in public matters he emulates by his consistent life not only the teachings of Christianity but also the principles taught by the Odd Fellows, of whom he is a faithful disciple.

JOHN W. STRINGER is an enterprising farmer engaged in the hop-growing industry and resides on a twenty-one acre farm near Grants Pass, of which he is the proprietor. He was born in Josephine county, March 16, 1872, the son of William and Sarah (Daniels) Stringer, the latter of whom was born in Missouri. In a very early day the father removed with ox teams from Illinois to Oregon, reaching this state in time to take part in the Rogue River Indian war. During the journey practically no trouble was experienced with the Indians, but a wagon train which made the trip just in advance was entirely destroyed by the Indians and all of the emigrants were massacred. To William and Sarah (Daniels) Stringer eight children were born.

John W. Stringer received a good common-school education and remained under the parental roof until he attained his majority, when he engaged in farming on his own account. One year later he purchased the farm on which he is now residing and by his own efforts has placed upon it the substantial improvements which are now in evidence. The farm contains twenty-one acres of very fertile soil and Mr. Stringer is making a specialty of growing hops, meeting with good success.

In 1901 he was married to Miss Nancy Davenport, a native of Missouri. In his political faith Mr. Stringer is an adherent of the principles and practices of the democratic party, although he gives the greater part of his attention to business affairs. He is one of the well known and respected farmers of his community, in which he has an excellent standing.

SAM B. STRINGER. Like his brother, Sam B. Stringer is engaged in the hop-raising industry near Grants Pass, where he owns and operates a farm of thirteen and three-quarters acres. He has made a success of hop-raising and is prosperous. He was born in Linn county, Oregon, and remained at home with his parents, William and Sarah (Daniels) Stringer, until he attained the age of twenty-three years, having in the meantime pursued his education in the schools of Josephine county. He then rented a farm and went into business on his own account. After living for a year upon that farm, which was situated in Linn county, he removed to Josephine county and bought the place upon which he has since made his residence. He has carefully improved his property and by industry and wisdom has brought it under a high state of cultivation and has for some time been engaged in hop-raising, in which business he is meeting with excellent success.

In 1893 Mr. Stringer was united in marriage to Miss Janie Davenport, a native of Missouri and a sister of Nancy (Davenport) Stringer, the wife of John W. Stringer. The parents of Mrs. Stringer own a farm of one hundred and sixty acres in the New Hope country, in Josephine county, where they are residing. Mr. Stringer is democratic in his political views but pays little attention to political matters. He is one of the estimable citizens of his community and is highly regarded by a large number of friends.

B. T. TURNER, who is prominently identified with the lumber interests of Salem as manager of the East Side Falls City Lumber Company, was formerly connected with the Jones Lumber Company and with business interests in Oakland, California. His birth occurred in Iowa, on the 17th of April, 1875, and he is a son of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Turner, both of whom are natives of Illinois. After their marriage they left that state and settled in Kansas for two years before removing in 1874 to Iowa. Seeking the greater opportunities of the far west, they came to Salem in 1881 and are making that city their home. They are the parents of nine children, four of whom survive: Mrs. M. E. Quick; B. T., of this review; and John R. and Robert Lee, twins.

Remaining at home attending the common and high schools and assisting his father in the daily duties on the home place until he was of age, B. T. Turner entered upon his independent career in the lumber business and was employed in succession in various lumber concerns. At first he had charge of the Jones Lumber Company of Portland and remained in their employ for thirteen years. At the end of that time he removed to Oakland, California, but after a short residence in that city returned to Oregon to become manager of the East Side Falls City Lumber Company of Salem, a position which he still holds. Because of his more than ordinary knowledge of lumber and of his conscientious discharge of any duties which come to hand he has risen rapidly in the esteem of his employers and is today holding a responsible position.

In 1904 Mr. Turner was married to Miss Lena Williams, whose birth occurred in Oregon and who is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Williams. To them one child has been born, Bernard E., whose birth occurred on the 17th of February, 1905. In politics

Mr. Turner gives his support to the democratic party and is ever an advocate of the measures and policies which it sets forth in its platforms. In fraternal circles he holds membership with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Woodmen of the World and the Foresters. He is loyal and enterprising, possessing the progressive spirit of the times and accomplishing what he undertakes, while his geniality and his respect for the opinions of others have won him a host of friends.

JOHN S. DELLINGER. There is no denying the fact that the newspapers exert a controlling influence on American life. Under the favoring conditions of the American republic the freedom of the press was first established and here the newspaper has flourished as in no other country of the world. Largely on this account many of the most promising young men have been attracted to the newspaper business and have made a success of it. John S. Dellinger, editor and proprietor of The Morning Astorian of Astoria, which is said to be "the best newspaper property outside of Portland in Oregon," clearly belongs among the leading newspaper men of the northwest. He has perhaps founded and managed more daily and weekly newspapers than any other man of his age in America, thus gaining a wealth of experience which he has been able to apply to excellent advantage in behalf of his adopted city.

Mr. Dellinger was born in Union county, Pennsylvania, on the 30th of March, 1866, and removed with his parents to Jefferson, Iowa, in 1870, the family later residing at Scranton, Iowa. In 1882 he went to Lake City, Iowa, and secured employment on The Blade, which was published by T. B. Hotchkiss. After spending about a year under the tutelage of Mr. Hotchkiss the ambitious young typesetter started out in quest of fortune, his first stopping place being Fremont, Nebraska. Soon afterward he went to Arlington and founded The Enterprise—his first venture as an independent publisher. The project failed to realize expectations and he transported his plant and material to Scribner, thirty-one miles away, and started The News. After six weeks he disposed of the plant and went to Valentine, where he published The Republican during the Blaine campaign, espousing the cause of Mr. Blaine. There he continued for a year. The next move was to Fremont, where he issued The Fremont Journal for six months. The Hooper Sentinel was his next newspaper property. After leaving The Sentinel he founded The Nebraska Statesman at Broken Bow, The Mason City Transcript and The Anselma Argus. In conjunction with The Argus he founded another paper at Broken Bow—The Daily World. Hyannis was his next location. Here he entered a tract of land in the dead of winter, ascertaining that the Burlington Railroad was soon to pass that way, and founded the town on part of his cattle ranch. He founded The Hyannis Tribune and became the first postmaster and the first county clerk of Grant county. From Hyannis he went to Alliance, Nebraska, where he purchased The Argus, and later founded The Tribune at Marsland. From this place he went to Chamberlain, South Dakota, and published The Chamberlain Daily Tribune, espousing the cause of Pierre in the famous state capital fight between Huron and Pierre.

Oregon next became the field of operations of Mr. Dellinger. Disposing of his business at Chamberlain, he transported the plant to Bay City, Oregon and established The Bay City Tribune, which he published for eighteen months. The Astoria Daily News was his next newspaper and he also sent material and equipment from Astoria and founded The Nehalem Herald. In 1898 he shipped a complete newspaper plant sufficient for the publication of a daily newspaper to Skaguay, Alaska, and founded The Morning Alaskan, thus becoming the owner of the first daily newspaper in Alaska. At Warrenton, Oregon, he published The Port Oregon Tribune and also established a job printing office and a blank book and bindery concern in Astoria. This business flourished and in 1903, when opportunity was presented for him to purchase The Morning Astorian, he eagerly availed himself of it and consolidated with the newspaper his bindery and blank book establishment. The Astorian has steadily flourished and is now one of the prominent newspapers of the state.

He has been from the beginning of his newspaper career remarkably energetic and progressive and to his newspaper belongs the honor of having used the first linotype machine employed west of the Rocky mountains. This machine was set up in the office of The Morning Astorian. In politics he is a stanch and uncompromising republican and is one of the most active and efficient workers in the state in behalf of the party. He is now serving as member of the executive committee of the republican state central committee and chairman of the city and county republican central committees. He is a valued member of the Masonic order and the Elks and by virtue of patriotic ancestry holds membership in the Sons of the Revolution. Of a genial and pleasing nature, he has never lacked friends, and it is no exaggeration to say that he is one of the most popular men of the state and that he enjoys the complete confidence of his associates and of all with whom he comes in contact either in business or social affairs.

R. M. TRESTRAIL, who is residing in Macleay, was born in La Fayette county, Wisconsin, on the 5th of February, 1852, his parents being Robert and Elizabeth (Barker) Trestrail, both of whom were natives of England and are now deceased. Immediately after their marriage in 1851 they came to the United States and settled in Wisconsin, where Mr. Trestrail followed the shoemaker's trade, an occupation in which both he and his father were engaged throughout their lives. They became the parents of three children: R. M., the subject of this review; Mary A., the wife of C. T. Douglas, of Wisconsin; and W. H., a resident of Eau Claire, Wisconsin.

R. M. Trestrail was educated in the public schools of Wisconsin and immediately after laying aside his text-books he accepted employment in the postoffice of his native town, where his father was postmaster for fourteen years, passing away while still holding the office. After this R. M. Trestrail removed to Eau Claire, where he was employed in various railroad offices for eighteen years, among them being the Chicago & Northwestern, the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul and the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy. Subsequently he became the cashier of the bank at Withee, Wisconsin, a position which he held for two years before purchasing a hotel at Elroy, Wisconsin, which he ran for six years. After disposing of this he came to Oregon in November, 1910, and located at Macleay, where he purchased a store and a substantial home. In the following year in October he received the appointment of postmaster. In his various positions Mr. Trestrail has always held the confidence of his employers and his ability has been rewarded by rapid promotions.

Mr. Trestrail was twice married. His first union was in 1874 to Miss Mary E. Lawson, whose death occurred in April, 1896. They became the parents of three children: Robert L., a resident of Minneapolis, Minnesota; Elizabeth L., who is the wife of Albert C. Bohrnstedt who is engaged in the real-estate business; and William C., who makes his home in California. The second union occurred in 1900, when he was married to Mrs. Jessie E. Erickson. Politically Mr. Trestrail has ever been a republican and is thoroughly alive to the issues of the day, doing what he can to further the interests and success of his party. He belongs to the Masons and also holds membership in the Modern Woodmen of America. Although he has not been a resident of Macleay for a very long period, he has made for himself a creditable position in commercial circles and his name is known throughout the community by reason of the progressive spirit which he has ever displayed.

ALONZO KING RICHARDSON in his seventh year as sheriff of Harney county, Oregon, has gained for himself the esteem of his fellow citizens by his coolness and efficiency in trying and often dangerous circumstances. He was born in Weber county, Utah, April 3, 1867, and is a son of Ebenezer and Elizabeth (Gilson) Richardson. His mother was one of the pioneer settlers of Utah. She left her native country of England when she was three years of age and went with her parents to Capetown, South Africa. Here the family remained until she was fifteen years of age, when they crossed the Atlantic to America and came to Utah, crossing the plains with ox teams and arriving in the west in 1853. They later removed to Idaho, where Mrs. Richardson was married the second time, to Daniel McDonald. In 1885 she came to Oregon and settled in Harney county. Ebenezer Richardson died when his son was still a young boy.

A. K. Richardson was educated in the public schools of Weber county, Utah, which he attended until he was thirteen years of age. Afterward he removed with his mother, who later located at King hill on the Snake river, to Wood river, Idaho. Thence he went to Bear Lake, Idaho, where he remained until 1892, when he came to Oregon and located in Harney county. He spent one year ranching but at the expiration of that time bought an interest in a shingle mill, which he operated in partnership with his step-father for many years. It was one of the first mills of its kind in Harney county and is still in operation. The engine with which it is equipped at present is part of the original machinery brought to Oregon fifty years ago by soldiers and was the first engine ever put up on Cow creek, from which place it was later removed to Mill creek. After a few years Mr. Richardson bought his stepfather's interest in the shingle mill and conducted it for himself for six or seven years. He added a sawmill to his shingle business and went into partnership with G. L. James. Later he purchased Mr. James' interest in the business and operated the mill himself until 1905, when he was elected sheriff of Harney county, which office he has held continuously since that time. He is in his seventh year in this office, is a candidate for reelection, and has a remarkable record for honesty, coolness and courage. In 1908, he bought a controlling interest in the store of Fenwick & Jackson of Burns, Oregon, and was active in its management with Mr. Hagey as a partner for three years. Later he purchased the one-third interest which Mr. Hagey owned and managed the store under his own name.

On the 19th of October, 1887, Mr. Richardson was united in marriage to Miss Jeannette Nelson, of Salt Lake City, and they are the parents of three children: Burt, who holds a position in his father's store; Florence, the wife of Joseph Thompson, also in Mr. Richardson's employ; and Viola, who lives at home. Fraternally Mr. Richardson has occupied all the chairs in the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and holds membership in the Modern Woodmen of America. He has had many of the experiences which naturally fall to the lot of a sheriff in an unsettled country. His field of activity covers more territory than the whole state of Massachusetts, but he keeps the entire county under his supervision. He knows what it means to look down into the muzzle of a gun and has made some notable captures during the period of his activity. The wild and lawless life of western America is for the most part a thing of the past. Cowboys and ranchmen no longer "shoot up" their fellow citizens on the American frontiers. Encroaching civilization and modern development are gradually softening the rude characteristics of the westerner and yet even today the men in this section of the country are more jealous of their personal liberty and freer with their guns than are the citizens of other portions of the United States. In his official capacity as sheriff Mr. Richardson is naturally brought into contact with the most lawless element in the county and has shown in the conduct of his office bravery, coolness and calmness of judgment, and a perfect fearlessness which are necessary characteristics of the successful sheriff in a growing western community.

A. K. RICHARDSON

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY

BENJAMIN M. COLLINS, cashier and active manager of the Jacksonville State Bank and well known as a representative of agricultural and financial interests in Jackson county, was born in Greene county, Illinois, April 4, 1876, a son of Benjamin W. and Mary E. (Likely) Collins. The mother was born in Pike county, Illinois, and the father's birth occurred in Guernsey county, Ohio. He removed westward to Illinois in 1854 and was there married. His death occurred in July, 1908, when he was seventy-three years of age, and the mother now resides with her son Benjamin. The father devoted his life to farming and also held many political offices during his residence in Greene county, Illinois, to which he was elected on the republican ticket. He served as county supervisor and for eight years he and his wife superintended the county poor farm. In their family were ten children, eight sons and two daughters, and with one exception all are yet living. Four are residents of Jackson county, Oregon, and one is living in California.

Benjamin M. Collins, who was the eighth in order of birth, was reared in his native county, early becoming familiar with the best methods of tilling the soil and caring for the crops. He remained in Illinois until the spring of 1905, when he came to Jackson county, Oregon. He had been graduated from Dixon College at Dixon, Illinois, in 1893, when seventeen years of age, being the youngest graduate up to that time. He was too young to teach, for the law would not permit his being accorded a certificate, so he secured a position as clerk in a store and was thus employed for two and a half years. He then took up the profession of teaching, which he followed in Pike, Scott and Greene counties, devoting his entire attention to that profession until he came to Oregon to join his brother, S. C. Collins, who had been residing here for seven years. Benjamin M. Collins engaged in teaching for a year at Ruch and then went to Blue Lodge mine and shoveled snow for three days. His financial condition rendered it imperative that he accept any employment, but after that brief period he obtained the position of assistant assayer of the Blue Lodge mine and later was made bookkeeper. Subsequently he returned to Medford and engaged in clerking in a shoe store for three months. He was next appointed city recorder and police court judge of Medford, continuing in that position for three years. He then resigned and removed to Jacksonville to take charge of the Farmers & Fruit Growers bank, which he managed for a year. He then bought the bank building and the capital stock and organized the present state bank of Jacksonville in 1910. He is the cashier and the active manager of the bank, which he has since capably conducted, his business policy commanding confidence to such an extent that during the first year and a half its deposits increased over three hundred per cent. The bank has been placed upon a safe, substantial basis and has now a large number of depositors, while its business in other departments is equally gratifying.

On the 12th of October, 1898, Mr. Collins was married to Miss Ericzean Walton, a native of Pike county, Illinois, and a daughter of Henry and Minerva Walton. The two children of this marriage are: Frederick, born October 16, 1899; and Grace, born July 4, 1908. In his political views Mr. Collins is a republican and always casts an intelligent ballot because he keeps well informed on the questions and issues of the day. Fraternally he is connected with the Masons, the Elks and the Knights of Pythias and he and his wife are members of the Christian church, to the support of which they contribute liberally and take a helpful interest in many departments of the church work. They have gained many friends during their residence in Jackson county and enjoy the high regard and good will of all with whom they have come in contact.

HOLLIS PARKS is one of the thrifty, enterprising farmers of Jackson county. His farm is located near Buncom and consists of one hundred and sixty acres, on which he conducts diversified farming, raising hay and caring for stock. He was born in Sterling, Oregon, on the 15th of December, 1880, one of a family of five children, four of whom still reside in this state. His mother, whose maiden name was Elizabeth Waters, makes her home with her son Hollis, but the father passed away on the 29th of April, 1911.

Hollis Parks purchased the farm where he resides four years ago. Since coming into possession of this property he has very greatly improved it until it is now in every way one of the model farms in the locality. He is still unmarried and is a true son and protector of his widowed mother. His political allegiance is given to the republican party, while fraternally he is identified with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Artisans. He is an industrious and prosperous citizen of his county, interested in and participating in the social and civic affairs of his community and ever ready to lend his assistance and influence to the advancement of whatever may prove itself to be of value and service to the people.

CHRISTIAN MARX founded and is the proprietor of the Eugene Dye Works, the first establishment of the kind in this city, and from the outset has conducted a successful business, which has constantly grown in volume and importance and is now one of the leading industrial enterprises of Lane county. Mr. Marx is one of Eugene's native sons, his birth having here occurred April 5, 1879. His parents were Christian and Caroline (Hochisen) Marx. The father, a native of Newark, New Jersey, came around Cape Horn to Oregon when a youth in his teens, settling first in Portland, where he learned the barber's trade. After some years passed there he came to Eugene in 1878 and opened a barber shop, continuing in that business until his death, which occurred in February, 1910, when he was about fifty-seven or fifty-eight years of age. He was well known in this city, where for about thirty-two years he made his home. He held membership in Eugene Lodge, No. 357, B. P. O. E., which he joined on its organization.

Christian Marx was educated in the public schools and afterward learned the cleaning and dyeing business in Portland, becoming an excellent workman in that connection and acquainting himself with all of the scientific processes underlying the work. In 1898 he returned to this city and established the Eugene Dye Works, which he conducted alone until 1904, when he sold the business and went to Los Angeles in order to gain a broader knowledge of the work to which he was devoting his energies. In 1906 he returned to Eugene and purchased his old business and the same year admitted his brother Ralph to a partnership. They now have agencies in a number of the smaller towns and receive work from all over the district as far as Portland, Salem and Albany. They employ the most progressive and up-to-date methods and appliances for handling all classes of work, including the cleaning and dyeing of most delicate fabrics, and the result of their work is indicated in their constantly increasing patronage.

Mr. Marx was married in 1908 to Miss Hazel Hodkinson, a daughter of William and Anna (Beck) Hodkinson, of Grants Pass, Oregon, and they have one daughter, Shirley. Mr. Marx is a member of Eugene Lodge, No. 357, B. P. O. E. He has a wide acquaintance in the city where almost his entire life has been passed and where he has so directed his labors as to win substantial returns for his industry, determination and capability.

JOHN T. CROENI, a well known resident of Washington county, where he is part owner of a farm of forty acres, was born in Hancock county, Iowa, January 31, 1873. The family is of German lineage, his parents being John and Christina (Vetter) Croeni, both of whom were natives of Germany, born in Alsace and in Baden respectively. In early life, however, they came to the new world and were married in Iowa, residing in that state until 1885, when they came to Oregon and first settled in Washington county. The father was a minister of the German Baptist church, where he engaged in preaching until his death in October, 1900. He exerted a strong influence for good in the communities in which he lived and his earnestness and zeal in the work proved a potent force in the upbuilding of the church. His widow still survives and is now living in Washington county. They were the parents of twelve children: John T., of this review; Amelia C., who died at the age of nine years; Jacob, who passed away when but seven years old; George, who is married and resides in Portland; Julius, who is also married and makes his home on a farm in Washington county, Oregon; Albert, who is married and likewise lives on a farm in Washington county; Carrie, who is married to John Lehman, Jr., of Washington county; Alfred, who died in Iowa at the age of two years; Benjamin, an agriculturist of Washington county; Katie, a resident of the same county; Carl, a youth of seventeen, who is living in Washington county; and Eleanore, also of Washington county.

John T. Croeni spent the first twelve years of his life in Iowa and then accompanied his parents on their removal to the northwest, much of his youth being spent in this section of the country, the growth and development of which he has now witnessed for more than a quarter of a century. He was twenty-seven years of age when he started out independently in the business world by renting land, which he cultivated for a short time. Carefully saving his earnings, he was at length enabled to purchase sixty-three acres, which he afterward sold, and at the present time he is part owner and operates forty acres of highly cultivated land, of which he has seven acres planted to fine fruit. His farm is splendidly improved and is equipped with many modern conveniences. Neat and orderly, it presents a most attractive appearance and gives every evidence of the care and supervision of a practical owner.

Mr. Croeni was married on the 8th of January, 1902, when Miss Lydia Rufenacht became his wife. She was born in Washington county, Oregon, a daughter of John and Marguerita Rufenacht, both of whom were natives of Switzerland. Following their marriage they left the land of the Alps and came to America in 1877, settling in Washington county, Oregon, where the father gave his attention to general agricultural pursuits until his life's labors were ended in death, on the 18th of January, 1896. His widow, who was born September 23, 1849, now makes her home with Mr. and Mrs. Croeni, the latter being the only survivor of her two children, the elder having died in infancy.

Mr. and Mrs. Croeni are members of the German Baptist church and are generous contributors to its support. His political views are in accordance with the principles of the republican party. His entire life has been the expression of energy and activity along business lines and the years have brought him success that has been the fitting and merited reward of earnest, persistent labor.

DR. TOIVO FORSSTROM, enjoying an extensive and lucrative practice as a physician and surgeon of Portland, also maintains an office in Astoria. His birth occurred in Finland on the 30th of July, 1867, his parents being Gustaf Adolph and Louise Augusta (Polviander) Forsstrom, who were likewise natives of that country, the former born in 1819 and the latter in 1829. Gustaf A. Forsstrom, who served in the capacity of postmaster for fifty years, was called to his final rest in 1898. Our subject is one of a family of eleven children and the only member thereof who resides in the United States. His brothers are all professional men.

Dr. Toivo Forsstrom was educated in his native land and served in the army of Finland from 1890 until 1893. He is a graduate of the University of Helsingfors, leaving the medical department of that institution with the class of 1897. He had begun the study of medicine in 1887 and likewise pursued a post-graduate course at Berlin and Vienna. In December, 1905, he came to Astoria, Oregon, here practicing his profession until March, 1911, when he took up his abode in Portland. Dr. Forsstrom specializes in surgery and has performed numerous successful operations. He has attained distinction because of his skill and ability, which are constantly increasing through research, study, investigation and experiment. In the line of his profession he is connected with the American Medical Association and the Finnish Medical Association in Finland.

In 1909 Dr. Forsstrom was united in marriage to Miss Allie Lauren, a native of Finland. He gives his political allegiance to the republican party and is a Lutheran in religious faith. The Finnish Brotherhood numbers him among its members. In professional and social circles he holds to high standards and enjoys in large measure the confidence and trust of those with whom he is brought in contact in every relation of life.

RICHARD H. WALTER, D. D. S., is one of the successful and among the most skilful dentists engaged in business in Marshfield, where he has resided for many years past, and is regarded as one of the highly respected and enterprising citizens of that place. He is a native of Oregon, his birth having occurred at Libby in 1879, and is a son of Richard and Edith (Hand) Walter. His parents are both natives of Australia and he is the only child born to them. He was reared in his parents' home and educated in the public schools of Marshfield. At the age of eighteen years he started in life for himself in the dental office of Dr. Prentiss, of Marshfield, where he remained for several years. He later extended his knowledge of the science of dental surgery by pursuing the regular course in that field in the Philadelphia Dental College of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and while a student served in dental work in Garrettson Hospital, perfecting himself in applied dental science, and after completing the required branches of study he was graduated from the Philadelphia Dental College with the degree of D. D. S. in the class of 1902. Immediately following his graduation he returned to Marshfield where he opened an office for the practice of his profession and since that time has devoted his entire attention to his work. He was the second professional dentist to open an office in Marshfield and during his years of practice he has built up a most enviable and lucrative business.

Dr. Walter was united in wedlock to Miss Edna Bear, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Bear, more extended mention of whom is made on another page of this work. Unto them three children have been born: Richard, whose birth occurred April 5, 1904; Harry, born May 29, 1905; and John, born November 16, 1908. Dr. Walter is affiliated with the democratic party but has never had any aspirations for political preferment of any kind. Fraternally he is associated with the Masonic order. He is a man of enterprising characteristics, readily giving his time and influence to the advancement of any measure of public interest seeking to improve the condition of the people of his state and county and is highly respected for his business integrity and regarded as one among the most skilful men in the practice of his profession. His office is located over Morgan & Matson's store on First street and he is the owner of the residence in which he lives, and is also the owner of real-estate property at Empire City, this state.

SETH W. SEELYE, who has been busily engaged in general agricultural pursuits throughout his entire business career, now resides on an excellent farm of thirty-three acres at Scholls, eight miles southwest of Beaverton. His birth occurred in Indiana, on the 28th of September, 1837, his parents being Abner and Mary (Craig) Seelye, who were natives of Pennsylvania and Kentucky respectively. They were married in Indiana and there continued to reside for twelve years. On the expiration of that period they removed to Metropolis, Illinois, where they remained but a short time, however. In August, 1852, they came to Multnomah county, Oregon, where Abner Seelye worked in a sawmill for six months. At the end of that time he went to the Lewis river, in the state of Washington (at that time a part of Oregon), where he proved up a claim and carried on farming for a few years. Relinquishing his claim, he removed to Sauvies Island, at the junction of the Columbia and Willamette rivers, where he made his home for several years. Subsequently he took up his abode in Portland and after a brief period came to Washington county, purchasing the farm which is now in possession of our subject. After disposing of his property he returned to Willamette Slough and there resided for a few years, when he sold his place and removed to Tillamook, where his remaining days were spent in honorable retirement. He passed away at the age of sixty-three having survived his wife for several years. Unto them were born nine children, five of whom are yet living, as follows: Seth W., of this review; Ann, the widow of Daniel McCoy; Catherine, who is the wife of E. C. Stanwood and lives on the coast; George, who is a resident of Washington county, Oregon; and Zachariah, of Banks, Oregon.

Seth W. Seelye attended the common schools in the acquirement of an education and on attaining his majority started out as an agriculturist on his own account. He devoted his attention to the cultivation of rented land for many years and subsequently took charge of one-half of the farm, which he owned in association with his father for a number of years. The property, which is located at Scholls, on section 16, has been his place of abode to the present time. At one time his holdings in the vicinity embraced one hundred and forty-three acres, but he has disposed of all except a tract of thirty-three acres, twenty acres of which is under a high state of cultivation. His undertakings as an agriculturist have been attended with success and he has long been numbered among the substantial and representative citizens of the community.

On July 26th, 1876, Mr. Seelye was united in marriage to Miss Hannah Turpin, who was born in Pennsylvania, on the 12th of August, 1837, her parents being Isaac R. and Rebecca (Davis) Turpin, natives of New Jersey. They resided in that state for fifteen years after their marriage and then removed to Pennsylvania, where Isaac R. Turpin passed away at the age of fifty-five years. His wife was more than eighty years of age when called to her final rest. During his earlier manhood Mr. Turpin followed the sea for twenty-four years and for several years owned and was in charge of a vessel. To him and his wife were born fifteen children, all of whom are deceased except Mrs. Seelye. At the time of her demise Mrs. Turpin had two hundred and fifty children, grandchildren, great-grandchildren and great-great-grandchildren.

In politics Mr. Seelye is a stanch republican but his aspirations have not been in the line of office seeking. The period of his residence in the west covers almost six decades and he is therefore largely familiar with the annals of this part of the country. He has now passed the seventy-fifth milestone on this earthly pilgrimage and his life has been such that he can look back over the past without regret and toward the future without fear.

HENRY SALVON. One of Astoria's native sons who has developed into an enterprising business man of the city is Henry Salvon, one of the proprietors of the City Drug Store. His birth occurred on the 26th of May, 1883, his parents being Mike and Sophia (Pirila) Salvon. The father was born in Finland in 1852, and there he spent the first twenty-six years of his life, emigrating to the United States in 1878. He is now a watchman in a cold storage plant in Astoria. Of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Salvon there were born six children: Astor M., who is deputy county clerk; Henry, our subject; Nellie, a student in Bellingham Normal; Jennie, who is attending the high school; and George and Philip, both of whom are in school.

Henry Salvon was reared at home and for his education is indebted to the public and high schools of Astoria. After the completion of his preliminary education he decided to study pharmacy, with the intention of making it his life vocation. With this purpose in view he matriculated in the pharmacy department of the Oregon Agricultural College, where he pursued his professional studies. He passed his state examination in 1906 and immediately thereafter entered the employment of T. F. Laurin, in whose service he remained for five and a half years. At the expiration of that period he became associated with Mr. Lothman and they established the City Drug Store. They have a very attractive establishment, containing a nicely assorted stock of goods, and are enjoying an excellent and constantly growing patronage.

Mr. Salvon is unmarried. He affiliates with the Lutheran church and fraternally he is identified with the Finnish Brotherhood, Loyal Order of Moose and the Fraternal Brotherhood. In politics he is a republican, but prefers not to figure prominently in political activities, giving his undivided attention to the development of his business.

KELLY FIELDS, who owns two acres near Provolt, is one of the surviving veterans of the Civil war. He was born in Indiana, August 4, 1840, the son of Jackson and Phoebe (Collins) Fields, both of whom were natives of Tennessee. A member of a family of eight children, Kelly Fields was given a good common-school education in the state of his nativity and in 1875 joined a company of emigrants bound for California. The train with which he journeyed comprised sixty wagons which were drawn by horse teams, and the trip consumed six months and four days. He remained in California for two years and then came to Jackson county, Oregon, where he has since resided. On December 3, 1861, Mr. Fields enlisted in the Federal army for service during the Civil war, becoming a member of the Fifth Regiment of Kansas, which was later transferred to the command of General Steele. The regiment participated in many battles and skirmishes although a great portion of the time was spent in scout duty. The first battle in which Mr. Fields took part was at Helena, Arkansas, and he later participated in the engagements at Little Rock and Pine Bluff, Arkansas. He is by trade a carpenter and has followed that occupation during the greater part of his life, although after settling in Oregon he ran a sawmill for nine years. He took up a homestead of forty acres, upon which he lived for a time, later disposing of it and purchasing a ranch of eighty-six acres which he has sold to his son Charles.

In 1865 Mr. Fields was married to Miss Mary Waters and to them were born eight children, all of whom are living except Minnie, the second in order of birth, who passed away October 18, 1909. Those who survive are Orley, Sarah, William, Sherman, Charles, Nettie and George. Mr. Fields is spending his declining years in his pleasant home near Provolt with his son Charles. In consideration of his services in the Federal cause Mr. Fields draws a pension. He and his family are well known in the community and are held in high esteem.

MR. AND MRS. KELLY FIELDS

JOHN B. HAIR, residing near Rogue River, is a successful man of broad experience in business and farm affairs, who in 1901 settled in Jackson county, where he bought two hundred and twenty-nine acres of land. He has since disposed of all but sixty-three acres of his holdings. He was born in Brown county, Ohio, November 10, 1863, the son of James and Elizabeth (Sweet) Hair, the former a native of Virginia and the latter of Kentucky. The parents removed from Ohio to Nebraska in 1866 and there the father died in 1911. Later the mother removed to Oregon and she now makes her home in Grants Pass. Of her family of six children five are now living.

In the common and high schools of Nebraska John B. Hair pursued his education and later took a college course. He remained at home until he attained the age of twenty-three years and then engaged in the music business at Auburn, Nebraska, in which he continued for about five years. Disposing of his business at that point he removed to Douglas county, Kansas, where he embarked in the hardware and furniture business, remaining thus employed for seven years. He then sold out his business interests in Kansas and in 1901 came to Jackson county, Oregon, where he purchased a farm of two hundred and twenty-nine acres, upon which he has since made his home. After selling the major portion of his land he still retains sixty-three acres, which is finely improved, very fertile and contains an orchard of eleven acres of apple, pear and peach trees.

In 1893 Mr. Hair was married to Miss Mattie Crandall, who was born in Nebraska, June 5, 1870. She is a daughter of William W. and Miranda R. (Coldwell) Crandall. The father is a native of New York, while the mother was born in Pennsylvania, and they now reside in Omaha, Nebraska. In their family were eight children, of whom seven are now living. Mrs. Hair is a graduate of the Auburn high school and for several years followed the profession of teaching in his native state.

John B. Hair ranks among the best class of citizens in the community where he lives and both he and his wife are highly esteemed and respected in the neighborhood. They take an active part in all movements calculated to uplift and benefit their community, where they have long been considered among its leading and influential citizens.

T. W. MILES, a member of the Jackson county bar and head of the Jackson County Abstract Company, has his office in Medford. He has spent much of his life on the Pacific coast and the spirit of enterprise which characterizes this section of the country is manifest in his life. He was born in Jasper county, Missouri, near Carthage, February 11, 1874, and is a son of J. W. and Ruth (White) Miles, who were natives of Ohio and Iowa respectively. The mother is still living and now makes her home with her son, T. W. Miles, but the father passed away on his ranch four miles south of Salem, Oregon, in the fall of 1902, when fifty-seven years of age. He was reared in Ohio, whence he went to Missouri and afterward became a resident of Stafford county, Kansas, in pioneer times. He spent fifteen years there, was deputy register of deeds while living in that county and was also the first county sheriff. He was likewise employed for a time in the First National bank of St. John, Kansas, and in May, 1892, he came to Oregon, where he engaged in fruit-growing, devoting his attention to horticultural pursuits south of Salem until his life's labors were ended. Unto him and his wife were born four sons: A. C., who is living four miles south of Salem; O. B., a practicing physician of Salem; T. W.; and Walter J., who is a pharmacist of Portland.

T. W. Miles resided with his parents until after he had completed his education. He is a graduate of a high school of Kansas and of the Capital Business College at Salem and likewise of the law department of the University of Oregon, in which he completed a course in 1900. He devoted ten years to the profession of teaching, spending most of the time in a business college, three years being passed in the Portland Business College and five years in Bakersfield, California, in connection with the commercial department of the high school. For the past seven years he has been in Medford, where he has been engaged in the law and abstract business, organizing the Jackson County Abstract Company, of which he is sole proprietor. He also practices law and in both branches has been winning a satisfactory clientage.

In June, 1903, Mr. Miles was married to Miss Jessie N. Wagner, a native of Jackson county and a daughter of Jacob Wagner, who was a prominent pioneer of this part of the state but has now passed away. Mr. Miles votes with the republican party but manifests only a citizen's interest in politics. He is a member of the Medford Commercial Club and of the Oregon and the American Associations of Title Men. Energetic and determined, he recognizes the splendid possibilities offered by the northwest and means to use his opportunities to good advantage, as he has already done and is still doing.

LESTER G. HULIN. The opportunity of which is a dominant feature in the upbuilding of the northwest has brought about the substantial development and growth of Eugene and those who are prominent in its commercial circles today are carrying forward the work that was instituted by the early settlers, displaying the same energy, determination and capability. Of this class Lester G. Hulin is a representative, being a member of the firm of Stevens & Hulin, dealers in pianos and organs. The business was established in 1908, succeeding the Eilers Piano House which was the second oldest in Eugene. The present firm has shipped pianos as far east as Iowa and Kansas and also to California and their business has grown in gratifying measure owing to the enterprising efforts of the partners.

Lester G. Hulin, junior member of the firm, was born in Lane county, ten miles north of Eugene, January 14, 1873, and is a son of Lester and Abigail (Craig) Hulin. The father was born in Saratoga county, New York, March 22, 1823, and attended the academy at Schnectady of that state, under Bishop Jesse T. Peck. He then started westward with Iowa as his destination and for a few years was engaged in teaching school in Henry county, but the tide of emigration was steadily flowing westward and the spirit of exploration was a dominant one. In 1845 he joined the Fremont expedition to California and in 1846 returned to Iowa. In April, 1847, he went to St. Louis and from that point acted as pilot for a company traveling across the plains to Eugene. They made the journey by way of Fort Laramie, Bent's Fort and Klamath county and arrived at Eugene on the 5th of November, 1847. They were among the first of the settlers that came from the middle west across the country to the Pacific coast. They traveled days and days without seeing a human habitation and incurred not only many difficulties and hardships but were also in constant danger of being attacked by Indians. Mr. Hulin took up a donation claim of three hundred and twenty acres ten miles north of Eugene and with characteristic energy began to cultivate his farm on which he lived until 1881 when he retired and removed to Eugene, spending his remaining days in the enjoyment of well earned rest. He died May, 1897, after a residence in Oregon covering a half century. He was one of the oldest and most honored pioneers of Lane county and the story of frontier life was, indeed, a familiar one to him. He took an active part in politics, supporting the republican party, but he refused to accept public office and many times declined to be a candidate for the office of county commissioner. He was often called upon to act as administrator and appraiser and was widely known as a man of unusual business integrity. The only interruption to his continuous residence in Oregon from 1847 until his death was in 1849 when he went to California for a brief period where he engaged in mining. His wife, who was a daughter of Samuel Craig, was reared in Michigan to the age of fifteen. Her father went to California in 1849 and later his family joined him, going by way of the Isthmus of Panama. They came to Lane county by way of Portland and Mr. Craig took up a donation land claim four miles west of Junction. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Hulin were born six children that reached adult age, namely: Charles S., who is living in Newberg, Oregon; Edgar M., who died in 1882; Anna O., the wife of F. A. Tozier, of Eugene; Samuel A., whose home is in Berkeley, California; Elmer P., who died in 1878; and Lester G. The parents were lifelong members of the Methodist church in which the father held the office of trustee and steward for fifty years. Both were devoted Christian people whose earnest and upright lives were well worthy of emulation.

Lester G. Hulin spent his youthful days on the old homestead farm and was given good educational privileges. After attending the public schools he entered the University of Oregon from which he was graduated in 1896 with the Bachelor of Arts degree. He was afterward employed in connection with mercantile pursuits, served for a while as deputy county clerk and then became connected with the "Eugene Register," remaining with that paper for about a year. In 1898 he removed to Minneapolis and took a position with the West Publishing Company but after two years he returned to Eugene and in 1900 entered the Lane County Bank as cashier for about four years. He afterward spent a year and a half in Portland with the Northwest Electrical Engineering Company and upon his return to Eugene he acquired a one-half interest in the firm of A. E. Wheeler & Company, a law and abstract office, with which he continued until he joined Mr. Stevens in forming the present firm of Stevens & Hulin, dealers in pianos and organs, in 1908. In the intervening period of four years their business has grown steadily and now they carry a large and carefully selected line, representing the highest grade of pianos and organs manufactured, and their business is an extensive, growing and profitable one.

In 1898, Mr. Hulin was married to Miss Damaris Schofield, of Cresco, Iowa, the wedding being celebrated in Minneapolis. They now have one child, Wilbur, twelve years of age. Mr. Hulin belongs to Eugene Lodge, No. 11, F. & A. M.; Eugene Chapter, No. 10, R. A. M.; and Eugene Camp, No. 115, W. O. W. Both he and his wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal church in which he is serving as steward. They are much interested in the work of the church, manifesting a contagious enthusiasm in support of the different religious activities of the city. Mr. Hulin is public-spirited in his citizenship, while in business he has made steady progress that, representing an advanced standard, has brought him nearer to the goal of success.

HON. W. H. HOBSON, who has represented both Marion and Linn counties in the state senate, is now successfully engaged in the mercantile business in Stayton. He was born in Jackson county, Missouri, in 1847, the son of Hadley and Emily Amanda (Speinhaur) Hobson. The paternal grandfather was a brick manufacturer in North Carolina and the father, Hadley Hobson, who was born in that state September 6, 1811, having learned his father's trade, went at the age of twenty-four to Jackson county, Missouri, where he began brick-making and masonry and also contracting, in partnership with his brother. While in Missouri he was united in marriage to Miss Emily Amanda Speinhaur and in 1847 with his family he crossed the plains with an ox team, intending to go to Oregon, but lost his way and entered California. There he engaged in gold mining, but the next year, or in 1848, removed to Oregon and one mile north of Stayton took up a donation claim, where he erected a one-room log house, in the construction of which he did not use a single nail. Later he returned to the mines in California, where he was very successful, and finally came back to his claim, paid off all his indebtedness and then engaged in general stock-raising. In his family were ten children, of whom Hon. W. H. Hobson, of this review, was the second in order of birth. The others were: Mary Anne; George and Francis M., deceased; Lemuel, record of whom appears elsewhere in this work; Amanda; Emily; Amelia; Janet; and Hadley.

W. H. Hobson, being in his second year when his parents removed to Oregon, was reared there and attended the district school in an old log schoolhouse. At the age of twenty years he went to Sublimity, where he conducted a store that was owned by his father and subsequently coming to Aumsville, he managed the business of Simpson, Hunt & Company, afterward returning to Sublimity. There he started a small grocery store and one year later came to Stayton, where he was engaged until 1871 in merchandising in partnership with Uriah Whitney. Later with the same partner he was in a store at Aumsville and together they returned to Stayton and built the present Gardner flouring mill and also engaged in a general merchandising enterprise. In 1883 Mr. Whitney withdrew from the partnership and Mr. Hobson took in as partners Messrs. Shaw and Simms, and in 1888 the firm, together with Lee Brown, went to Mill City, where they organized the Santiam Lumber Company and built a large sawmill, also establishing a general store. In 1895 the company sold out to the Curtis Lumber Company and Mr. Hobson returned to Stayton and resumed merchandising. Subsequently he established a dry-goods business in Salem, which he conducted for four years, after which period he returned to Stayton and engaged in his present store.

Hon. W. H. Hobson has been twice married, his first union being with Miss Ella Gibson, a native of Marion county, Oregon, and a daughter of Hon. Guyan Gibson. She died June 10, 1878, leaving one daughter, Pearl, who is now the wife of E. C. Perry, of Scio, Oregon. His second marriage was on December 12, 1880, when he wedded Miss Annie Thomas, a native of Portland. They have become the parents of two children, Alta and Everett.

In politics Hon. Hobson is a stanch republican and he is very active in party work. In 1895 he was elected to the state senate and at the close of that term was reelected as joint senator for Marion and Linn counties. During the first session he was a member of the committees on claims, commerce, navigation and federal relations. Fraternally he is a past master of Santiam Lodge, No. 25, A. F. & A. M., and is past grand master of the Grand Lodge of Oregon and has filled nearly all of the chairs, including that of grand master in 1897 and 1898. He is a member of Multnomah Chapter, No. 1, R. A. M., and of De Molay Commandery, No. 5, K. T., and is also a thirty-second degree Mason of the Scottish Rite. He is a charter member of Stayton Lodge, No. 64, I. O. O. F., and has occupied all the chairs. He also has filled all of the chairs in the Grand Lodge of the state of Oregon and was twice grand representative to the Sovereign Grand Lodge of I. O. O. F. of America. Hon. Hobson is a man of marked enterprise and unremitting diligence, and his keen discernment and genial disposition have made him a success in both a business and social way.

HENRY S. WYNANT. Among the owners of well improved farms in Josephine county is Henry S. Wynant, residing near Murphy. He owes his prosperity to his own industry and wise management as he started out in life a poor boy with no resources but those given him by the hand of nature. He was born in Indiana, September 19, 1857, a son of William and Maria (Shinn) Wynant. In his father's family were four children, of which Mr. Wynant is the only survivor. He began making his own living at the early age of fourteen years, working at anything which he found to do. He was bound out at that age by his father for a period of seven years' service, but as he did not fancy that sort of life he terminated it by going west. He came to Oregon in 1883, having previously settled for a time in San Francisco, California. After that, he removed to Portland, then to Glendale, afterward going by stage to Grants Pass at a time when there were practically no improvements in that section. He later removed to Josephine county, settling on the farm near Murphy which he now owns and which he has since made his home. He was compelled to take his trunk on a wheelbarrow seven miles to his homestead for there were no wagon roads at that time, the work of improvement being scarcely begun. He developed the excellent land which he acquired from the government, and he has brought it under a high state of cultivation and made it one of the valuable agricultural properties of the neighborhood. His early Oregon experience included eight years spent in mining, a vocation which brought him moderate returns.

Mr. Wynant was married in 1883 to Miss Hattie Staley, a native of Indiana, and to their union five children have been born, all natives of Oregon and all of whom are living, namely: Clarence, Lishie, Howard, Floyd and Florence. The political allegiance of Mr. Wynant is given to the democracy, he being an honored and representative man of that party. He has for twenty-six years been a director on the school board of his local district, having given great attention to educational affairs as well as other public matters. Fraternally he is affiliated with the Woodmen of the World camp, being an active member of that order. Mr. Wynant is a well known citizen of Josephine county, where he has lived for many years, making friends of all his acquaintances and neighbors. He is among the most respected of the farmers in his community and enjoys a splendid reputation for integrity, honest dealing and all those commendable traits which make for good citizenship. He is a public-spirited man, earnest in his endeavors to improve the conditions of society and add to the sum total of the blessings of modern civilization.

AUGUST ROSSI, who for a number of years was successfully identified with agricultural pursuits in Oregon, has for the past eleven years conducted a saloon at Beaverton. His birth occurred in Italy in 1871, his parents being Joseph and Theresa Rossi, who emigrated to the United States in that year. After spending a short time in California they came to Portland, Oregon, and later took up their abode in Beaverton, where Joseph Rossi made his home until called to his final rest in 1904. His widow now resides with our subject in Beaverton and has attained the age of sixty-nine years. Their children were two in number, as follows: Rosina, who gave her hand in marriage to George Maggei and passed away in Portland when forty-four years of age; and August, of this review.

The latter was not one year old when he accompanied his parents on their emigration to the new world. In early manhood he became identified with general agricultural pursuits, successfully operating a farm for eighteen years. On the expiration of that period, in 1900, he embarked in business at Beaverton, Oregon, where he has since conducted a saloon. He owns twenty-five acres of land adjoining the corporation limits of Beaverton and also owns the tract of seven acres on which stands his residence. Mr. Rossi likewise has other business and residence property, including holdings at Portland and Baker City, Oregon.

In 1894 Mr. Rossi was united in marriage to Miss Hattie Wolf, a native of Nebraska and a daughter of Henry Wolf, who came of German ancestry. Mr. Wolf is still living in Beaverton, but lost his wife in 1895. He was the father of twelve children, namely: Henry, John, Lawrence, Emil, Elizabeth, Katie, Hattie, Cora, Martha, Minnie, Gretchen and Etta. All yet survive with the exception of Elizabeth and Cora. Mr. and Mrs. Rossi have a family of four children, as follows: Elva, born in 1895, who is now attending the high school at Portland; Frank, whose birth occurred in 1898 and who is likewise attending school; and Raymond and Albert, who were born in the years 1903 and 1906, respectively.

Mr. Rossi is a stanch republican in politics and on several occasions has ably served as city councilman of Beaverton. His fraternal relations are with the Masons, the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Eagles. His religious faith is that of the Catholic church, of which his wife and children are also communicants. Possessing a most genial manner, cordial spirit and kindly disposition, his unfailing courtesy and ready adaptability have made him popular wherever he is known.

DAVID G. OVERHOLT. The late David G. Overholt for many years was successfully engaged in the general merchandising business in Canyon City, at which place he had lived retired since 1903. He was born in Bucks county, Pennsylvania, in 1831 and was a son of Samuel and Barbara (Godshall) Overholt, both of whom were natives of Doylestown, Pennsylvania. His maternal grandfather, David Godshall, belonged to one of the old German families who settled at a very early date in Pennsylvania and many of his ancestors were soldiers in the Revolutionary war.

David G. Overholt was reared at home and received his elementary education in Pennsylvania. He emigrated to California, crossing the plains with ox teams, and there remained until he removed to Canyon City in 1863, walking in company with Henderson Harrow from The Dalles to Canyon City and having many perilous escapes from Indians on his journey. Mr. Overholt was a wagonmaker by trade and he made many hundreds of wheelbarrows for the miners. In 1869 he engaged in the merchandising business in Canyon City, in partnership with W. V. Rhinehart. Later they admitted to associate partnership in their business John Muldrick. Subsequently Mr. Rhinehart retired from the business and removed to Seattle, after which the enterprise was conducted under the firm name of Overholt & Muldrick for a period of thirty years, at the end of which time Mr. Overholt purchased the interest of his partner and was the sole owner and proprietor of one of the most successful merchandising houses in Grant county until the time of his retirement from active life, which occurred in 1903. He was heavily interested in mining properties and the owner of one thousand acres of valuable Oregon land, also owning the well known Pittsburg mine, on Miller mountain. During the period of his business activities the merchandising stock in his store was twice burned without any insurance to cover the loss. The last misfortune of that kind occurred just after he had installed a complete winter stock.

On March 27, 1869, David G. Overholt was united in marriage to Miss Sebella Tyson, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Tyson, who were both natives of Bucks county, Pennsylvania, as was their daughter. The father died when the daughter was an infant in arms. To Mr. and Mrs. Overholt three children were born: Mary Elizabeth, now Mrs. D. I. Asbury of McMinnville, Oregon; Lilly J., deceased; and William Elmer, at home. Mr. Overholt was for nine consecutive years postmaster of Canyon City. He was a member of the Masonic lodge and chapter and also held membership in the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. Mrs. Overholt occupies as her home a beautiful residence which she owns, located on a desirable street in Canyon City, which home since 1902 has also sheltered Mr. Overholt's sister, who has reached the advanced age of eighty years. David G. Overholt was one of the progressive and esteemed citizens of Grant county and his death, which occurred December 11, 1908, removed one of its pioneer citizens whose business activities had materially contributed to the substantial advancement of his county and state.

DAVID G. OVERHOLT

J. W. MITCHELL is a representative of industrial activity at Medford where he is engaged in wagon-making and in dealing in wagon-maker's supplies. He is also well known in the town as a public-spirited citizen and is now serving as a member of the city council. He was born at Fort Jones, Siskiyou county, California, February 22, 1867, his parents being James and Minerva (Quigley) Mitchell, who were natives of Indiana. The father learned the harness-maker's trade in St. Louis, Missouri, and after his marriage he crossed the plains at an early day, locating in Siskiyou county, California, where he conducted a harness-making business at Fort Jones to the time of his death.

J. W. Mitchell was but ten years of age at the time of his father's demise and a lad of twelve years when his mother was called from this life. In their family were nine children, six who reached adult age and are still living. J. W. Mitchell was the youngest son and with one exception the youngest child. He remained at the place of his nativity until he had attained his majority, when he went upon the stock ranches of eastern Oregon, spending four years as a cowboy. He then returned to Montague, California, where he began learning the blacksmith's trade, after which he continued in that business together with farming, taking up government land there. In 1901 he came to Medford and established his present business in connection with E. C. Boeck, under the firm style of Mitchell & Boeck. The relation was continued for about ten years, or until October, 1911, when Mr. Mitchell purchased his partner's interest and now conducts an independent business under his own name as a wagon maker and dealer in wagon-maker's supplies. He has built up a good business in this connection and he also does automobile repairing and rubber-tire works, employing four men. The business was started in a small way on Main street, the partners doing all of their own work and their blacksmithing at that time. As the years have passed, however, the factory has constantly increased and the business has assumed large and profitable proportions. In 1902 Mr. Mitchell in connection with Mr. E. C. Boeck purchased eighty acres of land five miles northeast of Medford and began the cultivation of an apple and pear orchard. In this and other ways Mr. Mitchell has won success as the result of his well directed labors.

On Christmas Day of 1890 was celebrated the marriage of Mr. Mitchell and Miss Phoebe A. Woodson, who was born in Ashland, Oregon, in 1870, and is a daughter of James and Laura (Million) Woodson. The Million donation land claim is now a part of the site of the city of Ashland. Mr. Woodson also crossed the plains at an early day and became identified with the pioneer development of that community. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell have been born two children, Grace Elizabeth and Marvin James, aged respectively eighteen and twelve years.

Mr. Mitchell is well known in Odd Fellows circles, holding membership in the lodge and encampment. Politically he is a democrat and is now serving for a third term as a member of the city council, in which connection he exercises his official prerogatives in support of many progressive public movements. He favors the town's advancement along modern lines and his reelection to office indicates the confidence and trust reposed in him by his fellow townsmen.

DR. ROBERT LEE WOOD, a rising young physician of Amity, was born in McCulloch county, Texas, on the 27th of January, 1884, his parents being Orlando H. and Julia A. (Lard) Wood. The father, who came of a prominent New York family, was a native of Livingston county, Louisiana, and spent the first twenty-five years of his life in that state. He was a typical frontiersman and in early manhood took up his abode in Texas. In 1900 he came to Oregon, residing in Tillamook county until 1906, when he removed to Amity, Yamhill county. There he died and was buried in February, 1907. Throughout his active career he was successfully engaged in business as a dairyman. He took a prominent part in public affairs and served as the first commissioner of Sutton county, Texas, acting in that capacity for twelve years. During the period of the Civil war he served for four years as a sharpshooter in the Sixteenth Louisiana Regiment under command of Albert Sidney Johnston and Joseph E. Johnston. He was taken prisoner and confined at New Orleans but was exchanged at the end of three months. His wife, a native of Mississippi, is still living at Amity, Oregon. Their children were eight in number, as follows: James T., a practicing physician of McMinnville; Noah D., a minister of the Methodist Episcopal church at Milner, Idaho; Florence E., the wife of Dr. C. R. Mathis, of Amity; M. L., who is a rancher of Milner, Idaho; Ludie May, who is a resident of Portland, Oregon; Eula May, living in Amity, Oregon; Robert Lee, of this review; and one who died in infancy.

Robert L. Wood began his education in the common schools of his native state and later continued his studies at Amity, Oregon. Having determined upon the practice of medicine as a life work, he entered Willamette University of Salem in 1903 and four years later the degree of M. D. was conferred upon him. He first opened an office at Vale but a short time later removed to Ontario, while subsequently he located for practice at John Day, Oregon. He remained at the last named place for four months and then took up his abode in Amity, where he has since followed his profession with gratifying success, having built up an extensive and remunerative practice. Through his membership in the Yamhill County Medical Society and the Oregon State Medical Society he keeps in close touch with the advancement that is being continually made by the profession.

In 1908 Dr. Wood was united in marriage to Miss Carrie L. Robison, by whom he has two children, Maurice T. and Esther. He gives his political allegiance to the democracy and fraternally is identified with the Masons, the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Modern Woodmen of America at Amity. His wife is a devoted and consistent member of the Christian church. Dr. Wood is known as one worthy of the trust and confidence of his fellowmen, not only in professional relations but in private life as well.

BENJAMIN T. FLINT, a prosperous and highly respected citizen of Washington county, has long devoted his attention to general agricultural pursuits, owning one of the best improved farms in the county. His birth occurred at Quincy, Illinois, on the 9th of April, 1836, his parents being Arial and Peces (Pinney) Flint, both of whom were natives of Connecticut. Shortly after their marriage, which was celebrated at Ellington, Connecticut, they purchased a farm and took up their abode near Quincy, Illinois, Mr. Flint there following agricultural pursuits until about 1843. In that year he disposed of his property and removed to Licking county, Ohio, later going to Shelby county, that state, where he continued to reside until called to his final rest in 1849. He was twice married, losing his first wife in 1839. By her he had two sons and two daughters, as follows: Henry, who is a resident of California; Amelia, who passed away in Albany, New York, as did also her husband, Hoyt Foster; Benjamin T., of this review; and Elizabeth, who is the widow of Albert Allen and makes her home at Springfield, Massachusetts. In 1841 Arial Flint was again married and unto him and his second wife were born four children, namely: Lucy, who is deceased; John, living in Los Angeles, California; Ralph, who is likewise a resident of that state; and Mary, who has passed away.

Benjamin T. Flint lost his father when a youth of thirteen years and thus early in life was thrown upon his own resources. He spent a year with his grandfather, who at the end of that time secured him a position that paid thirty dollars a year. During this period he spent three months in school and bought his own clothes. The second year he obtained thirty-five dollars for his services and again attended school for three months. Subsequently he secured more remunerative employment, working at various places for eight dollars per month during an interval of seven months. On the expiration of that period he spent a year in the home of his grandfather, attending school during the winter season. He afterward worked on a farm for two years, receiving thirteen dollars a month during the first year and fourteen dollars the next. The following three years he was employed in a woolen factory. When a young man of twenty years he left the state of Connecticut and went to Illinois, working as a farm hand in McHenry county for one summer. Becoming dissatisfied with his prospects in that state, he returned to the east and later embarked for San Francisco, California, where he landed in November, 1856, making the voyage by way of the Isthmus of Panama. On the day of the presidential election, when Fremont and Buchanan stood at the head of their respective tickets, the steamer was off the coast of Mexico. The people on board the boat, numbering six hundred steerage and three hundred cabin passengers, desired to know which party was the stronger among them and held a mock election. The results showed that the majority of the steerage passengers supported Buchanan, while the greater number of the cabin passengers upheld Fremont. In the Golden state Mr. Flint went to work on a sheep ranch in Monterey county, remaining in the service of Flint, Bixby & Company for a period of four years and receiving a salary of thirty-five dollars per month. At the end of that time, having carefully saved his earnings, he had accumulated sufficient capital to purchase sheep of his own and start upon an independent business career. He first acquired two hundred and forty-five ewes at seven dollars a head and continued his operations successfully for ten years, owning forty-one hundred head of sheep at the time he sold out. Returning to Massachusetts, he was there married and one year later came to Washington county, Oregon. Here he purchased the farm which has remained in his possession continuously since and which embraces more than a section of land, known as the Humphrey donation claim, for which he paid ten dollars per acre. He has met with a gratifying measure of prosperity in the conduct of his agricultural interests and now owns one of the best improved farms in the entire county, two hundred and eighty acres thereof being under a high state of cultivation. His holdings likewise embrace twenty acres of timber land. His success is all the more creditable by reason of the fact that it is attributable entirely to his own well directed industry and capable management.

Mr. Flint has been married twice. In 1870 he wedded Miss Julia E. Lawrence, a native of Massachusetts and a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Lawrence, both of whom are deceased. By that union there were two children: Arthur B., a sketch of whom appears on another page of this work; and Harry L., born in 1874, who resides on a portion of the old homestead farm. Both sons have a college education. The wife and mother passed away April 29, 1897, and subsequently Mr. Flint was again married, his second union being with Mrs. Mary S. Spidell, a native of Pennsylvania and the widow of James U.

Spidell. She was called to her final rest on the 2d of July, 1905.

In politics Mr. Flint is a republican, loyally supporting the men and measures of that party but neither seeking nor desiring office. His religious faith is indicated by his membership in the Christian church. He is widely and favorably known in the community where he has now resided for four decades, having won the regard and esteem of all with whom he has come in contact. He has now passed the seventy-sixth milestone on this earthly pilgrimage and in the evening of life can look back upon an active, useful and honorable career.

JAMES W. GOWDY. About two hundred acres of land now occupied by a portion of Cottage Grove was originally a part of the farm belonging to James W. Gowdy, a prominent citizen of that place, who now owns three hundred acres adjoining the city, a fine residence and other property and a half interest in nine gold mines in the Bohemia district. He was born in White county, Illinois, June 12, 1839, the son of Calvin A. and Cynthia (Miller) Gowdy, the father being a native of Tennessee while the mother was born in Illinois. The parents were married in Illinois and in that state passed the remainder of their lives, the mother's death occurring in the '50s, while the father passed away in 1861. To them seven children were born: John C., Robert A., and William P., all of whom are deceased; James W., of this review; Henry P., deceased; Mary C., who is the widow of Robert Carey and resides in Illinois; and Matilda J., who married John Blades, both of whom are now deceased.

James W. Gowdy, after the death of his mother when he was thirteen years of age, went to live with his uncle with whom he remained until he attained the age of twenty-two years. He then began working as a laborer and was later employed in a mill for two years. He subsequently purchased an interest in a carding mill and his connection therewith continued for three years. He then took up farming as an occupation, cultivating an eighty acre tract which he purchased in White county, Illinois. He lived upon that farm for fifteen years, after which he sold out and removed to Oregon in 1874, settling on a piece of land a part of which is now occupied by a portion of Cottage Grove. He operated his farm in Oregon for a number of years and then laid out a part of the farm in ten acre tracts as an addition to Cottage Grove. This addition, which comprised two hundred acres, he later sold and it is now known as Gowdyville. He still owns three hundred acres of land adjoining Cottage Grove, also a fine home in the city and other residence properties, besides his extensive gold-mining interests in the Bohemia district.

Mr. Gowdy chose as his life partner and helpmate Mrs. Miriam (Allen) Small, a native of Oregon and a daughter of J. R. Allen, one of the pioneers of the state. To this union one child was born who died at the age of two years. Mr. Gowdy was again married, his second union being with Mrs. Anna J. (Coleman) Van Riper, the daughter of William and Elizabeth Jane Coleman, the wedding being celebrated on the 8th of January, 1896. Mrs. Gowdy's parents were residents of Illinois, the father passing away in that state in 1860, while the mother's death occurred four years later, in 1864. In their family were four children: John, a resident of Lane county, Oregon; William, of Nebraska; James B., of Omaha, Nebraska and Anna J., now Mrs. James W. Gowdy. Mrs. Gowdy by her first marriage became the mother of four children, namely: Avis N. Van Riper, deceased; Anna F., the wife of David J. Scholl, of Cottage Grove; Mrs. Clara M. Cooper, of Seattle, Washington; and William Guy, of Los Angeles, California. Mr. and Mrs. Gowdy are the parents of two children: Vergil W., born March 6, 1900, and Ermine Bethel, born May 30, 1901, both of whom are attending school.

Mr. Gowdy is a democrat in his political faith, although liberal in his views. He has served as a member of the city council of Cottage Grove but has never been actively interested in politics. Fraternally he is a member of the Masonic lodge at Cottage Grove and the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, having filled all the chairs in the latter organization. He and his family are members of the First Presbyterian church and Mr. Gowdy has been an elder and trustee of that denomination for many years. Mrs. Gowdy is president of the Adult Bible class connected with the church and is also a trustee. Mr. Gowdy is a most estimable citizen and his long residence in the community with which he has been so prominently identified has served to make him widely known, while his upright character, business ability and genial temperament have gained for him the high esteem of the entire community.

JOE GOLDSBY is the owner of one hundred and sixty acres of very choice Oregon land located near Buncom in Jackson county. He confines his agricultural interests largely to the growing of hay, the major portion of which is consumed on his own farm, where he has established a large and successful dairy business. In addition to the attention and care given to his farm and dairy he has for the past three years been the active manager of the country telephone. His birth occurred in Nebraska on the 21st of August, 1870, his parents being John and Emma (Bonwell) Goldsby. There were three children in this family, two of whom now reside in Oregon and one in Mexico.

When a young lad Joe Goldsby emigrated with his parents to Oregon, making the overland journey with mule teams. He attended the public schools in the acquirement of an education and remained at home with his parents until he was twenty-one years of age. At this period in life he left his father's home and became engaged in the occupation of herding cattle, to which business he gave his entire attention for a period of eight years. On retiring from this occupation he moved to Jackson county, where he purchased three hundred and twenty acres of land, afterward selling one-half of his original purchase and retaining one hundred and sixty acres. He moved upon this land and began at once to improve it with a view to making it his permanent home. After thoroughly testing the character of its soils he became convinced that he had made no mistake in his location and here he has continued to live, devoting his time to the development of his place. His labors have resulted in the establishment of one of the most productive grass and hay farms in his portion of Jackson county. In addition to his farming he has established a dairy, stocked with well selected cows and equipped with all accessories required to make his plant in every way modern and up-to-date, and as a dairyman he is serving his community by the distribution of one of the indispensable commodities of the family table. He is also the efficient caretaker of that most necessary adjunct to community life—the country telephone line, his duties requiring him to look after all kinds of repairs, the removal of discontinued telephones and the installation of new instruments.

As a companion and helpmate on the journey of life Mr. Goldsby chose Miss Rose Dunlap. To this union have been born three children, all of whom are living with their parents. Mr. Goldsby gives his political allegiance to the democratic party and is indeed a useful citizen. He is an enterprising, well known, reliable and successful farmer and in every way a very valuable member of his community.

LEWIS BLEAKNEY. At the age of seventy-four years Lewis Bleakney is still a most active factor in the public life of Aumsville. The exercise of effort has kept him alert and he belongs to that class of men who grow strong mentally as the years pass by, giving the result of their experience for the benefit of others as well as for the advancement of individual interests. He has been a resident of Oregon for forty-one years, and at the present time is efficiently serving as postmaster at Aumsville. His birth occurred in Indiana county, Pennsylvania, on the 20th of January, 1838, his parents being Samuel and Sarah (Williamson) Bleakney, both of whom were also natives of Pennsylvania. The father, who was an agriculturist, spent his entire life in his native state. They were the parents of six children: J. G., who is a retired agriculturist living in Wasco county, Oregon, and who is a veteran of the Civil war; Clark, deceased, whose death occurred in Iowa at the age of seventy-three; Lucy, who is the wife of Isaiah Coffee, and is a resident of Iowa; Lewis, who is the subject of this sketch; Pauline, who is the widow of Charles Campbell, of Iowa; and B. F., a Civil war veteran, who is a resident of Saskatchewan, Canada. The two sons Clark and Lewis received their given names in honor of Lewis and Clark, the explorers, of whom Mr. Bleakney was an ardent admirer.

Lewis Bleakney received his early education in the schools of Pennsylvania and remained at home until he was nineteen years of age, assisting his father with the duties on the farm. At that time, however, he desired to start out upon an independent career and he began teaching school. He continued this occupation until the Civil war broke out, and on the 10th of June, 1861, he dismissed his school and enlisted in Company H, Nineteenth Illinois Volunteer Infantry where he served under Colonel, afterward General, John B. Turchin. At various times during the war he was promoted, and at one time was appointed captain of Company H, Seventeenth United States Colored Infantry, and after the close of the war was offered the rank of second lieutenant in the regular army but declined this honor. He took part in the battles of Stone River, Chickamauga, Missionary Ridge and Nashville. He always performed his duties faithfully and was an efficient help to the company to which he belonged. He was mustered out on the 25th of April, 1866. After that he settled in Iowa and for several years was engaged in agricultural pursuits, but in 1871 he removed to Oregon, locating first in Turner, Marion county, where he taught school and did shop work until 1893. In that year he came to Aumsville and worked at the carpentry trade until 1895 when he accepted the position as postmaster, an office which he is still holding. Conscientious regard for duty, respect for the rights and opinions of others, fidelity and indefatigable labor have been salient characteristics throughout his life, and have won for him the success which is now his.

In 1868 Mr. Bleakney was married to Miss Sarah White, a native of Indiana. To this union two children were born: Winifred, who is the wife of W. R. Evans, a merchant of St. Johns, Oregon; and Jay, who is teaching school in Portland. In politics Mr. Bleakney is identified with the republican party and has been one of its most stanch and enthusiastic members for many years. From 1882 to 1884 he served in the state legislature as a representative of Marion county, and while acting in that capacity he met many of the leading politicians of the state, and because of his conscientious discharge of duties won the admiration of those men to whom he is indebted for his present appointment. He has been a prominent figure in the active life of Aumsville, and many activities, social, political and material, have won his ready assistance.

H. A. CANADAY, who since his admission to the bar in December, 1908, has engaged in the practice of law, maintained an office in Medford since 1910, was born at Morris, Grundy county, Illinois, March 24, 1882, his parents being Allen M. and Lydia A. (Turner) Canaday, the former a native of Virginia and the later also of Morris, Illinois, where they still reside. The father is an iron molder and farmer and in following those pursuits supported his family of three children, who are as follows: H. A., of this review; Ida M., the wife of William Steinbeck, living on a farm near Morris, Illinois; and Harold C., at home.

MR. AND MRS. LEWIS BLEAKNEY

H. A. Canaday remained with his parents through the period of his youth and obtained a high-school education and also pursued a course in Hart's Business College at Morris. He then entered the law office of E. L. Clove and F. H. Reed at Morris and subsequently continued his studies in the office of the city attorney, J. W. Rausch. In December, 1908, he was admitted to the bar and practiced in his native state until 1910, when he came to Medford, Oregon, where he has since remained, having an office in the Fruit Growers Bank building. He has won a good clientage during his residence here and his work has been of an important character.

In politics Mr. Canaday is a republican and served as public guardian in Illinois under appointment of Governor Deneen. He holds membership with the Knights of Pythias, the Moose and Yeomen and the principles that govern his life are further indicated in the fact that he is a faithful member of the Methodist Episcopal church.

E. ROY, who is successfully engaged in the jewelry business in Stayton, was born in France, April 9, 1853, the son of Frederick and Catherine (Hermetet) Roy. The parents were both natives of France and the father, who is a shoemaker by trade, is still living there, the mother having died in 1907. They were the parents of four children: Frederick, deceased; Catherine, who is the wife of Louis Edelmayer, of France; E., of this review; and Lena,, who is the wife of Paul Magnin, of France.

E. Roy was educated in France, where, at the age of seventeen years, he began to learn the jeweler's trade and at the same time continued his studies in the evenings. In 1890 he came to America, locating in Salem, where he worked at his trade for two years. Subsequently coming to Stayton, where he has since been actively engaged, he opened a jewelry shop and is conducting a thriving business. He has erected and now owns two concrete store buildings—the one containing his jewelry shop and the adjacent building, which is fifty by one hundred feet in dimensions. He has also built a beautiful residence in Stayton and owns seventeen acres of land near the town. Mr. Roy may well be called a self-made man, for by his persistence and energy he has brought himself to his present good financial circumstances.

On the 18th of March, 1882, he was united in marriage to Miss Anna Coulon, who is also a native of France, and they have become the parents of seven children: Eliza, who resides at home and is bookkeeper in a bank; Albert, who is a jeweler in Portland; Dina, who is now Mrs. Forrest Mack, of Stayton, and is the owner of a millinery store; Benjamin, who is in the jewelry store with his father; Milka and Ruth, at home; and Naomi, deceased.

In politics Mr. Roy was formerly a democrat but he now gives his political support to the independent party and has served as city treasurer for five years. Fraternally he is identified with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows at Stayton, and both he and his wife are members of the Baptist church. He is a straight-forward, energetic and successful business man and has proved to be a most valuable citizen in his adopted country.

W. W. OGLESBY, M. D., who since 1889 has been a prominent physician of Cottage Grove, distinguished himself early in practice by becoming a specialist in diphtheria cases and a widely-read author on the treatment of that disease. He has also been a noted horse breeder and shipper and both in his professional and business capacity has achieved marked renown. He was born in Columbus, Adams county, Illinois, a son of William and Mary D. (Stockton) Oglesby. The father was a native of South Carolina while the mother was born in Overton county, Tennessee, where their wedding was celebrated. They resided for several years in that state and then, in 1836, removed to Adams county, Illinois, where the father bought land and operated a farm, being one of the pioneers of that state. In 1843 he removed with his family to Schuyler county, Missouri, where he settled on a farm near the county seat and where he resided for ten years. In 1850 he crossed the plains to California and spent two years working in the gold mines. He then returned to his family in Missouri and in 1853, after disposing of his interests in that state, removed with his wife and children to Oregon, where he settled at Soda Springs in Lane county. The journey across the plains was made with a wagon train of which he was appointed captain, and the trip was without unusual incident. The family spent the winter at Soda Springs and then in the early spring removed to where Cottage Grove now stands and took up a donation claim of three hundred and twenty acres on Row river. There the family lived for nine years, when the father sold out and removed to the Rogue river valley, in Jackson county, and after farming there for two years went to Benton county, where he resided until 1878. He next removed to Weston, in Umatilla county, and, retiring, spent the remainder of his days with his son, the subject of this review. The mother passed away in the spring of 1880 at the age of seventy-three years, the father's death occurring in the following April, when he was seventy-six years of age. In their family were fourteen children of whom seven are still living, namely: Mrs. Sarah Knox, of Grants Pass, Oregon; W. W., of this review; Mrs. Malissa Derrick, of Springfield, Oregon; A. J., of Alsea; Mrs. Sylba Kahler, of Tacoma, Washington; Mrs. Lucetta Grant, of Harlan, Lincoln county, Oregon; and Mrs. Ida Thompson, of Salem, Oregon. The deceased are Samuel, Mrs. Elizabeth Kelly, Alexander, Mrs. Susan B. Cole, Mrs. Cynthia A. Robinson, Roscoe C., and Madison M.

Dr. Oglesby spent the days of his boyhood and youth in Illinois and Missouri, where he received his preliminary education, and crossed the plains with his parents at the age of sixteen years. On the journey across the plains he drove an ox team all the way with the exception of two days and took his turn at standing guard and swimming rivers during the long trip. He remained with his parents until he attained the age of twenty-four years, assisting his father in the farm work and when opportunity permitted pursuing his education in the common schools. After he was twenty-four years of age he began working in the gold mines of southern Oregon, a vocation which he followed for four years. He then for several years farmed in Polk and Benton counties, after which he removed to Corvallis and began studying medicine. During the time he was there studying his wife died, and a little later he began the practice of his profession. He entered the Willamette University, taking two courses, after the completion of which he removed to Weston, Umatilla county, where he located for practice and remained for four years. During his residence in that city an epidemic of diphtheria attacked the people of that section and lasted two years. During his professional experience there Dr. Oglesby treated four hundred and ninety cases of that disease of the worst type, losing only about eighty-six cases. His method of treatment being particularly successful, he wrote out his theory of the treatment of the disease and this was published in the medical journals of the country and his system was largely adopted by physicians all over the country. His theory of treatment was also published verbatim in the Medical Therapeutics, published in London, England, and adopted by a large number of English physicians. During this time he also organized a company of soldiers to quell the Indian outbreak which had arisen and of this he became captain. Regarding his Indian fighting experience the Doctor has written a chapter for the historical volume of this work. In 1880 he removed to Fossil, Wheeler county, where for ten years he practiced his profession and during this time was extensively engaged in the raising of fancy horses. He came to be considered the horse king of the state and when he closed his business at Fossil he had shipped more than one thousand horses to San Francisco, many of them being sold during the latter part of his residence there. He removed in 1889 to Cottage Grove which has since been his place of residence. During all of the time he has lived in this city he has practiced his profession and is still thus engaged. He has the distinction of being the discoverer of the Bohemian gold mine and is still interested in properties there.

Dr. Oglesby was married twice, his first union being in 1865 to Miss Sarah J. Morrison, of Missouri. One daughter was born of that marriage, Anna, whose birth occurred December 18, 1868. She was given good educational opportunities, completing her training at the academy at The Dalles. She then took up the study of telegraphy and has held many positions as operator and was also manager of the Western Union Company at Colfax, Washington. She also became interested in newspaper work and for fifteen years at various times has been connected with that business. She was a delegate from the Oregon Press Association to the exposition at New Orleans in 1900 and also the Pan American exposition at Buffalo. She is also an author of originality and has written considerable verse showing a high degree of genius. Her mother died in Corvallis and in 1872 Dr. Oglesby was again married, his second union being with Miss Nancy Morrison, a sister of his former wife, who was born in Missouri, April 26, 1857, a daughter of the Rev. Joseph P. and Pernicy A. (Hale) Morrison. The father was born in South Carolina and the mother in Missouri. They were married in the latter state, where they lived until 1862, in which year they crossed the plains and became pioneers of Oregon, settling near Corvallis. After living in that place for a few years the family removed, in 1868, to California, where the father continued actively engaged as a minister in the Presbyterian church until his death, which occurred in 1887, having been a preacher for sixty-two years. The mother is still living at the age of seventy-nine years, having been thirty years younger than her husband. In their family were six children, three of whom are still living, namely: Isaac, of Los Angeles, California; Mrs. Nancy Oglesby; and William, of Kern county, California. The deceased members of the family were Sarah Jane, the first wife of Dr. Oglesby; Thomas C.; and Rachel A.

In his political faith Dr. Oglesby is a democrat. Fraternally he is a Royal Arch Mason, belongs to the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Knights of Pythias and the Elks, having filled all of the official chairs of the orders to which he belongs except in the last named lodge. He is affiliated with the Presbyterian church of which his family are also active and consistent members. Dr. Oglesby is one of the most valuable and prominent citizens of Cottage Grove where he has an extensive acquaintance and where he is universally respected. He holds the enviable position of being the beloved family physician in a large number of the homes of the community and although not as actively engaged in the practice as he was in earlier years he still has a very large number of clients who would think of employing no other doctor.

AMOS W. WALKER, who for eight years has been successfully identified with the business interests of Medford as the manager and proprietor of a livery stable, was born in Canada on the 22d of June, 1878, and is a son of Thomas and Anna Walker. The parents were born, reared and married in Canada and there they resided until 1894 when they crossed the border into the United States, locating in Lane county, Oregon.

Here the father purchased the ranch which he continues to operate, agricultural pursuits having engaged his energies ever since the time when he became self-supporting. Three children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Walker, two of whom are still living.

Amos W. Walker was a youth of sixteen years when he came to the United States with his parents, his education having been acquired in the common schools of his native land. He remained at home assisting his father with the work of the fields and the care of the crops until he was twenty-one years of age, thus becoming thoroughly familiar with the manifold duties of the agriculturist. Feeling that he was fully qualified to begin ranching for himself, upon attaining his majority he left home and for five years thereafter devoted his attention to general farming and stock-raising, with a very satisfactory degree of success. Believing that a business career offered better remuneration for the same expenditure of energy, at the expiration of that time he disposed of his agricultural interests and went to Eugene, where he operated a livery stable for a year. At the end of that period he removed his equipment to Medford and has ever since been located here. He keeps thirty-five horses and has an excellent line of vehicles, and as his place is well kept up and he accords his patrons the most courteous and considerate treatment, he has built up a good trade.

In 1897 Mr. Walker was united in marriage to Miss Catherine Mulkey, a native of Iowa, and to them have been born four children, as follows: Ila F., Clarke J., Paul A. and Annabelle.

Mr. Walker is a stanch republican in his political views and fraternally he is affiliated with the Knights of Pythias, while both he and Mrs. Walker are members of the Christian church. He is diligent and enterprising and by reason of his intelligent direction of his undertakings is meeting with well merited success, and in addition to his finely equipped stable he owns a very pleasant residence property, on South Fir street.

MRS. MARGARET MATNEY is the surviving widow of Carl B. Matney, a native of Tennessee. Since the death of her husband Mrs. Matney has made her home with her son William who resides on his beautiful ranch located in Jackson county on Applegate river. Mrs. Matney was born March 24, 1845, a daughter of Lloyd and Mandy (Richardson) Maupin, and in 1853 at the age of eight years, she emigrated with her parents to Oregon. The overland journey across the plains was made with ox teams, and her father affected his settlement in the new country in the Willamette Valley. She was reared in her parents' home and educated in the public schools.

In the autumn of 1859 she was united in marriage to Carl B. Matney and to this union seventeen children were born, thirteen of whom are still living and have their residence in Oregon. The surviving children are: Jefferson, Nancy, Martha, Frank, Mary, William, George, John, Millard, Isaac, Icie, Anna and Maggie.

Immediately following the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Matney, husband and wife united in the purchase of a farm of one hundred and sixty acres in Jackson county. This land they improved and upon it built their future home. Upon the death of her husband a material change in the affairs of the family necessitated a change of residence on the part of Mrs. Matney and she has since made her home with her son William, who is one of the enterprising and progressive farmers of this county. Mrs. Matney is a highly respected woman in her community and is a devoted member of the Methodist Episcopal church of Applegate.

J. B. STEWART. Farming and dairying occupy the time and attention of J. B. Stewart, who owns seventy-five acres of land in Washington county not far from Hillsboro. He was born in that county, July 7, 1855, a son of Charles and Martha (Woods) Stewart, both of whom were natives of Missouri. They arrived in Oregon in 1846, when this state was still under territorial rule and the work of progress and improvement had scarcely been begun within its borders. The father entered land here, gave his time to the improvement of his property and continued his residence in Oregon until his death, which occurred in 1898. His wife survived him for several years, passing away in August, 1904. In their family were eleven children, of whom four are still living: Martha J., now the wife of Andrew Jack, of Hillsboro; J. B., of this review; Emma, the wife of James McClarken, of Laurel, Oregon; and Charles H., a resident of Portland.

J. B. Stewart spent the days of his boyhood and youth in his parents' home and early became familiar with the arduous task of developing and improving a new farm. His early experience well qualified him for work of a similar character when he started out in life on his own account. For several years he worked as a farm hand in the employ of others and then rented and cultivated his father's farm for four years. On the expiration of that period he removed to Portland, where he spent four years as a teamster. The money which he had saved from his earnings, he then invested in the farm upon which he now resides—a tract of seventy-five acres of land which is rich and arable. He has placed good equipments upon the farm and uses the latest improved machinery to facilitate the work of the fields. In addition to raising the crops best adapted to soil and climate, he also makes a specialty of dairying, and his careful management of his business affairs has resulted in bringing to him a substantial annual income.

On the 30th of August, 1882, Mr. Stewart was married to Miss Lena Thing who was born in Scappoose, Oregon, a daughter of George M. and Caroline (Bozorth) Thing. The father was a native of Maine and the mother of Iowa, and in the year 1846 they came to Oregon, which was then a territory on the far frontier and gave little indication of the rapid settlement and improvement that was to transform it into the progressive state of the present day. The Indians were far more numerous than the white settlers and in pioneer times occasioned considerable trouble. The Thing family located in Scappoose and the father died August 5, 1898. The mother still survives at the age of sixty-nine years. In their family were eleven children, of whom eight are still living. Mr. and Mrs. Stewart have become the parents of ten children: Ernest C., now deceased; Bertha I., the wife of F. Edgerton, of Portland; Arthur W., also living in Portland; Ida E., the wife of I. H. Crawford of Portland; Jesse, deceased; Chester O., Margaret I., Hazel V., Stanley I. and Gladys E., all yet under the parental roof. Mr. Stewart is a member of the Grange. He gives his political support to the democratic party and has served as school director and road supervisor but has never sought nor desired public office, preferring to give his entire thought and labor to his chosen calling, in which he is making steady progress, being now recognized as one of the substantial farmers of Washington county.

AMOS M. McKEE is a native Oregonian, who by reputation and lifelong occupation has been identified with placer mining and is at present operating in a placer district located on Palmer creek. In addition to his mining interest he is the owner of a ranch of one hundred and sixty acres of fertile land located on Big Applegate creek, in Jackson county, this state. His birth occurred May 27, 1864, and he is a son of John M. and Mariam (Bowen) McKee.

Amos M. McKee received his education in the public schools. At a very early period in life he became interested in mining and since his youth he has continued to be identified with this industry, operating principally placer properties on Forest creek while at present he is working placer ground located on Palmer creek, this state. Besides his mining interests he is the owner of one hundred and sixty acres of choice farm land located on Big Applegate creek. He moved upon this property and for one year operated it under a lease, at the expiration of which he purchased the ranch upon which he has since resided.

Mr. McKee was united in marriage in 1887 to Miss Charlotte F. Pence. She is a native of Logan county, Illinois, and is the daughter of William Pence, who removed from Illinois to Oregon in 1876 and located in Applegate valley. To the family of Mr. and Mrs. McKee four children have been born: Ernest H., now employed in Hubbard's Implement Store in Medford; Floyd E.; Pearl A.; and Clara H., the three last named being at home with their parents.

Mr. McKee is a republican in politics, following the fortunes of his party in national and state issues. Though deeply interested in mining he still gives attention to the constant improvement and cultivation of his home ranch and is recognized as being a prosperous ranchman as well as a successful miner. He is always interested in any public measure affecting the betterment of the people in his county and state, and has proven himself to be public-spirited, enterprising and successful in all relations of life.

OLIVER SARGENT, deceased, was one of the early pioneers of Oregon. He was born in Iowa, August 4, 1849, and was the son of Abram and Nancy (Adams) Sargent, both of whom were natives of that state. He crossed the plains with ox teams at a very early date in company with his parents and settled in this state, and for the three years immediately following he was engaged in mining. He then purchased a farm of two hundred acres on Deer creek, of which he later sold eighty acres, and upon the one hundred and twenty acre tract which he retained, he established his home and continued to live during the remaining years of his life. He was a veteran of the Rogue River Indian war, having served as a drummer boy for three years, and was with his command during the most dangerous and trying period of that Indian outbreak. He passed away at his home in Josephine county in 1904.

Mr. Sargent was united in marriage on January 25, 1873, to Miss Mary Shoemake, a native of Iowa, who removed with her parents to Oregon in 1872. To Mr. and Mrs. Sargent five children were born, all of whom are still living, namely: Adelbert S., William D., Perry E., Ida M. and Daisy D. Mr. Sargent was affiliated with the republican party, and fraternally was a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. He was a member of the Presbyterian church, as is also his widow, and was a man highly esteemed throughout his portion of the state not only as an industrious and successful farmer but also for the invaluable services which he had rendered as a patriot and soldier in the Indian war. His widow now resides on the old homestead and the farm is being successfully operated by one of the sons of their family.

ADAM WIRT NYE. The life history of A. W. Nye if written in detail would present a most complete picture of pioneer experiences in the northwest, when this was a frontier region. For many years he was identified with agricultural interests and stock-raising and at different times has occupied positions of public trust and responsibility. In every relation of life his record has been commendable and Umatilla county numbers him among her representative citizens. He is now living retired in Pendleton, enjoying a rest which he has truly earned and well deserves. He was born in Missouri, March 3, 1842, and is a son of Dr. James M. and Nancy (Calaway) Nye. The father was a native of Virginia and the mother of North Carolina. They removed westward to Missouri in 1841 and Dr. James M. Nye purchased land in Boone county. For ten years he was identified with agricultural interests in that state and in 1851 started for Califor-

ADAMS W. NYE

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASTOR, LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS

nia but died en route, passing away on the Little Blue river in June of that year. A considerable period of time passed and then the mother sought a home on the Pacific coast, journeying to Oregon in 1865. She located, however, just across the Columbia river at Vancouver, Washington, where she lived for ten years. She became a resident of Umatilla county in 1881 and afterward made her home with her children until her death, which occurred on the 29th of September, 1883. She was the mother of twelve children, of whom four are still living: Martha J., who is the wife of J. C. Maze, a resident of Elgin, Oregon; Elmira, who is the widow of Thomas Metsger and lives in Joplin, Missouri; Sarah M., who is the widow of R. M. Angell and makes her home in Ritzville, Washington; and A. W., of this review.

Adam Wirt Nye remained at home until nineteen years of age and then, starting out in life for himself, crossed the plains in 1862, spending the winter in Vancouver. In the spring of 1863 he came to eastern Oregon and for two years thereafter was engaged in freighting with pack mules. In 1865 he returned to Vancouver, where he married Miss Harriet J. Switzler, a native of Missouri, who had come to Oregon in 1845 with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Switzler, who settled on a donation land claim, which was the home of the father until his death. His family numbered seven children two of whom are living, Mrs. Nye and her brother, John B.

Following his marriage Adam Wirt Nye began farming on his brother's land near Vancouver, cultivating that tract for two years, after which he came to Umatilla county and purchased a ranch of one hundred and sixty acres, upon which he carried on general farming and stock-raising. In 1870, however, he disposed of his stock, purchased four hundred and eighty acres of land near Weston, and turned his attention to wheat-raising. For two years he engaged in the cultivation of that commodity and was then called to public office, being elected sheriff of Umatilla county, in which capacity he served for two years. On his retirement from that office he again took up farming and sheep-raising, and purchased one thousand acres of land on which he farmed for eleven years, when he sold out and became identified with commercial interests in Pendleton as proprietor of a furniture store, which he conducted for three years. He has since lived retired yet is still the owner of valuable property, including two hundred acres of land in this county and a three acre orchard adjoining the city limits of Pendleton. He has a fine residence and a cottage on Water and College streets. He has worked diligently and his unfaltering industry and determination constitute the basis of his success. He has never been afraid of earnest, indefatigable labor and as the years have passed by his determination and energy have enabled him to overcome all difficulties and obstacles and work his way steadily upward to the plane of affluence.

To Mr. and Mrs. Nye have been six children: Maud, deceased; William W., a resident of Idaho; Jessie M., the wife of W. C. Shults, of Portland; Thomas C., also of Portland; Harry, who has passed away; and Mabel, the wife of Lachlan Macleay, who is a resident of Tacoma, Washington.

A. W. Nye gives his support to the democratic party and holds membership with Pendleton Lodge, No. 52, F. & A. M., and Pendleton Chapter, No. 23, R. A. M. He has filled all of the chairs in the lodge and is loyal to the teachings and spirit of the craft, and at the present writing is high priest of the chapter. He and his wife are consistent members of the Episcopal church, in the work of which they are actively and helpfully interested. For ten years Mr. Nye served as librarian and secretary of the Commercial Club, of which he was made a life member. His fellow townsmen have high appreciation for his sterling worth and upright character and all who know him speak of him in terms of praise and high regard. He has never sought to figure prominently before the public but has been content day after day to do the duty nearest at hand, and in following this course he has won not only a substantial measure of success but the good-will and esteem of all with whom he has been brought in contact. He has been a resident of Oregon for a half century and has, therefore, been an interested witness of much of its growth and progress. Especially has he seen the conversion of the wild and arid district of eastern Oregon into rich and productive farms, in the midst of which are found enterprising and progressive towns and cities. Throughout he has always borne his part in the work of public progress in his locality and is justly accounted one of the public-spirited and representative citizens.

WILLIAM H. QUEENER. In every town and city there are men who, by the consensus of public opinion, are placed in the front ranks of the enterprising citizens. To this class belongs William H. Queener, who for the past thirty-two years has been successfully engaged in the practice of law in Stayton. A native of Missouri, he was born in Gentry county, January 28, 1851, the son of A. J. and Elizabeth (Whitton) Queener, both of whom were natives of Tennessee and were married in Missouri. The father, who followed the occupation of farming all his life, removed to Missouri in 1829 and resided there until 1865, when he crossed the plains with ox teams, making the journey in six months, during which time he and his companions were engaged in two Indian fights in which they were attacked by a thousand Indians. He settled in Oregon, near Scio, in Linn county, where he resided until his death in 1889. His wife survived him by five years, dying in 1894, and they are both buried in the Scio cemetery. They were the parents of thirteen children, as follows: A. G. and Margaret, who are deceased; Martha, the wife of Joseph Hill, of Palouse, Washington; Mary, Hulda and James P., all deceased; Sarah, who is the wife of John S. Morris, of Scio, Oregon; William H., of this review; Calvin, deceased; George W., of Scio; Belle, who is the wife of C. W. Caldwell, of Oregon; C. J., of Cottage Grove, Oregon; and one who died in infancy.

William H. Queener received his early education in Missouri and in 1876 began the study of law under Judge Orris Strahn, of Albany, where he remained for two years. Prior to this time he had served as county clerk for eight years. In 1880 he began the practice of law in Stayton and has been here ever since. In addition to the practice of his profession he is also engaged in the real-estate and insurance business.

In 1873 Mr. Queener was united in marriage to Miss M. J. Kelley and they have become the parents of seven children: Lula, who is the wife of John S. Cary, of Scio, Oregon; Edna M., now Mrs. Warren Richardson, of Stayton; Norman, of Pendleton, Oregan; Anna, who is the wife of T. B. Riggs, of Stayton; Bessie, who is the wife of Joseph J. Korinek, also of Stayton; Earl, of Pendleton; and Flora, the wife of Ed Sestak, of Stayton.

Mr. Queener gives his political allegiance to the democratic party, is interested in its success and welfare, and has served for six years as justice of the peace at Stayton and seven years as police judge. Fraternally he has been identified with the Order of Foresters of America, and both he and his wife are members of the Christian church. In his profession Mr. Queener has made continuous and steady progress and has thoroughly informed himself on the law bearing on every case which has been entrusted to his care. He has a wide circle of friends in the community where he has passed so many years of his life.

FRANK L. INGRAM, D. M. D., is a rising young dentist who since 1908 has been practicing his profession in Cottage Grove. He was born at Dayton, Washington, April 19, 1884, the son of J. H. and Elizabeth (Martin) Ingram, the former a native of Illinois. In 1852 the father with his family crossed the plains to Oregon, settling at Oregon City, where he began farming on land which he purchased there. For a number of years he was engaged in the cultivation and development of this farm and then moved to Dayton, Washington, in 1875. In that city he again invested in land and has since been interested in agricultural pursuits. He at present owns thirteen hundred acres of land, seven hundred acres of which is under a high state of cultivation, the remainder being in pasture. He was twice married. His first union was with a Miss Gillam and their family numbered three children: William, deceased; Charles, who resides on the home farm; and Fannie, who is the wife of Richard Largant, of Pullman, Washington. Mr. Ingram's second marriage was with Miss Elizabeth Martin and to this union six children were born, namely: John H., a resident of Clarkston, Washington; May, the wife of Clark Israel, of Dayton, Washington; Cora, deceased; Della, who is employed in the Bureau of Plant Industry at Washington, D. C.; Frank L., of this review; and Walter, of Dayton, Washington.

Dr. Ingram attended the common schools of Dayton, Washington, and was graduated from the high school at that place in 1903, later taking a course in a business college of Portland, Oregon. He then took up the study of dentistry in the North Pacific College of Dentistry at Portland, from which institution he was graduated in 1908. Immediately after his graduation he settled in Cottage Grove, establishing his office in that city on July 1st of that year. He owns a fine home in Cottage Grove and also has residence properties in Portland.

Dr. Ingram was married on the 23d of November, 1908, to Miss Maud Samuel, who was born in Missouri, August 13, 1887, a daughter of J. F. and Mattie Samuel. Her parents came west in 1892, locating first in Washington. In 1909 they came to Oregon and settled at Myrtle Creek, where they are still residing. The members of their family are: Homer; Leila, the wife of William Ingraham, of Spokane, Washington; and Maud, now Mrs. Frank L. Ingram. Mr. and Mrs. Ingram are the parents of a son, Clarence L., whose birth occurred on the 25th of May, 1911.

Dr. Ingram is a member of the Elks and the Woodmen of the World. He and his wife are adherents of the Baptist faith, being prominently identified with that denomination. Dr. Ingram, who has been thoroughly educated in dental science, is becoming well known and is successful in the practice of his profession and has a satisfactory and growing clientele. He is careful and thorough in his work and as an operator is developing a technique which is indicative of both his talent and training and argues well for his future career. He is popular in professional, fraternal, church and social circles and has a very extended acquaintance in the city and community, being greatly respected by all who know him.

EDGAR DODGE is a progressive, energetic young business man who has already become an important factor in retail mercantile circles in Eugene, being president and manager of the Dodge Department Store, Inc. Oregon claims him as one of her native sons, his birth having occurred in Marion county, April 22, 1873, his parents being Francis Marian and Jane (Caples) Dodge. The father was a native of Pennsylvania and was a son of John Dodge, who was born in Susquehanna county, Pennsylvania, in 1810. He in turn was the son of a farmer of that locality. He learned the trade of a brick mason and plasterer in early life. His parents died while he was yet young and at an early age he was forced to start out in the world on his own account. He was always independent in spirit and self-reliant and, moreover, displayed good judgment and earnest purpose. He never gave up when one avenue of opportunity seemed closed but sought out other paths by which he might reach the desired goal. He married Sarah Ives, a native of Middletown, Connecticut, and they made their home in Pennsylvania until 1844, when they removed to Stark county, Illinois. In 1853 they left that district for Oregon, making the long and tedious journey with slow plodding ox teams. At length, however, they had covered the long distance between the Mississippi valley and the Pacific coast and made their way direct to Salem, Oregon, where for ten years Mr. Dodge continued to reside. In 1863 he went to the Puget Sound country, settling fourteen miles from Olympia on the Miami prairie. After remaining there for a time, however, he returned to Marion county, Oregon, but later took up his abode permanently in Washington. Both he and his wife died at Mud Bay, John Dodge passing away at the age of eighty-two years, while his wife was seventy-six years of age at the time of her demise.

Of their children four reached adult age, of whom Francis Marian Dodge was the youngest. He was born in Crawford county, Pennsylvania, October 29, 1835, and acquired his education in the public schools of the Keystone state, the state of Illinois and of Salem, Oregon, as his parents removed to those various localities. He left home, however, soon after their arrival in the west. While living on Miami prairie in Washington he enlisted in 1855 as a member of a military company commanded by Captain Gilmore Hayes for service in the Cayuse Indian war. He took part in a number of engagements, including the battles of White River, South Prairie, Connell Prairie and Walla Walla and was a member of Shaw's train when it was captured. At the cessation of hostilities he was mustered out and after a year returned to Miami prairie, where he had previously taken up a donation claim, remaining thereon until 1861, when he returned to Oregon. For eight or ten years thereafter he was engaged in teaching at St. Johns, not far from Portland, and he invested his savings in land near the Rose city. He lived there for a year and then purchased one hundred and sixty acres, which he made his home until his death in 1906. This place is located on Butte Creek, three and a half mile east of Woodburn. When he purchased the tract it was all wild land save six or seven acres which were brought under cultivation, but he at once began its further development and soon transformed it into productive fields.

In 1865 Francis M. Dodge was married to Miss Jane Caples, who was born in Andrew county, Missouri, November 2, 1847, and in 1849 was brought across the plains by her parents, Dr. William and Nancy (Nowell) Caples, whose family numbered six children. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Francis M. Dodge were also born six children, of whom four reached manhood or womanhood, namely: Elmer John, who is living on the old homestead; Edgar; Walter S., who resides on the old home place; and Lizzie Willema, the wife of Elmer Pugh, of Vancouver, Washington. The parents were members of the United Brethren church and also belonged to the Oregon Pioneer Association.

Edgar Dodge was educated in the public schools and in the Presbyterian College at Monmouth, from which he was graduated with the class of 1894. He then began clerking in a dry-goods store at Vancouver, British Columbia, and removed from that city to Eugene about 1903. Six years ago he started his present business known as the Dodge Department Store. This is the outgrowth of a business established by the firm of Scobert & Dodge. In 1909 it was incorporated with Mr. Dodge as the president and manager and M. F. McClain as the secretary. The business has always been carried on at its present location and they now have a large and well selected line of goods in their various departments, their store being one of the leading retail mercantile enterprises of Eugene. Mr. Dodge combines hop culture with his mercantile interests, having forty acres planted to that crop on the farm which has been the family's homestead, about three miles east of Woodburn. He maintains an office—a buying rather than a selling agency—at 129 West Twenty-seventh street, New York city, where he has a man representing him in matters relating to his eastern business, which consists of the purchase of dry goods for the Dodge Department Store and the sale of the crops of hops. The Dodge Department Stores, Inc. are the largest wholesale produce dealers in the Willamette valley and Mr. Dodge is well known in this connection throughout the western and southern states.

In 1898 Mr. Dodge was married to Miss Myrtle Scobert and they have one child, Ray. Mr. Dodge belongs to Spencer Butte Lodge, I. O. O. F., and Wimawhala Encampment, No. 6. He is also connected with Eugene Camp, No. 115, W. O. W., and with Eugene Lodge, No. 357, B. P. O. E. He is preeminently a man of affairs, alert, energetic and progressive, and he has already made for himself a prominent position in commercial circles and is steadily climbing the path of advancement and success.

DAVID PETER BUCKLEY, who resides upon and assists in the operation of a magnificent estate adjoining Ruch, is one of Oregon's favored sons, who not only was so fortunate as to first see the light of day in this splendid state but was also reared by most excellent parents and given a good common-school education. He is the son of James D. and Maggie (Riley) Buckley, the former born in Ireland and the latter in the state of New Jersey. His birth occurred January 19, 1881, and he is one of seven children born to his parents, the other members of the family being: Rose; John D.; James F.; Mary Catherine; Frances, who died in 1884; and George. More detailed information regarding the ancestry of Mr. Buckley, will be found in the biographical review introduced by the name of Mrs. Maggie Buckley, on another page of this work.

David P. Buckley was reared on the home farm adjoining Ruch, where he acquired a good common-school education and assisted his father with the farm work. He was given good training so that when he attained his majority he was able to so direct his efforts that he has since been a very successful farmer and it is largely through his efforts that the old homestead has been kept in such excellent condition and made from year to year to yield its golden harvests, the farm now being known as one of the most valuable and best managed in the community.

In his political views Mr. Buckley is an adherent of the principles and practices of the democracy and although he gives his principal attention to business, he still finds time to take a commendable interest in affairs of state. He is an earnest and consistent member of the Catholic church, in which he was reared, and by his life of uprightness and industry he has long since been known as one of the most estimable young men of the community and the future for him is bright with promise. Being of a companionable and genial disposition he has made many friends and is popular particularly in the younger set of the community.

JOHN BARKER has been a resident of Oregon since 1882, when he became located near Hillsboro and afterward built a sawmill and electric light plant at Tillamook. He is interested in gold mining, was in the saloon business for six years in Cottage Grove and has recently been conducting a cigar store in this city, where he owns property as well as in Florence, and possesses one hundred and sixty acres of fine commercial timber containing eight million feet. He was born in Indiana, April 24, 1858, a son of Luke and Delila (Mercer) Barker. The father was a native of Vermont while the mother was born in Ohio, their wedding being celebrated in Indiana where they lived until the father died in 1876. The mother's death occurred in 1888. The former by trade was a carpenter and although he owned a fine farm he worked at his trade during his lifetime. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Barker were born ten children, as follows: Annis McCormick, of Everett, Washington; William, of British Columbia; H. S., of Portland; John, of this review; Angie, who married George Baker, of Everett; two who passed away in infancy; and Elinore, Alice and Eliza, who are also deceased.

John Barker remained with his parents in Indiana, where he received a common-school education, until twenty-four years of age. At the age of sixteen years he began working at various occupations for wages although continuing to reside at home until in 1882, when he removed to Oregon and settled at Hillsboro, where he operated a logging camp. He continued thus employed until 1900 and during the time he was logging he built a sawmill at Tillamook, operating it in connection with his other business. He also erected an electric light plant in that city, which he operated until 1898. He then sold all of his interests at Tillamook and Hillsboro and began operating a stage line and mail service between Yamhill and Tillamook, a business which he followed for two years, after which he came to Cottage Grove and for six years conducted a saloon. He then became interested in gold mining to which he gave his attention for a time, after which he purchased a cigar store which he still conducts. He owns a home in Cottage Grove and also has property at Florence and is the owner of one hundred and sixty acres of fine timber land.

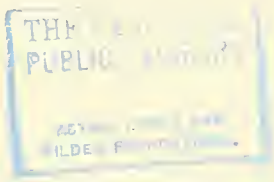
Mr. Barker was married in 1909 to Mrs. Malinda Underwood, the widow of H. E. Underwood, and a daughter of Robert Carie. Mrs. Barker was born in Missouri and came with her parents to Oregon in 1876, the family settling in Cottage Grove. Her mother died in 1890 and in 1909 the father passed away. In their family were four children, of whom Mrs. Barker was the third in order of birth, the others being: Mrs. Ellen Markley, of Cottage Grove; Mrs. Mattie Medley, also of this city; and Frank, who died in 1884.

Mr. Barker in his political faith is a republican and served as treasurer of Tillamook county for four years. He also was one of the first aldermen of that place after it was incorporated as a city. His fraternal relations are limited to membership in the Elks. The family belong to the Christian church and are well known and popular in the social circles of the community in which they move. Mr. Barker has been an active man since being connected with the business interests of the various communities in Oregon where he has resided and has formed a large acquaintance, being popular with all who know him. He is a well educated man, having received a good common-school and business education before coming to Oregon, and also attending night school for a time after taking up his residence in this state. He has been very successful in his business operations, always being careful regarding all details of his work and using good judgment in all of his transactions. He is one of the self-made men of Cottage Grove and, starting out with practically nothing, he has acquired a very comfortable competence which is constantly increasing as values rise.

JESSE A. SMITH, one of the successful agriculturists of Oregon, is located ten miles up the Coos river from Marshfield, where he is specializing in dairy farming. He was born on the south fork of the Coos river, ten miles above Marshfield, on April 29, 1872, and is the son of Nathan and Emily (Hobson) Smith, of whom extended mention is made in the sketch of L. D. Smith, the brother of our subject.

Jesse A. Smith was reared in his parents' home and received his early education in the common schools of Coos county. About twelve years ago he purchased one hundred and thirty acres of his father's homestead and has since continued to be engaged in agricultural pursuits. From the beginning of his business career he has made a specialty of dairy farming and stock-raising and in addition to these interests for the past eight years his time during the summer months

JESSE A. SMITH AND FAMILY



THE
PUBLIC
ASTOR, LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS.

has been devoted to the duties of forest ranger, to which office he is a regular appointee. His dairy farm is one of the most perfectly equipped and scientifically conducted of his part of the state.

Mr. Smith was united in marriage in 1895 to Miss Louisa M. Danielson, who was born on the Coquille river in Oregon, October 25, 1872. Mrs. Smith is a daughter of Stian and Elizabeth (Thrush) Danielson, the former a native of Norway and the latter of California. The father emigrated to America when fifteen years of age and first settled on the Coquille river, in Coos county, Oregon, where he purchased one hundred and sixty acres of land upon which he lived until the time of his death, which occurred in 1909. The mother, at the age of fifty-seven, still resides upon the old homestead, which now consists of three hundred and twenty acres. To Mr. and Mrs. Danielson nine children were born, Louisa M., Rosetta, Frank D., John E., Lillie May, Tora E., Rena L., Richard and Christopher. Mr. and Mrs. Smith are the parents of five children: Estella May, born July 17, 1896, who is attending school and is also studying music; Enos J. H., who was born June 1, 1898, and is now attending school; Rosetta P., who was born June 19, 1900, and is also attending school; Jessie O., born September 7, 1902; and Stian E., born October 19, 1905.

Mr. Smith is affiliated with the republican party but has never allowed his name to be used as a candidate for any public office. Fraternally he is connected with the Knights of Pythias and also with the Woodmen of the World, of Marshfield. Both he and his wife are members of the United Brethren church. Mr. Smith is one of the well known and highly respected men of Coos county. His success in dairy farming has made him one of the popular leaders of that branch of agricultural industry and his progressive views of stock-raising and agriculture justly entitle him to be numbered among the most useful citizens of Oregon.

EDMUND ALEXANDER PARKER was an Oregon pioneer who migrated to this state in 1850 and took up three hundred and twenty acres of government land in Clackamas county, where he lived for many years. He afterward became a druggist at Oregon City, where he remained in business for ten years and then conducted a similar line of trade in Albany for five years, after which he sold out and retired. He was a most popular man in the community and a valued citizen. At the time of his death, which occurred in May, 1901, he owned a fine home in Albany, having disposed of his other property. He was a son of Captain Harry and Martha (Mitchell) Parker, both natives of Kentucky, in which state their marriage was celebrated and where they lived for a time, after which they removed to Missouri. The father attained the age of eighty-nine years and the mother passed away several years previous to her husband's death, both dying in Missouri. To them were born the following children, eight of whom have passed away: Edmund Alexander, of this review; Moss, deceased; Susan, who married John Stone, of Missouri; Duke, who was killed in the Civil war; Nanna, the wife of Thomas P. Jones, of Cameron, Missouri; Maria, the wife of John Knoch, of Kidder, Missouri; Cooper, deceased; Bazal, a twin brother of Cooper, who has also passed away; Harry, deceased; Theodore, residing in Cameron, Missouri; Margaret, who died in infancy; and Russel, deceased.

Edmund Alexander Parker remained with his parents until he attained the age of nineteen years, when in 1850 he removed to Clackamas county, Oregon, crossing the plains with ox team in company with his cousins, Thadeus and R. R. Thomas. In the Blue mountain district of Oregon the oxen all died and the emigrants were compelled to leave their wagons and equipment and walk to the first settlement, where they paid a dollar each for meals. They remained there for a time until they were sufficiently rested to pursue their journey to Clackamas county, and in the spring of 1852 went to California by ox team for the purpose of digging gold. Becoming discouraged, however, before they reached their destination, they returned to Oregon where Mr. Parker took up a donation claim of three hundred and twenty acres in Clackamas county, upon which he resided for several years. After his marriage he sold this land and embarked in the drug business in Oregon City, where he resided for ten years. He then sold his store and removed to Albany, Linn county, there engaging in the same business for five years. At the end of that time he also sold that business and retired, living in Albany until the time of his death. In that city he owned a fine home.

Mr. Parker was married in March, 1856, to Miss Sarah E. Bell, who was born in Kentucky, November 2, 1840, a daughter of Archibald and Harriet L. (Baker) Bell, also natives of Kentucky. The parents were married in the Blue Grass state and resided at Louisville until the mother's death, which occurred in 1851. In June of the following year the father crossed the plains to Oregon, settling at Astoria, and after living there for a short time removed to Marion county in 1854, later taking up government land near Oregon City. While living in Oregon he purchased land in several different sections of the state and also operated a drug store at Oregon City and one at Albany. He then removed to Washington, where he took up one hundred and sixty acres of land, and after residing in that city for three years, returned to Oregon, settling in Clackamas county, where he lived until his death in 1901. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Bell were born seven children, namely: James H., whose death occurred at Hillhurst, Washington; Mary F., the widow of Captain Letts, her home being in Portland, Oregon; Samuel L., who died in Washington; Sarah E., now Mrs. Parker; Elizabeth T., who married R. R. Thomas, of Clackamas county; Isabelle, who passed away at the age of three years; and Harriet B., who died in infancy. Mr. and Mrs. Parker became the parents of seven children, namely: Virgil, an elder in the Methodist church, who was born in 1857 and died in 1904; Flora, who was born in 1858 and is the wife of N. H. Wheeler, of Albany, Oregon; Harry H., born in 1860, engaged in mining in the Bohemia district, Lane county; Edmund A., born in 1862, a stockman in eastern Oregon; Walter M., born in 1864, carrying on a mercantile business in Albany; T. Roderick, who was born in Clackamas county, in 1869, and who is engaged in the bakery business at Cottage Grove; and Nina the wife of W. J. Ortell, of Spokane, in which city he operates a wholesale stationery establishment. The youngest son, T. Roderick, married Miss Mary E. Prettyman, who was born in Multnomah county in 1873, a daughter of W. D. Prettyman, of Linn county, Oregon. She is one of four children born unto her parents, being the second in order of birth, the others being as follows: John, who died in infancy; Perry, an engineer of Albany; and Lena, the wife of L. A. Kroshel, who is engaged in the ice business. T. Roderick Parker has two children: Martha Ellen, born in 1904; and Mary Ellen, born in 1907.

After the death of Mr. Parker his widow operated a private boarding house until 1903, when she removed to Cottage Grove, although she still owns her property in Albany, where she and her son are conducting a bakery which is one of the two bakeries in that city. Mr. Parker was a republican in his political faith and was for many years up to the time of his death city treasurer of Albany. Fraternally he belonged to the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Ancient Order of United Workmen. The family in their religious faith are Presbyterians, being actively engaged in church work. Mr. Parker was a man of broad intellectual attainment and also possessed marked business ability. He won and kept many friends and his memory is still held dear to a large number of the people in the cities where he resided and conducted business. His widow and her family are prominent in Cottage Grove, and they are held in high esteem by a large circle of friends.

ALPHONSO D. BOONE is one of the well known early pioneers of Oregon, having first settled in this state in 1846, since which time he has been actively identified with the exception of two years, which he spent in California, with the growth and development of Coos county. He is now located a mile and a quarter beyond Sumner at the head of navigation on Catchings inlet, where he is engaged in general farming. He was born near Jefferson City, Missouri, in 1837 and is the son of Alphonso and Nancy L. Boone, who were second cousins. The paternal grandfather was a great-grandson of Daniel Boone of pioneer Kentucky fame. The father was a native of Kentucky and was a planter in that state in early life, but later removed to Missouri, settling in that state at a time when its domain constituted the southwestern border country in the central western states. He emigrated to Oregon in 1846, settling twelve miles above Oregon City, on the site of the future Wilsonville. To Mr. and Mrs. Alphonso Boone the following children were born: Jesse, deceased; Chloe D., who was the wife of ex-Governor Curry, both deceased; George L., who served in the Mexican war, deceased; Mary E., who was the wife of Thomas Norris, both deceased; Joseph C. and J. Morris, both deceased; Lucy, who was the wife of Thomas Musick, both deceased; and Alphonso D., the subject of this review.

Alphonso D. Boone was reared in his father's home and when a child of nine years of age emigrated with him to Oregon and later with his father removed to California in 1849 where his father's death occurred in that year. He then returned to Oregon, settling on the Willamette river at which place he lived for two years with his brother-in-law, ex-Governor Curry, after which he engaged in steamboating, running between Oregon City, Corvallis and Eugene, continuing in that employment for the five succeeding years. He then removed to British Columbia where he was engaged in mining for one year when he returned to Oregon and again engaged in steamboating on the Willamette river for four continuous years. He then changed his sphere of operations to the Columbia river on which he continued in the steamboat business for some time and later engaged in the same line of work in Idaho for one and one-half years, after which he returned to Oregon City and there operated the steamboat between that place and Portland for one year. In 1869 he removed to Coos county where he took up a homestead located on Catchings inlet, at the head of navigation. After completing the necessary work in the matter of obtaining a homestead he engaged in the steamboat business on the Umpqua river and continued in that employment for one and one-half years. He then went to Coos bay and there operated a steamboat for Captain Nathan Lane, who is the son of General Joseph Lane, of Mexican war fame. He continued on Coos bay for one year and a half and then established his home on Catchings inlet where he now resides.

Mr. Boone was united in marriage to Miss Nancy N. Barker, in 1875, the daughter of Henry and Sarah (Nolan) Barker, both of whom were natives of Kentucky. To Mr. and Mrs. Henry Barker twelve children were born, three of whom are still living, namely: Elizabeth, the widow of Thomas Miller, of Dixon, California; J. L., a resident of Fairview, Oregon; and Nancy N., the wife of the subject of this review. To Mr. and Mrs. Alphonso D. Boone six children have been born. Jesse Archie is in the employ of the Southern Pacific Railroad with headquarters at Marshfield, Oregon, and is the father of two children, Mark and Harold. Louisa is the wife of William Cordell, a conductor on the Southern Pacific Railroad, by whom she has three children, Alton, Florence and Marion. James L. is in the employ of the Smith Powers Logging Company. Mary Ethel is the wife of Lorenzo Belieu, of Marshfield, Oregon. Harry Cleveland is engaged in the cultivation of his father's ranch. Myrtle Leola, who completes the family, married Dr. N. H. Hansen, of Washington, by whom she has one child, Lloyd Boone.

Mr. Boone is a member of the democratic party. He has, however, never allowed his name to be used as a candidate for public office. When he started for Oregon he carried with him the compass of his great ancestor, Daniel Boone, and had the misfortune to have that priceless heirloom stolen by the Indians on his journey. Mr. Boone is the brother-in-law of ex-Governor Curry, for whom Curry county is named, and is also the nephew of ex-Governor Boggs, of Missouri.

Mr. Boone is one of the best known men in his part of the state. His life as a steamboat man in the early days brought him in contact with the general public and his long business life has been distinguished for his varied activities in many of the enterprises which have contributed to the development of Coos county. He is a man of great personal honor and is one of the valued and esteemed citizens of Oregon.

C. A. JOHNSON is one of the very successful business men of Marshfield, where he is engaged in the furniture business and also in the general contracting and building business. He was born in Finland, November 15, 1849, and is a son of John and Elreka Johnson. His parents were both natives of Finland, where his mother is still living at the advanced age of eighty-three years, his father having passed away in 1911 at the age of eighty-five years. Unto them were born thirteen children of whom seven are still living: C. A., of this review; Erick, of Marshfield; Marie; Ida; Edla; Anna, of Finland; and Otto, also a resident of that country.

C. A. Johnson was reared in his parents' home and received his early education in his native land. He emigrated to America at the age of twenty-two years and made his first settlement in the new world in Boston, Massachusetts, where he continued to reside for two years. In 1874 he removed to California, making the journey by train, reaching San Francisco in February of that year. He at once proceeded to North Bend, Coos county, and there secured employment in the shipyards and continued in that occupation for twelve continuous years, during which time he established his home at Marshfield, where he has since continued to reside. In 1886 in company with W. O. Christensen he built the commodious and substantial furniture store which he still owns and in which he established a general furniture business. In the conduct of that establishment he has been successful from the start and in addition to the attention required in its operation he is also engaged in the contracting and building business and gives some portion of his time to work on the vessels plying on the river and on Coos bay. He was formerly the owner and successful operator of a modern pile driver which he kept in commission, doing harbor and bridge work at points along the river in the vicinity of Marshfield. He also owns seven acres of land and fifteen valuable lots, all in the desirable residence district of that city, and the real estate and building connected with his furniture establishment and two valuable business lots located on one of the principal streets of Marshfield. He has large interests at North Bend and East Marshfield.

Mr. Johnson was united in marriage at Marshfield, January 4, 1879, to Miss Minnie Ogren, who is a native of Finland and who emigrated to this country with her mother when she was a child of ten. Her parents were both natives of Finland and in that country the father died some years before Mrs. Ogren came to America. In their family were three daughters: Minnie; Ida, the wife of W. W. Douglas, of Marshfield; and Eliza, who married James Lee Brown, also of that city. The mother of this family died at Marshfield in 1908. By her marriage to Mr. Johnson, the eldest daughter became the mother of twelve children, eleven of whom are still living: Ada, the wife of John Merchant, of Marshfield; Clara, still at home with her father; Ellen, the wife of Albert Seelig, of Marshfield; Carl W., who lives with his father and is engaged in business with him in the furniture store at Marshfield; Selma, at home; Norman E., also at home and employed in his father's store; George, attending high school; Alton, Edward and Agnes, who are also pursuing their education; and Rudolph, who completes the family. One child passed away in infancy.

Mr. Johnson is fraternally associated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and is a member of the board of trustees of that lodge. He is also a member of the Ancient Order of United Workmen. He is a republican in politics but no office seeker, and he and his family are members of the Lutheran church at Marshfield. He has a record for business activity which for many years past has challenged the admiration of the business men of that city. He is one of the highly respected men of his city and has been uniformly successful in the conduct of his business. He is always to be relied upon to give his influence and assistance within his power to the advancement of every measure of public interest intended to advance and improve the educational and religious conditions of the people in his county and city.

JACOB P. MOOMAW is one of the enterprising farmers of Josephine county, where he is engaged in the cultivation of a fine ranch located at Williams Creek, near Williams, in this state. He was born in Virginia, December 17, 1837, and is the son of Philip and Susan (Peters) Moomaw, who became the parents of nine children, of whom the eldest is the subject of this review.

Jacob P. Moomaw was reared in his parents' home and received his early education in the public schools. He remained under the parental roof until twenty-five years of age and at that time enlisted as a volunteer in the Confederate army and continued in that service for a period of eighteen months, after which he was honorably discharged and mustered out of service at Richmond, Virginia. He then engaged in farming and later entered educational work and taught school for six months. In 1895 he emigrated to Oregon and settled at Eagle Point upon eighty acres of land, where he established his home and some years afterward removed to Williams Creek, where he purchased eighty acres of land, upon which he resides, and is now engaged in its cultivation.

Mr. Moomaw was united in marriage on February 2, 1862, to Miss Mary Zollman, a native of Virginia, and to them nine children were born, Charles, Ora, Ellie, Mary, Ben, John, Jewel, Jasper and Virginia. Mr. Moomaw is affiliated with the republican party, and is an elder of the Dunkard church, of which he has been a member since 1862. He is one of the enterprising and successful agriculturists of his section of the state and is a man whose influence is always readily secured to assist in the advancement of any enterprise affecting the welfare of the community in which he resides.

NICHOLAS BABI, who figured for many years as a successful dairyman of Tillamook county, his enterprise and energy ranking him with the representative business men of his locality, was born in Switzerland on the 16th of April, 1847. He pursued his education in his native land and came to America in 1871 when twenty-four years of age. Landing in New York city he worked there for about two years and then made his way westward to St. Louis. He secured employment on a dairy farm near the city, remaining there for three years, and in 1882 he again started westward with his wife, Tillamook county, Oregon, being their destination. For a brief period he was employed as a farm hand and then purchased seventy-seven acres of land two and one-half miles east of the city of Tillamook. He made all the improvements upon the place, and although he started in a quiet way he gradually won success and gained a place among the prosperous dairymen of the county. He kept a large number of high grade cows and the product of his dairy found a ready sale for it was well known that neatness and sanitary conditions regulated the conduct of his interests while honorable business methods were employed in the conduct of his transactions. He operated his farm until his demise which occurred on the 3d of March, 1901.

Mr. Babi was married to Miss Barbara Fishbacher, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Melchior Fishbacher who were farming people of Switzerland. In that country Mrs. Babi was born April 22, 1845, and in 1874 she came to America. The marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Babi was celebrated in the state of New York in 1878, and much of their happy married life was passed in Oregon. Two children, both of whom are now married, were reared in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Babi. After the death of her husband, Mrs. Babi continued to conduct the home place in Tillamook county until 1909 when she disposed of the farm and purchased a pleasant home in the city of Tillamook where she now resides.

Mr. Babi was a democrat in his political views and his religious faith was that of the Catholic church. His wife, however, is a member of the German Reformed church of Tillamook. She lives in the city and has many friends in the town and throughout the surrounding country to whom she ever offers a cordial hospitality.

NELSON HOSMER has occupied his fine ranch on Foot's creek, near Rogue River, which contains four hundred acres, since 1879, though his first purchase consisted of only about two hundred and forty acres. Of this fine body of land one hundred and forty acres is under intensive cultivation and is well improved. He was born in Vermont, November 14, 1831, the son of Josiah D. and Louisa Hosmer, both of whom were natives of the Green Mountain state. In their family were ten children, two of whom survive.

Nelson Hosmer received a good common-school education and remained under the parental roof until he attained his eighteenth year, after which he began working as a laborer. At the end of a year he began to learn the carpenter's trade, at which he worked for four years in his native state. In the fall of 1855 he came to California and began working at mining and teaming. After a time thus employed he embarked in the sawmill business, with which he was connected for five years. In 1879 he came to Oregon and settled on a farm which he purchased in Jackson county. This property, which is situated on Foot's creek, originally comprised two hundred and forty acres, but he has since increased his holdings by purchasing one hundred and sixty acres additional and he now has a fine farm of four hundred acres, of which one hundred and forty acres is under a high state of cultivation.

In April, 1881, Mr. Hosmer was united in marriage to Mrs. Martha J. (Kester) Mathews, widow of John Mathews, and a daughter of Henry and Elmira (Galbraith) Kester. By her former marriage Mrs. Hosmer has three children: Bessie, the wife of Charles Anderson; Alice, the wife of A. S. Rosenbaum, of Medford; and Grant, who resides in Jackson county. The parents of Mrs. Hosmer were natives of Virginia and Kentucky, respectively. At an early date they removed to Missouri, where the father died. Afterward, in 1860, the mother with her family crossed the plains with ox team and settled in California, where her death occurred. Of her family of eight children three are now living. Mrs. Hosmer is a member of the Christian Scientist church and takes a deep interest in the affairs of that denomination.

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASTOR LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS

NICHOLAS BABI

MRS. NICHOLAS BABI

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC

In his political faith Mr. Hosmer is a member of the republican party, in the councils of which he has taken an active part. For fifteen years he served on the board of commissioners and he has been justice of the peace for two terms. He belongs to the Masonic fraternity and his life is guided by the beneficent teachings of that order. In the person of Nelson Hosmer the community of which he is a member has a public-spirited citizen of great value. He is actively engaged not only in business but in all those enterprises which make for better civilization and an increase in the number of conveniences of rural life. In official as well as in business life he is most efficient and equitable and is popular alike in his business and political capacity.

LEONARD S. HOPFIELD, conducting an abstract and insurance business in McMinnville, in which connection he has secured a good clientage and proven himself worthy of the liberal support that is given him, was born in Portland, Oregon, December 28, 1879. He has thus always resided in the northwest and early became imbued with the spirit of enterprise and progress, which has been the dominant factor in the upbuilding of this section of the country. His parents were John and Sarah (Clow) Hopfield, the former a native of Germany and the latter of England. They arrived in Oregon in 1875, settling near Portland, and are now residents of McMinnville. The father served as a soldier of the Civil war, enlisting in Company K, of the Thirtieth Regiment of Wisconsin Infantry, with which he served for four years, and although he participated in many hotly contested engagements which led up to the final victory that crowned the Union arms, he was never wounded. Unto him and his wife were born nine children, of whom six are now living, namely: Louis D., who is now living in California; John W., a resident of Tillamook county, Oregon; Leonard S.; A. W., whose home is in Hammonton, California; Minnie, the wife of Frank Liese, of Portland, Oregon; and Maud, at home.

Leonard S. Hopfield spent his youthful days under the parental roof, starting out in life for himself when he had attained his majority. For a year he filled the position of clerk in a store, but not content with the educational advantages he had already received, he entered the McMinnville College, from which he was graduated in 1901. After putting aside his text-books, he secured the position of court stenographer and served in that capacity for a year. He afterward filled the position of deputy postmaster at Roseburg, Oregon, for some time and at his marriage took up his abode upon the old home farm, which he cultivated for a year. On the expiration of that period he once more became a resident of McMinnville, where he joined W. H. Latourette in the conduct of an insurance and real-estate agency, continuing in that connection for two years. He next turned his attention to the abstract and insurance business, in which he has since been engaged. He writes a large amount of insurance annually, his clientage constantly increasing, so that his business has now assumed large and profitable proportions.

It was on the 28th of September, 1904, that Mr. Hopfield was united in marriage to Miss Ruby G. Sargent, who was born in Yamhill county, on the same farm where her mother's birth occurred. The land was secured by her grandfather, Reuben Gant, as a donation claim and he is still one of the honored pioneer citizens of this section, having reached the age of ninety-four years. He crossed the plains in 1845 and drove the first ox team to this county, settling here when it was a wild and undeveloped region in which the seeds of civilization had not yet been planted. He yet owns a part of the old farm which came into his possession from the government. The parents of Mrs. Hopfield are both living and in their family were four children: Albert R., who is now a practicing physician in Alaska; Mrs. Hopfield; and two who have passed away. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Hopfield has been born a daughter, Mildred Lorene, whose natal day was February 9, 1906. The family occupy a beautiful residence in McMinnville and Mr. Hopfield also owns another residence property. He is one of the prosperous and progressive young business men of the city and his worth in commercial and financial circles and in other connections is widely acknowledged. In June, 1908, he was chosen justice of the peace, which position he has now filled for three and one-half years, discharging his duties in a uniformly just and equitable manner. His circle of friends is always coextensive with the circle of his acquaintances, and the high regard entertained for him by those with whom he has come in contact indicates a well spent life.

HART M. MANVILLE is the owner and proprietor of one of the most up-to-date and best stocked new and second-hand furniture stores in Eugene and enjoys the reputation throughout Lane county of being one of the reliable and progressive dealers in his chosen line. He was born in Springboro, Crawford county, Pennsylvania, March 29, 1858, a son of George C. and Lydia (Potter) Manville. His father's birth occurred on Black river, New York state in 1815. At an early age George C. Manville had the misfortune to lose his father, and as a young boy he was apprenticed to a cabinet maker, and to the trade he thus learned he continued to apply himself until he had become a proficient master cabinet maker. After some years of employment at his trade he became the owner and proprietor of a general store at Springboro, but later purchased a farm in Beaver township and in addition to the care he gave this investment he went into the oil regions at the first opening of the oil industry in that part of Pennsylvania. He eventually sold all of his interests in his farm and oil ventures and removed to Ashtabula county, Ohio, where he continued to live the remainder of his days, his death occurring in 1901.

Hart M. Manville was educated in the public schools and during the interims of the school periods was employed by his father at the cabinet maker's trade. On attaining his twentieth birthday he left the parental roof and removed to Fort Scott, Kansas, at which place he was in attendance for two years at the State Normal College. On the completion of his studies at the normal school he engaged in teaching, which occupation he followed for one year and then removed to Stuart, Nebraska, where he secured a position as clerk in a store. He remained in Stuart from 1883 to 1896. During the latter year he removed to Eugene, this state, where he formed a partnership with Nathan Winters, his father-in-law, and this firm owned and operated a furniture establishment dealing in both new and second-hand stock. His partnership in this establishment continued until the death of Mr. Winters, after which time he purchased the interest which had been held by his father-in-law, and has since operated the business as the sole owner and proprietor.

In April, 1887, in Nebraska, Mr. Manville was united in marriage to Miss Mary Winters, a daughter of Nathan Winters and a native of Wisconsin. Four children were born to this union, Ira, Floyd, Leona and Clayton. Mr. and Mrs. Manville are both members of the Baptist church of Eugene.

Mr. Manville enjoys the confidence of his fellow citizens and conducts a well kept and up-to-date furniture establishment, in which he carries a full line of both useful and ornamental furniture and furnishings. He is always a ready and willing contributor to the advancement of any measure seeking to improve the advancement and betterment of the people of his city and county.

P. M. HERMENS, who is manager of a creamery at Sublimity, was born in Brown county, Wisconsin, April 15, 1873, the son of William and Natalia (Meulmans) Hermens the father a native of Holland and the mother of Belgium. The father came to the United States, locating in Wisconsin, and remained there until 1884, when he went to Oregon, settling in Washington county, where he still lives. The mother died in 1911 and they had celebrated their golden wedding anniversary just ten days before her death. They were the parents of thirteen children: Rosalia, the wife of John Bernards of McMinnville, Oregon; Antone, of Forest Grove, Oregon; Lewis and Cornelius, both residents of McMinnville; Cornelia, the wife of John Peters, of Forest Grove; Willie, deceased; P. M., of this review; Constance, the wife of John Van Dyke, of Forest Grove; Pauline, the wife of Peter Kreiger, of McMinnville; Adelia, who is Sister Juliana in St. Mary's Convent at Beaverton, Oregon; Nellie, deceased; and two children who died in infancy.

P. M. Hermens was educated in the common schools in Wisconsin and Oregon and remained at home helping on the home farm until twenty-two years of age. He then went to Washington county, Oregon, where he was employed in farming for three years, subsequent to which he was in a creamery at Verboort, after which he came to Sublimity, where he has been connected with the creamery business ever since. He built the first creamery in this locality, erecting the plant and installing the machinery and general equipment, but he later sold the establishment to the Hazelwood Creamery Company of Portland and the same plant is now leased by the Purity Creamery Company and Mr. Hermens operates it for them. He has also been engaged in freighting and in the livery business in Sublimity, having a barn on his home lot, which lot is two hundred feet square.

In 1895 Mr. Hermens was united in marriage to Miss Antoinette Vandervelden and they have become the parents of eight children: Angeline, William, Katie, Adrian, Mary and Agnes, all at home; and Katie and Genevieve, deceased. In politics Mr. Hermens is a democrat and he has filled some of the town offices. Both he and his wife are members of the Catholic church and they are held in the highest regard by all the residents of Sublimity.

MONROE H. GORDON filling the position of postmaster at Beagle, was born in Decatur county, Iowa, August 25, 1858. He is a grandson of Alfred Gordon who passed away in Jackson county, Oregon, at the remarkable old age of ninety-four and one half years, and his wife, Mrs. Matilda Gordon, who died in Medford at about the same age. They were the parents of Uriah Gordon, who was born in Kentucky and was reared in Illinois and Missouri. In Iowa he was united in marriage to Miss Matilda Margaret Ross, a native of Pennsylvania. In the spring of 1865 they left Iowa and started across the plains for the northwest, making their way to the Willamette valley where they remained for eighteen months. In the spring of 1867 they removed to Jackson county and took up their abode near Medford on what is known as the old Gordon ranch. The name has since figured in connection with the history of the county and is prominently known in association with the development and progress of this part of the state. The father was a lifelong farmer and became an extensive stock-raiser on the Rogue river. He had four hundred and eighty acres of rich land which he brought under a high state of cultivation, continuing its development and improvement to the time of his death which occurred at Rogue river near Prospect in 1903 when he was seventy-three years of age. His widow still survives him and is now living in Medford. They were the parents of six sons and six daughters, and with the exception of one daughter all are yet living.

Monroe H. Gordon is the eldest son and the second child, and has been a ranchman throughout his entire life, having early become acquainted with the best methods of tilling the soil and caring for the crops. He is a man of great energy and determination, and early recognized the fact that industry and perseverance are indispensable elements of success. He is now the owner of one hundred and sixty acres at Beagle and devotes his place to general farming and stock-raising. He is also serving as postmaster of the town, to which position he was appointed in May, 1905, as a successor of A. M. Houston, who was the first postmaster of the place and had continued in that position for twenty years. Mr. Gordon gives his political support to the democratic party and has voted for its men and measures since age conferred upon him the right of franchise.

In 1884 Mr. Gordon was married to Miss Sarah Murray, who was born in Illinois, June 3, 1863, and came to Oregon in the fall of 1871 with her parents, James and Flora A. Murray, who were natives of Pennsylvania but were married in Illinois. On reaching the northwest the family settled in Jackson county, two and one half miles north of Medford, and both Mr. and Mrs. Murray died upon their farm. In their family were eight children, four sons and four daughters. The marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon has been blessed with seven children: Clara, who is the wife of Clarence Wichite of Sams Valley; Pearl, who died at the age of ten years; Milly, the wife of Elbert Glass of Sams Valley; Bessie, the wife of Earl Case of Sams Valley; Olive, Mattie and Samuel A., all at home.

Forty-five years' residence in Jackson county has made Monroe H. Gordon largely familiar with the history of this part of the state. He has not only been an interested witness of the changes which have occurred but has also been a cooperant factor in many movements related to the public good. His labors are indeed a beneficial element in behalf of general progress as well as of individual success.

A. V. ODEN is one of the sons of Oregon, born of parents who came here at an early day. He owns and lives upon a portion of the old homestead and is one of the most widely known and respected men of the community. He was born in Douglas county, September 15, 1862, a son of William and Eveline (Brown) Oden. The father was a native of Missouri and the mother of Arkansas, and they came overland to Oregon with ox teams in 1848. They had an eventful journey and lost a considerable portion of their stock en route. Settling in Jackson county, the father bought three hundred and eight acres of land, which he improved and upon which he lived until his death, which occurred in 1883. He was buried at Rock Point cemetery.

A. V. Oden is one of ten children born to his parents, of whom the sons are all living while the daughters have all passed away, six of the former now living on the old homestead. In company with the other children he received a good education and was well equipped in that respect for the duties of life. He resides on the old family homestead of which he owns forty acres, and has his farm well improved and under a high state of cultivation. He has always given his business careful attention and has brought his acres to a state of high productivity.

Mr. Oden was married in 1897 to Miss Moore, and to this union three children have been born, Nellie, William and Homer. Mr. Oden is one of the highly respected men of the community of which he is a member and beside his own business he has always been interested in the welfare of the neighborhood. He takes a deep interest in educational affairs and is a director of the district school board.

JOSHUA PATTERSON, who is now living retired in a beautiful home standing in fifty acres of valuable land on Pacific highway in Talent, Jackson county, was during his active career a successful business man, being a rancher and a prominent orchardist. He is well known in political circles, having held several important public offices which brought him in close touch with one of his main objects in life, namely, the building of good roads. He was born in Eaton county, Michigan, December 2, 1857, the son of Joshua and Catherine E. (May) Patterson, the former of Irish extraction and the latter of Pennsylvania Dutch stock. The father was born in Dauphin county, Pennsylvania, September 8, 1813, and the mother's birth occurred in Wayne county, Pennsylvania, January 4, 1823. The parents were married in Ohio, October 15, 1840, and in June, 1854, removed to Charlotte, Eaton county, Michigan, where they resided until 1860, when they removed to Iowa, taking up their abode in Marion county, that state. In 1862 they crossed the plains to Oregon, arriving in Ashland on October 10 of that year. A year later the father purchased a homestead right from Preston Anderson, the land being located one mile east of the town of Talent, and the title to the land was perfected by the mother, the father having died September 30, 1871. The mother's death occurred in Ashland, August 1, 1884. They were the parents of fourteen children, ten of whom are now living.

Joshua Patterson was reared under the parental roof and acquired his education in the public schools. At the age of sixteen years he began earning his own living, going first to Yolo county, California, where he engaged in ranching on the Sacramento plains. The following summer he formed a partnership and purchased a threshing machine which he assisted in running for eight years. At the end of that period he returned to Jackson county, Oregon, and with his brother Sylvester leased his mother's ranch. A year later, in partnership with his brother Sylvester he purchased the home farm, which they operated jointly for two years, at the end of which time the subject of this review purchased his brother's interest. The homestead originally comprised one hundred and seventy-two acres and to this Mr. Patterson had added by purchase until his farm now consists of four hundred and sixty-eight acres. Mr. Patterson has planted and developed an apple orchard of one hundred and thirty-five acres, which is pronounced by experts as the finest in Jackson county. This orchard up to its fourth year was handled personally by Mr. Patterson, who did all of the pruning and bestowed upon it all the requisite care and attention. In 1908 he sold the farm now known as Sun Crest Orchard, to Dr. F. C. Page and removed to Talent, where he erected his present comfortable home on Pacific highway and owns fifty acres of land.

Mr. Patterson was married in September, 1881, to Miss Ella J. Fewel, of Sonoma county, Califonia, and to their union three children have been born: Myrtle, the wife of E. F. Jacobs, of Jackson county; Clay, at home; and Hazel, the wife of W. J. Ferns, of Jackson county. Mr. Patterson is a republican of prominence, his first public office having been that of road supervisor, the appointment being made by Judge Crowell. The state legislature subsequently passed a bill establishing the office of county road supervisor and he was elected to fill that office. In 1902 he was elected as a member of the board of county commissioners and served for two terms, or eight years and six months. Fraternally he is a member of Oregon Lodge, W. O. W., and of Talent Lodge, No. 211, I. O. O. F., serving as district deputy grand master of the latter order. He is also a member of Phoenix Lodge, A. O. U. W. Mr. Patterson is one of the prominent and substantial men of his county, having long since attained an enviable reputation for integrity and business ability and as the possessor of those virtues which make for good citizenship. He is extensively acquainted in Jackson county and is highly esteemed by all who know him.

CHARLES H. LAW, M. D., is among the successful and highly respected citizens of Union, where he has been engaged in the practice of his profession since 1907. He was born at Ravenna, Portage county, Ohio, September 5, 1873. His paternal grand-parent was Jonathan Law, who at a very early day established his home in Ohio, locating at Brimfield, where he followed farming for a livelihood. He was twice married, his first wife being Miss Mary Hotchkiss, to whom he was united December 10, 1807, and to them eight children were born. The mother of this family died September 12, 1827, and Mr. Law later married Miss Amelia Strong, who became the mother of Jay Law, the father of our subject. The maternal grandparent of Dr. Law was John Cutler, whose birth occurred in Wyndham county, Connecticut, November 27, 1799. He wedded Miss Sally Gillet, who was born in Plymouth, Litchfield county, Connecticut, March 10, 1807. To them nine children were born, one of whom, Sally Miranda, became the mother of Dr. Law of this review, her birth having occurred December 23, 1833. The father of this family died at Ravenna, Ohio, October 16, 1865, and the mother's death occurred in that city, June 3, 1889. The written record relating to so much of the history of John Cutler, his wife and family, as is here given, is recorded in the old family Bible—one of the early editions of 1794. The book, which is a valued and highly prized heirloom, is now in the possession of Dr. Law.

Jay Law, the father of Dr. Law, was engaged in farming during the earlier years of his life and later devoted his attention to contracting and building. He first established his home at Ravenna, Ohio, and from that place removed to Wichita, Kansas, with his family. Three years later they removed to Dallas, Texas, where they resided for one year, and in 1890 the family settled at Guthrie, Oklahoma, where Mr. Law has since discontinued contracting and building and is now engaged in agricultural pursuits. In the family were four children, all of whom are now living.

Dr. Charles H. Law, the youngest member of this family, received his early education in the public schools of Ravenna, Ohio, and completed all the grades of the common schools in Wichita, Kansas, after which he was a student at Garfield University for two years. In 1898 he engaged in the study of medicine and entered the Marion Sims Beaumont College, that being the medical department of the St. Louis University, and was graduated from that institution with the degree of M. D., May 1, 1902. As a student of medicine he held high rank in his class. Immediately after his graduation he located in St. Louis, where he engaged in the general practice of medicine for one year. At the end of that period he removed to this state and located at North Powder in Union county, where he was engaged in the practice of his profession for the three following years. In 1907 he changed his location and established his home in Union, where he has since continuously devoted his time to the practice of his profession, in which he has met with very gratifying success. Dr. Law is the owner of a very beautiful farm of eleven hundred acres situated one mile east of North Powder, having a frontage on Powder river of three-quarters of a mile. In addition to this very desirable feature there are also three valuable springs of pure water upon the place, which very materially enhances its value for stock and irrigation purposes. One of the springs has an elevation of sixty feet above the buildings upon the property. At present this property is under cultivation, being used as a grain and alfalfa farm. Dr. Law, however, intends later to make of this property a modern, up-to-date stock ranch, for which it is so well adapted.

Dr. Law was united in marriage November 2, 1895, to Miss Lilly L. Taylor, of Marion county, Iowa. She is a daughter of William H. and Henrietta (Sylvester) Taylor, of Van Buren county, Iowa, the former, being one of the first white children born in that state. To him and his wife nine children were born, two of whom died in infancy. Mrs. Law's paternal grandfather was Samuel Taylor, of Illinois. The family is of Scotch descent and at a very early day located in Kentucky. Of the descendants of Samuel Taylor have been many early pioneers

DR. AND MRS. CHARLES H. LAW

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASTOR
TILD

of Illinois, Kansas and Iowa. Mrs. Law's maternal grandparents, Dixon and Ann (Johnson) Sylvester, were natives of Delaware. To Dr. Law and wife one child has been born, Charles J., who is still under the parental roof and has taken a very deep interest in wireless telegraphy, having a modern and well equipped plant constructed on the top of the family residence in Union. Of this new and interesting phase of communication he is making a systematic and technical study.

Fraternally Dr. Law is a member of the Masonic lodge and also of the chapter. He likewise belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America and has served in the office of mayor of Union for one term, in 1909. Mrs. Law is a member of the Eastern Star. The Doctor is regarded as one of the enterprising and desirable citizens of Union and he and his family are held in high esteem. He is a man of great resourcefulness and stands high both in business and professional circles.

FRANK B. ROOD is numbered among the successful and enterprising farmers of Coos county. His excellent ranch of one hundred and twenty-five acres is located on the north fork of the Coos river, where he is engaged in general agricultural pursuits. He was born in New York state, May 1, 1882, and is the son of Alva and Kate (Knapp) Rood, both of whom were natives of New York. In that state they were married and continued to live for the eleven years immediately following their wedding. At the end of that period they removed to Michigan and settled upon a beautiful farm, where they have since continued to reside. To them four children were born: Frank B., of this review; Vernon K., residing on the south branch of the Coos river; Winifred, the wife of H. L. Russell, who resides at Catching Inlet; and Mildred, who is engaged in teaching music at North Bend.

Frank B. Rood was reared in his father's home and received his early education in the public schools of Nashville, Michigan. He was later graduated from the high school and subsequently was graduated from the State Normal College of Ypsilanti. He was engaged in teaching school in Michigan for two years, after which he removed to California, settling in Los Angeles, and there was engaged in teaching for one year, after which time he removed to Oregon and settled at North Bend. He became at once identified with the educational interests of that place and was one of the prominent factors in the organization of the high school at North Bend, of which he was the principal for two successive years. In 1906 he purchased three hundred and forty acres of land on the south branch of the Coos river, which he continued to improve and cultivate for five years. He then sold the property at a handsome profit and purchased one hundred and twenty-five acres several miles up the north branch of the Coos river from Marshfield, seventy acres of the property consisting of fine bottom land. He moved upon this place and has continued to improve and cultivate the land until today his beautiful ranch is one of the best of its class in his portion of the state.

On September 26, 1904, Mr. Rood was united in marriage to Miss Ethel Witte, who was born in Michigan, March 1, 1883, and is the only daughter of George and Mary Witte, both of whom were natives of that state. Mrs. Rood is a high-school graduate and also a graduate of the Normal College of Ypsilanti, Michigan. She is a musician of marked ability, having taught music for some years previous to her marriage. Her parents celebrated their marriage in Michigan and there continued to live until 1902, at which time they removed to Oregon and settled at North Bend, where Mr. Witte at once engaged in the general grocery business, in which he continued to be successful for two years. He then disposed of his establishment and moved to the south fork of the Coos river, where he purchased two hundred acres of choice agricultural land, upon which he established his home and has since continued to live. He is also the owner of two fine residence properties and nine valuable business lots in North Bend. Mr. and Mrs. Rood are the parents of a son, Leonard L., who was born January 12, 1908.

Mr. Rood is a member of the republican party and also belongs to the Grange. He and his wife are both affiliated with the Presbyterian church. Mr. Rood is one of the highly respected, enterprising and successful farmers of the Coos Bay district and is a man who readily gives his assistance to the advancement of every public enterprise which seeks to improve the moral and educational condition of the people of his county and state.

JACOB EDWARD BROLLIER. There is no better example of rapid and substantial growth such as is common in the Pacific coast country than Seaside. While it has all the advantages of location and outdoor life and freedom common to the summer resort, it is at the same time an enterprising city with splendid business interests, enterprising men controlling many important commercial and industrial interests. Among this number is Jacob Edward Brollier, senior member of the firm of Brollier & Haley, painters and contractors. The firm deals in paints, oils and varnishes and takes contracts for paper hanging and calcimining, and the business is steadily growing. He is one of Oregon's native sons, his birth having occurred in Astoria, October 15, 1863. His education was acquired in the common schools and when his course was completed his first work was in carpentering. He followed that trade in and near Astoria for about twenty years and aided in the construction of many important buildings in the northwestern section of the state. The capital that he acquired during that period enabled him, in 1907, to embark in the paint and oil business at Seaside. He was alone in the conduct of the trade for two years, at the end of which time he admitted Alfred H. Haley to a partnership, which relation still maintains under the firm name of Brollier & Haley. They do an extensive painting contracting business, also paper hanging and calcimining, and a liberal patronage is accorded them. They are well qualified for the various kinds of work and under the supervision of the proprietors the work carried on by their employes is most satisfactory.

On the 15th of September, 1902, Mr. Brollier was united in marriage to Miss Della Peterman, who was born in Columbia county, Pennsylvania, and is a daughter of William B. Peterman. Mr. Brollier has spent practically his entire life in Clatsop county and has been well known and prominent in lodge work, his acquaintance in fraternal connections extending throughout the state. He is a valiant member of the Knights of Pythias and the beneficent spirit of that order finds exemplification in his relations with his fellowmen. His political allegiance is given to the republican party and he received presidential appointment to the office of postmaster at Seaside, which position he filled for two years. He was also deputy sheriff of Clatsop county in 1891-2.

GEORGE W. JACKSON is a native son of Oregon, his birth having occurred in Curry county on April 17, 1864. He is the son of John James and Margaret A. (Harrison) Jackson, the former a native of Cork, Ireland, his birth having occurred March 20, 1815, while the latter was born in Kentucky, March 17, 1825. As young people they moved with their parents to Oregon and later celebrated their wedding at Empire, Coos county. The father when a boy of eleven years engaged as a sailor and continued in that occupation and later as captain, sailing the Great Lakes in 1837 and for many years thereafter. He finally started for the Pacific coast, making the journey around the Horn and reaching San Francisco in 1849. In 1856 he settled at Coos Bay and there became the pioneer pilot on Coos Bay bar. In that business he continued until the time of his retirement from the life of a sailor. He shortly afterward settled in Empire, where he spent the remaining years of his life, his death occurring on October 18, 1901, when he was eighty-seven years of age. His wife also died at Empire, April 20, 1907. In early life she crossed the plains with her parents and settled in Oregon in October, 1852. To her belongs the distinction of having been the mother of the first white child born in Coos county and also in her home occurred the death of the first white child in that county. During the early days of her womanhood she was successfully engaged in the operation of a boarding house, which consisted of a tent pitched under a tree, where now is built the city of Empire. At that time no dwelling house had been built in Coos county. She was the mother of eleven children, five of whom are still living: Lyman, of Marshfield; Mrs. Emily O. Saunders, of Empire, who was born April 24, 1854, and who was the first white child born in Coos county; Andrew J., of Montesano, Washington; Charles H., of Marshfield; and George W.

George W. Jackson was reared in his parents' home and received his early education in the public schools of the district in which he lived. He remained under the parental roof for forty-three years, during which time, however, he had started in business for himself at the age of sixteen years and since that time has been engaged in various occupations at different points throughout the state of Oregon. He is the owner of very valuable property in Empire, where he now resides.

His political affiliation is with the socialist party and he is at present a member of the town board of Empire and also a member of the Catholic church. He is one of the well known and influential citizens of Empire and a man always interested in the development and improvement of the business and educational interests of his county and state.

HENRY F. BAILEY is postmaster and since 1907 has conducted a general merchandise store at Provolt. He was previously engaged in mining, being thus employed in Oregon from early manhood up to the time he embarked in the mercantile trade, with the exception of one year spent in California. He was born in Jackson county, Oregon, August 8, 1870, a son of G. W. and Talitha J. (Norman) Bailey. The father journeyed from the east to Oregon in 1852 with three other men, looking for gold and spending a considerable time in Josephine and Jackson counties. He then returned home and with his family migrated across the plains with ox teams and settled in Jacksonville, where the father took up a claim of one hundred and sixty acres on Foot creek.

It was upon this homestead that Henry F. Bailey was born and reared. He received his education in the district schools and after attaining his majority went to California where he worked for one year, after which he returned to Oregon and has since made his home here. He followed the occupation of a miner throughout his younger days, retiring from that pursuit in 1907, when he engaged in the mercantile business which he is now carrying on with satisfactory results.

Mr. Bailey was married, in 1895, to Miss Josie Warden, a native of Oregon, and to their union five children have been born, all of whom are living at home, namely, Fern, Arthur, Harold, Arnold and Revilo. In his political affiliations Mr. Bailey is a democrat and is one of the few members of that party who has held office during the administration of President Taft. Fraternally he belongs to the Woodmen of the World, of which he is a popular member. He is extensively known throughout the community in which he lives, where by his many excellent traits of character he has formed an extremely large number of acquaintances and close personal friends. He is one of the prominent men of his town, is active in all of its affairs, exerts himself to the utmost in forwarding its enterprises and encouraging new citizens to settle there. He is of an optimistic turn of mind, having great faith in the future of his locality and of the state in general.

G. V. QUERNER. Agricultural pursuits have much of the time engaged the attention of G. V. Querner, who owns and operates a fine farm of one hundred and fourteen acres, located two miles east of Amity, where he makes a specialty of hop-raising. He was born in Saxony, Germany, on December 31, 1852, and is a son of John and Dorothy (Duetch) Querner, who were natives of the same province in which they spent their entire lives. Of their marriage there were born four sons, of whom our subject is the youngest, the others in order of birth being as follows: Ferdinand, who is deceased; Herman, who is living in Texas; and William, who is also deceased.

The education of G. V. Querner was pursued in the common schools of his native land until he had attained the age of fourteen years, when he went into a machine shop, applying himself to the mastery of this trade until he was twenty. In compliance with the requirements of the German government he then entered the army, spending three years as gunner in the artillery. During that time he served in the Franco-Prussian war, participating in some of the most severe battles of that bitter conflict. Immediately following his discharge at the close of hostilities he decided to come to America, believing that here he would find better opportunities for advancement. He took passage for the United States in 1874 from Hamburg and upon his arrival in New York, made his way straight to Texas, locating at Waco, near which place he engaged in farming for about seventeen years. At the expiration of that time he became a resident of Oregon, settling near Dayton, where he continued to follow agricultural pursuits for about nine years, then removing to town he opened a saloon which he conducted for two years. From Dayton he came to Amity, operating a saloon here for about eleven years, at the end of which time he disposed of his business and located on the farm where he now lives. During the period of his residence on his homestead Mr. Querner has made extensive improvements thereon, having erected a good residence and substantial barns and out-buildings, that he has kept in the very best of repair. In connection with diversified farming he is devoting considerable attention to hop culture, which, conducted according to his method, has proven to be a very lucrative undertaking. He has twenty acres of his home place devoted to hops and has built a hop house that is supplied with all necessary equipment for the pursuit of this industry. Besides his fine homestead Mr. Querner owns eighteen acres of land on the other side of Amity, where he has a hop yard of eleven acres. Both of these properties are under a high state of cultivation and are very valuable.

In 1882 Mr. Querner consummated his arrangements for a home of his own by his marriage to Miss Anna Schramm, and they have become the parents of six children: Emma, the wife of Howard Jones, of Polk county; Alvina, who is at home; Anna, the wife of Edward Howard, who is living in the vicinity of Amity; and Mary, Albertina and Lewis, all of whom are at home.

In matters of faith the family are Lutherans and politically Mr. Querner is a republican, but he does not actively participate in local governmental affairs. He is one of the highly prosperous and estimable citizens of Yamhill county, where he has manifested those qualities in the conduct of his undertakings that entitle him to be numbered among the capable and intelligent ranchmen.

CHARLES RAYMOND PHILLIPS. Mr. Phillips is the owner of one of the rich and well located ranches consisting of one hundred and ten acres situated on Big Applegate creek in Jackson county, this state. He is a native Oregonian, his birth having occurred on May 19, 1875, in the house now used as the Buncom postoffice, on Little Applegate creek. He is the son of Samuel and Elizabeth (Wade) Phillips. His father emigrated to Oregon from Illinois in 1850, crossing the plains with ox teams, and his mother also, when a child, crossed the plains with her parents. Samuel Phillips on reaching this state filed upon a government homestead located on Little Applegate creek and later preempted the property now known as the Arthur Kleinhammer farm. Combining these two properties as his real-estate holdings he engaged at once in the stock business, in which he was very successful from the beginning. In the midst of his years of prosperity he met with the great misfortune of losing his eyesight which compelled his removal from the ranch and his withdrawal from all business cares. For sometime thereafter he was a resident of Ashland, at which place Mrs. Phillips passed away, and later he removed to Jacksonville and there continued to make his home during the remainder of his life.

Charles Raymond Phillips was reared in his father's home and educated in the public schools of the district in which he lived. His father being extensively engaged in the cattle business, Mr. Phillips became, as his heir, the natural successor and from his earliest boyhood has been constantly identified with this business, the earliest memories of his life having to do with the ponies, the saddle and the cattle. He remained at home with his father until fifteen years of age, when, starting in life for himself, he found employment among the ranches in the state, spending the early years of his young manhood in riding the range wherever stock was being raised, on the plains or on the mountain steeps. In the year 1902 he purchased his present home site of one hundred and ten acres, located on Big Applegate creek, and here he has continued to maintain his residence and is engaged in the business of farming and stock raising.

Mr. Phillips was united in marriage to Miss Edna McKee, in the year 1900, she being the daughter of Adelbert D. McKee, of whom a sketch appears elsewhere in this work. To Mr. and Mrs. Phillips four children have been born, Wretha Fern, Ora Vernon, Emmett Raymond and Edna Leona. Mr. Phillips is affiliated with the republican party and is a loyal supporter of the principles of this political organization. Having spent his entire life in the cattle and ranch business he is one of the recognized authorities in that line in this part of Jackson county. He is a thrifty, reliable and enterprising business man and always associated with measures of a public nature looking to the improvement of the conditions of the people of his locality.

ENOS RHOTEN is one of the well known characters of Oregon, a typical miner of the old school, a ranchman and a merchant, having his residence in the Applegate valley in Jackson county, this state. He was born in Iowa on the 15th of February, 1852, his parents being John and Elizabeth (Hodson) Rhoten. They crossed the plains with ox teams, emigrating to Oregon in 1859 and making their first location in this far western state in Jackson county.

Enos Rhoten began his career as a miner when he was a boy of only ten years of age. At that early time in life he worked in placer mines in Jackson county, wherever his keen young eye and native miner's instinct directed him to prospective ground in stream or mountain gulch. His whole heart was in his occupation and no phase of the miner's life escaped his attention. He very early learned to follow the leads of placer deposits as he panned in the virgin sands and gravel deposits to be found scattered along the rivers and at the mountains' base. Very early in his career he came to be known as a successful finder of pockets and has the reputation of having taken from one of these rich pockets one hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars in large and small nuggets of pure virgin gold. He is still an enthusiastic seeker and a successful finder of the deposits of placer gold and is recognized throughout this state as being at the very head of his associates in this line of industry. In addition to his occupation as a gold miner he owns and operates a fine ranch of one hundred and sixty acres located in the Applegate valley in Jackson county, upon which he has built his home and where he also conducts a general merchandising store.

In the year 1900 Mr. Rhoten was united in marriage to Mrs. Gale, by whom he has one child, Ida May. He is affiliated with the democratic party but in no sense can he be called a partisan man, being liberal in his views. Fraternally he is identified with the Eagles.

Enos Rhoten is perhaps one of the best known men throughout western Oregon and the gold-bearing mountain country of the Pacific coast. His life having been devoted to the industry of mining principally and he has been brought in contact with every phase of the business. From the experience of a lone prospector in a wilderness waste, he has become acquainted with every detail and operation of the industry in its most modern procedures. He has lived a useful life and in his line has contributed his full share to the development of this state and to the increase of the nation's wealth.

JOHN SMITH LAMAR, who is a well known druggist of Tillamook, has been identified with the commercial activities of this city for the past thirteen years. His birth occurred near Fulton in Callaway county, Missouri, on the 30th of November, 1864, his parents being B. B. and Mary T. (Dunlop) Lamar. The father was born in Cloverport, Hancock county, Kentucky, while the mother's birth occurred in the vicinity of Fulton, Missouri. Our subject is the eldest of the five children born unto Mr. and Mrs. Lamar and was named after an uncle, John Smith Lamar, who was a captain of a regiment of Louisville mounted cavalry during the Civil war. The other members of the family are as follows: James D. and R. S., both residents of Fulton, Missouri; Benjamin D., who is in business in Tillamook; and Susan K., the wife of Clarence Craghead, also of Fulton, Missouri.

Reared on the farm where he was born, during his boyhood and early youth John Smith Lamar was sent to the district schools, where he acquired a thorough knowledge of the common branches. Being the eldest son, he remained at home assisting his father in the operation of the farm until he was about twenty-two, when he purchased a grocery store at Auxvasse, Missouri, which he conducted for two years. In common with the majority of young men he desired to begin his active business life in a new country, so disposing of his store he came to Oregon, where he lived with an uncle, Robert Dunlop, at Jacksonville. Mr. Dunlop was one of the pioneer miners of Oregon, having installed the first hydraulic mine in the southern part of the state. When a youth of nineteen years Mr. Dunlop enlisted in the Mexican war and in later life was a member of the body that put down the uprising among the Rogue River Indians. Upon his arrival there Mr. Lamar engaged in freighting, between Medford and Jacksonville. He followed this for a year and then accepted a position with Kubli & Son, who were engaged in the general mercantile business at Applegate. He withdrew from this position at the end of two years and returned to Missouri for a visit. When he came back in the spring of 1890 he went into business in North Yamhill, where he remained for eight years. In the fall of 1898 he came to Tillamook and went into business here. He subsequently opened a drug store in the spring of 1900 and later erected the building he now occupies. He has a large and well selected stock of both drugs and sundries, maintaining a fine prescription department, and is enjoying an excellent patronage. Mr. Lamar has met with great financial success in his various

ENOS RHOTEN

THE
PUBLIC
ASTOR
TILDEN

enterprises and owns some town lots in Tillamook as well as timber lands.

On the 4th of March, 1890, Mr. Lamar was united in marriage to Miss Ella A. Galwith, of Fulton, Missouri, and a daughter of P. F. and Susan E. (Smith) Galwith. Her father was for many years engaged in agricultural pursuits in the vicinity of Fulton. The father and mother are deceased. Two sons and one daughter have been born unto Mr. and Mrs. Lamar. In order of birth they are as follows: Paris Cleveland, Howard Loring and Mary Emily.

In matters politic Mr. Lamar is a democrat, but does not take a prominent part in municipal affairs. Fraternally he is identified with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks, and the Artisans. Mr. Lamar has many friends in Tillamook, his genial nature and liberality making him most popular with all of his associates.

REV. L. B. AKERS is one of the successful farmers located on Bull creek in Josephine county, this state. His birth occurred in Morgan county, Illinois, on the 4th of January, 1853, his parents being George H. and Julia E. (Harmon) Akers, the former a native of Louisville, Kentucky, and the latter of Mount Carmel, Illinois. They were married in Jacksonville, Illinois, where Mrs. Akers as a young woman was for some time engaged in teaching school. After their marriage they located in Morgan county, Illinois, and in 1859 removed to Goodhue county, Minnesota, where Mr. Akers passed away in 1892. His widow, now eighty-eight years of age, is residing with her daughter in Anoka county, Minnesota.

Rev. L. B. Akers was reared at home and acquired his preliminary education in the public common schools. After attaining the years of his majority he was engaged in farming until he was thirty-four years of age, at which time he entered the ministry of the Methodist Episcopal church and for six years continued in the work of an itinerant minister of that denomination. At this time, his health having become seriously impaired, he was compelled to give up his work as a traveling member of his conference and for seven years thereafter lived a somewhat retired life engaged in light farming, to which he added the chicken industry. In November, 1903, he removed to Oregon and located on Granite land five miles from Grants Pass in Josephine county, where he remained for the brief period of one season only, after which he exchanged this land for his present home ranch comprising one hundred and sixty acres on Bull creek, where he now resides. This beautiful piece of ground is located immediately at the base of the mountains at the head of Bull creek. To the development and cultivation of this fine property he is now giving the major portion of his time and attention. His health has sufficiently improved so that he is enabled to fill appointments in the pulpit at various near-by preaching places in the surrounding country.

In November, 1883, Rev. Akers was united in marriage to Miss Elsie R. Spaulding, of Pierce county, Wisconsin. He is a republican in politics, though he has never sought political preferment at any time. He is in every way one of the desirable citizens of the county in which he lives and his reputation and character as a Christian citizen are such as to reflect credit upon his associations with the people of his state and county.

GUY ODELL SMITH, one of the more recent acquisitions to the legal fraternity of Salem, where he has engaged in practice for the past two years, was born in Polk county, seven miles west of this city, in 1882, and is a son of Paul A. and Susan A. (Higgins) Smith. The maternal grandfather was a native of Massachusetts and the maternal grandmother was a native of the state of Maine, whence they came in 1851 to Oregon, locating on a donation claim in Polk county. There in 1853 the mother was born, continuing to live on her father's ranch until her marriage. In the acquirement of her education she attended the public schools of Polk county, and in 1876, at the age of twenty-three years, she became the wife of Paul A. Smith. Four children were born to them, as follows: Nellie B., the wife of R. L. Antrim, of Portland, who has been a postal clerk on the Southern Pacific Railroad for the past five years; Ida May, who is at home; Guy Odell, our subject; and Lorena H., the wife of G. H. Thompson, a farmer of Marion county.

Reared at home, in the acquirement of his preliminary education Guy Odell Smith attended the public schools. After the completion of his course he was enrolled in Willamette University, this city, where he pursued a course in liberal arts for five years. Having decided to become an attorney he subsequently matriculated in the legal department of the same university, being graduated two years later, in 1910, with the degree of LL. B. As soon as he was admitted to the bar, Mr. Smith became associated with R. F. Shields in the practice of his profession and is making very favorable progress in the establishment of a reputation as a representative of the law. He has been given the advantages of an excellent equipment, added to which he is endowed with fine mental faculties, a ready and fluent flow of language and more than average oratorical skill, and these, with his earnest manner, fine presence and poise of mind, should make him a power in his profession. He is well known in the city, as he has passed his entire life here and is descended from its early pioneers, so is not meeting with the difficulty that confronts an absolute stranger in building up a practice. Although he has maintained an office for less than two years, he has a very good following and numbers among his clients some of the city's best business men.

Fraternally Mr. Smith is affiliated with the Loyal Order of Moose, the Maccabees and the Brotherhood of American Yeomen, and in politics he is a republican. He has always taken an earnest interest in the work of the State Oratorical Association and in 1909 and 1910 he was president of this organization. Mr. Smith has many friends in Salem, who have watched with interest the development of his career and prophesy for him a most promising future.

WILLIAM HANNA, who is residing about ten miles west of Yamhill, was born in Venango, Pennsylvania, on the 25th of December, 1825. His grandparents were natives of the north of Ireland and his grandmother, whose family name was Stewart, was of Scotch descent. The father of William Hanna was Stewart Hanna, who was born in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, July 15, 1798, and was the third of seven children, the others being: William, James and John, deceased; Mrs. Mary Gilmore, who died in Pennsylvania, leaving three children; Mrs. Nancy Tollman, who became the mother of four children and is now deceased; and Mrs. Jane Hayes, also deceased. Mr. Hanna's mother bore the maiden name of Sarah Hassan. She was born June 9, 1800, in Venango, Pennsylvania, a daughter of Hugh and Mary Hassan, who were natives of Pennsylvania, and had a family of five children: John, now deceased, who was the father of five sons that became soldiers in the Union army; Sarah, and three who have passed away. John Hassan was a volunteer soldier in the War of 1812. His father served as a soldier in the Revolutionary war and was a prisoner aboard the Jersey prison ship for three years. Among the engagements in which he participated was the battle of Trenton, in which he was seriously wounded. To Stewart and Sarah Hanna two children were born: William; and Sarah J. McCoy, who died September 8, 1854, leaving two children, a son, and Mrs. Mary C. McConnell, a resident of Grove City, Pennsylvania. The parents crossed the plains to the west in 1848, making the journey from Illinois and traveling day after day over hot stretches of sand and through the mountain passes until they finally reached Dayton, Oregon. Here they settled on a donation claim of six hundred and forty acres and held the land for many years, but before his death Mr. Hanna sold it.

It was two years after the arrival of the family in the northwest that William Hanna followed his parents to the Pacific coast country, where he has since made his home. In 1856, in Yamhill county, occurred his marriage to Martha A. Holdridge, a native of Illinois. She left her native state with her parents, Frank and Martha (Hibbard) Holdridge, and came to Oregon in 1848. The family settled on a six hundred and forty acre donation claim which Mr. Holdridge had taken up near Dayton and here they continued to reside during the remainder of their lives. The death of the mother occurred in 1852, while the father passed away later.

At the age of twenty-one William Hanna started out in life for himself and began working at the carpenter's trade. This work proved so profitable and agreeable that he has engaged in it more or less ever since, varying his regular work as carpenter with employment as draughtsman and millwright. After some time he took up a homestead claim, which he turned from barren soil into productive land, and for a number of years he lived there. Even this did not interrupt his working at his trade and for seven years he also worked in a sawmill. He afterward sold the homestead and bought one hundred and sixty acres of land for his only son, Ralph E., with whom he now makes his home. The son is engaged in the dairy business and has some timber interests. Mr. Hanna's two older children are: Mrs. America M. Stroble, whose husband is chief engineer in the Union Machine Works in Portland; and Mrs. Jennie L. Wheeler, who is employed in the Portland postoffice and whose husband is a newspaper man of exceptional ability.

In politics Mr. Hanna favors the broad humanitarian principles of the socialist party but has never taken an active part by seeking nomination to any office. As one of the assistants of Mr. Joseph Gaston he held a position of importance during the surveying of the Southern Pacific Railroad. Throughout his career he has consistently applied himself to the duties of his chosen trade and at the same time has profitably carried on various outside interests.

U. J. LEHMAN, who is engaged in the undertaking business in Salem, was born near Defiance, Ohio, August 8, 1868. His parents were J. B. and Rebecca (Arnold) Lehman, both of whom were natives of Ohio. The parents removed to Oregon in 1873, locating on a farm five miles east of Salem. The father is now living retired in Idaho and the mother is deceased. In their family were nine children, eight of whom are yet living.

U. J. Lehman received his early education in the common schools of Marion county, Oregon, and later attended Monmouth College for one year. On starting out in life for himself he began working in a planing mill in Salem, where he remained for seventeen years. He then worked as a machinist in an Oregon paint factory for two years, after which he took up the undertaking business in partnership with a Mr. Rigdon. After one year he dissolved partnership with Mr. Rigdon and purchased an interest in the Clough Undertaking Establishment, with which he is now connected. He has been in his present location for two and one-half years and has an excellent business standing among the best classes of people. Also he has mining interests in Marion county.

In 1896 Mr. Lehman wedded Miss Lydia Vandevort, a native of Polk county, and to them two children have been born, Russell and Robert Milton. In his political views Mr. Lehman is a prohibitionist, and fraternally he is identified with the Knights of Pythias, the Woodmen of the World, the Artisans and the Yeomen. He is a very energetic and enterprising man, with a large social and business acquaintance, and has gained the high regard and esteem of all with whom he has been brought in contact. Both he and Mrs. Lehman are members of the Methodist Episcopal church and he has been connected with the First Methodist Episcopal choir for the past eighteen years.

JAMES J. BROWNING, a well known real-estate dealer of Springfield, Oregon, where he has been in business since 1907, settled in Oregon in 1901 and has since been prominently identified with its development and upbuilding. He was born in Illinois in 1847, a son of J. D. and Arena (Matthews) Browning. The father was a native of Tennessee and the mother was born in Illinois, their marriage occurring in the latter state in 1835. To the parents were born five children: George W., of Renfrow, Oklahoma; Daniel E., deceased; T. J., of Lewis, Kansas, where he is engaged in the banking business; Sarah, the widow of John M. Rogland, of Oceola, Missouri; and James J., of this review.

The last named was reared and received his education principally in the schools of Illinois, which he attended in winter, being employed on the farm during other times of the year. By taste and training he inclined toward farming and from the time he was thirteen years of age until he was thirty-two he lived on the ranch and spent a great deal of his time in the saddle. When he attained his majority he purchased forty acres of land in Missouri, which he kept for one year. He also owned some cattle and traded in cattle and fed stock for the market. Early in his career he bought stock for a government contractor to supply meat to the Indians. He was for seven years a cowboy foreman in Indian Territory, now Oklahoma. He removed from that state to Missouri, where he had previously lived, and again engaged in the handling of live stock on a small scale on his own account. In 1884 he removed to Stevens county, Kansas, where he continued to follow agricultural pursuits and dealing in stock, and in 1890 went to Sumner, Kansas, where he lived until in 1893, when, on the 16th of February, when the Cherokee lands were opened for settlement, he joined in the general exodus to take up homesteads and obtained a good quarter section of land. He lived on this farm, which he cultivated until the spring of 1901, when he came to Oregon and settled in Springfield. The reason for his removal to this state was ill health, and he believed that the change of climate would be beneficial. In this hope he was not disappointed and his physical condition improved rapidly and he is now as hale and hearty as ever. In 1907, when he engaged in the real-estate business, Mr. Browning built a large two-story business block which after four years has advanced in value, according to his estimate, about one hundred per cent on account of the rapid growth of the city of Springfield, which has doubled in inhabitants since Mr. Browning settled there.

In 1868, in Knox, Missouri, Mr. Browning was united in marriage to Miss Adelaide Mann, a daughter of Peter J. and Maria (Elliotte) Mann, the father and mother being natives of Kentucky and Connecticut respectively. Mrs. Browning is one of three children, her brother and sister being: Virgil A., of Caldwell, Kansas; and Myriam, the widow of David Sayers, also of that city. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Browning were born two children, Anna Lee, the eldest, was born in 1869 and was educated in Kansas. After completing the literary course in the public schools of that state she was well equipped for teaching and engaged in that profession in Kansas for seven years. She is now the wife of W. C. Meyers, of Springfield, and has four children, Paul, William R., Helen and Horace. The younger daughter, Connie May, born in 1874, was also educated in the schools of Kansas, and married W. B. McKinney, now of California, by whom she has three children, Ivan B., Wanna Juanita, and Wendle W.

The political allegiance of Mr. Browning is given to the republican party but he has never been a politician in the office-seeking sense of the term. He is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, in which he takes an active interest, belonging to Springfield lodge. Both he and his wife are members of the Christian church at Springfield and assist materially in the support of that denomination, helping by their influence and personal worth to make it a power for good in the community. Like most other real-estate dealers in Oregon, Mr. Browning has faith in the possibilities and resources of his state. He is enthusiastic in his efforts to advance the interests of the community of which he is a prominent citizen and loses no opportunity to render any assistance within his power to advance the business and social interests of Springfield. He is popular and greatly respected and has an extensive acquaintance not only in Springfield but in the surrounding district.

JUDGE WREN E. CREWS is one of the competent and successful attorneys engaged in the practice of his profession in Medford, this state, in which place he has established his residence. His birth occurred in Portland on the 4th of August, 1861, his parents being John B. and Angeline (Smith) Crews, the former a native of Tennessee and the latter of Indiana. John B. Crews crossed the plains as a young man in 1852, emigrating from Missouri to this state and bringing his mother and sisters with him. His father had died some years before in the state of Missouri. He located first at Portland and here engaged in the sawmill and lumber business. His wife crossed the plains with her parents in 1846 and their family constituted a part of a large train of emigrants which suffered severely from Indian raids during their journey. On nearing the borders of this state, messengers brought news into Salem of the depredations of the Indians and the peril surrounding the train of hardy emigrants. At once the people of Salem organized a rescuing party and proceeded to the relief of their suffering fellow pioneers. The father of Mrs. Crews shortly afterward died in Cow Creek Canyon. His widow unfalteringly assumed the burden which was placed upon her shoulders by the death of her husband to provide for a large family of six boys and one girl who looked to her for support, and she proved herself equal to the occasion. Immediately after the death of her husband she filed upon a government donation claim near Salem. Here she built a home for herself and family, thus keeping the children together until the years of their maturity. John B. Crews removed to southern Oregon and has since lived at different times in various portions of the state. At present he is retired, having his home with his daughter in Santa Cruz county, California, at the age of eighty-seven. His wife closed her earthly pilgrimage in the year 1886.

Wren E. Crews was reared in his father's home, acquiring his early education in the public schools and later attending the business college of Portland. Having completed the elementary courses of English, he later became a student of law at the Thornton Law School, which at that time was a part of the State University, and from this institution he was graduated with the class of 1885. Following his graduation he began the practice of law in the office of Gerin & Gilbert, where he remained for four successive years and at the end of that period formed a copartnership with John M. Gerin, with whom he was associated in the successful practice of his profession for a period of five years in Seattle, Washington. In 1896 he went to Alaska, where he accepted the position of attorney for the Perseverance Mining Company and the Ebner Gold Mining Company. While there he became attorney also for various other mining companies. His residence in Alaska extended over a period of ten years, after which, in the year 1905, he returned to his Seattle office and resumed the practice of law with his former associate, continuing his residence in that city until 1910, after which he removed to Medford, Oregon, where he established his home and has since been engaged in the active practice of his profession.

In 1887 Judge Crews was united in marriage to Miss Louisa Rush, a daughter of Richard and Nancy Ann (Breeding) Rush, both of whom were pioneers of Oregon, the Rush family crossing the plains from Arkansas early in 1852. The members of the Breeding family, however, emigrated to this state in 1846.

Politically Judge Crews is affiliated with the democratic party and for two terms was elected to the office of police judge of Pendleton. He was also a candidate for the superior court judgeship while in Seattle and during that campaign he was far in advance of his ticket but, in company with the majority of the candidates of his party, he suffered defeat in the election. During his residence in Alaska he was the organizer of the Elks lodge of Juneau and was made a life member of that lodge on April 10, 1901, a book of membership bound in solid silver being presented to him as a token of the high appreciation in which he is held by his brother members. He has been three times exalted ruler and also district deputy grand exalted ruler for one term. He is still a member of Juneau Lodge, No. 420, B. P. O. E. Mrs. Crews is a member of the Christian church. Judge Crews, though a recent addition to the population of the thriving city of Medford, is nevertheless one of the vital civic forces and a most welcome and desirable citizen in the community in which he has established his home.

ORVILLE D. ISAMINGER, who owns and operates an excellent farm of three hundred and twenty acres, in Umatilla county, was born in Ohio, February 24, 1879. He is a son of John and Kate (Lavine) Isaminger, both of whom were natives of Ohio and resided in that state until 1885, when they removed to Nebraska and in 1904 went to Washington, where they still reside. In their family were seven children, five of whom are yet living.

Orville D. Isaminger received a public-school education and remained at home, working on his father's farm until he was twenty-one years of age. At that date he began farming in partnership with his father and continued the same until 1904, when he came to Oregon. In 1906 he settled in Umatilla county, where he has since resided. In 1911 he purchased his present farm of three hundred and twenty acres, for which he paid twenty thousand dollars. He engages in general farming and is meeting with excellent success.

In 1907 Mr. Isaminger wedded Miss Bertha K. Hudemann, who was born in Umatilla county, July 10, 1886, a daughter of Julius and Margaret (Eggers) Hudemann, of Pendleton. Mr. and Mrs. Isaminger are the parents of one son, Bertrand Duval, who was born August 6, 1909.

In politics Mr. Isaminger is a republican, and socially he is identified with Stockville Lodge, No. 196, A. F. & A. M., at Stockville, Nebraska; with Pendleton Lodge, No. 32, I. O. O. F.; and is also a member of the Farmers Union, No. 21. Mrs. Isaminger is affiliated with the Lutheran church. Mr. Isaminger has been connected with farming the greater part of his life and has demonstrated the fact that he has great ability in that line of work. He is progressive and energetic and has won many friends throughout the community during his residence here.

MARCUS BURRIS SMITH. A native son of Oregon and for many years actively identified with the development of the magnificent ranch lands in this state is Marcus Burris Smith. He was born in Polk county, this state, July 7, 1863, and his parents were Rev. John B. and Emily (Thorp) Smith, both natives of Missouri. The father was a Christian preacher in his native state and married his wife there. They crossed the plains together in 1853, making the long journey with ox teams, and arrived in Monmouth, Polk county, six months after the beginning of their trip. Here John Smith took up a donation claim of three hundred and twenty acres and his wife one of similar extent. The mother died when the subject of this review was in his infancy and the father remained upon the land until 1870, when he came to Douglas county. He retained the title to his six hundred and forty acres in Polk county for seven or eight years after his removal from that district. On coming to Douglas county he located nine miles north of Myrtle Creek and bought one hundred and sixty acres of land which he improved and developed until the time of his death in 1901, at the age of eighty-five years.

MR. AND MRS. O. D. ISAMINGER

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY

M. B. Smith was reared at home and educated in the common schools of his district until his nineteenth year. In 1882 he began life as a wage-earner and engaged in ranch work in the Missouri bottoms, Douglas county, where he has continued to reside up to the present time. During his years of work at ranching he has acquired one of the finest tracts of land in the valley. He is the proprietor of fifty-two acres of improved and developed ranch lands. He has twelve acres planted with prune trees fourteen years old, constituting one of the best producing orchards in the district.

In 1886 Mr. Smith was united in marriage to Miss Mary Adams, a native of this county and a daughter of Henry A. Adams, who came to Oregon from Missouri in 1852. They are the parents of three children: Jessie May, who married Frank W. Miller, of Detroit, Oregon; James Clifford, who lives at home; and Laura Izetta, the wife of G. F. Hamilton, of Roseburg, Oregon.

Mr. Smith gives his political allegiance to the democratic party but has never sought public office or put himself forward in any way in local affairs. He is a member of Myrtle Creek Camp, No. 404, W. O. W., and is a prominent member of the Presbyterian church, which his wife also attends. He has reduced ranching and prune farming to a scientific basis and is himself an expert on these subjects. His knowledge is practical and definite and is the foundation of his success in his chosen line of activity.

GOTTLIEB WYSS. Probably no young man of Tillamook county has more wisely or capably directed his energies than Gottlieb Wyss, who, although he has only attained the age of twenty-six years, has through his own efforts attained a position that entitles him to be classed among the affluent agriculturists of the community. He was born in Switzerland on August 14, 1885, and is a son of Gottlieb and Susanna Wyss, natives of the same country. When he was a lad of thirteen years the family emigrated to the United States, locating in Oregon, where the father purchased the ranch now occupied by our subject. There Mr. Wyss passed away in 1899, but the mother lived until 1905. Unto this couple had been born the following children: Susanna, the wife of Julius Hauschel, now living in the state of Washington; Rosie, who married Benjamin Jacob; Gottlieb, our subject; Alfred, who is deceased; Margaret, the wife of Peter Becker, of Pendleton, Oregon; Peter, who is living in Cook county, this state; and Christ, John, Fred, Anna and Ulrich.

Gottlieb Wyss received a common-school education in his native country, after which he turned his energies to farming. Being the eldest son in a large family, much devolved upon him, his responsibilities being greatly increased after the death of his father, at which time he was only a youth of fourteen. He was a capable lad, however, possessing the executive ability and keen judgment, that enabled him to develop into the business man he is today. He still engages in the operation of his father's farm and in connection with his agricultural pursuits is making a specialty of dairying. He keeps forty-eight fine milch cows, which net him on an average three hundred dollars per month. Thrifty and of temperate habits he has acquired a very comfortable capital and recently purchased an improved ranch of one hundred and forty acres, five miles southeast of Tillamook, for twenty-nine thousand dollars.

Mr. Wyss was married on the 18th of October, 1911, to Miss Anna Curtlueb, a daughter of John and Katie Curtlueb, the former of whom is engaged in dairying in Tillamook county. He is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, belonging to the Tillamook lodge, and he votes the republican ticket. He has never taken an active part in local politics, however, always having preferred to give his undivided attention to his own affairs, in which he has met with such gratifying success.

JOHN SCHINDLER, a thrifty and enterprising farmer, residing four and one-half miles northwest of Salem, on the River road, was born in Switzerland, February 24, 1873, the son of John and Wilhelmina (Knapp) Schindler. The father came to America in 1879, locating in Salem, Oregon, and after a few months removed to a farm four and one-half miles northwest of Salem, where he purchased one hundred and ten acres, later buying two hundred and twenty and again fifty-eight acres more. He cleared and developed the land, putting up the best of improvements, and resided there until his death, in 1889. While in his native country he served for two years in the army. The mother died in Switzerland when the subject of this sketch was only five years of age and the father married again in that country, his second union being with Frena Schnebeli. By his first marriage the father had three sons: John, of this review; Emil, of Salem, Oregon; and William, of Aberdeen, Washington. Of his second marriage three daughters were born: Ida and Lena, deceased; and Anna, who is the wife of David Yantis, the owner of the Toggery Men's Furnishing Goods Company, of Salem, Oregon.

John Schindler received his education in the common schools and remained at home until the death of his father, purchasing soon thereafter the farm which he now owns, consisting of one hundred and fifteen and one-half acres. He has put up excellent improvements and makes a specialty of raising hops and grain and also feeds live stock, particularly hogs.

In 1903 Mr. Schindler was united in marriage to Miss Stina Mitchell, who is of Scotch descent, and they have an adopted daughter, Helen. He gives his political allegiance to the republican party, and he is a member of the German Reformed church and his wife, of the Presbyterian church. Fraternally he is identified with the Woodmen of the World at Salem, and his alert, energetic disposition which enables him to accomplish his ends, his kindly spirit and those sterling characteristics, which are perceptible in his business and his social life, everywhere inspire confidence and respect.

JAMES GRAVILLE. Four miles northwest of Eugene on the Irving road is located the ranch of James Graville, one of the most progressive and highly prosperous ranchmen of Lane county. He was originally a subject of England, having been born at Epworth, Isle of Axholme, Lincolnshire, on the 25th of March, 1845. His parents were Henry and Mary Ann (Standerin) Graville, likewise natives of England, where they passed their entire lives, the mother's death occurring in 1850 and that of the father in 1908. In the paternal line our subject is descended from an exceptionally long-lived family, four of his father's brothers and sisters having passed the venerable age of ninety before their demise. James Graville is the eldest of the three children born to his parents and the only son, his two sisters, Anna and Harriet, are both deceased. For his second wife Henry Graville chose Mary M. Clark, and to them were born five children: Clark, who lives in Wisconsin; William, of England; Albert, also of England; Elizabeth, of Australia; and Edward, deceased.

James Graville, who was a child of only five and a half years when his mother died, at the age of nine began earning his own living. He was placed in the service of a well-to-do yeoman of his native county, who owned and operated a farm of seven hundred acres. When he first began working he received twelve cents a day, without board, but as he was a strong, energetic youth and developed at a very early age he made rapid progress and subsequently became superintendent of the place. He later withdrew from farming and learned the brick and tile business, but as the work in the open air was more congenial he once more turned his attention to agricultural pursuits. He was employed on several farms from then until 1870 when he decided to become a citizen of the United States, so he took passage for this country, arriving here in 1871. He arrived at his destination, a village in Wisconsin, with a capital of fifteen dollars, but he had no fears regarding the future, as he was young and strong and possessed the determination of purpose and energy that open the road to success. Very soon thereafter he found employment as a farm hand, continuing to follow this line of work for three years. During that time he very pleasantly and profitably devoted his leisure hours to the study of entomology, the knowledge thus acquired having proven of incalculable value to him as an orchardist. Later he took up the machinist's trade, which he followed during the remainder of his residence in Wisconsin. From early youth he had been able to appreciate the value of thrift and diligence, having learned this lesson in the great school of experience, so he always managed to save a portion of his earnings, however small they might be. Therefore, when he decided to come to the northwest to live in 1903, he was the owner of two good farms in Wisconsin and had other interests. Disposing of his property there he traveled over a large portion of the country looking for a permanent location, finally deciding that he preferred Oregon and the section where he is now residing to any place he had visited. He invested in one hundred and twenty-six acres of land, which was partially cultivated and improved, and has ever since made this his home. The pleasant two-story residence now occupied by Mr. Graville and his family was erected before he bought the place, but during the period of his ownership he has added many other improvements. All of the barns and outbuildings are substantially constructed and provide ample shelter for both his stock and grain, and everything about the ranch is well kept up, indicating systematic supervision and good management in every detail. At various times, as his circumstances have warranted, he has installed on the place many modern conveniences and appliances, thus minimizing the labor and expediting the work, and now he has one of the most thoroughly equipped and best operated ranches in the county. Mr. Graville is a very practical man, but he is progressive in his ideas and conducts his operations in strict accordance with the most highly approved methods of the modern agriculturist and orchardist. He has a fine prune orchard of five acres and he also raises other fruit and such cereals as are used in the feeding of stock. Much of his attention is given to the breeding and raising of high grade cattle and hogs and in this he is meeting with lucrative returns as in his other pursuits. In addition to his fine ranch, he has other interests and has acquired a very comfortable competence being one of the most prosperous citizens of his community.

Mr. Graville was married in 1876 to Miss Mary Ann Bennett, a daughter of Samuel and Pamley Bennett, and to them have been born seven children: Earl, Elma and Ralph are all living in Canada; Laura received a common-school education in Wisconsin and is now living at home; Arthur was educated in the public schools of Eugene and possesses fine mechanical skill; Epha is the wife of Earl Biger, a farmer of Eugene. Frank, the oldest, died in infancy.

The family attend the Methodist Episcopal church in which the parents hold membership and Mr. Graville votes the republican ticket. While living in Wisconsin he was supervisor of his township and a member of the board of health and a school director. He is now serving as a school director but has never held any other official position since he came to Oregon. He is one of the foremost citizens of his community, however, his general efficiency and business sagacity making him a leader in every progressive public movement, while his upright principles and integrity have won for him the esteem of all with whom he has had transactions.

MATHIAS E. FURROW, who is engaged in general mercantile pursuits at Pleasant Hill, this county, where he also owns and operates a fine ranch of one hundred and sixty acres, is one of the efficient and highly prosperous business men of his community. He was born in Vermilion county, Illinois, on July 5, 1864, and is a son of Mathias and Lorana (Prather) Furrow. The father was a native of Kentucky and the mother of Indiana, but they were married in Illinois, where the father passed away in 1865. Two years after his death, the mother became the wife of William Wilcox of Ohio, and in 1869 they removed to Jackson county, Kansas. They resided there for three years, and then went to Riley county, that state, remaining there until 1892. In the latter year they became residents of Kiowa county, Kansas, where Mr. Wilcox died. In 1902, the mother came to Oregon with our subject and is now living in Eugene at the age of seventy-five years. Four children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Furrow, of whom our subject is the youngest. The others are as follows: W. T., who lives in Nowata, Oklahoma; Elizabeth, who is deceased; and John, who died in infancy. To the mother and her second husband were born five children: Alice, the wife of S. D. Clark, of Wisconsin; F. O., of Island Lake, Wisconsin; Blanche W., who married H. W. Elliott, of Eugene; and Florence and Clara, both of whom are deceased.

Mathias E. Furrow received a common-school education and was early trained to the work of the fields and care of the crops, remaining at home on the farm until he was twenty-one. Immediately after attaining his majority he homesteaded a quarter section of land in Kiowa county, Kansas, and industriously applied himself to cultivating and improving it for five years. At the end of that time he disposed of it and bought one hundred and sixty acres located in the same county, and there continued his agricultural pursuits until 1902. During that period he extended the boundaries of his farm until his holdings aggregated four hundred and sixty-five acres. He disposed of this and came to Oregon in 1902 and invested in one hundred and sixty acres of land, nine miles south of Springfield, that he still owns. In the cultivation and development of his land, Mr. Furrow has met with success and in 1907, he extended the scope of his activities by the purchase of a general store adjoining his ranch. He has ever since conducted this in connection with his agricultural pursuits and he is also the postmaster of Pleasant Hill. In addition to his fine ranch and store, he owns ten acres of land within the city limits of Eugene and some business property. He had the misfortune to have the residence on his ranch destroyed by fire in 1907, but it has since been replaced by a very pleasant and comfortable, modern house. All of the buildings on his place are substantially constructed and well cared for, ample provision having been made for the shelter of both his stock and grain. He is progressive and enterprising in whatever he does, as is evidenced by the excellent appearance of his homestead as well as his methods of conducting his store.

On the 10th of December, 1888, Mr. Furrow was married to Miss Catharine M. Meals, who was born in Butler county, Pennsylvania, on the 14th of September, 1865. She is a daughter of John and Elizabeth W. (Jack) Meals, who were born, reared and married in the Keystone state and there the father passed away on the 16th of September, 1866. The mother removed to Kiowa county, Kansas, with her children in 1886, but five years later she returned to Pennsylvania, where she died on the 28th of January, 1900. Four children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Meals, Mrs. Furrow being the youngest of the family. The others in order of birth are as follows: Meldia, the wife of J. P. McWilliams, of Bellevue, Pennsylvania; Samuel A., who lives in Pittsburg; and William Austin, who died in Kiowa county, Kansas. Mrs. Furrow was given the advantages of a very good education and for some years prior to her marriage engaged in teaching. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Furrow numbers four children, as follows: Fred A., who was born January 11, 1890, living at home and assisting his father; Louis E., who was born on the 10th of May, 1891, a graduate of the high school; Lorana E., whose birth occurred on June 23, 1893, also a graduate of the high school; and Jesse L., born September 20, 1895, now attending high school.

The family are members of the Christian church of Pleasant Hill, and Mr. Furrow votes the democratic ticket. In the development of his undertakings he has always manifested the diligence and enterprise that invariably bring success, and through his high standards and the excellent policy he has adopted in his transactions has won and retained the confidence and respect of all who have had dealings with him.

WILLIAM B. YORK. Prominent among the agriculturists who reside in the vicinity of Murphy is William B. York, a respected and representative member of Oregon's native sons. He was born in Josephine county, April 28, 1862, the son of Henry and Sara E. (Slagle) York, the former a native of Kentucky. Being of an adventurous and ambitious nature the father left his native state in 1852 and with his wife crossed the plains in that year, settling near Murphy, Josephine county, Oregon. Here he bought a squatter's right to a homestead and upon this place he has since resided.

William B. York was given a common-school education and as his tastes and rearing have been along agricultural lines, he has always followed that business and is now operating half of the original family homestead upon which he was born. He pursues a diversified system of farming and also pays a great deal of attention to stock-raising.

On October 14, 1898, Mr. York was united in marriage to Miss Josephine Knox, a native of Oregon, and they have become the parents of two children: Gladys, born August 25, 1899; and Henry L., born November 17, 1902. Mr. York is a democrat in his political views and takes a commendable interest in affairs of the state and nation. He is a man of energy and perseverance and stands very high in the community, being one of the directors of the Applegate Telephone Company. The York family has long been well and favorably known in Murphy and vicinity, where the father was one of the early settlers of the community.

WILLIAM W. ALLEN, M. D., successfully engaged in the practice of medicine and surgery in Jefferson, Marion county, was born in Portersville, California, October 22, 1876, the son of J. L. and M. J. (Sallee) Allen. The father, a horticulturist by occupation, was a native of Missouri and in 1852, crossing the plains, he located in California, near Stockton, and later lived in various places in that state until he finally moved to Los Angeles. The family came from Virginia and the great-grandfather of Dr. Allen was a pioneer in Kentucky. The mother, who is still living, is a native of Missouri, but her family, who is of English descent, came from Carolina, the members being noted frontiersmen and the grandfather having crossed the plains to California in 1830. Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Allen were the parents of six children, of whom W. W., of this review, was the eldest. The others are: H. H., of Santa Ana, California; C. C., of Los Angeles, California; and C. M., Virginia and Hazel, all at home.

William W. Allen, after completing his studies in the common school, including the grammar grades, and taking a high-school course at Santa Ana, California, attended for two years the University of California and later became a medical student at the Willamette University, from which institution he was graduated in the class of 1905. Having thus carefully prepared for the practice of medicine and surgery, he immediately after leaving college entered upon his professional work at Jefferson, where he has been engaged ever since. He has been very successful in his work and great trust is reposed in him.

In 1907 Dr. Allen was united in marriage to Miss Mildred Looney, who is a daughter of J. B. Looney. In politics Dr. Allen is a republican and takes a very active interest in all local party issues and has now been filling for four years the office of mayor of Jefferson, the duties of which he has discharged both conscientiously and efficiently. Fraternally he is identified with the Masonic order at Jefferson and both he and Mrs. Allen are members of the Eastern Star. They are both earnest and helpful workers in the Methodist Episcopal church. Dr. Allen is a member of the Central Willamette Valley and State Medical Societies and he keeps in touch with the advancement that is being made in the medical fraternity. Although he is comparatively young in the professional world his practice is already large and is constantly growing, and he is known not only in Jefferson but in the surrounding country as well.

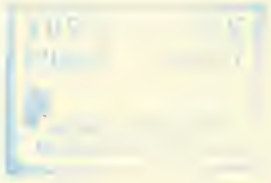
E. J. WARD, former county commissioner of Washington county and the owner of a productive farm near Gaston, is well known throughout this region as one of its most trustworthy citizens. He has been a resident of Oregon for twenty-three years, during which time he has made his home in Washington county. Born in Indianapolis, Indiana, October 15, 1862, he is a son of James A. Ward, who was born in Kentucky May 10, 1833. The father devoted his attention to farming, and is now living at Lenox, Indiana. The maiden name of the mother was Catherine Neiman. She was born near Indianapolis and died in 1873, at the age of thirty-three years.

After receiving his education in the public schools E. J. Ward devoted his attention to farming in his native state until he was twenty-five years of age. In 1888, he came to Oregon and for a year and a half was connected with the logging and sawmill business near Hillsboro, Washington county. He then purchased a ranch in the same part of the county but, subsequently, disposed of it. He now lives on the farm which was presented to Mrs. Ward by her father. This property comprises one hundred acres and adjoins fifteen acres of land which Mr. Ward had previously purchased. It comprises one hundred and fifteen acres, of which about one hundred and five acres have been cleared and are now under cultivation. Mr. Ward recently erected a commodious and beautiful residence, and has made a number of other improvements. He carries on general farming, and has a dairy herd of about twenty-five cows. He has managed his business to excellent advantage, as is indicated by the air of prosperity which prevails everywhere on his farm. He is thorough in his work, leaving nothing undone which should be done, and everything connected with his place seems in perfect order.

On the 5th of December, 1889, Mr. Ward was married to Miss Mary J. Scholfield, a native of Washington county and a daughter of Benjamin and Sarah (Hall) Scholfield. Her father was a farmer and was also interested in the banking business. Three children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Ward: James B., Sarah Catherine and Ethel. They are all living at home and have been given excellent advantages of education. Mr.

E. J. WARD

MRS. E. J. WARD



Ward is independent politically, preferring to vote for the man rather than in support of the party. He was elected county commissioner on the union ticket and served with great acceptance to the people for four years. For fourteen years past he has been a member of the school board. He was on the independent ticket for sheriff in 1906 but was defeated. He is a sincere believer in the Bible and holds membership in the Congregational church to which he is a liberal contributor. Fraternally he is identified with the Odd Fellows, Rebekahs, Knights of Pythias and United Artisans. He is an enthusiastic advocate of Washington county and is an active member of the Commercial Club of Gaston. Mr. Ward owes his high standing to his friendly disposition, sound business judgment and unquestioned integrity of character. That he is entitled to the entire confidence of his fellowmen is the opinion of all with whom he has had social or business relations.

JOHN HALL is one of the pioneer settlers of northwestern America and has been active in its development and progress from an early time. He is called the father of the town of Myrtle Creek from the fact that the community grew up upon his half section of land and owes much of its prominence and growing wealth to his power of organization and his indefatigable energy. He was born in Champaign county, Ohio, on October 3, 1837. His parents were Thomas R. and Maria (Bousman) Hall, both natives of Ohio. His mother died when he was only six years of age and his father later married Miss Teresa Dickison. The father was a farmer by occupation and he and his second wife lived and died in Champaign county.

John Hall remained at home up to his eighteenth year. In 1857 he started across the plains for California, traveling with ox teams and spending six months upon the journey. He arrived in Sierra county, California, where he worked at mining and sawmilling for one year. In the fall of 1858 he came north to Douglas county, Oregon, where he mined for about three years, after which he engaged in farming and the flour milling business. In 1863 Mr. Hall bought a ranch comprising a half section of land and on this tract the town of Myrtle Creek now stands. He built a small house upon his holdings and farmed there alone for three or four years. At the end of that time he platted out a town which he named Myrtle Creek and which is now one of the growing communities of Douglas county. John Hall has lived in this section since he first bought his ranch and has been extremely successful along many lines. At one period in his career he was the owner of extensive holdings around Myrtle Creek but in recent years has disposed of all except his home ranch.

John Hall has been twice married. His first union occurred in 1862, when he wedded Susanna Weaver, a daughter of Hans Weaver, of whom more extended mention is made on another page of this work. They were the parents of seven children: William T., now a resident of Portland, Oregon; James R., a farmer in Douglas county; Harriet A., who married Charles Davis, of Salem, Oregon; Emma, the wife of Charles D. Buick, of Myrtle Creek; Florence, who married Dr. Seeley, now a practicing physician of Roseburg, Oregon; Grace, who is Mrs. Elmer Lutz and now a resident of Summer Lake, Lake county, Oregon; and John, Jr., now in the railroad business at Silverton, Oregon. Mr. Hall's first wife died in 1896 and two years later he was united in marriage to Miss Florence Seeley.

In his political views John Hall is consistently democratic. He has served for several terms as mayor of Myrtle Creek, was a member of the town council at various times and served as county commissioner for two terms. He is a member of Myrtle Creek Lodge, No. 38, I. O. O. F. He was a charter member of this organization and on May 4, 1912, was given a gold badge for forty years' continuous membership. He was one of the incorporators of the Citizens State Bank of Myrtle Creek and is at present president and a member of the board of directors of that institution. Since the foundation of the town he has always been recognized as its foremost citizen, interested in its development along commercial, industrial and political lines and in a large measure responsible for its splendid growth.

W. W. EDINGTON. Twenty years have passed since W. W. Edington arrived in Jackson county, and for a decade he has resided on his present ranch near Gold Hill, owning and cultivating two hundred and forty acres of land in Sams valley, six and one-half miles from the town. He was born in Webster county, Missouri, February 13, 1858, and is a son of James A. and Ellen (Scott) Edington, who were also natives of that state. In 1882 they removed to the Pacific coast, settling at Dayton in eastern Washington, and in 1892 took up their abode at Central Point, Jackson county, Oregon. The father died in 1896 but the mother still survives and is now making her home with her son, W. W. Edington, at the age of seventy-six years, her birth having occurred May 6, 1836. Her husband was born on the 6th of August of the same year, and throughout his life he followed the occupation of farming. They were the parents of seven children: Sarah Jane, the wife of James Shield of Central Point; W. W.; Mary A., the deceased wife of F. M. Pliter; Lucinda A., the wife of L. R. Venable living near Astoria, Oregon; Thomas A., who died at the age of nineteen years; Nancy Ellen, who is the wife of D. W. McMorris of Seattle, Washington; and Susan Adella, who died at the age of seventeen years.

W. W. Edington remained at the place of his birth until fourteen years of age when he accompanied his parents on their removal to Nappa Valley, California. Three years were there spent at the end of which time the family returned to Missouri, and Mr. Edington of this review continued a resident of that state until 1882. He then went again to California where he spent the winter, and in the spring of 1883 he removed to Columbus county, Washington. In 1892 he arrived in Jackson county, Oregon, where he has since lived, and for ten years he has made his home upon the ranch which he still occupies. He has been a life-long farmer and now gives his attention to the cultivation of two hundred and forty acres pleasantly situated in Sams valley, six and one-half miles from Gold Hill. The Indians have camped upon his place, many arrows having been picked up here; in fact, great changes have occurred in this section of the state during Mr. Edington's residence in Jackson county. He carries on both general farming and stock-raising, and has a well developed property. His fields are largely given to the cultivation of alfalfa, wheat and corn, and he makes hogs the principal feature of his stock-raising. The excellent improvements upon his farm make it one of the attractive features of the landscape, and his practical and progressive methods make it a productive and profitable property.

On the 13th of April, 1879, in Missouri, Mr. Edington was united in marriage to Miss Frances E. Newton, who was born in Wright county, Missouri, January 8, 1860, and there resided until 1882 when she came to the west with her husband. Her parents were Andrew and Mary (Ripy) Newton. Mr. and Mrs. Edington have become the parents of five children, but lost their first born, James A., when twenty-one years of age. The others are: Thomas B., who is living at Central Point; John N., whose home is at Sams valley; and Mary E. and Retta A., who are with their parents.

In his political views Mr. Edington is a republican. His life is guided by the teachings of the Church of Christ in which he holds membership. He is a self-made man, owing his success entirely to his own labors, perseverance and capable management. He early realized that industry is the basis of all business advancement, and his indefatigable labors have brought him to a creditable position among the substantial farmers of Jackson county.

WALTER E. JACOBS. Out of the struggle with small opportunities Walter E. Jacobs has come finally into a field of broad and active influence and usefulness, and yet at times there seem to be almost unsurmountable difficulties and obstacles in his path but unfaltering determination and perseverance have enabled him to overcome this and eventually reach the creditable position which he now occupies in business circles. He is now engaged in the grading and excavating business as a contractor and is also owner of a livery stable. He was born May 8, 1857, in Hamilton, Illinois, his parents being John and Caroline (Herndon) Jacobs, who were also natives of the same state. The father was a steamboat man, running on boats on the Mississippi river for a number of years. His family numbered five children: James A., of Oakland, California, who is married and has two children; Mary, the wife of Isaac Hart, of Bowen, Illinois; Walter E., of this review; Mattie, the wife of H. N. Holmes, manager of the general merchandise store at Warsaw, Illinois, and the mother of two children, both school teachers of Illinois; and Marsey, deceased.

Walter E. Jacobs was only six years of age when his father died and he then went to live with his uncle, M. K. Johnston, in Adams county, Illinois, spending his youth there upon a farm in the usual manner and with the usual experiences of most farm boys. He continued with his uncle until he attained his majority and then went to Chicago, where he entered the employ of the Pullman Palace Car Company in connection with its erecting and building operations. After two years, however, he sought the western coast, making his way to San Francisco and thence to Seattle. After a short time he came to Portland and was employed by the Oregon Railway & Navigation Company for three months. In the following spring, however, he went out on a pile driver to work on the railroad. As he had no money he borrowed twenty dollars so that he could make his way to the point where he could obtain employment. The summer was thus passed at most arduous labor, after which he returned to Portland and pursued a business course under Professor James. In the spring he returned again to the Oregon Railway & Navigation Company and in the fall again came to the Rose city and completed his business-college course. The next year he worked for the Portland Electric Light Company under P. F. Morley, being in charge of the first arc lights installed in the city. He was also connected with the fire department under Joseph Buchtel, his identification with the department covering sixteen years, while at the present time he is an exempt fireman. He was also engaged in the coal oil business for fifteen years of that period. In fact throughout his entire life he has made the best use of every opportunity that has come to him. It was in the spring of 1888 that he purchased a team and wagon for seven hundred and fifty dollars, his own capital at that period amounting only to four hundred and fifty dollars. Thus equipped he started in the oil business and later he bought out a competitor with borrowed money. Gradually he built up a large trade in oil and the success of the enterprise made him one of the substantial business men of the community. After fifteen years he concluded to withdraw from active connection with the oil business and began taking grading and excavating contracts. In this work he has continued to the present time and is always busily employed along the line of his chosen labor. He has also established a livery barn and both branches of his business are proving profitable sources of income. He and his wife are now the owners of property one hundred by one hundred feet, facing on Alden street, and they have a lot sixty by eighty feet with frontage of eighty feet on Thirty-fifth street. The barn is very large and its equipment especially good, and the success of the business is due to the capable management and unfaltering enterprise of Mr. Jacobs.

On the 10th of June, 1896, in Portland, Mr. Jacobs was united in marriage to Miss Carrie Mohle, the daughter of William and Willamina Caroline (Rinsley) Mohle, in whose family there were eight children. Out of these William and Sophia are now deceased. Louisa is the wife of John Boldt, of Wisconsin. Mary is the wife of Fred Gerling, of Portland. August has departed this life. Mrs. Jacobs is the next of the family. Emma is also deceased and Bertha is the wife of John Steiger, of Lents. The parents of these children were pioneer settlers of Multnomah county and purchased the donation land claim upon which Montavilla now stands. They own over seventy-six acres which they used as a prairie ranch for a number of years, their business being conducted under the name of the Mount Tabor Dairy.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacobs have become the parents of one child, Florence Pearl, who was born April 4, 1904, and is now attending school. Politically Mr. Jacobs is a republican but while he votes for the candidates and supports the principles of that party he is not a seeker for office. Fraternally he is connected with the Knights of Pythias and the Woodmen of the World, and his wife holds membership in the Congregational church. His early career was indeed one of adversity and hardship but as the years passed on he gradually worked his way upward and his course proves that upon the sure foundation of industry and indefatigable energy success may be built.

EDWARD CLARK IRELAND is the owner and proprietor of a large wholesale and retail cigar business in Medford, this state, and is numbered among the men who stand well at the front of enterprising business interests in this portion of Oregon. He is a native of Ohio, having been born in Cincinnati on the 20th of May, 1860. His father, William Ireland, was born in Kentucky and followed the profession of teaching in early life but later became engaged in various business enterprises. In 1849 he crossed the plains to California, being one of the many thousands of gold seekers who were swept westward by the gold fever then affecting the people throughout the entire nation. After spending some little time in the Golden state he returned to the east and in 1855 he again crossed the plains and engaged in mining in California. In both of these fortune-seeking ventures he was entirely successful, although eventually he encountered the misfortune of losing his entire wealth by investing in a business venture which proved to be unprofitable and at the last a disastrous failure. On the breaking out of the Civil war he entered the government service as a volunteer soldier, remaining at the front for four continuous years and holding the military rank of colonel at the time he was mustered out. At one time he was the junior partner in the firm of McGill & Ireland, the concern being engaged in the packing business in Cincinnati, Ohio, at a time when that city was headquarters in the meat and packing business throughout the west. In 1870, while actively engaged in the affairs of business life, he passed away in Watseka, Illinois. He had for several years survived his wife, who passed away when our subject was but two and a half years of age.

Edward Clark Ireland was reared by foster parents and by them educated in the public schools. At the age of ten years he left his adopted home and as an inexperienced boy went to Indianapolis, Indiana, and at once invested in a bootblacking outfit and established himself in the shoe-shining business, having his headquarters in the rear room of the law offices of Benjamin Harrison, who at that time was engaged in the practice of his profession and just beginning to acquire a reputation throughout that portion of the state as a corporation lawyer. The boyhood days of Mr. Ireland were full of trials and tribulations. Without the love of a mother or the protecting care of a father, he was alone in the world, young, without experience and without means of support other than what he provided by his own labor. Being ambitious he watched his opportunities diligently and soon found more profitable employment than shining shoes, and was enabled to accumulate surplus funds sufficient to enable him to obtain two winter terms of study in the public schools, this constituting his entire schooling. His first employment of consequence was with a firm of contractors and bridge builders. As a common laborer in the employ of this company he received the handsome compensation of one dollar a day and succeeded in obtaining board at the rate of two dollars per week. By giving perfect satisfaction to his employers he was later put in charge of all their derricks and his salary increased to three dollars and a half per day. In 1881, after having terminated his connection with the former company, he secured the position of brakeman in the employ of the Wabash Railway Company. Here he continued to give undivided and competent attention to his duties and in 1883 he was advanced to the position of conductor of a freight train and in 1885 further promoted as conductor of a mixed freight and passenger train running in the schedule of first-class service. Shortly after this he was again promoted, this time becoming a conductor in the regular passenger service. He was employed by the railroad company continuously for a period of twenty five years. Retiring from this business in 1906, he spent the two following years in the promotion and real estate business in Champaign, Illinois, and at the end of this period he journeyed to the Pacific coast, hoping to find here better opportunities than were offered in the middle west where business conditions were more fixed. After reaching the Pacific coast he spent some six months looking over the entire western country and finally located at Medford in Jackson county, this state, believing that to be the place offering the greatest inducements for future business. Having once made up his mind to become a citizen of this place, he established himself in the retail cigar business and later, extending his operations, he added to his retail store a wholesale department. In this business he is now engaged, giving his entire time to its interests.

In 1883 Mr. Ireland was united in marriage to Miss Belle Beams, of Havana, Illinois, and to their home three children have been born, one of whom is still living, Etha May, now the wife of E. F. Thompson, who is associated with Lampson Brothers, Board of Trade operators of Chicago, Illinois. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Thompson has been born one child, Edward F., Jr.

Mr. Ireland gives his political allegiance to the republican party and is a member of the present city council of Medford. He has also been a member of the Commercial Club since his arrival in Medford and likewise belongs to the Merchants Association. In Masonry he has attained high rank, belonging to Western Star Lodge, No. 240, F. & A. M., of Champaign, Illinois; Champaign Chapter, No. 50, R. A. M.; Champaign Commandery, No. 68, K. T.; Urbana Council, No. 19, R. & S. M.; Valley of Peoria Consistory, A. & A. S. R.; and Mohammed Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S., of Peoria, Illinois. He is likewise a valued member of the following organizations: Medford Lodge, No. 1168, B. P. O. E., which fraternity he joined in Champaign, Illinois; and Crater Lake Lodge, No. 675, R. O. M. of Medford. Edward Clark Ireland is one of the best known and most effectively public-spirited men in the city of Medford. He is always identified with every good cause seeking the improvement of the business interests and the educational and moral wellbeing of the community in which he lives. His life of varied experiences, abounding in hardships and prosperity, has rendered Mr. Ireland a safe business adviser and a generous, helpful friend to every man who worthily is seeking to improve the conditions of himself and family. He is a popular and trusted leader among his associates and has a reputation of being one of the most effective agencies in the building up of the new western city in which he has established his residence.

ARTHUR G. LEWIS is the popular and successful young proprietor of the Josephine Livery Barn in Grants Pass, an establishment which he is managing with skill and profit, having been reared in that business. He was born in Marion county, Oregon, June 1, 1881, the son of George and Mary (Tucker) Lewis. The father, who was a native of Nebraska, removed from that state to Oregon in 1888, taking up his residence in Jackson county. In his family were six children.

Arthur G. Lewis pursued his education in the common schools and remained under the parental roof until he was eighteen years of age. He was first employed in a livery barn with his father and later came to Grants Pass, where he purchased the Josephine Livery Barn, which he has since been successfully conducting.

Mr. Lewis was married June 24, 1907, to Miss Margaret Matney, a native of Oregon, and to them has been born a son, Howard, whose natal day was September 8, 1909. In his political faith Mr. Lewis is a republican and a popular young man in the local organization. He is a member of the Odd Fellows lodge of Jacksonville, an order in which he takes a lively interest. He is one of the popular young business men of Grants Pass and is serving the public in such a manner as to merit the liberal patronage which he is receiving.

JUDGE JOHN A. LAYCOCK has been prominent in political circles of Grant county, Oregon, for a number of years and owes his title to four years of able and efficient service as county judge. He is now engaged in general farming and stock-raising near the town of John Day, Oregon, and is also a stockholder and vice president of the Grant County Bank, one of the strong financial institutions of the county, and has contributed his full share to the agricultural progress of this region. He was born in Hancock county, Illinois, August 27, 1846, and is a son of Peter and Susannah (Pilling) Laycock, both natives of Preston, England. The paternal grandfather of our subject was Charles Laycock of England, who lived and died in his native land. Judge Laycock's maternal grandfather, John Pilling, came to America at an early date and was one of the pioneers in the settlement of the state of Iowa. Peter Laycock, the father of our subject, married in England and came to America shortly afterward. He located in Illinois, where he remained until 1848, when he removed to St. Louis, Missouri. In 1852 he started for California, having purchased teams and a traveling outfit. He sent his outfit and teams ahead overland to Council Bluffs, Iowa, and he with his family took a boat to Council Bluffs, expecting to be there in time to meet the teams. On the journey up the river the steamer containing his goods and outfit struck a snag and sank. The family was rescued but the entire outfit of traveling utensils and supplies was lost. The family continued their journey by teams to Council Bluffs, where Peter Laycock arranged for their comfort the best he could under such circumstances, renting a small house for them to live in, while he returned to St. Joseph, Missouri, in order to purchase a new outfit so they could continue their journey. After purchasing another outfit he again started for Council Bluffs by steamboat, but before reaching Council Bluffs he was seized with cholera and died, leaving a widow with five small children. The outfit which he purchased was never received by his family, and they were obliged to remain in Council Bluffs until 1856. In that year the family resumed their journey by teams and crossed the plains to Napa county, California, where they made their home until the time of Mrs. Laycock's death, in the fifty-sixth year of her age.

JOHN A. LAWCOCK

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY

Judge Laycock's educational resources were limited. His opportunities in this direction were meager and were obtained largely by his own efforts. He attended the public schools of Napa county, California, at intervals. Being the eldest son, there were many duties commanding his time and attention which compelled him to lose much time from school. In order to better his condition in this respect he went to Nevada in 1862 and there engaged in mining for two years. Following his return to Napa he arranged with the president and principal of Napa college to take up extra lessons after regular hours, and by so doing he caught up in his studies with the class he had left two years before and passed a very creditable examination. In 1865 he came to Canyon City during the gold excitement and engaged in mining for five years. He was one of a company who erected the first quartz mill in Grant county and was the general superintendent of mill and mine for two years. The property paid very well during that time. He then engaged in farming and stock-raising, having purchased a squatter's claim to a piece of land seven miles from Canyon City on the John Day river, where he now has a most beautiful home situated in the midst of two hundred and forty acres of bottom land. He has put most of this under cultivation and irrigation, raises an abundance of timothy, red-top clover and alfalfa hay, and is making this portion of his enterprise an important department. By patient industry and strict economy he has constantly added to his holdings and now has besides his grain and meadow land, twelve hundred acres of pasture land adjoining his home and is also proprietor of a large stock ranch in Bear valley. His agriculture is carried on along the most scientific and progressive principles and his home is among the model properties of Grant county. Judge Laycock has been prominent in political affairs of his district. He gives his allegiance to the republican party and served as county judge from 1898 to 1902. He made a record for efficiency and careful conservation of the people's interests and was well known as an honorable and incorruptible public official. He also served as joint senator from Grant, Crook, Klamath and Lake counties during the legislative sessions of 1905 and 1907 and carried on his activities in this line with his usual energy and resource.

On December 21, 1871, Judge Laycock was united in marriage to Miss Josephine Officer, a daughter of Casey Officer, who came from his native state, Missouri, to Oregon in 1849. He was one of the pioneers in the settlement of the state and was a member of a party of settlers who organized and developed Grant county. To Judge Laycock and his wife have been born four children: William C., now in business in Vancouver, British Columbia; John A., a resident of Alberta, Canada; Mary, who is deceased; and Guy H., now active in the mercantile business in the town of Timber, Oregon. Judge Laycock has given his three sons the advantage of a good education and himself supervised their start in life. All have justified their father's confidence in them. William C. Laycock is quite prominent in business circles in Vancouver, British Columbia, where he is heavily interested in real estate. The two younger sons have followed in their elder brother's footsteps and are active and discriminating business men. Judge Laycock in the various relations of his life has always been distinguished by marked ability and keen and well directed ambition. He has served his county with credit and honor and has been active in the agricultural development of Grant county, where his name is a synonym for high-minded effort and an upright and honorable life. Judge Laycock was initiated into the Masonic order soon after arriving at the age of twenty-one years. He has advanced in Masonry by receiving the degrees in Blue Mountain Chapter, No. 7, R. A. M., and is a charter member of Blue Mountain Council, No. 10, and a member of the Order of High Priesthood. He has been honored by his brethren and companions, has served in various stations of his lodge and chapter, was worshipful master of his lodge for five years and high priest of his chapter eight years. He has been an active and zealous Mason for many years and discharged his Masonic duties with zeal and fidelity.

LEWIS STOUT, one of the most prominent citizens of Mehama, Marion county, was born in McLean county, Illinois, May 3, 1829, the son of Ephraim and Sarah (Stout) Stout, the father a native of Tennessee, born in 1798, and the mother of North Carolina, born in 1792. The great-grandfather, who was the first of the Stout family in America, was a native of England and lived in North Carolina during the Revolutionary war period. His wife was of German nationality. The grandfather settled in Missouri in 1802. The parents, Ephraim and Sarah Stout, were married in Ohio in 1822, moved to Illinois in 1825, and in 1838 to Iowa, where they resided until 1852. At that date they crossed the plains with ox teams, being en route six months, during which time they had some trouble with the Indians. They settled three miles west of Mehama on a donation land claim which they improved and resided on the remainder of their lives, the mother dying in 1873 and the father in 1879. The latter, although a cripple, was very active in political work and served as justice of the peace in Iowa and refused the nomination for the state legislature. In their family were five children: Mrs. Jane Hennis, deceased; Mrs. Susanna Fisher, of Salem, Oregon; Isaac, deceased; Lewis, of this review; and Rebecca, deceased.

Lewis Stout received his education in Iowa, where he attended the common schools and, later, a Quaker institution. He remained at home operating his father's donation claim and his own, which adjoined it, until 1888, when he sold the land. He now owns seven acres in Mehama and twenty acres in Linn county. While residing on the farm he made a specialty of growing fruit and sold the first cultivated strawberries in Salem. He also raised stock quite extensively and brought the first Angora goats to this section of the country; also he bought the first stand of bees in the neighborhood, for which stand he paid sixty dollars. He spent a great deal of time in the sawmill business, erecting one of the earliest sawmills in this section and building the first ferry boat at Mehama.

In Oregon, in 1865, Mr. Stout was united in marriage to Miss Elizabeth Byers, a native of Iowa, and they have become the parents of nine children: William H., deceased; Clara, who is the wife of W. P. Mulkey, of Mehama; Lois, who is the wife of B. Irving, of Corvallis, Oregon; Anna, who is a trained nurse at Salem, Oregon; Mary, the wife of C. A. Mulkey, who resides near Portland; Jessie, of Salem; Ray L., of the Pacific Power and Light Company, at Portland; Alpha, the wife of W. F. Horner, of Mill City; and Luther, at home.

In politics Mr. Stout is a prohibitionist and he is proud to say of both the sons and sons-in-law in his large family that none have ever used strong intoxicants. He takes an active interest in all party issues and has held some minor offices. Although Mr. Stout was raised a Quaker he is now a member of the Dunker church, and he is a worthy representative of the class of citizens whose industrious and useful lives constitute the true wealth of the state.

JAMES EDWIN LOOSE, one of the well known farmers of Polk county, is a native of Salem, Oregon, born May 5, 1868, the son of Frederick and Emily (Stout) Loose. The father, a native of Germany, was brought to America when a small boy by his parents, who settled in Dutchess county, New York. In 1852, when the father was fifteen years of age, he removed to California and in the same year came to Oregon, settling in Salem, where he engaged in teaming. Later he repaired to a farm near Fairfield and lived in various other locations until he finally came to the farm where he now lives, which is situated three miles northwest of Salem and is the present home of his son, James Edwin, of this review. He went through the hardships of early pioneer life and served in the Indian war. In his family were seven children: Cora, who is the wife of J. D. Walling, of Lincoln, Oregon; Charles, of Stayton, Oregon; James Edwin, of this review; Anna, deceased; Minnie, of Portland, Oregon; Frank, connected with the transfer line; and Wesley, head cook at the Asylum Farm.

James E. Loose was educated in the common schools. He has always remained on the home farm and now owns fifty-three and one-half acres of land, on which he has put up substantial improvements and is engaged in raising hops, grain and other farm products.

On the 26th of December, 1892, Mr. Loose was united in marriage to Miss Hattie Amelia Harris, a native of Todd county, Minnesota, and a daughter of R. V. and Saloma Anne (Sarff) Harris. The father was a native of Nova Scotia, of English descent, and the mother was born in Indianapolis, Indiana, of German parentage. They were married in Minnesota and came to Oregon in 1886, settling near Dallas, and later removed to McMinnville, Oregon. The father followed the occupations of farming and carpentering. The mother died in 1905 and is buried in McMinnville, Oregon. In their family were four children: V. D., of Lake county, Oregon; Hattie Amelia, now Mrs. James E. Loose; Pearl, deceased, who was the wife of Clarence Hendershot, of McMinnville; and Ella, who is the wife of Roy Fink, of McMinnville. Mrs. Loose was educated in the common schools of Fairview and remained at home until the time of her marriage. Mr. and Mrs. Loose are the parents of four children: Lloyd, deceased; Emily C.; Voorhis Frederick; and Carol Amelia.

In politics Mr. Loose is a republican but he always takes into consideration the qualifications of the man to be put in office. He displays great interest in the cause of education and for thirteen years has been clerk of the school board. He attends the local church and gives his support to all measures that tend to upbuild the community.

HON. DANIEL M. C. GAULT. Prominently identified with the journalists, educators and public men of Oregon was Daniel M. C. Gault, postmaster of Cottage Grove, a position he has acceptably filled from 1908 until the time of his demise, April 20, 1912. His professional career covers a period of nearly half a century and he is widely known and universally respected. He was born in Davis county, Iowa, in May, 1842, the son of John and Lucy (McClein) Gault, the father a native of Massachusetts and the mother of Kentucky. They were married in Davis county, Missouri, and removed shortly afterward to Iowa, where they lived until 1852. The father followed agricultural pursuits in Iowa, although he had formerly been a carpenter, having learned that trade in Massachusetts. On leaving Iowa the father removed with his family to Oregon and settled on a donation claim of three hundred and twenty acres, eight miles southwest of Portland. He at once set about erecting the necessary buildings, clearing up the land, making improvements and tilling the soil, and resided on that farm until his death in 1861, the mother having passed away in 1858. They were the parents of five children: Daniel M. C., of this review; Mrs. Mary Humphreys, of Portland, Oregon; two who died in infancy; and John W., who passed away in Spokane in 1908.

Daniel M. C. Gault was nineteen years of age when he started out in life on his own account by teaching school, which profession he followed at intervals for a period of twenty years, his first service of that kind being at Walla Walla, Washington. He was also interested in newspaper work, and conducted the Jacksonville (Oregon) Sentinel. During the time he conducted that journal he read law for three years. He then removed to Salem, where he accepted a position on the Daily Statesman, with which he remained for one year. He then went to Dallas, Polk county, where he established the Polk County Republican. After conducting that paper for a time he disposed of it and began in 1870 to teach school in Yamhill county, a profession which he followed for two years. Going to Hillsboro, he taught there for eight years, and subsequently for two years in the graded schools of the Halliday addition in Portland. After that he removed to a farm near Portland but continued to teach in connection with his farming pursuits until 1892, when he removed to Hillsboro and purchased an interest in the Hillsboro Independent, remaining with that paper until January, 1903, after which he went to Salem, where he and his son Harry established a job printing office, there known as the Gault Printing Company, and operated it for two years. They then removed the plant to Cottage Grove, where they established the Western Oregon and after operating it for three years disposed of the property to J. C. Howard, who established the Cottage Grove Sentinel.

Mr. Gault was married in Oregon to Miss Anna Rebecca Howell, who was born in 1867, and they became the parents of two children: Elizabeth, who died at the age of eleven years; and Mary, the wife of Charles Halstead, of Portland, Oregon. Mrs. Gault passed away in 1870 and in 1878 Mr. Gault was again married, his second union being with Miss Lydia E. Humphrey, of Portland, a daughter of Homan M. and Lydia (Snow) Humphrey. The father, a native of New York, was of English lineage, and the mother was born in Ohio and they were married in the Empire state. The father of Mrs. Gault first took up a claim of one hundred and sixty acres in Iowa for which he paid $1.25 an acre, which he sold and came to Oregon in 1852. Mrs. Gault's mother was a teacher before her marriage. They crossed the plains with ox teams to Oregon, settling in Portland, where the father took up a donation land claim of three hundred and twenty acres. This farm, which adjoins the city of Portland, was the home of the family until the father's death in 1887, the mother having passed away in 1859. To them six children were born: W. J. and Dr. T. C. Humphrey, both residents of Portland; Lydia E., now Mrs. Daniel M. C. Gault; Orpha G., deceased; Eliza, who became the wife of H. Denlinger and is now deceased; and Julia, who first married Samuel L. Simpson, the poet, and after his death married Julian V. Briscow and is now deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Gault had two children, John H., who was born December 23, 1878, is married and is an instructor in plumbing in the Trade School of Portland. William H., who was born November 8, 1880, is married and resides at Everett, Washington. He is foreman of the Everett Paint Shop and is also a stockholder in that concern.

In his political views Mr. Gault was a republican and his political career had been one of importance. He served as superintendent of schools in Washington county for one term, was in 1876 elected to the legislature from Washington county, serving for one term, and in 1880 was again elected to the legislature from Multnomah county, serving for one term. In 1902 he was again elected to the legislature from Washington county, serving for one term. He was appointed postmaster of Cottage Grove in March, 1908, a position which he held until his death. Fraternally he was a charter member of Mutazuma Lodge, No. 50, I. O. O. F., and has filled all of the official chairs in that body. He also belonged to Portland Camp, No. 27, A. O. U. W., and had occupied practically all of its chairs. Mr. Gault was a member of the Congregational church, as is his family, their membership being at Salem. The Hon. Daniel M. C. Gault served the state of Oregon and its people in a most conscientious and useful way. Being a man of excellent education and training, he was a very successful teacher, giving universal satisfaction both in that capacity and as superintendent of public instruction. Mrs. Gault received a high-school education and was a teacher and had charge of the eighth grade at the Hillsboro school for three years and before that taught in the country schools in Washington county. She also was deputy postmistress for three years when Mr. Gault was appointed postmaster of Cottage Grove. The entire family have been well schooled and stand high in the best circles of society. Mr. Gault passed away April 20, 1912, greatly mourned by his family and a large circle of devoted friends, in the seventieth year of his life.

CHARLES A. CROW is one of the successful merchants of Merlin, Oregon, where he is successfully engaged in the general hardware business. He was born in Lane county, Oregon, August 3, 1874, and is the son of William and Nancy Jane (Nealey) Crow, the former a native of Illinois and the latter of Missouri. The father emigrated to Oregon in 1853, crossing the plains with ox teams during the time of the cholera epidemic and two members of their company died of that disease while on their western journey. On reaching Oregon Mr. Crow settled in Lane county, where he remained for a short time and later removed to Josephine county and there took up a homestead claim in 1882, on which he has since continued to reside.

Charles A. Crow was reared in his father's home and educated in the public schools of the district in which he lived and was later graduated from the Portland Business College. He started in life for himself at the age of seventeen years and spent the early years of his manhood engaged in various occupations, among others that of mining. At the time of his marriage he was living in Grants Pass and during the period of his residence there he served one term as assessor of Josephine county. Immediately following his marriage he settled upon his ranch of one hundred and sixty acres in Josephine county, where he remained for three years, after which he removed to Merlin, where he is engaged in the successful operation of an up-to-date hardware business, in addition to which he is the owner of several valuable pieces of property in Merlin.

Mr. Crow was united in marriage to Miss Julia Hamlin and to them two children were born: Louis Glenn, who died on October 9, 1909, and is buried at Merlin; and Even L. Mr. Crow is justice of the peace at Merlin and is also a notary public. Fraternally he is affiliated with the Odd Fellows lodge at Grants Pass. He is one of the highly respected and useful citizens of Josephine county and is numbered among the enterprising and progressive citizens of his portion of the state.

RUSSELL CALVIN KELSEY, M. D. While actively engaged in the practice of medicine, in which connection he has become recognized as an able, learned and conscientious physician, Dr. Kelsey has also become well known in business connections of an important character and through his efforts for public progress and improvement. He was born in Deerfield, Steele county, Minnesota, a son of Calvin and Anna (Russell) Kelsey, who now reside at Wells, Minnesota. He is descended from English ancestors who at an early period in the colonization of the new world settled at Hartford, Connecticut. This was in the year 1636 and in 1639 William Kelsey was numbered among the property holders of that city. During the Revolutionary war two brothers of the name were captured and placed on the British prison ship Sampson, off the coast of New Jersey, and died while thus incarcerated.

Following the removal of the family to Wells, Minnesota, Dr. Kelsey there continued his education until graduated from the high school with the class of 1877. Following his determination to become an active member of the medical profession he began reading along that line and in 1888 was graduated from a medical college at Indianapolis, Indiana, while in 1899 he was graduated from the medical department of the University of Illinois—the College of Physicians and Surgeons at Chicago. Since 1888 he has continuously engaged in the practice of medicine and surgery and during the gold rush to Alaska in 1897-8 he was surgeon for one of the steamship companies. Returning from that district in the latter year he spent the year 1899 at the College of Physicians and Surgeons in Chicago, where he won the degree of Doctor of Medicine, Addendum. The following spring he removed to White Rock, South Dakota, and became surgeon for the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad Company. At the same time he conducted a large private practice and also while at White Rock was elected secretary of the Midland Canal Company and secretary of the Tri-State Drainage Association which embraced the states of North Dakota, South Dakota and Minnesota. This last association sent Dr. Kelsey and Major Edwards, of Fargo, North Dakota, to Washington to secure an appropriation to survey the head waters of the Minnesota river and those of the Red River of the North to determine the feasibility of constructing a canal between the two rivers. The mission was successful in securing an appropriation of some eleven thousand dollars for that purpose. At this date, ten years later, the subject is still under consideration by the Canadian and the United States governments. At the time of the origin of the movement J. J. Hill opposed the project but later, however, when the railroads became glutted with freight they could not handle Mr. Hill favored the project and it is now quite likely that the scheme which was originated by Dr. Kelsey will reach a successful issue.

Dr. Kelsey has done other important public service. While in South Dakota he was appointed by the governor of that state as its representative at the exposition held in Portland, Oregon, in 1905, at which time he removed to that state, settling at Gold Hill in the summer of 1906. Soon afterward he opened an addition to that place known as Riverside Park, and later he purchased the entire Dekum addition to the place and successfully closed out the same within a year. At about the same time he was elected a director of the city schools and during the summer of 1910 was very largely responsible for the erection of a modern school building, the first strictly modern building to be erected in southern Oregon.

In 1884 Dr. Kelsey was married at Wells, Minnesota, to Miss Cora Hallock, who died a year later. It was this that caused Dr. Kelsey to take up the study of medicine and in 1889, after graduating in medicine, he married Flora Adella Tamblyn, of Indianapolis, Indiana, who is a daughter of John Tamblyn. The family is of English descent although at a more remote period her ancestors were of German extraction. It is believed that members of the family removed from Germany to England during the days of William the Conqueror. Unto Dr. and Mrs. Kelsey have been born the following named: John R., William C., Dolores Phyllis, Walter Oduker and Flora Ann Yolanda.

In politics Dr. Kelsey has always been a republican where national issues and questions are involved, yet always uses his judgment concerning the support of any candidate and frequently casts an independent local ballot. At Gold Hill, November 1, 1911, he organized the Voters League and the organization successfully carried the city election the following spring. This is an organization formed for the support of the best qualified candidates and in opposition to strong partisanship when the welfare of the majority is disregarded. He became a Master Mason while residing in Indianapolis, joining Center Lodge, No. 23, the oldest Masonic organization in the state of Indiana. While living in South Dakota he became one of the organizers of White Rock Lodge, No. 138, F. & A. M., and demitted therefrom January 23, 1908. On the 5th of March, 1898, he was made an honorary member of the Dinapore India Arya Samaj, which translated means the White Man's Association. He was also made a member of Bombay Samaj in August of the same year. His religious faith is that of the Methodist Episcopal church and his membership is with the society of that denomination at Gold Hill. In 1911 he was elected a trustee of the church and was chosen chairman of its board. His life has been actuated by a desire for progress and improvement and by the spirit of justice, truth and right. He has ever endeavored to make his life count for good in the world's work and his record is indeed one of serviceable worth.

DR. R. C. KELSEY

SAMUEL W. TAYLOR is filling the office of treasurer of Lane county, to which he was called by popular ballot in 1910. He was born in Huntingdon county, Pennsylvania, June 22, 1848, and is a son of Andrew Jackson and Jane (Linn) Taylor. The Linn family traces its ancestry back to 1004, according to a published history which gives the genealogical record. One of the great-great-grandfathers of Mr. Taylor on the maternal side was a Mr. Widney who settled in Franklin county, Pennsylvania, and built the first cabin in that valley, this being in the decade between 1770 and 1780. His descendants have since always lived in that section of the state. The maternal grandfather, Hugh Linn, was a stone mason, contractor and miller. The paternal grandfather of Mr. Taylor was Caspar Taylor, who was born near Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and devoted his life to general agricultural pursuits. His son, Andrew Jackson Taylor, was reared to farm life, but thinking to find industrial pursuits more congenial than the life of the agriculturist he became a harness maker and saddler. He was a justice of the peace for some years, in which office he rendered decisions that were strictly fair and impartial. His record at all times commended him to the regard and confidence of those who knew him.

Samuel W. Taylor was reared in Huntingdon county, Pennsylvania, and was but fifteen years of age when, in 1863, he enlisted for service as a member of Company B, Thirteenth Pennsylvania Cavalry. He remained at the front for two years and was with the regiment in all of its battles and campaigns until honorably discharged after the close of the war, on the 11th of July, 1865. On the night that he was fifteen years of age he did picket duty and served under Captain Wallace when the Union troops checked the Rebel advance from McConnelsburg road to Cove Mountain Pass on the Mercersburg road. Although but a boy in years his bravery and loyalty were equal to that of many a veteran of twice his age. After the war Mr. Taylor engaged in railroading for a few years, and then settled in Carroll county, Illinois, where he was married and established his home. After a year or two, however, he removed to Nebraska and subsequently spent five years in Shelby county, Iowa, during which period he engaged in farming. In March, 1888, he arrived in Eugene and for a year and a half thereafter was engaged in stock farming. In 1890 he entered the employ of the Eugene Water Company as engineer and for some years before the plant was sold acted as superintendent and manager. In 1910 he was elected county treasurer and is now filling this position, the duties of which he is discharging with promptness and fidelity, winning the commendation of all concerned.

In 1873 Mr. Taylor was united in marriage to Miss Florence Hall, a daughter of Charles Hall, of Lanark, Illinois, and unto them have been born three children: Harriet, who is the wife of Ralph G. Starr, of Dayton, Oregon; Blanche, who is the widow of Samuel S. Thurston, a teacher in the high school; and George M., who is manager for the Western Union Telegraph Company at Eugene. He is also a veteran of the Spanish-American war, having been with the Second Oregon Regiment all through its term of service. Both Mr. and Mrs. Taylor hold membership in the Congregational church, in the work of which they are actively and helpfully interested. Mr. Taylor fraternally is connected with Eugene Lodge, No. 11, F. & A. M.; Eugene Chapter, No. 10, R. A. M.; Helmet Lodge, No. 33, K. P., of which he is past chancellor commander; Eugene Camp, No. 115, W. O. W.; and Eugene Aerie, No. 275, F. O. E. He likewise belongs to J. W. Geary Post, G. A. R., of which he is now serving his fifth term as post commander, and thus maintains pleasant relations with his old army comrades. He is as true and loyal to his country today as when he followed the old flag upon southern battle fields, and though but a boy in years gave practical demonstration of the fact that age is no criterion of patriotic service.

JOSEPH M. RADER, ex-sheriff of Jackson county, is one of Oregon's popular sons now residing on a little farm of twenty acres near Phoenix, this county, living comparatively retired. He was born a mile and a half south of Eagle Point, July 31, 1864, a son of Jackson and Clara (Lochkamp) Rader. The mother crossed the plains from Missouri to Oregon in 1850 or 1851, coming as a girl with friends, her parents having died when she was a child. The father migrated to this state some time previous and both settled in Jackson county. It was soon after the mother came to this state that their marriage was celebrated, and they took up their abode near Jacksonville. Four or five years later they removed to a ranch near Eagle Point where the father died in 1872. His widow continued to reside on the homestead until 1902, when she made her home in Jacksonville with her son Joseph, of this review. Four years later she removed to Medford, where she has since resided with her daughter, Mrs. Clara Phipps.

Joseph M. Rader was reared in the home of his parents and acquired his education in the common schools of Oregon. After attaining his majority he continued to remain at home and assisted in the operation of the home ranch, containing five hundred and thirty acres, and it required the combined efforts of the entire family to successfully conduct the farming business in which they were engaged. In 1904 Joseph Rader purchased the old home ranch which he sold to advantage in 1910. During the same year he purchased his present little home of twenty acres near Phoenix where he is now living comparatively retired and at ease.

In 1902 Mr. Rader was elected to the office of sheriff of Jackson county on the democratic ticket, being reelected in 1904 to succeed himself in that office. During his period of service as a public official he proved to be a popular and efficient sheriff.

Mr. Rader was married on the 7th of April, 1908, to Miss Bertha M. Rose, a daughter of L. A. Rose, one of the pioneer settlers of Jackson county who is still living, making his home in Phoenix. Politically Mr. Rader has always been a stanch democrat and for many years has been an active man in his party. He is a member of Medford Lodge, No. 168, B. P. O. E., and belongs to Jackson Tribe, No. 1, I. O. R. M. He is one of the well known residents of Jackson county, and is highly esteemed by all who know him.

HON. D. C. BAUGHMAN, a retired farmer residing at Cottage Grove, owns a brick business building and warehouse on Wall street and a fine residence which he occupies. He is well educated and taught school for many years during his earlier life. Mr. Baughman was born in Illinois, October 8, 1842, a son of Samuel and Elizabeth (McCall) Baughman. His father was born in Ohio, while his mother was born in Tennessee, their marriage being celebrated in Illinois. They resided in that state until 1843, when they removed to Iowa. In 1850 the father crossed the plains to Oregon to look over the country and select a place on which to settle. He returned to Iowa and brought his family to this city in 1851. During the journey across the plains considerable trouble was experienced with the Indians who stole part of their oxen while in the state of Nevada. The first settlement of the family was made on Myrtle creek in Douglas county, where they wintered. The following spring Mr. Baughman settled in Rattle Snake valley in Lane county, where he took up a donation claim of three hundred and twenty acres. He lived upon that land until 1869, clearing it and getting it under cultivation and making the necessary improvements. He then removed to Pleasant Hill, Oregon, where he purchased the Abel Russell donation claim, upon which he lived for fourteen years and where the mother died at the age of sixty-one. On selling this property Mr. Baughman purchased a small farm on which he made his home for a number of years, and, again selling out, purchased five acres near Pleasant Hill school, where he died in 1903. In his family were born twelve children, five of whom are still living, namely: D. C., of this review; Sarah A., the wife of a Mr. Lawrence, of Nome, Alaska; Clarinda J., who married Edward Doring, of Helix, Oregon; Samuel T., residing near Sacramento, California; and Elijah G., of Seattle.

When his parents crossed the plains D. C. Baughman was about ten years of age. He remained at home until he attained his majority, after which he engaged in steamboating and other occupations for a period of five years. He then took up a homestead of one hundred and sixty acres in Benton county, Oregon, upon which he lived for eight years and then, selling his homestead, he bought a small farm near Monmouth, upon which he lived for a time, when he again sold out and went to Clackamas county, six miles east of Oregon City, where he purchased one hundred and sixty acres. He only occupied this land for one year, however, after which he sold out and, going to Pleasant Hill, purchased one hundred and seventy acres upon which he lived for one year. He then removed to the vicinity of Cottage Grove on a farm which he operated until 1905, and then removed to Cottage Grove, where he is now making his home and living retired. Mrs. Baughman owns three hundred and sixty acres of farm land and he still retains title to seven acres adjoining the city of Cottage Grove and twenty-one lots, all improved, in the city, in addition to his own fine home.

Mr. Baughman was married September 26, 1869, to Miss Catherine Braman, who was born near Pleasant Hill, Oregon. To this union six children were born: Elizabeth E., the wife of Lewis Gerrum, of Eugene; Frank A., who died at the age of one and a half years; Wealthy N., who married John Sweeney, of Lockwood, Canada; Henry Delbert, a resident of London, Oregon; Jessie P., the wife of John Taylor, of Cottage Grove; and Belle C., who wedded Harvey Taylor, also of this city. The wife and mother died in 1882 and on the 29th of January, 1884, Mr. Baughman was again married, his second union being with Mrs. Martha Powell, the widow of James H. Powell and a daughter of John M. and Jane (Wilson) Harris. Her parents were natives of Kentucky and their wedding was celebrated in Indiana, where they lived for twenty-five years, after which they removed to Pike county, Illinois, later returning to Indiana for several years. They then took up their residence in Minnesota, but owing to the threatening attitude of the Indians in that state they removed within less than a year to Illinois. There they continued their residence until 1865, when they crossed the plains to Oregon. They set out on the journey with horses but lost those and were compelled to journey the rest of the way with ox teams. On reaching Oregon they settled in Linn county, where the father purchased a ranch. After living in that county for several years the family removed to a farm seven miles south of Cottage Grove and upon this place they lived until about two years previous to the father's death in 1882. The mother passed away in 1881. Eleven children were born unto them, five of whom are still living, namely: Martha, now Mrs. Baughman; David, of London, Oregon; T. W., of Eugene; J. W., also residing in Eugene; and James H., of Bellingham.

The political allegiance of Mr. Baughman has always been given to the republican party. He was elected a candidate of that party to the state legislature of Oregon, serving in 1892 and 1893, and there made a creditable record for himself, proving entirely satisfactory to his constituents. He and his family are members of the Christian church, being active in furthering the interests of that organization and making it potent for good in the community. Mr. Baughman is one of the most valuable and highly respected citizens of Cottage Grove. He is a finely educated man, having during the time he taught school carried a first grade certificate. His long period of residence in Oregon, together with his service in the state legislature, has given him an extended acquaintance, and among his associates and friends he is greatly respected.

GEORGE M. BIGGS actively interested in mining, is one of the partners in the Tie Bar Mining Company which controls six claims. The work is being successfully promoted and the property is being rapidly developed. Mr. Biggs came to Oregon when sixteen years of age. He was born in Allamakee county, Iowa, July 20, 1866, and is the son of Samuel H. and Harriet O. (Newcomb) Biggs. The father has been identified with agricultural pursuits in Wallowa county for nearly thirty years and is a well known and highly respected resident of that region. Extended mention is made of him on another page of this work.

In the public schools of Nebraska, George M. Biggs pursued his education until he reached the age of about fourteen years, after which he devoted three years to farming in that state and then came to Oregon with his parents, the family home being established in Wallowa county where he engaged in the stock business with his father for four years. On the expiration of that period he removed to La Grande where he learned the trade of a machinist and engineer. After three years there spent he was employed at various places in Wallowa and Union counties as a machinist and engineer, being thus engaged until the spring of 1911 when he became interested in placer mining in southwestern Oregon. He is now carrying on his operations as a member of the Tie Bar Mining Company which controls six claims and has a sixty thousand pound dredge. The property is being rapidly developed and Mr. Biggs is one of the principal owners. The claims promise to return a good yield, there being every indication of success.

The four children of Mr. Biggs are: Hattie, the wife of L. Greenough; Goldie, the wife of M. T. Adams; and Fee and Gaynell, both at home. Mr. Biggs gives his political support to the republican party and is a member of the Odd Fellows society. He also attends the Methodist church and these associations indicate much of the nature of his interests and principles which govern his conduct.

L. A. HAMMERSLY. Among the patriotic young American citizens of whom this country is justly proud is L. A. Hammersly, editor of The Argus. He responded to his country's call, which came to him in early manhood, and after serving under its flag, engaged in the newspaper business, a profession with which he is still connected. He was born in Oregon, June 5, 1881, the son of George R. and Martha J. (Burrough) Hammersly, more extended mention of whom will be found in connection with the biographical review of John B. Hammerlsy, on another page of this work.

Mr. Hammersly attended both the common and high schools and remained at home with his parents until he attained his majority, when he enlisted in Company K of the Nineteenth United States Infantry and served for three years in the Philippine Islands. On returning to Oregon he engaged in the newspaper business at Gold Hill, at first being connected with his father in that work. In May, 1911, he founded The Argus, a publication which he has since conducted in a successful and acceptable manner.

In July, 1909, Mr. Hammersly was united in marriage to Miss Anna Johnson, a native of Kansas and a daughter of N. B. and Christina Johnson, both of whom were born in Sweden. The parents emigrated to America in 1877 and settled in Kansas, where they spent the remainder of their lives. Mr. Hammersly is affiliated with the republican party, giving to it his active and loyal support. He is a member of the Fraternal Brotherhood, that being the only order to which he belongs. In his capacity as editor of The Argus he has become an extremely active and valuable citizen of Rogue River and he is a popular young man, always giving his earnest support to every good cause and assisting to the extent of his ability in such projects as seem likely to benefit the community. In the conduct of his business he has shown tact, education and business ability and without doubt a useful and brilliant career awaits him, and his name has become synonymous with progress in his town. His acquaintance is extensive, his popularity is increasing and he has become one of the most respected and highly esteemed citizens of the community.

JOSEPH H. BROWN has been active in agricultural, business and political circles of Douglas county since 1881. He is now carrying on an extensive butcher business in Glendale, Oregon, and is a well known citizen of this section of the country. He was born in Missouri, January 7, 1858, the son of Alfred and Mary (Gilham) Brown, the former a native of Indiana and the latter of Ohio. The father was a prominent farmer in Missouri for several years and was following that occupation when the Civil war broke out in 1861. He joined the Federal army in that year and served until his death at Springfield, Missouri, in 1862. The mother's death occurred in the same state in 1893.

Joseph H. Brown received his early education in the public schools of his native state and laid aside his text books at the early age of fourteen and worked for four years in the employ of others. He then started for himself in the grocery business and was active in this line of occupation for some time. He subsequently sold out and operated a ranch in Missouri for some time. In 1881 he came to Oregon, locating at Canyonville, where he teamed on the Southern Pacific Railroad for two years. At the expiration of this period he returned to Missouri and for nine years operated a farm in his native state. In 1892 he sold his holdings in Missouri and came to Glendale, Oregon, where he bought a farm and cultivated the soil for three years. At the end of that time he removed to Ashland, where he engaged in the grocery business for a short period. After five months he sold his interest in the store and retired from all active business for a year. In 1896 he went into the butcher business in Glendale in the shop where he is at present located. He has made a success of the various enterprises in which he has been engaged and has gradually accumulated a comfortable fortune and has made judicious investments in Glendale real estate. He owns much property in this city and is keenly interested in its development and advancement.

In 1884 Mr. Brown was united in marriage to Miss Emmeline Ball, a native of Oregon, and they became the parents of five children, Pearl, William C., Alfred, Allen J. and Veta, all of whom are now living except Alfred, whose death occurred in 1902 in Canyonville. In politics Mr. Brown is a consistent republican and a firm believer in the policies and principles for which that party stands. He has always taken an active interest in the affairs of his community and served for two years, in 1910 and 1911, as mayor of Glendale. He is at present a member of the town council and is doing able and efficient work in this capacity.

HORACE D. JONES, SR. Since 1894 Horace D. Jones has been engaged in placer mining in Jackson county, and during the past three years has been in partnership with A. E. Reames, a sketch of whom appears elsewhere in this work, owner of the valuable "Blue Jay" placer property on Foot's creek. He began his career in the newspaper business and early in life held important positions on several well known Pacific coast journals. He was born in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, May 7, 1859, the son of J. Hannum and Josephine (Lawrence) Jones, both natives of the Keystone state, the families of both parents having been established in the new world in the seventeenth century. The great-grandfather of the father was born in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, in 1740, his parents having emigrated to the new world from Wales. The father, who was born in Philadelphia, resided in Pennsylvania during the earlier part of his life but spent the latter years on the Pacific coast. He was a newspaper man and journalist of prominence, owning from 1878 until 1883 a half-interest in Godey's Ladies' Book. He removed to the Pacific coast, settling in Washington in 1890. Shortly after moving west he became a newspaper man in Nooksack, Washington, and with his son, Horace D. Jones, of this review, was engaged for a time in the publication of the Nooksack Reporter. In 1892 he assumed entire control of that paper, which he conducted until the time of his death, which occurred in 1899. The father was an honored man in his profession in Washington and for four years was the president of the Washington Editorial Association. He was a strenuous advocate of those policies which make for public improvement and became widely known as "Good Roads Jones." In his family were three sons: Frank Hartley, deceased; Edward S., of Philadelphia; and Horace D.

Horace D. Jones remained under the parental roof until 1882, having in the meantime attended the common schools and later being graduated from the Lancaster high school. In 1879 he entered the publishing business with his father and was for a time thus associated, later pursuing that work on his own account until 1892, when he went to San Francisco and in 1894 came to Oregon. Since then he has spent two or three years at various times as city editor of the Portland Journal and during 1903 and 1904 was connected with The Portland Evening Telegram as political editor. Previous to coming to Oregon he completed a period of two years' service in editorial work in San Francisco, a portion of that time being with the Call while he was employed on the Chronicle during the remainder of the period. In December, 1894, he came to Jackson county, Oregon, and engaged in the mining business. With A. E. Reames he owns and operates the Blue Jay placer mines on Foot's creek, and has become well known in the Gales Creek mining district, where he is familiarly called the "Golden Eagle" on account of his famous free milling quartz property.

In 1882 Mr. Jones was united in marriage to Miss Sarah W. Lyons, who was born in Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, in 1862, the daughter of Joseph and Sophia (Patton) Lyons. To Mr. and Mrs. Jones have been born three children: Horace D., Jr., who was born in Philadelphia in 1884; J. Hannum, who passed away in infancy; and Bert M. The two surviving sons are residents of Portland, Oregon.

In his political faith Mr. Jones has always been a republican, belonging to what is termed the progressive element of the party. He was chairman of the county central committee of Jackson county, from 1897 to 1899 and was a member of the executive board from 1896 to 1902. Mr. Jones is a man of more than average ability and believes that there is as much need for brains in the mining business as there is in any other occupation, and he has a large number of very close personal, political and business friends.

R. L. CASTEEL is one of the largest dealers in furniture, carpets and rugs in Pilot Rock, Oregon. His birth occurred in Mercer county, Missouri, on the 7th of June, 1889, his parents being R. N. and Polly (Riggs) Casteel, who were natives of Kentucky and Virginia respectively. They moved to Missouri at a very early date and in that state Mrs. Casteel passed away on the 29th of

R. L. CASTEEL

THE NE
PUBLIC
NY
ASTOR
TILDE

July, 1904. R. N. Casteel, who still survives, now makes his home in his native state, Kentucky. Unto him and his wife were born five sons and all are still living.

R. L. Casteel spent his early boyhood days in his father's home and received his early education in the public schools of the district in which he lived. At the early age of fifteen years he emigrated to Oregon, coming direct to Pilot Rock, where he established his residence. His first year in the new state was spent on a near-by ranch, at work as one of the employes, where he was engaged in farming and caring for stock. At the end of one year he obtained a clerkship in a store in Pilot Rock, where he remained for the following twelve months. At the end of this time he removed to Corvallis, at which place he remained for two years and then returned to Pilot Rock, where he established himself in the general merchandising business and continued to look after the interests of this new business for a period of three years. At the end of three years' experience in successful business he sold out his merchandising establishment and established a furniture, carpet and rug store, and in this business he is now successfully engaged.

On the 1st of February, 1911, Mr. Casteel was married to Miss Helen Gilbert, who was born in Panora, Iowa, her parents being H. H. and Etta Gilbert. Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert are now residents of Oregon, having come to this state in 1903. One girl has been born to Mr. and Mrs. Casteel on March 30, 1912. Mr. Casteel has implicit faith in the future development and growth of Umatilla county. His store and its equipment, consisting of a large assortment of fine furniture, carpets and rugs, high grade in quality, is an evidence of his belief that the people of his city and the surrounding country require household supplies of the very best pattern and material, and to meet the growing demands of his customers he has provided for them an up-to-date, high-class furniture and carpet house. Mr. Casteel is a republican and is interested in all civic matters of importance to the betterment of his community.

JAMES H. SHORTRIDGE, who is living retired in Cottage Grove, has resided near that city since 1851 until his retirement in 1906, owning a three hundred and twenty-acre farm which he filed upon as a donation claim in the year of his arrival in Oregon. He is now residing in a comfortable home in Cottage Grove. He was born in Tippecanoe county, Indiana, a son of Samuel Boone Shortridge, whose grand-uncle was Daniel Boone, the noted Indian scout. The parents were both natives of Bourbon county, Kentucky, and they were also married in that state, where they resided for a time, later removing to Indiana. Still later Samuel Shortridge removed to Iowa, settling in Muscatine county, where he bought land and occupied it for some time. It was in that county that his wife passed away, shortly after which Mr. Shortridge removed to Mercer county, Illinois, where he made his home until 1852. He then crossed the plains to Oregon, settling about six miles south of Cottage Grove, where he took up a donation claim of one hundred and sixty acres upon which he lived for several years, and then, disposing of that land, removed to Salt Lake City, where he resided for a few years. On leaving that state he returned to Lane county, Oregon, where he lived until his death, which occurred in July, 1876. In his family were seven children, four of whom died in infancy, the others being: James H., of this review; Caroline D., the widow of Hiram Stewart, residing in Eugene; and William Wallis, making his home near London, Oregon.

James H. Shortridge received a common-school education in Illinois and one year in advance of his parents crossed the plains to Oregon in 1851 and settled six miles south of Cottage Grove, on a donation claim which his father's farm later joined, residing upon that farm until in 1906, when he disposed of it and retired. During the long period of his occupancy of his donation claim he labored untiringly to get it under a thorough state of cultivation, building suitable improvements, and at the time he disposed of it it was one of the finest farming properties of the community. With his family he now resides in a fine home in Cottage Grove, where he is taking a well deserved rest and spending his declining years surrounded by his family and friends.

Mr. Shortridge was married, March 13, 1853, to Amelia S. Adams, who was born in Vermilion county, Indiana, in 1835, a daughter of John F. and Rebecca (Hinkle) Adams. Her father and mother were both natives of Kentucky, their wedding, however, being celebrated in Indiana, where they lived for twenty years. After leaving that state they settled in Louisa county, Iowa, and resided there for fifteen years, then crossed the plains by ox teams to Oregon in 1852. The eldest son died of cholera on the trip but none of the other members of the family were afflicted with it. Their first settlement in Oregon was made in Salem Hills, eight miles south of Salem, where the father took up a donation claim of three hundred and twenty acres upon which he resided until within a short time of his death, which occurred in October, 1876. The mother passed away in July, 1876. To them were born ten children, of whom Mrs. Shortridge, who was the seventh in order of birth, and S. Rebecca Rogers, of Turner, Oregon, are the only surviving members. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Shortridge were born seven children, as follows: Emily R., who was born in 1854 and passed away in 1858; Franklin Boone, who was born in 1856 and is a miner at Estacada, Oregon; Mary Rosetta, born in 1857, who married Dr. J. W. Harris, of Eugene; William Johnson, who was born in 1858 and died in infancy; Alice A., who was born in September, 1862, and is the wife of J. J. Weeden, of Lane county, Oregon; Lillie Jane, born in 1865, who passed away in infancy; and Sarah O. C., who married Sam Lacy, of Portland, her birth occurring in 1866.

Mr. Shortridge in his political allegiance is a republican. He has taken considerable interest in politics, has served as deputy sheriff of his county and also for many years filled the office of supervisor. In his fraternal relations he belongs to the Cottage Grove Grange while his religious faith is that of the Christian church of which his family are also members. He is among the earlier settlers of Cottage Grove and has always been a leading and greatly respected citizen of the community. He is a man of sterling integrity, strong personality and possesses a strength of character which makes him greatly esteemed by all who know him. In his official positions he distinguished himself by the efficient service which he rendered to the community and both as a public servant and a private citizen he has always been popular.

LOUIE OTHELLO COLVER is a grandson of that historic pioneer character, Samuel Colver, extended mention of whom is made elsewhere in this work under the biographical sketch introduced by the name of his brother, Frank L. Colver. He resides on a portion of the original homestead, the only home he has ever known, owning seventy-five acres upon which he has built one of the prettiest bungalows on the Pacific highway. He was born near Phoenix, Jackson county, November 27, 1883, a son of Llewelyn and Jemima (Dollarhide) Colver. He was reared on the old homestead and educated in the district schools of his community. Upon reaching manhood he continued living and working on the old place and since 1905 he and his brother Frank have had full charge of that property. In 1910 the estate was settled and Mr. Colver obtained seventy-five acres thereof, upon which he has built a handsome bungalow, one of the most delightful homes in the community. He pursues a general farming and stockraising business and is regarded as one of the progressive young farmers of the county.

Mr. Colver was married June 18, 1908, to Miss Minnie Robison, a daughter of one of the early settlers of the Wagner creek district in Jackson county. In his political faith Mr. Colver adheres to the practices and principles of the republican party. He belongs to Phoenix Camp, No. 438, W. O. W., being one of the active, aggressive members of that organization. He has an extensive acquaintance throughout the county where he is recognized by all who know him as being one of the influential, progressive and estimable citizens of his county. He is a worthy descendant of his illustrious progenitor, Samuel Colver, the sturdy pioneer, possessing much of his spirit, enterprise and unusual business ability.

JOHN W. WEAVER, in the eighty-first year of his age, an active and successful farmer of Douglas county, is engaged in the cultivation of a two hundred acre farm, part of a donation claim of six hundred and forty acres which his father acquired in the early period of the settlement of this state. Mr. Weaver was born in Tennessee on February 28, 1832, and is a son of William and Annie (Adams) Weaver, the former a native of Virginia and the latter of South Carolina.

John Weaver received his early education in the schools of his native section and came to Oregon with his parents in 1850. The journey overland was made with ox teams and took just six months to a day to accomplish. The family settled in Benton county and remained there for six months before they removed to Douglas county where the father took up a claim of six hundred and forty acres which he improved and cultivated until the time of his death. The mother of our subject is also deceased.

John W. Weaver is now living upon two hundred acres which are a part of his father's original claim. He has been an active and progressive farmer all his life and has improved his land to a remarkable extent. It is his ambition to keep abreast of the times and to be well acquainted with every new discovery in the agricultural field. He has a model farm, well equipped with efficient and time-saving machinery and has improved his land along scientific lines.

Mr. Weaver has been twice married. His first union occurred in 1858 when he wedded Miss Harriet Wright, a native of Missouri, who died sixteen months after their marriage. On the 29th of January, 1879, Mr. Weaver married Miss Clara Summer, a native of Illinois, and they became the parents of nine children: Walter, deceased; Lula; Frank, also deceased; Fred; Bertha, John and Annie, all of whom have passed away; Hallie; and Fay.

Politically Mr. Weaver gives his allegiance to the democratic party and has served as postmaster of Myrtle Creek. He otherwise has taken no active part in public affairs, preferring to devote his time and attention to the cultivation of his land. He is a member of the Order of Elks and is well known in fraternal circles of Douglas county. Although he is now in the eighty-first year of his age Mr. Weaver has never lessened his efforts to make his farm one of the most efficiently equipped and modern agricultural holdings in his section of the country. He is an active and progressive man and is well known throughout Douglas county for his scientific agricultural knowledge and his broad and liberal qualities of mind.

SHERMAN S. MORSS, one of the estimable and widely known retired agriculturists of Creswell, is the proprietor of a fine two hundred acre farm in the vicinity and owns a beautiful residence and other property in the city of his adoption. He was born at Cottage Grove, Lane county, July 21, 1869, a son of John M. and Caroline M. (Knox) Morss. The father was a native of Indiana, while the mother was born in Missouri. He crossed the plains with his parents to Oregon in 1853, the mother coming to this state in the same year with her parents. The grandfathers of Mr. Morss took up land in Lane county ten miles distant from Cottage Grove, where the maternal grandfather accumulated two hundred acres of land and Grandfather Morss owned three hundred and twenty acres. Both died in Lane county, aged eighty-two and eighty-four years respectively. John M. Morss was married in 1859 and immediately began farming his donation claim of one hundred and sixty acres, which he operated for nine years. He then traded it for a three hundred and twenty acre tract to which he later added until at the time of his death his holdings amounted to five hundred acres of land located a half mile from Creswell. He divided his farm among his children and is at present living in Creswell at the age of seventy-eight years, while his wife is seventy-two years. Two children were born to them, namely: Samuel B., a nurseryman of Cottage Grove; and Sherman S.

The last named lives on his portion of the homestead, which amounts to two hundred acres. He owns a fine home in Creswell as well as other properties there including a good business building. He was reared on the farm of his father near Creswell and was educated in the public schools of that city. He showed a natural aptitude for agricultural pursuits and took great delight in the beauties of nature, inheriting marked talents as an artist, to the development of which he has given considerable attention. During the time when he was a student in school he assisted his father with the farm work and, on laying aside his text-books, he became actively engaged in the business which he followed until the time of his retirement. As a farmer he was successful from the beginning and, being industrious and frugal, he acquired comparatively early in life in addition to the farm which he owns a considerable amount of income-bearing property which enables him to live in comparative ease, giving his attention principally to looking after his invested interests.

Mr. Morss was married three times, his first union being to Miss Laura E. Sears in 1895. She was a native of Lane county, where she resided all her life, passing away in May, 1898. In December, 1900, he wedded Miss Hattie Miller, who was also born in Oregon. Her death occurred in 1902 and she is survived by one daughter, Beulah K., who was born July 16, 1902, and is now attending school and studying music. The third union of Mr. Morss was to Miss Blanche Gregory, the wedding being celebrated on September 13, 1905. Mrs. Morss was born in Bismarck, North Dakota, February 13, 1887, a daughter of William H. and Mary E. (Patterson) Gregory. Her father was born in Michigan and her mother in Iowa, their marriage, however, being celebrated in North Dakota, in which state they lived for several years, after which they came to Oregon and later removed to British Columbia. Still later they went to Idaho, where the mother's death occurred in 1900. The father still survives and makes his home at Walla Walla, Washington. In their family were three children: Ernest P., born in 1883 and now residing in Minnesota; Carl S., who was born in 1885 and is connected with the fire department of Walla Walla; and Mrs. Morss, who is the third member of the family. By her marriage to Mr. Morss she became the mother of one son, Leon S., whose birth occurred July 16, 1906. Politically Mr. Morss is a prohibitionist and his wife is of the same party. The family are members of the Presbyterian church, being active in their association therewith. Mr. Morss is one of the substantial farmers and business men of Creswell and is popular among his many acquaintances, being a man of excellent social attainments as well as of marked business ability.

T. E. LOBAN is the postmaster at Leland, Josephine county, having been appointed to that position in March, 1910. He has been a resident of Oregon since 1880 and for many years conducted a harness shop in Yamhill county. Mr. Loban is a veteran of the Civil war, having enlisted for service at the early age of seventeen years, and is a member of the Grand Army post at McMinnville. He was born in McHenry county, Illinois, November 5, 1848; a son of Thomas and Saloma (Stowell) Loban, the father a native of Scotland and the mother of Vermont. The wedding of the parents was celebrated in McHenry county, Illinois. In 1849, while they were crossing the plains en route to California, the father died of cholera, and the mother later passed away in Duluth, Minnesota. In their family were two children, the sister of our subject, who is the elder, being Armaina, the wife of M. Stewart, of California.

T. E. Loban after his ninth year began earning his own living and at the age of seventeen enlisted in Company G, of the Ninth Illinois Cavalry for service in the Civil war, and after nine months of service was honorably discharged. Meanwhile he had acquired a common-school education, and after the war he returned to Illinois, where he remained for a short time, after which he went to Iowa, where he spent ten years. The two succeeding years were passed in Nebraska and in 1880 he came to Oregon, locating in Yamhill county, where until 1902 he operated a harness shop in McMinnville. He then removed to Josephine county and settled on a ranch near Wolf creek. In March, 1910, he was appointed postmaster at Leland and has made his home at that place since.

Mr. Loban was married in 1870 to Miss Annetta Manger, a native of Illinois, and unto them were born ten children, as follows: E. M., M. T. and L. L., all residents of Yamhill county; W. N., of Josephine county; Andrew, residing in Portland; E. E., also of Josephine county; Theodore, living at Merlin; Ernest, deceased; Pearl G., the wife of E. A. Perkins, of Merlin; and Agnes, who married G. H. Miller, of Leland.

In his political views Mr. Loban is a socialist and is now serving as school clerk at Leland. He is a member of the Masonic lodge, No. 199, at Glendale, and takes an active interest in that body. He is one of the well known and popular citizens of Leland, enjoying an excellent reputation among his wide circle of acquaintances. He is a valuable member of the community, taking an active interest in political and public affairs, and contributing by his influence and experience to the common good of his town.

JOHN HAMILTON ELLERSON, who owns and operates a ranch of one hundred acres, two and a half miles west of Beaverton, has been living in Oregon for over sixty years; his residence covering the great formative period in the history of the state's development. His birth occurred in Wisconsin on the 29th of July, 1849, and he is a son of David and Annie E. (Lord) Ellerson. His father was a native of the state of New York and his mother of Wisconsin, and they were married in the latter state and for seven years thereafter made it their home. In 1850 together with his wife and family David Ellerson made the overland journey to Oregon, locating in Multnomah county. During the first three years of his residence he operated a ferry for "Uncle Jimmie" Stephens on the Willamette river, but at the expiration of that time he took up a donation claim, giving his undivided attention to the cultivation of his land until 1870. He then withdrew from the work of the fields and removed to Portland, where for a time he operated a wood yard, but subsequently engaged in the street-paving business. After following this occupation for eight years he retired, but continued to make his home in Portland, where he passed away in 1884. He was long survived by his widow, whose death occurred in 1909. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Ellerson there were born nine children: Elizabeth, the eldest, who became the wife of Dr. C. E. Hunt, of Wisconsin; Catherine A., the deceased wife of Cornelius Morrison, of Oregon; James H., of Portland, now deceased; John Hamilton, our subject; Harry J., who is a resident of Multnomah county, Oregon; Alice M., who is living in Multnomah county, Oregon; Emma Florence and William, both of whom are deceased; and Ida, the wife of J. H. Shelton, of St. Helens, Columbia county, Oregon.

As he was only a child of nine months when his parents removed from Wisconsin, the educational advantages of John Hamilton Ellerson were very limited, being confined to the district schools of Washington county. Owing to the sparsely populated country and remoteness of the settlements very little provision was made at that period for educational facilities. Thus the youth of the pioneer families were denied the advantages and opportunities to provide the mental equipment deemed so essential in the attainment of success. When he was twenty-two years of age John Hamilton Ellerson began to work for himself, and for nine years thereafter teamed with his father. At the expiration of that period he bought a tract of land in Washington county that he operated for a few years, and disposing of it invested the proceeds in his present ranch but always having resided in the country, he naturally felt a longing to try city life and removed to Portland. For seven years thereafter he applied his energies to work on the streets of that city and also on the street cars, but recognizing the utter futility of ever hoping to attain financial independence as an employe, returned to his ranch at the end of that time. When he purchased his land it was covered with a dense growth of timber, and thirty acres of this Mr. Ellerson cleared himself and has brought under a high state of cultivation. In addition to his fine homestead he has an interest in three hundred and twenty acres of land belonging to his father's estate, a portion of this being property in the city of Portland. Mr. Ellerson has made extensive improvements on his place and now owns one of the valuable properties of this section. His fields are given his personal supervision and annually yield abundant returns for his labor.

In 1877 John Hamilton Ellerson was united in marriage to Miss Rebecca Hunter, a native of Iowa, and a daughter of Henry C. and Ruamah B. Hunter. It was in the year 1847 that Mr. Hunter decided upon a westward move and started for the great northwest, accompanied by a number of others, all of whom crossed with ox teams to California and thence to Oregon. During the journey overland the party endured many hardships and had many hairbreadth escapes from death by the Indians. The trials of the trip proved too much for Mr. Hunter's health and he had to be taken back to his home in Marion, Linn county, Iowa. He there recuperated, remaining with his family until the spring of 1865, when he returned to Oregon alone, for he still had a strong longing for the west and its opportunities. Arriving at his destination, he prepared a comfortable home and then sent for his wife and children. Mr. and Mrs. Hunter always showed a preference for the open country, and soon became fond of their new home, which consisted of valuable land in Beaverton, Washington county, and here they lived until the time of their death. Mr. Hunter, whose death occurred August 16, 1908, reached the age of eighty-three years, while his wife passed away at the age of eighty. For sixty-two years they had traveled life's path together, bearing its sorrows and sharing its joys.

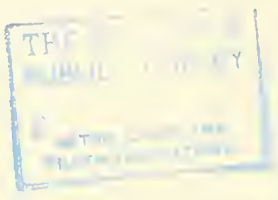
In their family were nine children, which in order of birth were as follows: John, now deceased; Alonzo, who is a farmer and lives in Clackamas county; Julia, who married W. B. Baker, an agriculturist of Clackamas county, and is now deceased; Alexander, a farmer who makes his home in the same county; Elizabeth, the wife of F. C. Hausfus, of Arlington, Washington; Rebecca, who is Mrs. John Hamilton Ellerson; Mary, who is united in marriage to H. G. Poitras, of Portland; William H., who still makes his residence on the old home place in Beaverton; and James F., who has for the past twelve years been employed by the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, and lives in Portland.

Mr. and Mrs. John H. Ellerson became the parents of a son, David Edwin, whose birth

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASTOR
LENOX
TILDEN

MR. AND MRS. HENRY HUNTER

MR. AND MRS. DAVID ELLERSON



occurred in Portland in May, 1889. He is married and makes his home in Forest Grove, Oregon, where he holds a position as dairy inspector.

The political views of Mr. Ellerson conform to the principles of the republican party, but he is not strictly partisan and often times casts an independent ballot in local elections. When he first came to Oregon as a child, there were great forests and vast stretches of prairie that have since been converted into bearing orchards and extensive grain fields, the Indian villages having been succeeded by flourishing towns and cities. He has been an interested observer of this phenomenal development, which is a fulfillment of the prophecy of those brave men and women who formed the advance guard in the westward trend of civilization, their implicit faith in the country's future giving them the courage and fortitude to endure the hardships and privations of the pioneer period.

ALFRED COBB HOWLETT. One of the best informed men in Jackson county on pioneer conditions in this section of Oregon is Alfred Cobb Howlett, proprietor and manager of the Sunnyside Hotel at Eagle Point. His residence in this county covers a period of forty-five years, and during that time he has been identified with various activities and has engaged in different occupations and many are the interesting reminiscences he can relate of his early days in Oregon. He was born in Augusta, Maine, on the 16th of March, 1832, and is a son of James and Mary (Cobb) Howlett. The father was born in Boston, Massachusetts, his natal day being the 4th of March, 1801, while the mother's birth occurred in Lynn, Massachusetts, on the 3d of April, 1803. Soon after their marriage they went to Maine, residing in that state until 1838, when they removed to Missouri, settling in Boone county. In 1849 the father and his two eldest sons, James Henry and our subject, went to California. They made the journey with an ox team, going by way of New Mexico to Los Angeles, and spent the winter just outside of that city at San Gabriel Mission. That spring they engaged in mining and subsequently went to Amador county, California, and there continued their prospecting for a time, and then engaged in the mercantile business. They continued to be identified with this until 1852, when they went to the Suisun valley and engaged in ranching. In 1856 they were joined by the mother and the remainder of the family, who came around the Horn. They made their home in the Suisun valley until the father's death in January, 1875, after which the mother returned to the east and lived with her daughter at Evanston, Illinois, until she passed away in 1886. During his early life James Howlett engaged in the manufacture of tobacco for the European trade on what was an extensive scale for that time. He was a very religious man, however, and feeling that he could no longer conscientiously deal in this commodity he withdrew from the business entirely. Later he turned his attention to agricultural pursuits and the latter years of his life were devoted to farming and church work. He was a local Methodist preacher and supplied many pulpits in California during the pioneer period. Both the father and mother were people of rare culture and education, and Mrs. Howlett, who was reared in the Quaker faith, was for many years a regular contributor to the Ladies' Repository of New York city, a very popular household periodical of that period. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Howlett numbered ten, six of whom, four sons and two daughters, lived to attain maturity, our subject being the second son.

Alfred Cobb Howlett was a youth of seventeen years when he came to California with his father and brother, and had already assumed the duties of manhood. His early education was acquired in the common schools of Missouri, but this was later supplemented by a year's study in the academy at Vacaville, California. During the first four years of his residence here, from 1850 to 1854, he worked in the mines, and later he assisted with the operation of the home ranch in the Suisun valley, remaining there until 1857. He subsequently decided to enter the service of the church and in 1858 he was licensed to preach, and the following year he was admitted to membership in the conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, South. In October, 1861, he began his duties as circuit preacher in Oregon with headquarters at Eugene. His circuit embraced sixteen appointments covering a territory of one hundred and seventy-five miles, and he visited each place of appointment once a month. In the fall of 1862 he was transferred to the Oregon city circuit and the next year he was given charge of the field at Yreka, California. After a year's service in this circuit he was located at Williamsburg, Josephine county, and there terminated his work as a circuit rider. In 1867 he came to Jackson county, settling at Eagle Point, where he taught school during the week and preached on Sunday. He was later forced to abandon this, as the exposure and hard work while on the circuit was beginning to tell on his health, so he went up into the mountains to live until he should be well and strong again. In 1868 he withdrew from the Methodist conference and located on a ranch adjacent to Eagle Point, where he turned his attention to agricultural pursuits and stock raising, but his Sundays were still devoted to religious work, and he held church services every week at various places in the community, and performed such other duties as usually devolve upon a home missionary. Subsequently he removed to Eagle Point and went into the hotel business and in 1901 he erected the present Sunnyside Hotel. It is most delightfully located, fronting on Little Butte creek, and commands a beautiful view of the surrounding valley. In connection with the management of his hotel, Mr. Howlett is still operating his ranch of one hundred and forty seven acres, which is one of the well improved and valuable properties of the community. Ever since September, 1856, he has also been a contributor to the press, many of his articles appearing in the Pacific Methodist of San Francisco. For more than forty years he has been a newspaper correspondent and for the past twenty-seven years has written from one to three letters each week for publication. He possesses a marvelous capacity for work and is most versatile and so intelligently commands his forces that anything he undertakes is performed most capably and efficiently. Mr. Howlett has rendered notable service to the community where he has resided for so many years in various capacities and has the distinction of having organized the first Sunday school in this part of the county, which was convened on Bear creek.

In July, 1863, in the vicinity of Oregon City, Mr. Howlett was united in marriage to Miss Sarah Elizabeth Cooke, who was born in Lafayette county, Missouri, on the 31st of December, 1847. In 1852, at the age of five years, she crossed the plains to Oregon with her parents, William Willis and Martha Jane (Young) Cooke, who located at Oregon City. The father was a native of North Carolina and the mother of Missouri but they both passed away in Clackamas county, this state. To Mr. and Mrs. Howlett there were born thirteen children, six of whom died in infancy, the others being as follows: Walter Henry, who is living in Muskogee, Oklahoma; Alfred Willis, who died at the age of fourteen years; Sarah, the wife of James M. Lewis, of Meadow Lake, Washington; Mildred Maria, who married C. E. Hoyt, of Fort Klamath, Oregon; Octavia Grace, the wife of Grant Shaw, of Fairview, Oregon; Lucy Hattie, who is at home; and Agnes Love, also at home.

The family affiliate with the Congregational church, Mr. Howlett having joined the East Willamette Association of Congregational churches in 1907, since which he has been engaged in home and missionary work for this organization. He is one of the highly esteemed and widely known residents of the county, and has hosts of friends as he is a man who strives to put into practice in his everyday life those principles which he advocates others adopting. He has always been a hard worker and as he is a capable business man he has succeeded in his undertakings, thus acquiring a comfortable competence and some valuable property. Despite the fact that he has attained the venerable age of eighty years he is still leading an active life and gives his personal supervision to his various interests, his energy and enterprise putting to shame many a man years his junior.

RANSOM CARTER, who is a well known farmer, resides near Rogue River on forty acres of well improved and fertile land of which he is the proprietor. He was born in Ohio, November 25, 1856, the son of French and Elizabeth Carter, both natives of Virginia. The parents removed to Ohio early in life and in 1856 went to Kansas, where the mother passed away in 1864. There the family remained until 1874, when they migrated to California, where they resided until 1875, when they came to Oregon and settled on Pleasant creek, in Jackson county. There were three children in the family, all of whom are now deceased except the subject of this review.

Ransom Carter received a good common-school education and remained at home until he was eighteen years of age, assisting his father with the work of the farm. He then became a farm laborer and by carefully saving his earnings was enabled in 1892 to purchase the farm upon which he now resides. He has given to his property the strictest attention and by his well directed efforts has made it very productive.

In 1888 Mr. Carter married Mrs. Ellen (Ammons) Brayton, the widow of D. Brayton and a daughter of D. R. and Nancy Ammons. Her father is now deceased but the mother is living. In their family were five children, three of whom survive. Mr. and Mrs. Carter have become the parents of eleven children: Ida May, the wife of G. F. Howell; Bessie Lee, who married Arthur Werner; Susan E., now Mrs. Harvey Smith; Billie R.; Wilmer E.; Evalena; Robert A.; Olive J.; Roy R.; Grace A.; and Opal G., deceased. By her former marriage Mrs. Carter became the mother of two children: Mertie N., the wife of Finis Mayfield; and Pluma Z., who is Mrs. Fred Yocum. Mr. Carter, who has long been a resident of the community where he now lives, is regarded with great respect by all who know him and held in high esteem by his many friends.

WILLIAM L. NICHOLS is one of the well known and highly esteemed farmers of Douglas county where he is active in the cultivation of six hundred acres of improved ranch land. He makes a specialty of stock-raising and has also in the last ten years built up a flourishing butcher business in Riddles, which is an outgrowth in his activities in the buying and selling of cattle. He was born in Douglas county, November 26, 1856, and is the son of Israel B. and Isabella (Riddle) Nichols, the former a native of Ohio and the latter of Illinois. The father left his native state in 1847 and came overland to California with ox teams. He remained in that state until 1850 when he traveled north to Oregon and settled in Douglas county. He and his wife were pioneer settlers of this district and both died in Oregon.

William L. Nichols is one of a family of twelve children. He received a common-school education in Douglas county and remained at home until he was twenty-one years of age. When he had attained his majority he went into the stock-raising business for himself and was extremely successful along this line. In 1890 he married Miss Ada Fullerton and he and his wife removed to Washington where they remained for four years. At the end of that time he returned to Douglas county and bought the ranch of six hundred acres upon which he is now living, two hundred acres of which belonged to the family estate. He has improved and developed his large holdings, has added many new barns and outbuildings and has operated his farm along modern and scientific lines. He makes a specialty of cattle-raising and is the owner of many head of fine-grade stock. About ten years ago he opened a small butcher shop in the town of Riddles and has built up a flourishing business along this line. He buys and sells cattle of all kinds and is known throughout Douglas county as an expert judge of stock.

In his political affiliations Mr. Nichols is a staunch republican and has always taken an active part in local affairs. He is now serving as chairman of the election board at Riddles and has made an efficient and honorable record in this office. He is a prominent Mason and has served as junior warden in that organization. All during his life Mr. Nichols has been prominent in the agricultural development of Douglas county and has done much toward the progress and development of this section of the country. He is one of the many active, intelligent and broad-minded men who bring to the cultivation of the soil a degree of efficiency along modern and active lines which is rapidly making modern agriculture a progressive science.

ROBERT B. PURVES is residing on the old donation claim taken up by his maternal grandfather, David E. Stearns, in Jackson county, near the present town of Talent. He was born on that farm November 29, 1871, the son of James and Arminda (Stearns) Purves. The grandfather crossed the plains with ox teams from Illinois to Oregon in 1853, settling on Wagner creek, Jackson county, where he took up a donation claim of three hundred and twenty acres on which he and his wife, Fidelia Stearns, spent the remainder of their lives. The father and mother are now residing in Ashland, having removed to that place from the farm in 1910.

Robert B. Purves obtained a common-school education in the district school near the old homestead, his education being somewhat limited, however, as he was the second in order of birth in a family of ten children and his services on the farm were needed to help support the family. As soon as he was large enough to hold the plow he was put to work and thus continued to assist his father with the farm work until he reached maturity, when he also engaged in mining during the winter months. In 1898 and 1899 he conducted a dairy business in Klamath county in partnership with an uncle, O. A. Stearns. During the time he was thus employed he purchased from one of his cousins the northwest forty acres of the home farm, which had been acquired by his brother as an inheritance. He made his home upon that place until 1910, when he sold the farm and bought sixty-seven acres of land, upon which he now resides. He follows general farming, making a specialty of raising alfalfa.

Mr. Purves was married in 1901 to Miss Charlotte Whittington, of Jackson county, but a native of Missouri. She removed to Oregon with her father, William Whittington, in 1888. Mr. and Mrs. Purves are the parents of four children, Floyd B., Clyde Deward, Margaret Isabelle and Robert William.

Politically Mr. Purves is an adherent of the principles and policies of the republican party but has never been an office seeker, although he is at present a member of the school board. He belongs to Talent Lodge, No. 211, I. O. O. F., and also is a member of Oregon Lodge, No. 348, W. O. W., of Phoenix. He is one of the progressive, highly respected and public-spirited citizens of the Wagner creek district and is a successful agriculturist and valued citizen.

JAMES CENTERS CATCHING. The late James Centers Catching was one of the early pioneers of Oregon and a man who during his active life performed his full share in the development of that part of the state in which he established his home. He was born April 4, 1827, and was the son of John and Jane (Warren) Catching, both of whom were natives of Tennessee. In their family were twelve children, all of whom are now deceased.

James C. Catching in company with his brother Ephraim crossed the plains to Oregon in 1847, settling in Douglas county. He took up a donation claim located near Canyonville and there established his early home. In the fall of 1847 he enlisted in the Indian Cayuse war and continued to be identified with his command during the period of that Indian uprising. He later was engaged in prospecting and mining in California and was one of the men who reached the Salmon river district during the time of the gold excitement on that stream, but, however, did not succeed at that place. Later he was very successful in mining in another part of the Golden state. He afterward purchased a homestead known as the Stickner place, located at Sumner, at the head of navigation on Catching Inlet, the place having been named in his brother's honor, and that property together with other interests was a portion of the estate at the time of his death, which occurred January 21, 1905.

In 1854 Mr. Catching was united in marriage to Miss Patsy Ellen Russell, a daughter of Joseph and Mary (Hysmith) Russell. Mr. and Mrs. Russell were the parents of ten children, all of whom are deceased except Mrs. Catching and one son, Cyrus, now a retired farmer residing at Canyonville. To Mr. and Mrs. Catching four children were born. John, the eldest, who is engaged in farming in Coos county, is married and has six children, George, Bertha, Effie, James, Evelyn and Jennie. Bertha is the wife of Paul Crooks. Effie is the wife of Tom Goodale and they have one child, Vernon. Arthur, who completes the family, passed away at the age of four years.

Mr. Catching was a loyal republican during all his life but at no time did he seek political preferment. He was one of the useful and respected citizens of Douglas county, in which he passed the major portion of his active career, and his death lost to that part of the state one of its most esteemed and enterprising citizens.

C. A. BARRETT is the owner of a hardware store in Athena and is also engaged very extensively in stock-raising in Umatilla county. The breadth and importance of his business interests place him in a foremost position among the citizens of his part of the state and in the political field he has also labored earnestly and effectively in support of measures and movements which he deems of value to the public good. The entire width of the continent separates him from his birthplace, for he is a native of Sumner, Oxford county, Maine, his birth having there occurred June 21, 1852. His parents were James S. and Elizabeth M. (Barrows) Barrett, who were likewise natives of Maine, in which state they spent their entire lives, the father following the occupation of farming.

C. A. Barrett was the second son in a family of six sons and four daughters. In his home district he acquired a common-school education and resided with his parents upon the farm until seventeen years of age. He afterward spent two years in Massachusetts and there learned the boot and shoe trade, working in a large factory. The opportunities of the far west, however, attracted him and in 1872, when a young man of twenty years, he made his way alone to Oregon by way of San Francisco. At the Golden Gate he took passage on a steamer bound for Portland and thence by Columbia river boat and stage went to Weston, Umatilla county. He spent the first winter in the northwest in the vicinity of that place and in the spring of 1873 secured a position on a stock ranch owned by J. F. and H. C. Adams, near where the town of Adams now stands. For six years he continued with those employers and, saving his earnings, at length made investment in sheep and other live stock. For seven years he continuously engaged in the live-stock business and as he prospered in his undertakings he made larger and still larger investments in land. In 1883 he turned his attention to commercial pursuits, establishing a hardware business at Centerville, now the city of Athena. Here he has since conducted his trade and has a well appointed store, which has brought to him a gratifying annual income. He has also continued his live-stock interests save that at the present time he raises no sheep. However, he keeps on hand many head of cattle and horses and his property includes a very large stock ranch ten miles north of Athena on Pine creek. He has altogether thirty-five hundred acres of land, of which he devotes two thousand acres to stock-raising, while twelve or fifteen hundred acres are utilized for general farming purposes. His holdings include not a little land in close proximity to Athena, for he has eight hundred and forty acres near the city devoted to wheat-raising. He likewise has extensive real-estate holdings in Athena, where he owns two brick business blocks and other buildings. He erected brick buildings with a seventy-five foot frontage, a part of which were the first brick structures in the city, and otherwise he has taken active and helpful interest in making improvements in the town.

In fact, in all that he does Mr. Barrett is actuated by a spirit of progress which is manifest in his political as well as in his commercial and agricultural connections. He has always affiliated with the republican party and is connected with its progressive branch. For a number of terms he has served as city councilman and has also filled the office of mayor of Athena. He has likewise been chairman of the water commission for several years and the city water works were established largely through his practical and intelligently directed efforts. He has been a member of the school board for a number of years and the cause of education finds in him a stalwart champion. Still higher official honors, however, have been conferred upon him, for in 1906 he was elected to the lower house of the state legislature and received endorsement of his first term in reelection in 1908, so that he served altogether for four years in the house. In 1910 he was elected senator from the district embracing Umatilla, Union and Morrow counties, his incumbency to continue through 1914. He stands for advancement in political as well as business lines and believes that party politics should further the interests of the community at large rather than those of the individual. Indeed, he is opposed to anything like misrule in municipal or governmental affairs and over his official record there falls no shadow of wrong or suspicion of evil. He is recognized as one of the political leaders of the county, having for the past twenty years been an active factor in republican circles.

In 1877 occurred the marriage of C. A. Barrett and Miss Jennie E. Mays, of Weston, Oregon, who came to this county in 1868 with her parents, John C. and Martha J. (Nye) Mays, who had arrived in Oregon in 1852, settling first at McMinnville after they had crossed the plains with ox teams. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Barrett have been born two children: Areta, the wife of Dr. J. D. Plamondon, who is mentioned elsewhere in this work; and Henry A., who is his father's partner in the hardware business and superintends his farming.

Mr. Barrett is identified with the Elks, the Knights of Pythias and the Woodmen of the World and is loyal to the teachings of these different organizations. The record which he has made as a merchant, as a ranchman and a public official has at all times been most creditable. In his business affairs he has displayed notable enterprise and sound judgment and in all his dealings has been known for his prompt and honorable methods, which have won him the deserved and unbounded confidence of his fellowmen. He commanded

C. A. BARRETT

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASTOR, LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS.

the respect of members of the state legislature and all who know him have the highest admiration for his good qualities of heart and mind.

W. M. COBURN, who is an enterprising farmer of Marion county, residing three and one half miles southeast of Salem, was born in Madison county, New York, July 23, 1855, a son of Silas and Ellen (Baker) Coburn. The father was also a native of Madison county, born September 15, 1832, but his parents came from Connecticut and were of English descent. He resided in New York until shortly before the beginning of the Civil war, when he moved to Wisconsin, and later to Minnesota, where he remained a short time. Subsequently entering the war, he died in the service while in the south. The mother was born in Jefferson county, New York, February 22, 1836, and having reached the advanced age of seventy-six years, is now residing in Salem, where she is greatly loved by all her acquaintances.

W. M. Coburn, an only child, was educated in the common schools of New York and left that state in 1869, going to Minnesota, where he lived until 1874. At that date he came to Oregon and resided in Salem for three years, at the end of which time he went to Idaho and later to Washington, where he spent sixteen years as a ranchman. In 1891 he returned to Oregon and settled on his present farm. He owns twenty acres of good ranch land and also operates one hundred and forty-nine acres for his mother, on which he is successfully engaged in general farming.

In 1881, Mr. Coburn was united in marriage to Miss Susie E. Quimby, and they have become the parents of five children. They are: J. M., who wedded Miss Evelyn McAllister and resides at home; Hester, now Mrs. Rue Drager, of Stayton, Oregon; Caroline, the wife of G. H. Grabenhorst, of Salem; Lena D. and Harriet, both of whom are at home.

Mr. Coburn's political allegiance is given to the republican party and fraternally he is identified with the Ancient Order of United Workmen. Both he and his wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal church. He has since the beginning of his career shown those traits of energy, industry and perseverance which mark him as a strong factor in the development of the welfare of the community in which he resides.

HON. CARLTON E. HARMON. Among the pioneers of Oregon who have devoted a large share of their time and energy to public service, Hon. Carlton E. Harmon is worthy of special mention. He served for four years as a state senator, many years as a county official and was for a long time a teacher in the public schools of this state. He is now residing on his forty-acre ranch where he conducts a hotel and keeps a stage station. He was born in Iowa, November 2, 1867, a son of Tilmon and Lydia (Hathaway) Harmon. The father was a native of Illinois while the mother was born in Indiana, and in their family were seven children of whom our subject was the eldest. The parents removed to California in 1873 and after spending some time in that state removed overland with their family to Oregon, settling in Albany and there remaining for three years. They then came to Josephine county, where the family located permanently.

Carlton E. Harmon was given a good common-school education and at the age of eighteen years began teaching in the rural schools of Josephine county and thus continued from 1885 until 1891. He was married, August 18, 1892, to Miss Ellie Green, a native of Oregon, and to their union six children have been born, all of whom survive with the exception of one. They are as follows: Louis, Lois, Gladys, Ruth, Elsie and Donald, and all five of those who are living reside with their parents.

Politically Mr. Harmon is a republican and he was first elected to public office in 1890, being chosen as county assessor, serving in that capacity for two years. He was elected to the county clerkship in 1892, a position which he held for four years, then in 1896 was elected to represent his district in the state senate, an office which he held with distinction to himself and satisfaction to his constituents for four years. In 1899 he was appointed postmaster of Grants Pass and for nine years acceptably fulfilled the duties devolving upon him in connection with that office. He then removed to his ranch of forty acres near Wonder, in Josephine county, where he conducts a hotel and stage station and also farms. Fraternally he belongs to the Elks lodge, his membership being at Roseburg. He is one of the extremely well known citizens of Josephine county where his long and honorable career has made him a conspicuous figure. He is universally respected, has an unusually large number of intimate personal friends and is greatly esteemed by all who know him.

PROFESSOR H. C. BAUGHMAN, superintendent of schools of Lane county and one of the progressive young educators in this part of the state, was born at Pleasant Hill, Oregon, September 4, 1880, and is a son of William Howard and Luetta (Callison) Baughman. His paternal grandfather, Samuel Baughman, came from Illinois across the plains to the northwest in the early '50s and settled at Pleasant Hill in Lane county. He was a farmer and became closely identified with the agricultural development of Oregon. His first wife was Sarah McCall, from whom Professor Baughman is descended. Samuel Baughman and Sarah McCall were married in the east and Mrs. Baughman died in the '70s. In their family were five sons and three daughters, of whom William H. Baughman was the third in order of birth. He was reared at Pleasant Hill and devoted his life to general farming, being recognized as one of the representative agriculturists of his community, whose labors proved an effective element in advancing public progress. He died in 1902, at the age of fifty-five years. His wife was a daughter of Robert Callison, a pioneer of Lane county who was a native of Kentucky. The family were all members of the first Christian church organized in the county and took an active interest in the agricultural development and the material progress of the community.

H. C. Baughman was educated in the public schools and at Ashland, Oregon, but before even completing his own education had already begun teaching. He has taught for twelve years in Lane county and during that period was for two years at the head of the Coburg schools and for one year was principal of the Geary school in Eugene. He was also superintendent of the schools of Springfield, Oregon, for four years and entered upon his fifth year's work there when he was appointed by the county court to fill the vacancy in the office of county superintendent of schools caused by the resignation of W. B. Dillard. He holds to high ideals in his professional service, is constantly studying the most advanced methods of the profession and has greatly raised the standard of the schools both as a teacher and as superintendent. He belongs to the National Educational Association.

Professor Baughman was married in 1901 to Rosa Lee Rees, a daughter of M. V. and Martha Rees, of Thurston. They have three children, Howard R., Max K. and Dorothy. The parents are members of the Christian church at Springfield and their influence is always on the side of righteousness, justice and truth. Professor Baughman is a descendant of some of the earliest pioneers of the county but it is not this which entitles him to representation among the leading citizens of Lane county but rather his excellent work as an educator and his attractive social qualities, which render him popular wherever he is known.

CHARLES E. TERRILL is the owner of a fine ranch of ninety-four acres in the vicinity of Brownsboro, where he successfully engages in breeding and raising thoroughbred horses. He has been identified with agricultural pursuits and stock-raising in Jackson county since his boyhood, having been reared in this county, although he is a native of Linn county. His birth occurred on the 29th of September, 1867, and he is a son of H. J. and Lucy A. Terrill, who were born, reared and married in Ohio. They subsequently removed to Iowa, residing there until 1867 when they came to Oregon, making the journey with a mule team and wagon. Upon their arrival here they located in Linn county, but the next year they came to Jackson county and bought three hundred and twenty acres of land for which they paid two hundred and fifty dollars, and upon this place they resided until 1889. The father passed away in 1910, at Talent, and the mother who has attained the age of seventy-seven, still makes her home in Talent. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Terrill numbered eleven and the six who are living all reside in this county.

Charles E. Terrill was reared amid the pioneer conditions that yet prevailed in this section of Oregon at that period, and while mastering the common branches of learning in the local schools assisted his father about the ranch. By the time he had attained his maturity he was thoroughly familiar with the practical methods of tilling the fields and caring for the crops and was well qualified to undertake the management of a place of his own. After attaining his majority he left home and bought five hundred and twenty acres of land and engaged in ranching for himself. He subsequently sold all of his place but ninety-four acres and is now devoting his attention to raising horses. He owns a fine breed of Belgian stock, having one stallion that cost him four thousand dollars. Mr. Terrill has prospered in his undertakings as is manifested by his highly improved ranch. His fields have been carefully tilled and brought into a high state of productivity and at various times he has installed on his ranch many modern conveniences, making it one of the best equipped places in this section of the county. He is practical and systematic in his methods and gives his personal supervision to every detail connected with the operation of his ranch, as a result it has an appearance of thrift and prosperity suggestive of capable management and intelligent direction.

In 1897 Mr. Terrill was united in marriage to Miss Effie Bradshaw, a native of Nebraska and a daughter of W. H. and Delilah Bradshaw. The parents came to Oregon about 1890 and purchased a thousand acres of land in Jackson county. The father passed away in Medford but the mother is still living and continues to make her home in the latter place. They were the parents of four children. Mr. and Mrs. Terrill have two sons: Glenn, who is twelve years of age; and Dalton, who is looking forward to his tenth birthday.

Fraternally Mr. Terrill is affiliated with Medford Lodge, No. 1168, B. P. O. E., while in politics he is a republican and is now school clerk. He has always been active and enterprising in his undertakings and is meeting with highly deserved success by reason of his unwearied diligence and perseverance.

W. H. BOSWELL, one of the enterprising business men of Newberg, Oregon, was born March 15, 1890, in Malheur county, Oregon. The first Boswell to come to America was a captain of one of the first three ships that sailed to St. Augustine, Florida. From this southern port the family drifted north into Pennsylvania and then crossed over to the central states, where they stopped for a time before coming west to the Pacific coast states. The great-grandfather was one of the pioneer medical missionaries among the white men of the west, having come to the station at Colfax, Washington, before the massacre. Mr. Boswell's maternal grandfather was a soldier in the Civil war, enlisting in an Indiana regiment.

The father, Robert Boswell, a concrete contractor, is living at Medford in this state. In 1870 he crossed the plains to Grand Ronde valley and has always been actively associated with stock-raising in this part of the state, at one time being inspector for the territory including Malheur, Lake and Harney counties. In addition to this important position he has also held several minor offices. Mr. and Mrs. Boswell are the parents of three children: Cecile, the wife of R. O. Horning, who is now residing in Newberg; W. H., the subject of this sketch; and Robert, who is a resident of Medford.

W. H. Boswell received his education in the public and high schools of Medford and then took up a commercial course. When he left school thus equipped with business training he entered the general grocery store which his father was then conducting, but he remained here only one year. However, he again associated himself with the activities his father was carrying on, this time in the concrete business which has been purchased after the grocery store was sold. For a year and a half he helped conduct this growing enterprise. Then he began a business career for himself by purchasing Mr. Bradley's photograph gallery at Newberg and since May, 1911, he has been conducting this gallery in a highly satisfactory manner. He was well prepared to enter this line of work because he had been in photographic field work and had also received some training under his predecessor in the gallery he now owns.

On the 6th of June, 1911, Mr. Boswell was married to Stella Schuler, a native of North Dakota and a daughter of Richard Schuler, a retired farmer, who came to Oregon from North Dakota in 1907.

In politics Mr. Boswell is a republican and to that party he gives his support. He is a member of the Baptist church and of the Modern Woodmen of America. Although a young man, Mr. Boswell has already made a good start in life and with a continuance of the quick perceptive faculty he has shown he will meet with success in the business to which he has brought the modern ideas recently advanced in photographic art.

J. E. PARMLEY. For almost twenty-five years J. E. Parmley has been a resident of Oregon and he has no cause to regret establishing his home in this state, as he has prospered financially and is one of the well known and highly respected citizens of Washington county. A native of Wayne county, Kentucky, he was born in August, 1855, a son of J. E. and Lottie (Baker) Parmley. The parents were also natives of the Blue Grass state and spent their entire lives there. The father died in 1879 and the mother was called away in 1861, when the son J. E., was about six years of age. There were seven children in the family of Mr. and Mrs. Parmley, namely: Brack, who died in Iowa in 1910; Robert, of Missouri; Esther, who makes her home in Kentucky; William, of Kansas; Polly, of Oklahoma; Betty, deceased; and J. E.

At fourteen years of age J. E. Parmley left home and started out upon his own account to meet the world. He secured passage on a boat by holding a torch at night and landed at Cairo, Illinois. After crossing into Missouri he was obliged to walk for three days before he found employment and the first wages he earned were at the rate of ten dollars a month. He spent a year at Leadville, Missouri, and then went with his brother to Iowa and was engaged in farm work for two years. He herded cattle for two years and spent the next three years as a farm laborer, at the end of which time he returned to his old home in Kentucky and was married. He lived for a year in Kentucky upon a farm which he purchased, but having heard many interesting stories concerning the resources and possibilities of the northwest, he disposed of his place and emigrated to Washington territory. He secured employment in a flour mill for a year and then came to Cornelius, Washington county, Oregon. He was greatly pleased with this section of the state and located upon a claim near Banks, of which he acquired full ownership in 1888. Here he has since made his home. He has a well improved farm, forty acres of which are in a high state of cultivation. He also owns forty acres of farm land a half mile east of his homestead and is the owner of a number of buildings and vacant lots at Banks. Being a man of sound business judgment he has prospered in his affairs and is today one of the substantial citizens of the county.

In 1879 Mr. Parmley was married to Miss Alice Randall, of Kentucky, the youngest of a family of nine children. Their names are John, Sarah, William, Sherman, Susan, Roman, James, Nannie and Alice. These children are all living except Sarah. Mr. and Mrs. Parmley are the parents of four children. Fillmore H., the eldest, was born September 29, 1884, and was educated in the common schools and at a business college. He was married to Miss Viola Shipley, a native of Nebraska, who came to Oregon with her parents in 1898. Mr. and Mrs. Shipley reside in Washington county. Fillmore H. and Viola Parmley are the parents of two children: Cleo, who was born in 1909; and Christina B., born December 25, 1910. Lilly, the second of the children of J. E. and Alice Parmley, was born in Kentucky in September, 1886. She married Ole Hopkins, of Washington county, Oregon, and they have two children: Wilbur, who was born October 29, 1907; and Leona, born October 22, 1909. The two youngest children are Ray and Florida, the former of whom was born in 1894 and the latter in 1902.

Mr. Parmley has been a supporter of the democratic party ever since he reached maturity, but not through any desire to share in the honors or emoluments of office. His interest has been centered in his business and his family, but he has not been unmindful of his duties as a citizen and is a willing supporter of all movements that seek to promote the public welfare. He and his family are members of the Methodist Episcopal church. A patriotic and public-spirited citizen, he has gained and retained the confidence and respect of all with whom he has come into contact either in business or social relations.

ELDIN W. LAMB. Oak Hill farm, comprising one hundred and sixty acres two miles southwest of Forest Grove, is one of the attractive agricultural properties of Washington county and its owner, Eldin W. Lamb, is regarded as one of the progressive men of Oregon. He is a practical farmer of long experience and by intelligent supervision and the application of modern methods he secures from his place highly gratifying results. He was born in Jefferson county, Iowa, December 9, 1856, a son of Jacob and Selina (Byers) Lamb. The mother is of Scotch descent and is a daughter of Thomas and Mary Byers. The father was born in Ohio and in his boyhood learned the tailor's trade, which he followed for many years. In 1853 he removed to Iowa and engaged for a few years at his trade in that state, but finally applied himself to farming. In 1865 he located in Jasper county, Iowa, where he died nine years later. The mother is still living and makes her home at Spencer, Iowa, being now in her eighty-seventh year. Three children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Lamb, the youngest of whom is the subject of this review. The others are: John B., who lives at Spencer; and Mary M., who is the wife of G. R. Ward, also of Spencer.

Eldin W. Lamb removed with his parents to Jasper county, Iowa, at the age of nine years and in the district schools secured his preliminary education. In March, 1874, when he was sixteen years old, he went to Clay county, Iowa, and resided on his brother's farm until the spring of 1878. After arriving at maturity he purchased one hundred and sixty acres and engaged successfully in agriculture and stock-raising for twenty-two years. At the end of this time, however, he left Iowa and landed at Portland, July 20, 1900. He lived for nine months in the city and in March, 1901, purchased one hundred and sixty acres in Washington county, which is known as the Oak Hill farm. In April, 1901, he visited his old home in Iowa on business and pleasure, but returned in September of the same year and has ever since actively applied himself to the improvement of his place. He is diligent and persevering in all his undertakings and now enjoys the results of many years of wisely applied effort.

On July 27, 1892, in Clay county, Iowa, Mr. Lamb was married to Miss Minnie Shaffer, a daughter of William F. and Mary E. (Van Matre) Shaffer. Mrs. Lamb was born in Stephenson county, Illinois, April 20, 1869. At the age of three years she was taken to Clay county, Iowa, and there grew to womanhood, receiving advantages of a good education in the common schools. Her father was a native of Pennsylvania and removed to Illinois about the time he reached maturity and there engaged in farming. He passed the last years of his life in Clay county, Iowa. The mother of Mrs. Lamb was born at Whiteoak Springs, Illinois, and died in Clay county, Iowa, May 19, 1898. In the family of Mr. and Mrs. Shaffer were nine children, namely: John L., who makes his home at Minneapolis, Minnesota; Alice E., who is the wife of P. Roberts, of Royal, Iowa; Jennie, who married A. L. Adams, of St. Paul, Minnesota; Samantha S., now Mrs. S. Wetmore, of Redwood Falls, Minnesota; Susie L., the wife of N. W. Reese, of Stewartville, Minnesota; Minnie, now Mrs. Eldin W. Lamb; Flora E., who married L. R. Jones, of Hadley, Minnesota; and Charles W. and Jay Leroy, both of whom are living at Redwood Falls. Mr. and Mrs. Lamb are the parents of four children: Edith M., who was born on December 24, 1893; Donald E., born December 29, 1897; Wilbur W., born at Portland, November 18, 1900; and Florence E., born January 10, 1904. All of the children are at home. Mr. Lamb and his wife are members of the Christian church of Forest Grove and are prominent in religious and social circles of this region. He gave his support to the republican party as a young man and he has seen no reason to change his allegiance to any other political organization. Throughout life he has been observant and willing to learn and he has adopted many suggestions in his business which have proved of material benefit. He is loyal to his state and has gained a host of friends in Washington county, who have found him to be generous in his dealings and governed in all his acts by a high sense of justice and truth.

GEORGE T. ELLIS is interested in a large transfer business in Baker City, Oregon, but prior to entering into his present connection devoted thirty-five years of his life to the active work of the Baptist ministry. Failing health caused his retirement therefrom and he sought rest in a change of vocation, so that he now figures as one of the leading and enterprising business men of his adopted city. New England claims him as a native son, his birth having occurred in Caledonia county, Vermont, February 10, 1851. His father, T. A. Ellis, was born in New Hampshire, November 4, 1820, and was a farmer by occupation. After living on the Atlantic coast for many years he sought the far off Pacific slope, journeying westward to eastern Oregon in 1862. He soon afterward established his home at Grande Ronde, where he secured a homestead claim and developed a good farm property, upon which he spent his remaining days, his death occurring in 1896. His wife, who bore the maiden name of Jane Dow, and was a native of Vermont, died in 1887, at the age of sixty-four years. In their family were six children, of whom three are yet living, George T. Ellis being the youngest. His surviving sisters are: Mrs. Martha J. Crandall, who is living in Spokane, Washington; and Mrs. Mary A. Cummings, of Montpelier, Vermont.

In the public schools of the east George T. Ellis pursued his education until he entered Bucknell University, at Lewisburg, Pennsyl-

MR. AND MRS. E. W. LAMB

THE
PUBLIC
ASTOR
TILDEN

vania. His interest in the moral progress of the race led to his determination to devote his life to the ministry and he qualified for preaching the gospel in accordance with the teachings of the Baptist church. In 1874 he entered actively upon the work in Michigan and for almost thirty-five years thereafter continued in that field, serving in but five pastorates throughout the entire time—a fact indicative of his popularity with his parishioners and the efficacy of his labors in behalf of the church. He came to Oregon in 1884 and was pastor at La Grande for six years, at the end of which time he came to Baker City, filling the pulpit of the Baptist church at that place for fourteen years. Subsequently he spent four years in Athena and then failing health caused him to put aside the active work of the ministry. He returned to Baker in 1908 and became interested in the Ellis Transfer Company, with which he is still connected. In this enterprise he is associated with his son, who has the more active management of the business that is bringing substantial returns and is continually growing.

Mr. Ellis has never failed to manifest deep interest in the church and its work, although forced to retire from his place as teacher and preacher, because his denomination is very dear to him, as its teachings embody principles as he interprets them and yet even above doctrinal prejudice he holds to that Christianity that reaches out in sympathy and helpfulness to all mankind. His political allegiance has long been given to the prohibition party and thus he has manifested his attitude toward the temperance question. He stands for all that means the uplift of humanity, the progress of the individual and the advancement of the general community. His cooperation in many public movements has been a tangible element for good in the city in which he makes his home.

In 1872 Mr. Ellis was united in marriage to Miss Clara M. Britten, who was born in Pennsylvania. Mr. and Mrs. Ellis have become the parents of one son, William H., who is manager of the transfer business, in which both he and his father are interested financially. He, too, occupies a prominent and influential position in business circles here. He pursued his education in the schools of Baker City until graduated from the high school with the class of 1894. Immediately afterward he became connected with the draying business, starting in that line in August, 1894. He delivered for a man for a time in order to obtain the use of his wagon and horses and thus he made his start. Something of the growth of the business is indicated in the fact that he now utilizes eleven teams and wagons and employs a dozen or fourteen men in the conduct of a general transfer, storage and coal business. For seventeen years he has employed men and has never dismissed but two from his service, and then for cause, which shows the close relations existing between employer and employe. It indicates, too, that absolute justice is maintained and speaks as no other fact could of the equitable business methods of William H. Ellis. In the public life of the community, too, he has been an important factor. He was chief of the volunteer fire department and reorganized it into a partially paid department in 1898. He was one of the first councilmen who did duty in the new city hall, and for the past twelve years has been humane officer. He is a member of the city board of charities and is a member of the building committee of the Young Men's Christian Association. He served as captain of the winning team in the whirlwind campaign for raising funds for the erection of the new building, continuing to act in that capacity until the last day. His fraternal relations are with the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks, the Knights of Pythias and the Woodmen of the World. He also belongs to the Commercial Club and in that connection does everything in his power to promote the business activity and consequent prosperity of the city. His political faith is that of the republican party and his religious belief that of the Baptist church.

On the 22d of December, 1897, William H. Ellis was married to Miss Lizzie Woods, a native of Iowa, and a daughter of Richard and Margaret (Speers) Woods, the former a grocer. Unto Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Ellis have been born two children, Henry Claire and Clara.

No history of Baker City would be complete without extended reference to George T. and William H. Ellis, father and son. Both are allied with all that pertains to the welfare and best interests of the city. They stand prominent among the progressive, enterprising, industrious business men whose intelligently directed labors accomplish results and yet their industrial interests do not monopolize their time and attention to the exclusion of active participation in other affairs of equal importance to the individual and the city. In fact they stand for advancement along all lines and have contributed in large measure to the material, intellectual, social, political and moral progress of the community.

JOHN SCHOLL, senior partner of the hardware firm of J. Scholl & Son, of Hubbard, has been a resident of Marion county for over forty years. He was born in Shelby county, Missouri, on the 15th of February, 1847, and is a son of George F. and Dora (Blank) Scholl, both natives of Germany. The father, whose natal year was 1819, emigrated to the United States to seek his fortune in 1833 and being favorably impressed with conditions as he found them decided to remain. In 1845 he was married at Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, to Miss Blank, who was born in 1820 and emigrated to this country in the same year as her husband. As he had never learned a trade, when he first came to this country, Mr. Scholl worked as a day laborer or followed any other occupation that offered him living wages. Soon after his marriage, however, he and his wife went to Missouri, joining a German colony at Bethel, that state where everything was held in common. They remained there until 1865 when together with some of the other members they crossed the prairies to Oregon, locating at Aurora, this county, where they established another community. After the death of the leader, some of the younger members became dissatisfied with conditions, so they disbanded by mutual consent in 1883, distributing the property equally among the different shareholders. The portion of Mr. Scholl and his heirs was one hundred and fifty-seven acres, which is now the property of our subject. This was the home of the parents until 1892, when the father passed away, following which the mother resided with her children, making her home with her daughter at Hubbard at the time of her death in 1897. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Scholl numbered six, as follows: Louisa, who is living in Hubbard; David, now deceased, whose widow is residing at Aurora; Mary, also deceased; Caroline, the wife of George M. Fry, a retired merchant of Hubbard, and the mother of two children; John, our subject; and Frederick, who makes his home in Hubbard.

John Scholl was a member of the Aurora community until it was disbanded, after which he began for himself as an agriculturist. He subsequently purchased the interest of the other heirs in the property they had drawn from the colony, engaging in its cultivation until 1897. In the latter year he withdrew from farming and turned his attention to contracting and building, following this for about six years. At the expiration of that time he decided to identify himself with commercial activities and established a hardware store in Hubbard which he has ever since been conducting. His second son, George F., is associated with him as an equal partner, the enterprise being operated under the firm name of J. Scholl & Son. They carry a very good assortment of shelf and heavy hardware and as they have an extensive acquaintance throughout the county enjoy a very good trade. Their methods of conducting the enterprise are above question, and as their wares are fully commensurate in quality with the prices asked, they have succeeded in building up a permanent following.

For his wife and helpmate, Mr. Scholl chose Miss Mary M. Warner, who was born in Ohio in 1846, her parents being Frederick and Gotleibie Warner. They were likewise members of the Aurora community, having crossed the plains with the colonists. Seven children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Warner, as follows: Catherine, who died and left two children; John, also deceased; Mary M., now Mrs. Scholl; Louisa, who is deceased; Susan, the wife of Arnold Zimmerman, of Chicago; and Frederick, who is deceased, as likewise is Josephine, the wife of Christ Crieger, by whom she had four children. Mr. and Mrs. Scholl are the parents of four sons. Henry F., who was born on the 2d of June, 1871, is a machinist and is following his trade in Hubbard. He married Clara Stahl and they have two children, Lucille and Carmen. George F., whose natal day was the 7th of December, 1873, chose for his wife Annie Will, a daughter of Leonard and Tryphena (Forsner) Will, members of the Aurora community as likewise were the grandparents, and they are the parents of two children: Lenore, who was born on the 1st of November, 1908; and Alveria, whose natal day was February 1, 1911. Lawrence M., whose birth occurred on the 30th of November, 1876, married Miss Sadie Christina Wolfer, a daughter of George and Octavia Wolfer, and they have two children, Velma and Vesta. David J., whose natal year was 1878, married Annie Gowdy.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Scholl are Lutherans and have reared their family in that faith, while fraternally he is an Odd Fellow. A stanch republican in politics he gives his unqualified support to the men and measures of that party, but he has never been an aspirant to official honors. A man of energy and keen business discernment, he has prospered in his undertakings and in addition to his store and the building in which it is located owns a fine residence property, and also his old ranch. Mr. Scholl enjoys the esteem of a large circle of acquaintances, whose respect he has won and retained by reason of his genuine worth and sound business principles.

CONRAD ALGESHEIMER, who devotes his time and energies to general agricultural pursuits, is the owner of a tract of two hundred and six acres of rich and productive land, lying seven miles southwest of Beaverton. His birth occurred near Milwaukee, Wisconsin, in 1864. His parents were George and Eva Algesheimer, who were born, reared and married in Germany. Crossing the Atlantic to the United States in 1858, his parents took up their abode near Milwaukee, Wisconsin, and there resided for nineteen years. On the expiration of that period, in 1877, they came to Washington county, Oregon, George Algesheimer purchasing three hundred and seventy-three acres of land and continuing to reside here until called to his final rest, in 1881. For four years he had survived his wife, who passed away in 1877. Unto them were born nine children, five of whom are still living, as follows: John, who is a resident of Washington county, Oregon; Mary Elerson, living in Portland; Christ, also of Portland; Conrad, of this review; and George, who makes his home in Portland.

Conrad Algesheimer attended the common schools in the acquirement of an education. He remained under the parental roof until twenty years of age, when he went to Portland and there worked for one year. On the expiration of that period, in association with his brother John, he purchased his father's estate of three hundred and seventy-three acres, and, at the present time, owns two hundred and six acres thereof. A tract of one hundred and forty acres has been brought under a high state of cultivation and improvement. The property was entirely covered with brush and timber when it first came into possession of the family.

but has been developed into excellent farming land and is well drained. In the conduct of his agricultural interests, Mr. Algesheimer has won a gratifying measure of prosperity, annually gathering rich crops which find a ready sale on the market.

Since age conferred upon him the right of franchise, Mr. Algesheimer has supported the men and measures of the republican party, believing that its principles are most conducive to good government. The honors and emoluments of office, however, have never had any attraction for him. He is a man of strong character and sterling worth, and well merits the high regard in which he is uniformly held.

DR. JOHN WILLIAM HUFF, the present city physician, is one of the worthy representatives of the medical fraternity of Baker City, where he has built up a lucrative practice. He is a native of Harrison county, Iowa, his birth having occurred on the 14th of October, 1857, and a son of Hiram M. and Lucinda (McGahan) Huff. The father was born in Kentucky in 1832, but the mother was a native of Illinois, her birth occurring in 1830. In his early manhood, Hiram M. Huff went to western Iowa, where for many years he engaged in agricultural pursuits, but he subsequently withdrew from the active work of the fields and disposing of his interests there came to Oregon, and is now living retired in Baker City. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Huff numbered six, our subject being the eldest of the four who are living. In order of birth the others are as follows: Clara M., the wife of M. T. Weston, of Missouri Valley, Iowa; B. Frank, who is connected with the Baker Grocery Company of Baker and Thomas C., a ranchman living about six miles northeast of Baker.

The early years in the life of Dr. Huff were passed on the farm where he was born, his early education being obtained in the common schools of that vicinity. Later he supplemented this by a course at Magnolia Academy at Magnolia, Iowa, and afterward engaged in teaching. He followed this profession for three years, but having decided that he would become a physician, at the end of that time he matriculated in the Rush Medical College at Chicago. He was graduated from this institution in 1881 with the degree of M. D., and immediately returned to Iowa and established an office at Modale, that state. He engaged in general practice there for four years, and at the expiration of that period located in Missouri Valley, Harrison county. Six years later he again removed, this time locating in Onawa, Monona county, Iowa. His residence there covered a period of fifteen years, and during that time he was the local surgeon for three railroad companies and was also a member of the board of pension surgeons. These duties together with his large practice kept him very busy, but nevertheless, Dr. Huff found opportunity to serve the municipality in various ways, having at one time been a member of the school board, while for four years he discharged the duties of county coroner. He has always taken an active interest in all matters affecting the welfare of his profession and while living in Onawa was president of the Monona County Medical Society. In August, 1905, he removed to Baker City, where he bought the practice and office of a retiring physician. Dr. Huff has met with very good success in his work here and is enjoying a good practice. That he is a thoroughly qualified and capable practitioner he has often times demonstrated during the period of his residence, and he has become recognized as one of the leading members of his profession in the town. In addition to his private practice he is discharging the duties of city physician, having been the incumbent of this office since 1911.

On the 17th of June, 1888, Dr. Huff was united in marriage to Miss Ella Davis, who was born in Little Valley, New York, and is a daughter of E. J. and Fannie (Shannon) Davis. The father has always followed the vocation of farming.

Fraternally Dr. Huff has passed the degrees of the blue lodge of the Masonic order, and he also belongs to the Order of the Eastern Star and the Modern Woodmen of America. He is one of the enterprising members of his profession who were actively engaged in the organization of the Baker County Medical Society in 1911, and is now president of the society, being the second to fill that office. He also belongs to the Oregon State Medical and the American Medical Associations, and his political support is given to the republican party. In matters of faith both Dr. and Mrs. Huff are Presbyterians and take an active interest in the work of their church and number many stanch friends among the members of its congregation.

ABRAHAM BLACKBURN, for many years actively connected with farming interests in Yamhill county, is now living retired about two miles northeast of Carlton. He is still the owner of eighty acres, having sold a considerable portion of his original farm in small tracts for the raising of fruit. His life, which spans a period of seventy-seven years, has been an active, busy and useful one.

He was born in England, January 5, 1834, and his parents, John and Frances (Moore) Blackburn, were also natives of that country, where they resided until 1841, when they crossed the Atlantic to America, first settling in Racine county, Wisconsin, where their remaining days were passed. The death of the father occurred when he was eighty-six years of age and the mother passed away at the age of sixty five years. He was superintendent of a large stock farm in England but in Wisconsin purchased land and engaged in general farming on his own account until his death. Prosperity attended his efforts and he added to his original tract until he was the owner of four hundred acres, constituting a finely improved property lacking in none of the equipments and accessories of the model farm of the middle west. Unto him and his wife were born nine children, of whom five are still living: Hannah, the wife of Dr. Hankinson, a veterinary surgeon of Wisconsin; Abraham; Mrs. Ann Sollet, who is living in Chicago; Mrs. Frances Healey, of Racine, Wisconsin; and Mrs. Elizabeth Hulbert, also of that city. The others were Matthew, Amos, Jesse and James.

Abraham Blackburn spent the first seven years of his life in the land of his nativity and then came with his parents to the United States, continuing to assist his father in the development and cultivation of the home farm until twenty-four years of age. He was a fancier of fast horses, to which he devoted his time for several years, and also operated a threshing outfit in Wisconsin. In the year 1860 he made the long journey across the plains and over the mountain passes with horse teams, at length reaching Marion county, Oregon. In the vicinity of Gervais he worked at farm labor for a year and then went to the gold mines in Idaho, where he spent two summers, passing the winter seasons in his father's home. He next purchased one hundred acres of land in Marion county, near Woodburn, which he cultivated for a short time and then sold. Later he invested in two hundred and fifty acres in the same county but soon disposed of that property and bought one hundred and sixty acres near by. This he also sold three years later and on coming to Yamhill county he purchased four hundred and thirty-four acres near Carlton, in partnership with R. Hanna, and also bought a tract of one hundred and ten acres independently. He continuously followed farming in Yamhill county up to the time of his retirement and his labors were crowned with a substantial measure of success that brought to him the handsome competence that now enables him to live retired. With the rapid settlement of the county in recent years he has disposed of much of his farm in small tracts to be used for fruit raising, but still retains the ownership of eighty acres.

On the 24th of November, 1862, Mr. Blackburn was united in marriage to Miss Caroline Hall, a native of Missouri and a daughter of David and Lucy (Tolan) Hall, both of whom are now deceased. Their family included the following named: Thomas, now a resident of Marion county, Oregon; Mrs. Rebecca Johnson, of Centralia, Washington; Willard, whose home is in Sheridan, Oregon; Mrs. Blackburn; Mrs. Mary Cox, of Canby, Oregon; Alice, deceased; George, who is living in Woodburn, Oregon; Henry, whose home is in Falls City, Oregon; Mrs. Fannie Dimick, of Canby; Mrs. Nellie Engle, of Woodburn, Oregon; Bertha, the deceased wife of Robert Caples; and two who died in infancy.

Unto the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Blackburn were born eleven children: Frances, the wife of Louis Hutt, of Yamhill county; Caroline, the wife of F. L. Sapington, of Tillamook, Oregon; Verna, Nellie G. and Daisy, all at home; Zella R., the wife of Fred Manerman, of Centralia, Washington; Grace, Glennie and Sherman, all at home; James, who is married and lives in Yamhill county; and Jesse, who completes the family.

Mr. Blackburn votes with the republican party but has never aspired to office. He has lived in Oregon continuously since 1860 and has, therefore, been well acquainted with its history for more than a half-century. He has seen its villages grow to thriving towns and cities, its forests cut down, to be replaced by fields of waving grain or by productive orchards, and has seen its business interests extend not only to all parts of this country but also to the furthermost parts of the world. His own work has been an element in the agricultural progress and development of Yamhill county, and his labors have brought him the rest which he has so truly earned and richly deserves.

ROBERT NELSON STANFIELD, a well known citizen in Umatilla county, who passed away April 15, 1896, was born on his father's farm in Sangamon county, Illinois, December 3, 1832. There he spent the earlier years of his life, remaining in his native state until he was seventeen years of age. His early education, which he acquired in the common schools, was limited, consisting of only three months of actual attendance in the year, due to the primitive conditions of the school system of that day and the early death of his father, who passed away when our subject was a small child. But being of a progressive nature, as he grew older he read extensively and acquired a knowledge of many branches fully equivalent to a high-school course. Later he received commendation as one of the best bookkeepers and keenest business men of the county. When he was but seventeen years of age he crossed the plains to California, locating in Yreka, being there during the gold excitement of 1849. For several years he followed mining, accumulating sufficient money to purchase a fine herd of cattle. He then secured a farm near Yreka and engaged in stock-raising, achieving excellent success until an unusually hard winter, when he lost all of his stock. Being left without any means in 1860 he came to Umatilla county, where he began freighting, purchasing a mule train, and later freighted from Umatilla Landing to Boise and other points. During this time he made his home in Umatilla. In 1865 he sold his freighting train, and engaged in the livery and transfer business.

In 1883 Mr. Stanfield moved to Pendleton, where he opened up a warehouse and also engaged in general transfer business, which he was obliged to abandon after one and a half years, on account of his health. He then purchased a farm on Butter creek, where he raised alfalfa, and also engaged in the cattle business. He continued in this work with excellent success until the time of his death.

In January, 1865, Mr. Stanfield wedded Miss Phoebe Atwood, who was a native of Dubuque, Iowa. She passed away November 20, 1871, leaving three children: Jessie, who

ROBERT N. STANFIELD

THE NE
PUBLIC L
ASTOR LENOX AN
TILDEN FO

is now Mrs. Perry, of Pendleton; Sidney, who is a farmer and stock-raiser of Washington; and Ralph B., who is a banker at Echo, in this county. On May 6, 1873, Mr. Stanfield was again united in marriage, his second union being with Miss Hattie Townsend, a native of Washington, and a daughter of Evander L. and Amanda E. Townsend, the father a native of Maine and the mother of Ohio. The father passed away in 1889, and the mother on March 5, 1901, at the age of seventy-one years. Of his second marriage eight children were born to Mr. Stanfield. They are: Carrie A., who is the wife of Asa Thomson; Robert N.; Daisy O.; Hugh L., who resides on the home farm near Butter creek; Chloe A.; Emery G.; Lucy J.; and Kate May.

Mr. Stanfield always took an active interest in the welfare of his community and served as deputy sheriff of Umatilla county. When the change of county seat was made from Umatilla to Pendleton Mr. Stanfield had charge of the removal of the county records to the latter place. In 1878 during the trouble with the Snake and Cayuse Indians, he rendered excellent aid as a member of the Guardsmen of this county, serving with the rank of captain of volunteers. He was a well known man and highly honored throughout the county, and his death was deeply regretted by a large circle of friends and acquaintances. His family are all members of the Episcopal church and are highly honored by all their acquaintances. Mrs. Stanfield now resides in Portland.

SILVESTER B. KENT, who owns and operates a ranch located on the Elliott Prairie road in the vicinity of Woodburn, has been identified with the agricultural development of Marion county for thirty-five years. He was born in Iowa in 1837 and is a son of Robert and Sarah (Collard) Kent. The parents were born and reared in Missouri, whence they removed to Iowa, making their home in that state until 1860, when they crossed the plains to California. They purchased land in Sacramento county, that state, in the cultivation of which the father energetically engaged for fifteen years. At the expiration of that time he disposed of his property and in 1875 removed to Oregon, settling in Douglas county. There they resided the remainder of their lives, the father's death occurring in Roseburg in 1885, while the mother passed away on the farm in 1901. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Kent numbered ten children, of whom our subject is the youngest. The others in order of birth are as follows: Isaac, who is living in Douglas county; Charles, a resident of California; Gideon, living in the state of Washington; Gus, who is a resident of Montana; William, who is deceased; Joseph, who lives in Washington; two, who died in infancy; and Elizabeth, who is also deceased.

Reared on an Iowa farm during the pioneer period, the boyhood and youth of Silvester B. Kent were very similar to those of other lads living in the more sparsely settled frontier districts at the period. His meager education was acquired in the little log schoolhouse with its slab benches and puncheon floor, while his amusements and recreations were such as are usually indulged in by country youths. In common with other lads of his acquaintance he early began assisting with the work of the farm, thus qualifying himself for an agricultural career. He assisted his father with the cultivation of the fields until he was nineteen, when he left the parental roof and started out to make his own way in the world. As he possessed sufficient money to enable him to begin farming on his own account he rented one hundred and sixty acres of land that he cultivated for six years. At the expiration of that period he decided to join his people in California, so with his wife and family he crossed the plains to the Pacific coast. He located in the Sacramento valley, where he purchased a ranch that he cultivated with varying degrees of success for fifteen years. Believing that Oregon afforded better opportunities, he then sold his place and came to Marion county and purchased a quarter section of land, all of which he has now sold with the exception of thirty acres. This is well improved and in a high state of productivity and annually yields him an income more than sufficient for the needs of himself and family. Mrs. Kent is the owner of a ranch of forty-three acres in her own right that she rents to her son-in-law, J. W. Fleegle. In the development of his land Mr. Kent has met with more than average success and he is now numbered among the substantial citizens of his community.

In 1857, at the age of twenty years, Mr. Kent was united in marriage to Miss Mary H. Price, who was seventeen years of age, the ceremony being celebrated in Iowa. Mrs. Kent was born in England on the 2d of February, 1840, and is a daughter of Edward and Charlotte (Reeves) Price, who were born, reared and married in England. When she was eight years of age she accompanied her parents on their removal to America. They first settled in Iowa, but later they went to Nebraska and there the mother passed away in 1890. The father subsequently returned to England, where he remained until the time of his death in 1905. Nine children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Kent, as follows: John, residing in Oregon City, who has three children, Juanita, Lowell and Otto; Robert E. Lee, who is deceased; Budd, who is living at home; Albert, operating a farm near Woodburn, who married a widow, Mrs. Ina Owens, with one daughter, Ethel; Lottie, who first married Frank De Barco, by whom she had one child, Lula, and is now the wife of J. W. Fleegle; Elizabeth, the wife of John Ball, of Portland, who is engaged in the sawmill business; Alice, who married Thomas Dunphy, of Baker City, Oregon; and two who died in infancy. Mr. and Mrs. Kent gave their children the advantages of a good common school education.

The family have always affiliated with the Baptist church in which the parents hold membership, and in politics Mr. Kent is a democrat. He is not a man who has ever figured prominently in local political affairs, but he has always contributed his quota toward assisting to maintain high standards in the community by giving his support and cooperation to every movement which would tend to advance the financial, moral, educational or social welfare of its citizens.

W. F. BUTCHER. The late W. F. Butcher, colonel on the staff of Governor Sylvester Pennoyer and well known in the legal and political circles of Oregon, was one of Baker City's foremost citizens. He was born in Pocahontas county, Virginia, on the 12th of December, 1858, and was a son of Dr. Oscar and Jane Butcher, likewise natives of Virginia, where they both passed away. The father went to the front during the Civil war as a member of the Confederate army and died while in the service.

W. F. Butcher was reared on the plantation where he was born and was educated in the common schools. Having decided to become an attorney he subsequently entered the office of Governor Matthews, of Lewisburg, West Virginia, where he began his professional studies. Later he went to Saline county, Missouri, remaining there until 1882, when he went to Idaho. He taught school in the latter state for a year, then went to Walla Walla, Washington, engaging in the same profession. While residing there at such times as he was not occupied by his school duties he pursued his legal studies in the law office of Sharpstein & Sharpstein, until admitted to the bar on the 7th of May, 1885. Immediately following this he withdrew from teaching and went to Athena, Oregon, and there opened an office and engaged in general practice until he came to Baker county in July, 1900. Upon his arrival here he established an office in Baker City, which he maintained until forced to retire owing to the state of his health, two years prior to his death. He was well read and widely informed on legal principles and at the time of his death was the senior partner of the firm of Butcher, Clifford & Correll. His energies were not entirely confined to the development of his practice but were directed in other channels as well and he acquired extensive business and important mining interests here.

On the 4th of September, 1894, Mr. Butcher was united in marriage to Mrs. Helen Coe of Washington. Her maiden name was Helen W. Feamster, her parents being John and Virginia (Snyder) Feamster, natives of West Virginia, where the mother is still living, but the father passed away in 1906. In her early womanhood Helen W. Feamster was married to Dr. W. G. Coe, who was born in Baltimore, Maryland, on May 9, 1854, and passed away on the 4th of August, 1893. Four children were born of this marriage, as follows: W. G., a resident of Baker City; Mary, who became the wife of C. L. Godding, of Vancouver, B. C.; Emma, who married T. L. Delahanty, of Salt Lake City; and Blanche, a graduate of the Baker City High school, who is now living at home. Mr. and Mrs. Butcher had three children: Edna and Helen Fontaine, both of whom are deceased; and Thomas, now a student here.

Fraternally Mr. Butcher was a member of the Masons, Elks, Knights of Pythias, United Workmen and Red Men. He had attained high rank in the first named order, being past grand master and past junior warden of the Masonic Grand Lodge of Oregon. In politics he was a democrat and was one of the prominent members of that party in the state, and on three consecutive occasions he was a delegate to the national convention, having been sent to Chicago in 1896, to Kansas City in 1900 and St. Louis in 1904, while in 1892 he was a candidate for presidential elector, and in 1902 he ran for congress in the second Oregon district but was defeated. Mrs. Butcher is a member of the Order of the Eastern Star and she also belongs to the Presbyterian church, in which he likewise held membership. Mr. Butcher left his family well provided for and his widow is a stockholder in a very valuable gold mine and is the owner of a most attractive residence and several other pieces of property in Baker City.

Mr. Butcher passed away in Portland, this state, on the 18th of November, 1910, just a few weeks prior to the fifty-second anniversary of his birth. He was held in high esteem in professional and business as well as social circles in Baker City, where his high standards of citizenship, upright principles in business transactions and liberal, charitable views on all matters of vital interest to humanity, won him hosts of stanch friends.

S. H. HARNISH, who owns and conducts a livery stable in Eagle Point, is one of the successful and capable business men of the town. He takes an active and helpful interest in all local affairs, particularly those of a political nature, and is now serving as a member of the council. He is a native of Pennsylvania, his birth having occurred in Lancaster county on May 11, 1867. He is a son of Benjamin W. and Susanna A. Harnish, the parents both natives of the Keystone state, where the mother also passed away. In 1888 the father and remaining members of the family removed to Nebraska, and in March, 1900, Mr. Harnish again changed his place of residence, this time locating in North Dakota. He remained there only two years and at the expiration of that time settled in Jackson county, Oregon, where he still lives, now making his home with our subject. Six children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin W. Harnish, four of whom are living.

S. H. Harnish, who was a lad of only three years when his mother died, made his home with his grandparents until he was ten. Although he was still very young he commenced working out and was self-supporting from that time. He went to Nebraska with his father and there two years later he was married, this event occurring when he was twenty-three years of age. Immediately thereafter he and his bride settled on a claim and he devoted his entire attention to the further cultivation and improvement of his place for ten years. Believing that North Dakota afforded better opportunities, he disposed of his interests in Nebraska and removed to the former state, but he remained there for only two years, and then came to Jackson county. When he first located here Mr. Harnish engaged in ranching and teaming, but he subsequently came to Eagle Point and built a barn and went into the livery business. His establishment is well equipped for a town of this size and he is doing a good business. He has prospered in his undertakings as he is industrious and energetic in his methods and in addition to his stable owns three and a half acres of land within the city limits on which he has erected a fine residence.

In 1890 Mr. Harnish was united in marriage to Miss Susanna Moomaw, who is a native of Nebraska, and to them have been born three children: Ray, Dottie and Robert, all of whom are at home.

Fraternally Mr. Harnish is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and his political support he gives to the republican party. After many years of hard work his perseverance is being rewarded and he is gradually advancing in the business world and is meeting with creditable success. At the same time he is gaining the esteem and regard of his fellow citizens both because of his business ability and by reason of his geniality and public-spiritedness.

JOHN HENDRICKSON is one of the successful farmers of Oregon and his beautiful ranch is located eleven miles up the north fork of the Coos river from Marshfield. He was born in Finland, May 28, 1870, and is the son of William and Christina Hendrickson, who spent their entire lives in that country. To them six children were born, the subject of this review being the only one of the number to emigrate to America. Two daughters of the family are still living in Finland.

John Hendrickson was reared in his parents' home and received his early education in the schools of his native land. He emigrated to America in 1888, settling first in California, where he was engaged for two years as a laborer in the lumber camps. He then removed to Coos county, Oregon, and there found employment in the lumber woods for some time. In 1893 he filed on a homestead claim in Coos county, where he established his home and continued to live for fourteen years. In 1907 he sold that property and purchased a farm of seventy-three acres located on the north fork of Coos river, eleven miles from Marshfield, where he is now located and successfully engaged in truck and dairy farming.

In 1897 Mr. Hendrickson was united in marriage to Miss Hilma Stora, who was born in Finland, June 25, 1870, and is the daughter of Mat and Johannah Stora. The father emigrated to America in 1882, settling at Coos Bay, Oregon, and later moved to Oakland, California, where he has since continued to live. After settling in California he was successfully engaged in the cultivation of a hop ranch and also was the proprietor of a profitable hotel property. He has been retired for many years past. The mother never emigrated to America and still resides in her native country, Finland, at the age of eighty-eight years. To Mr. and Mrs. Stora four children were born and of this number Hilma, now Mrs. Hendrickson, and her brother Andrew emigrated to America, while Herman and Hannah still reside in their native land. Mr. and Mrs. Hendrickson are the parents of two children: Ruben, born September 12, 1899, who is now attending school; and Agnes, born February 23, 1901, also at school.

Mr. Hendrickson is affiliated with the republican party, and fraternally is a member of Suomi Lodge, No. 1, of Marshfield. He is also a member of the Grange at Marshfield, and he and his wife are members of the Lutheran church. He is one of the successful truck and dairy farmers of Coos county and his beautiful place of seventy-three acres is one of the most perfectly equipped and best conducted farms of its kind in his part of the state.

HENRY BLACK is one of the respected and influential citizens of Marshfield where he now resides in retirement from active business life. He was born in Missouri in 1838, and is the son of Adam and Mary (Morgan) Black, the former a native of Virginia and the latter of Missouri. The father, during his life, was a planter and also engaged in the general practice of law. He served as county judge for the counties of Gentry and Livingston continuously for a period of fifty years. To Mr. and Mrs. Adam Black nine children were born, two of whom are still living: Henry, the subject of this review, and Charles, of Idaho.

Henry Black was reared in his parents' home and received his early education in the public schools of Missouri. He remained under the parental roof until twenty-one years of age, after which time he was engaged at labor until the opening of the Civil war when he enlisted in the Confederate army and served during that great national conflict. In 1864 he crossed the plains to Oregon, settling in Douglas county and there engaged in the cultivation of a rented farm for one year and then filed on a homestead of one hundred and sixty acres of government land in Douglas county upon which he continued to live until 1875 and then moved to Coos county where he settled on a preempted claim of forty acres located nine miles from Marshfield. He later bought forty acres adjoining his original preemption claim and upon this property of eighty acres he was successfully engaged in farming until 1907 when he retired from active business and took up his abode in Marshfield, where he now resides at No. 881 Fifth street, South.

Mr. Black was united in marriage in 1865, in Douglas county, to Miss Sarah McGee, a daughter of William D. and Jane (Nelson) McGee, both of whom were natives of North Carolina and who moved from their native state, settling in Missouri in 1833, where Mrs. Black was born. To Mr. and Mrs. William McGee ten children were born, three of whom are still living: Charles, who is engaged in farming in Douglas county; William, a resident of Seattle; and Sarah, the wife of the subject of this review. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Black five children have been born. John D. is a resident of California and the father of one child, Sarah. William F., of Marshfield, Oregon, has two children, Thelma and Lois. Lucy, who was educated for a teacher, married George Ross, a dairyman of Coos county, Oregon, and they are the parents of three children, George, Elizabeth and Robert. Mary also pursued a teacher's course in the University of Oregon, but later was engaged as a professional nurse. She is now the wife of Carl Medbery, of Coos county. George, who completes the family, is a resident of North Bend, Oregon, and the father of one child, Cecile.

Mr. Black is affiliated with the democratic party, but has never sought political preferment. He has, however, been a member of the school board for nine years and has also served as road supervisor for four years. He and his wife are members of the Baptist church of Marshfield. Mr. Black for many years has been one of the influential citizens of Coos county and a man who readily gives his assistance to the advancement of every enterprise seeking the further development and improvement of his county and state.

RALEIGH S. ROBINSON, who is a native of Washington county, now owns and operates a portion of the farm where he was born on the 2d of May, 1857. His parents were William J. and Emeline (Barnum) Robinson, the father's birth having occurred in Mercer county, Pennsylvania, on the 12th of October, 1827, and that of the mother in Jefferson county, Indiana, on September 16, 1829. They were married in the latter county on the 9th of January, 1848, but began their domestic life in Jennings county, Indiana, where they resided until April, 1851. The children of pioneers, naturally they felt that better opportunities were afforded all young people in a new country, so despite their very limited means and the many hardships and dangers they knew lay before them, they courageously started across the plains to Oregon. The journey was long and tiresome, occupying nearly six months, but in September they arrived in Clackamas county, where they spent six weeks. In the following March Mr. Robinson filed on a donation claim in Washington county, to which they removed and there spent the remainder of their lives, and it is a remarkable fact that there has never been placed a mortgage on this property either by William J. Robinson, who filed the homestead claim or any of his children up to this time. The father passed away on the 23d of May, 1898, and the mother on June 11, 1911. Of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Robinson there were born six children: Berrilla, who died at the age of sixteen years; Agnes, the wife of James Walker, of Washington county; Viola, who married J. J. Smith, of this county; Florence, who has always remained at home, taking care of her parents in their old age and is now residing on the old homestead in the dwelling which her father built in 1874; Raleigh S., our subject; and Luona, who died at the age of three years. The paternal grandparents were natives of Pennsylvania while the mother's parents were from the state of New York, the mother being of Scotch and the father of Irish extraction.

The entire life of Raleigh S. Robinson has been spent on the farm where he is now living, his education having been acquired in the common schools of the vicinity. He assisted his father in the operation of the home ranch until he had attained his majority, when he rented a portion of it that he operated until the latter's death, at which time he inherited eighty acres. In the cultivation of this land he has met with such success that he has been able to add to his holdings from time to time, until he now owns one hundred and thirty-five acres, all of which is under a high state of cultivation. His place is well improved and fully equipped with all implements and conveniences essential to the successful pursuit of agriculture. In addition to his fine home ranch, Mr. Robinson owns twenty acres of good land located elsewhere in this county and two residence properties in Portland. He is one of the progressive agriculturists and a capable business man of Washington county, whose prosperity is largely attributable to his practical methods, definite purpose and keen judgment in all business matters.

Mr. Robinson was united in marriage on the 12th of October, 1892, to Miss Emma Jarred, whose birth occurred in Kansas, in 1863. Mrs. Robinson is a daughter of James and Louisa Jarred, the mother a native of Kentucky and the father of Kansas. They were married in Kansas and continued to make their home in that state until 1871, when they removed to California. After a brief residence in the latter state they came to Oregon, locating on a ranch in Washington county, where the father died a year later. The mother, who has now attained the age of sixty-seven years, is a resident of Portland. Mr. and Mrs. Jarred were the parents of four children, of whom Mrs. Robinson is the eldest, the others being as follows: Ida, the wife of a Mr. Glenn, of Oakland, California; Ada, who is living in Portland; and one who died in infancy. The two last named were twins. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Robinson numbers three: Ora E., the wife of Fred Sylvester, of Washington county; Harry L., who is operating the homestead and has land interests in this

THE
PUBLIC
ASTOR
TILDEN

WILLIAM J. ROBINSON

MRS. WILLIAM J. ROBINSON

THE NE[illegible]
PUBLIC LIBR[illegible]RY
ASTOR, LENOX A[illegible]
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS

county, still at home; and Bessie, the wife of Carrol Behn, of Beaverton. The parents gave all of their children the advantages of a high-school education.

Fraternally Mr. Robinson is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, being affiliated with the lodge at Tigard. His political views accord with those of the republican party, for whose candidates he always casts his ballot, but he has never been an office seeker. Mr. Robinson is widely known in the county and has a large circle of friends, many of whom have known him from his boyhood, this in itself being a high tribute to his character and standards of life.

W. R. NEWMAN, JR., is one of the respected and highly esteemed citizens of Josephine county, where he is engaged in general farming. His ranch is well located on Wolf creek and is one of the most select pieces of agricultural land in that locality. He was born in England, December 9, 1841, and is the son of W. R. and Elizabeth Newman, both of whom were natives of that country. In 1862 the parents emigrated to America and settled in the state of New York, where they continued to live during their remaining days. In their family were twelve children, three of whom are now living.

W. R. Newman, Jr., was reared in his parents' home and educated in the public schools of his native land. He started in life for himself at the age of eighteen as a sailor and continued to follow that occupation for a period of sixteen years, after which he retired from the sea and settled in the state of New York. In 1877 he removed to California and there remained for the four years immediately following, after which he moved to Morrow county, Oregon, where he continued to reside for a period of thirteen successive years. He then removed to Josephine county, where he purchased forty acres of valuable agricultural land on Wolf creek, on which he has since continued to reside. A portion of his land is well planted to selected apple trees, which are now in bearing and his orchard is regarded as one of the best of its kind in that part of Josephine county.

Mr. Newman was twice married, his first wife being Miss Esther Swan, whom he married in 1867 and who died in 1870. He was united in wedlock in 1877 to Mrs. Charlotte Steward. He is affiliated with the republican party, and both he and his wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal church of Wolf creek. Mr. Newman is one of the enterprising and successful agriculturists and fruit-growers of Josephine county and is a very highly esteemed and respected citizen of his state.

J. B. McDILL, superintendent of the county hospital of Umatilla county, was born in Lyon county, Kansas, September 12, 1861. His parents were John M. and Elizabeth (Brown) McDill, the former a native of Scotland and the latter of Illinois. The father came to the United States when a boy in his teens in company with his brother Samuel, and they located in Nebraska. Subsequently John M. McDill removed to Illinois where he was married and not long afterward to Kansas where he worked as a millwright having learned this trade in early life. He continued as one of the busy and energetic men of his locality to the time of his death, which occurred in 1888, when he was seventy-two years of age. His wife long survived him, passing away in Kansas in 1910.

J. B. McDill was reared at home, acquiring his education in the public schools and in the Americus high school of Lyon county, Kansas. When he reached man's estate he started out in business life as an agriculturist on his own account, renting a tract of land. He was well qualified for the work, for, from his twelfth year he had been engaged in farm labor, not only providing for his own support but also contributing to the support of his parents who were in humble financial circumstances. He continued this contribution during his father's lifetime and supported his mother after the death of her husband, thus rewarding the parental care bestowed upon him in youth by filial love and devotion as manifest in many material ways.

In 1885 Mr. McDill came west to Oregon, believing that there were broader opportunities for a young man on the Pacific coast. He located about seven miles south of Pilot Rock in Umatilla county where he purchased land and engaged in ranching. His location, however, proved to be a poor one and four years later he removed to Camas Prairie, becoming one of the members of the Camas Land Company that founded the town of Ukiah. Mr. McDill erected the first house in that town and in partnership with Dr. Alexander opened a drug store there with which he was identified for two years, at the end of which time he sold his interest in the store to his partner. At the time of the establishment of the town the Camas Land Company built a sawmill and this Mr. McDill operated for a few years. In 1898 he became an employe of the county, being made superintendent of the county roads, in which capacity he served for about eighteen months. In July, 1900, he was made superintendent of the county hospital in connection with which he operates a farm of one hundred and sixty acres, having complete business management of both farm and hospital. He has served in this important capacity continuously since 1900 and has discharged his duties with the utmost capability and faithfulness. In the meantime he has carried on farming on his own account. For two years he cultivated a tract of reservation land but in 1908 he determined to no longer pay rent and made his way into the Alberta country of Canada, where he invested in nine hundred and sixty acres which has more than paid for itself in the intervening years. In fact the crop of 1911 brought him sufficient returns to cover the entire payment. Mr McDill has brought this farm to a high state of cultivation and has made it one of the best improved prop erties in the section in which it is located. His son, J. Harvey McDill, resides upon that place and is looking after its operation.

In 1882 Mr. McDill was married to Miss Anna Edmiston, of Americus, Kansas, and to them was born a daughter, Mabel, who is a graduate of Whitman College of Walla Walla, Washington, and is teaching school in Sitka, Alaska. The wife and mother died in 1888 and Mr. McDill has since married Miss Cora Patten, of Umatilla county. They have two children: J. Harvey, who was graduated from the Pendleton high school with the class of 1909; and Mollie, who completed a course in the Pendleton high school with the class of 1910.

Mr. McDill votes with the republican party and fraternally is well known, holding memberships in Pendleton Lodge, No. 52, F. & A. M., Integrity Lodge, No. 92, I. O. O. F. and Pendleton Encampment. He is one of the best known men and leading citizens of Umatilla county. His resourcefulness, his determination and his keen insight into business affairs have been strong features in his success and as superintendent of the county hospital he has made a creditable record, caring for its interests as he would those of an individual character. In his life he exemplifies the progressive spirit which is bringing about the wonderful development of the northwest and he ever indorses those movements and cooperates in those projects which are instituted for the benefit of his town and county.

GUSTAV A. REMBOLD. An indefatigable student of the law and one well versed in the detailed knowledge necessary for successful practice along this line is Gustav Rembold, who has been a prominent attorney of Burns since 1899. He is a native of Germany, having been born in Mannheim, Germany, October, 1866. His father was J. G. Rembold, a native of Germany, engaged in the mercantile business in Mannheim. Both of our subject's parents died when he was quite young, leaving four children, of whom Gustav A. is the eldest and is the only one now living. He received his early education in the German schools and finished in the Gymnasium. He left his native land in May, 1886, and came to America, going immediately to San Francisco, where he remained until February, 1890. He spent these three years as a bookkeeper in that city, resigning this position to come to Harney county. Here he remained two years entering the law department of Harvard University at Cambridge, Massachusetts, in 1892, from which he was graduated in 1895, receiving the degree LL. B. He spent three years after this in San Francisco. In 1898 the reports of the wonderful gold discoveries in the Klondike fields reached California and in February of that year Gustav Rembold started for Alaska. He was on the survey of the Dalton Trail where he remained for one year, returning to the United States in 1899 and locating in Burns, where he engaged in the general practice of law which profession he has followed in this city ever since.

Mr. Rembold was married in Burns, to Miss Eugenia Racine, a daughter of Louis and Matilda Racine. The former is now living in Rhode Island, but Mrs. Racine died in 1908. During the time of their residence in Burns they conducted the French hotel in this city with remarkable success.

Mr. Rembold is a blue lodge Mason and prominent in the affairs of that organization. He has never sought political preferment, but has devoted himself entirely to the practice of his profession and has built up a large and important practice in this city. He is a nephew of Henry Miller of the Miller & Lux Company, which is now doing business under the name of the Pacific Live Stock Company and has a capitalization of twenty million dollars. Mr. Rembold is an able lawyer and widely popular in this city. He is a splendid type of a western man, a devoted friend and a loyal citizen, and the success which he has obtained in this county is a direct result of his intelligence and hard work.

LEWIS SHATTUCK, who is successfully engaged in the general mercantile business, is one of the foremost citizens of Gresham. He has the distinction of having been the town's first mayor and has ever since held this office with the exception of two terms. He is a native of Oregon, having been born in the city of Portland on the 21st of December, 1868, and is a son of J. W. and Mary C. (Allen) Shattuck. The father was one of two children born to his parents and was a native of Illinois, to which state his people removed from Pennsylvania during the early years of their domestic life and there the paternal grandmother lived to attain the age of ninety-six years. Henry Shattuck, who was older than his brother J. W., left Illinois just before the opening of the Civil war and crossed the plains to Oregon. Here he acquired a small ranch of eighty-five acres and devoted his attention to its further improvement and cultivation until his death in 1881. He was the father of four children: William, who is deceased; John W., a resident of Damascus, Oregon; Gertrude, of Gresham; and Paul Edwin, an attorney of New York city. J. W. Shattuck also came to the northwest in his early manhood and here he met and subsequently married Miss Allen, the event being celebrated in Portland in 1867. She crossed the plains with her parents during the gold rush to California in 1849, and there her father engaged in prospecting with indifferent success for several years. In 1862, with his wife and family, he went to Portland, making the journey by water, and filed on a donation claim just outside the city limits. A portion of this is now known as Fener's addition to Portland, the entire holding having become very valuable with the development of this western city. It bears little resemblance now to the ranch on which the Allen family settled a half century ago, save that the old residence is still standing. Mr. and Mrs. Allen had a large family of children, the eldest of whom was Mrs. Shattuck, the others being: Matilda, who is the wife of W. J. Sally, of Portland, one of the oldest engineers on the Southern Pacific railroad, and is the mother of two children: Mildred, the widow of Gus Newell; Parmelia, the wife of O. Casper, secretary of the Commercial Club of Tacoma, Washington; Robert, now deceased, who had four children; George G., who is a resident of Los Angeles and has two children; William F., who is living at Monroe, Washington, and has four children; Archie F., of Alaska, who has one child; and Emma, the wife of Mr. Richie, who is with the International Correspondence Schools in Glasgow, Scotland, by whom she has had two children. To Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Shattuck there were born nine children, of whom our subject is the eldest. In order of birth the others are as follows: Henry, a prominent merchant of Juneau, Alaska, who has three children; Allen, who is a resident of Portland, also the father of three children; Carl C., who is engaged in the lumber business in Gresham; Matilda J., the wife of E. E. Sleret, the brother of Mrs. Lewis Shattuck, of Gresham; Dudley M., a resident of Marquam; Bates, who is also living in Marquam; Mary C., the wife of Dr. F. A. Short, of Portland; and John, who is attending the University of Oregon at Eugene.

Lewis Shattuck was reared at home and educated in the public schools. At the age of nineteen years he learned the tinner's trade, and for five years thereafter followed this occupation in the state of Washington. At the expiration of that period he came to Gresham and together with his brother engaged in establishing the business he is still conducting. They had not sufficient capital to finance this undertaking, so were compelled to depend upon borrowed capital to develop their enterprise. This naturally made the first years somewhat more difficult than they otherwise would have been, but they were both energetic young men of much determination of purpose, and despite the fact that they met with many discouragements and apparently insurmountable obstacles they eventually won. The brother sold his interest to Mr. Shattuck at the end of eight years and the latter continued alone until July, 1910, when his brother-in-law purchased a half interest in the business which is now operated as a partnership concern. They carry a large and carefully assorted stock of merchandise, that they offer at reasonable prices and they are meeting with very satisfactory results.

Mr. Shattuck married Miss Olive B. Sleret, who was born in 1879 and is a daughter of George W. and Barbara (Baumgardner) Sleret, who came to Oregon from Illinois in 1852. Upon their arrival in this state they located at Gresham and purchased what was known as the Webber donation land claim which was in the family until 1901. The father is now deceased but the mother is still living and continues to make her home in Gresham. Eight children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Sleret, as follows: George W., John G. and E. E., all of whom are residents of Gresham; June, the wife of E. F. Bougg, of Gresham; Carrie, who married J. W. Townsend of Troutdale, Oregon; Mrs. Shattuck; Nellie, the wife of A. E. Lindsey; and Mary, who is deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Shattuck have two children: Wesley A., born on the 19th of March, 1898; and Hazel M., born May 9, 1900, both still in school.

Mr. Shattuck is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. He votes the democratic ticket and although he has never been an office seeker has held the mayoralty chair practically ever since the town was incorporated. He is a very progressive and enterprising man whose powers of organization and executive ability well qualify him for the duties of his office, and during the period of his administration the main business and residence streets of the town have been paved and the water system has been installed. Mr. Shattuck is held in high esteem by his fellow townsmen, whose respect he has won by reason of his excellent service to the municipality not only as a public official but as a private citizen, his support and cooperation always being given to every progressive movement that he feels will assist in promoting the public welfare.

JOHN WILLIAM KRUSE during life was highly respected by his friends and associates and for many years was identified with the development of his adopted state, in which he resided at the time of his death, which occurred at Marshfield, May 1, 1903. He was born in San Francisco, California, in 1866, and was the son of John and Mary (Lyons) Kruse, the former a native of Germany and the latter of Virginia. The father was twice married and John W. Kruse, the subject of this review, was the child of his first marriage. The father chose as his second partner in life Miss Alice Pettice.

John W. Kruse was reared in his father's home and educated in the public schools. Having completed his elementary education in Marshfield he took a preparatory course at Eugene and later became a student of the University of California at Berkeley, after which he entered Hill's Business College at San Francisco and completed a full course in that institution. When his student days were over he was employed by the Simpson Lumber Company at North Bend, this state, as bookkeeper, in which position he continued to serve that company until the time of his father's death, after which he became the superintendent of the Simpson Lumber Company's interests at North Bend, a position which had formerly been held by his father and to which upon his death the son succeeded. He continued as superintendent of the Simpson Company for fourteen years, after which he removed to Marshfield and engaged in business for himself, to which he devoted his entire time until shortly before his death, which occurred on May 1, 1903. At the time of his death he had disposed of all of his real estate holdings as well as his other business interests, leaving for the care and support of his family an estate of which a part consisted in shares of stock in several ship companies, which stock has since been transferred to his widow.

Mr. Kruse was united in marriage on September 17, 1892, in Marshfield, Oregon, to Miss Christine Rolandson, a native of Denmark, and to their union two children were born. Ralph, whose natal day was August 9, 1894, is now a pupil in the high school, where he is preparing himself for a business career. Margaret, born January 4, 1897, has completed her preparatory education and is now entering high school.

Mr. Kruse was a republican and a loyal member of that political organization but at no time permitted his name to be used as a candidate for any public office. He was liberal in his religious views, and fraternally associated in membership with the Woodmen of the World. His widow and family now reside at No. 107 Eighth street north, Marshfield. Mr. Kruse was a very highly respected man, devoted entirely to his business interests and the care of his growing family. The integrity of his character is evidenced by the responsible position with which he was entrusted by the Simpson Lumber Company as its superintendent for a long period of fourteen years. His death deprived Marshfield of one of its most respected and useful members of society.

HENRY MOSSIE, who together with his sons, owns forty-five hundred acres of land in one tract in Umatilla county, has been engaged in the stock business here for more than twenty-five years. He was born in Monroe county, Michigan, on the 14th of August, 1842, and is a son of Lewis and Euphrozine Mossie. His parents were born in Canada, the father's natal year being 1812 and that of the mother 1813, and there they were reared and married. In 1834 they crossed the border into the United States, being among the early pioneers to the state of Michigan, where they passed the remainder of their lives. They were the parents of fifteen children, all of whom are now deceased with the exception of four.

Reared at home, Henry Mossie was given the advantages of a common-school education and remained a member of the parental household until 1861. His patriotic fervor then compelled him to lay aside every other consideration but his country's need and, enlisting in Company B, Fifteenth Michigan Volunteer Infantry, he started south. He remained in the service until the close of hostilities, participating in all of the notable conflicts in the west and being with Sherman when he made his famous march. He received his discharge at Little Rock, Arkansas, and, returning to his native state, went to work in a sawmill, but he later found employment as a ship carpenter. In 1886 he decided to come to Oregon, and after disposing of his interests in Michigan he removed to the northwest with his wife and family. He came directly to Umatilla county, where he exhausted his claim rights by filing on six hundred and forty acres of land. This formed the nucleus of his holdings, to which he and his sons have since added until they now own forty-five hundred acres of land, all fenced and in one piece. It is well improved and fully equipped with all modern facilities and conveniences essential to the successful agriculturist or stockman. Here they engage in both farming and stock-raising, making a specialty of the latter. They now have a fine herd of five hundred head of cattle of good grade and own ninety head of horses. The prosperity of Mr. Mossie has not been an easy achievement by any means, but is the result of hard work, constant application and intelligent and capable supervision. He has used discretion and foresight in directing his activities, and his efforts have been correspondingly rewarded and he is now one of the substantial citizens of Umatilla county.

Michigan was the scene of Mr. Mossie's marriage in 1864 to Miss Mary C. Loranger, a native of that state and one of the twelve children born to Augustine and Lucy (Brancheau) Loranger, five of whom are still living. The parents were both born in Michigan and there they passed their entire lives. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Mossie numbered nine children, as follows: Mary E., who is deceased; Lewis H., who is at home; Charles A. and Charles A., both of whom are now deceased; James A., a stanch democrat in his politics, who received a common school education and is now engaging in the stock business with his father; Eber D., who is a resident of Portland; Edmond J., deceased; Lucy E., the wife of Charles Morris of Washington; and Rose C., who is living at Pendleton, Oregon.

The family are all communicants of the Roman Catholic church and in politics Mr. Mossie is loyal to the principles of the republican party. He is one of the well-to-do residents of the county and also one of the largest landholders, his long years of toil having brought him the well merited and highly deserved success that usually rewards honest and capably directed effort.

ARCHELAUS CORNUTT has devoted practically all of his active life to farming and operates part of a claim of five hundred acres which his father took up when he settled in southern Oregon. Mr. Cornutt is a native of Virginia where his birth occurred on May 8, 1837. His parents, Alfred and Mary (Delph) Cornutt were both natives of that state and moved to Missouri in 1839 and in 1853 came to Oregon and died in this state. Their son received his early education in the public schools of Missouri. The father farmed in that state for some time and then sold out his holdings and started overland with ox teams. There were six wagons in the caravan and seven months were spent upon the journey. The party landed at Stott's landing near Portland and here Archelaus Cornutt and his parents stayed for a time. They then removed to Washington county where the father took up a claim and remained there for about ten years and then returned to Portland and remained there for several years thence coming to Douglas county. Here he bought five hundred acres

MR. AND MRS. HENRY MORSE

THE N K
PUBL RY
ASTO AND
TILDEN

of land which he improved and operated during his life.

Mr. Cornutt remained at home until he was twenty years of age and assisted his father in the work of the farm. He gained a practical knowledge of the cultivation and improvement of the soil and of the many details incident to agricultural life. When he started out for himself he removed to Washington county, Oregon, where he farmed for two or three years. At a later period he went to Portland and was employed in that city and in Douglas county for some time. He has given practically all his energies and activities to gaining a thorough knowledge of land cultivation and values. He has been extremely successful during his life and is now the owner of a part of his father's original farm. He has made many improvements, has erected new buildings upon his holdings and has installed modern equipment at various times.

On May 17, 1895, Mr. Cornutt was united in marriage to Miss Maggie Taylor, a native of Missouri and they became the parents of three children: John D. T., Thursey and Archie, all of whom are living with their parents on the home farm. Mr. Cornutt and his wife are devoted members of the Free Methodist church and take an active part in the affairs of that organization. In his political affiliations Mr. Cornutt is consistently democratic and always votes his party ticket on local and national issues. He takes an intelligent interest in public affairs but has never sought office for himself. He prefers to devote his time and attention to the improvement and cultivation of his land. His prosperity has been rapid and sure and well founded on an expert knowledge of the value of land and the methods of its scientific cultivation.

THEODORE F. HAUSCHILDT is one of the enterprising and successful farmers of Coos county, located upon a well improved ranch four miles up the Coos river from Marshfield. He was born in Germany, January 7, 1852, the son of Henry and Sophia Hauschildt, both of whom were natives of Germany, the mother having died in her native land many years ago. The father emigrated to America in 1869 and settled at San Francisco, where he remained for a short time and later removed to The Dalles and there continued to live with his daughter until the close of his life, which occurred in 1887. In his family were nine children, who are now widely scattered and settled in their homes in various parts of the United States.

Theodore F. Hauschildt was reared in his father's home and received his elementary education in Germany. In 1869 he emigrated to America, making his first settlement at San Francisco, California, where he remained for a period of ten years engaged in the general teaming business. Subsequently he removed to Oregon but soon after returned to California, where he continued to live for a few years. In 1892 he moved to Coos county, this state, where he was married, and has since been engaged in the cultivation of a highly improved farm of one hundred and thirty-five acres located four miles up the Coos river from Marshfield. He has made a specialty of dairy farming and in that branch of agricultural industry he has been highly successful. He and his wife are the owners of very valuable city property on the east side at Marshfield.

Mr. Hauschildt was united in marriage in 1894 to Mrs. McIntosh, the widow of James N. McIntosh, and a daughter of Bowman O. and Mercy J. (McIntosh) Hunt, both of whom were natives of the West Indies, where they celebrated their wedding and there passed away many years ago. Mrs. Hauschildt was born in the West Indies and received her education in the local schools there. She came to Coos county in 1883 with her first husband, James N. McIntosh, who died on March 27, 1893. To them five children were born, Millie May, James N., Ethel A., William T. and Edna L. Mr. and Mrs. Hauschildt are the parents of two children: Ferdinand T. F., who was born in November, 1895, and is still at home; and Henry E., who was born in 1897 and is now attending school.

Mr. Hauschildt is a loyal member of the republican party and also of the Lutheran church. Mrs. Hauschildt belongs to the Church of England. Mr. Hauschildt is one of the reliable and enterprising citizens of Coos county and in every way a worthy representative of the great agricultural industries of his adopted state.

JOHN KRUSE, deceased, was for many years one of the successful shipbuilders of Coos county, Oregon. He was a native of Germany and was first employed as a cabin boy on a small schooner plying the waters along the German coast. In 1851 he emigrated to America, settling in San Francisco, where he continued to live until 1865, at which time he removed to Oregon and there was engaged in shipbuilding and in this employment he continued until the time of his death, which occurred January 1, 1896. He left an estate consisting of seven hundred acres of land, located on the upper Isthmus Inlet at the head of navigation.

Mr. Kruse was twice married, his first wife being Miss Mary Lyons and to them one son, John William was born, of whom a more extended review is published in another part of this work. He was later married, January 30, 1875, to Miss Alice Pattee the daughter of Orison and Mary Ellen (Houston) Pattee, the former a native of Canada and the latter of Ohio. To Mr. and Mrs. Orison Pattee eleven children were born: Sarah Ann, the wife of A. H. Moore, of California, a pioneer of Oregon who is now deceased; N. W., who resides in Leavenworth, Kansas; Constantine, a resident of Indiana; Louisa and Elizabeth, both deceased; A. R., who resides in Kansas; John, Theodore and Emma, all deceased; Alice, the widow of Mr. John Kruse, of this review; and Mary Ellen, the wife of Charles Rodgers, of Bandon, Oregon.

Unto Mr. and Mrs. Kruse seven children have been born. Virginia Alice is the wife of J. Albert Matson, a merchant of Marshfield, Oregon, and the father of one child, Julius Alford. Fred D. married Lorraine Escott, a native of Pennsylvania, and the daughter of William J. and Jeannette (Wilson) Escott, the former a native of Wales and the latter of Nova Scotia, who emigrated to Oregon many years ago and settled in Marshfield where they now reside. Mr. and Mrs. Fred D. Kruse are the parents of one child, Frederick Donald, born July 4, 1911. The family reside upon the old homestead with the mother of Mr. Kruse. He is a graduate of the Oregon Agricultural College where he completed a special course in electrical engineering. Archie E., who is engaged in the shingle mill business at Prosper, Oregon, is married and has one child, Eugene, born June 22, 1908. Julius, who lives at home, is engaged in company with his brother Fred D. in the care and operation of the home farm consisting of seven hundred acres. Sarah is the wife of B. T. Van De Car, of Medford, Oregon. George lives at home with his mother. Grace, who completes the family, is attending high school.

Mr. Kruse was affiliated with the republican party but was never at any time an office seeker. He was a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and also of the Masonic lodge, that order officiating at the time of his burial. Mr. Kruse was one of the highly respected and enterprising citizens of Coos county, a man of great energy and rare business ability. He was well known for his integrity in all business transactions and his death removed from this portion of the state one of its most useful citizens.

A. H. DOERING, an honored veteran of the Civil war, who since 1908 has been engaged in the harness business in Helix, was born in Crawford county, Pennsylvania, September 10, 1840. His parents were Henry and Mary Ann (Higenell) Doering, the father a native of Pennsylvania and the mother of Germany. The parents came to Oregon in 1869, first locating in Portland, and later removing to Prineville. They afterward went to Iowa, where the mother died in 1884, and the father then returned to Pennsylvania, where he resided until his death. In their family were seven children, two of whom are yet living.

A. H. Doering received his education in the public schools and remained at home with his parents until he attained his majority. He then took up the harness-maker's trade, which he continued to follow until the outbreak of the Civil war, when, in 1861, in response to his country's call for troops, he enlisted as a member of Company H, Ninth Indiana Infantry. He served until the close of the war, participating in forty-six battles. He received two wounds but never was compelled to leave the field of action. At the close of the war he was discharged in Texas on the 25th of September, 1865, after which he returned to Indiana and resided in that state until 1866. He then went to Minnesota, locating in Douglas county, where he followed his trade for seven years. In 1873 he removed to Buffalo Grove, Iowa, where he resided until June, 1875, when he went to Kansas and lived there until 1886. He then repaired to Colorado, in which state he continued to make his home until 1907, when he came to Oregon, settling at Helix, and in 1908 established the harness shop which he is now conducting.

In February, 1863, while at home on a furlough, Mr. Doering wedded Miss Jennie E. Van Epps, who was a native of New York. She passed away in 1878, leaving four children, Everett, Fred, Guy and William, all of whom are now living in Colorado. In 1882 Mr. Doering was again married, his second union being with Miss Sue Wing, and to them were born two children: Stephen, a resident of Colorado; and Grace, the wife of Harry F. Terrell, also of Colorado. Mrs. Doering died November 21, 1911. Mr. Doering is a man of upright character, and his genial and kindly manner has won for him many friends during his residence in Helix. He is now serving as a member of the city council.

JOSEPH F. SHEPHERD is one of the successful agriculturists in Josephine county whose beautiful farm of one hundred and sixty-five acres, improved with excellent and suitable residence and necessary farm buildings, is a compliment to his industry and economy. He was born in the state of Iowa on January 11, 1847, and is the son of Joseph and Jeannette M. (Hendricks) Shepherd. His parents crossed the plains with ox teams, emigrating to California in the year 1861. The train of which their wagon formed a part consisted of seven prairie schooners at the time of its departure for California but at various times during the long journey across the plains the train frequently reached a length of four miles. During this particular journey the Indians, for some unknown cause, were unusually troublesome, and at one point a lone woman who had escaped from a band of marauding Indians who had taken her captive, joined them and reported that the train to which she had belonged had recently preceded their emigrant train and all of their company, except herself, had been massacred. The parents of our subject were exactly six months in making their journey—from the day they started until they reached their place of settlement in California. Mrs. Shepherd passed away many years ago in California and her surviving husband now makes his home with his son Joseph.

Joseph F. Shepherd was reared in his parents' home and received his early education in the public common schools. He remained in California twenty years and in 1881 he removed to Oregon and some time after reaching this state he purchased a ranch of one hundred and sixty-five acres, upon which he has since continued to reside and to the development and improvement of this property he has given his entire attention since he first established his home upon it. At the time of his settlement his land was little else than an unbroken wilderness and this forbidding piece of real estate at that time Mr. Shepherd, by his constant toil and the wise investment of his strength and time and means, has turned into a highly cultivated and improved agricultural property. His buildings are among the finest in this portion of the state. In addition to his home farm and its equipment he is also the owner of a mining claim, located near Kerby, which has a very promising future.

In 1890 Mr. Shepherd was united in marriage to Miss Colvin, a native of Wisconsin, by whom he has one child, Narcissa, who is at home. In his political affiliations Mr. Shepherd is a socialist in the broad sense and in his religious connection he is a devout adherent and member of the Seventh Day Adventists church. He is a man of great ambition and intensely devoted to his home and the interests of his family. Throughout his community he is recognized to be a man of sterling integrity and always interested in every public enterprise of a beneficial character to the people of his community.

G. W. OWINGS first came to Jackson county in 1877 and although he has lived in the county since that year never permanently located in Eagle Point until he went into business here two years ago. At that time he engaged in the hotel and mercantile business and continues to be successfully identified with these activities. His birth occurred in Morgan county, Illinois, on the 6th of January, 1853, and he is a son of Edward and Nancy (Allen) Owings. The father was a native of Kentucky and the mother was a descendant of Ethan Allen, of Illinois. They passed the early years of their domestic life in the latter state, going from there to Iowa in 1853. After a year's residence in the Hawkeye state they removed to Missouri, settling in Harrison county in 1854, where the father passed away in 1857. In 1881 the mother came to Oregon, locating in Jackson county, and later she went to Coos county where she subsequently died. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Owings numbered five, three of whom are still living.

The early years of G. W. Owings were filled with hardships and privations. The son of a widow, he was early thrown on his own resources and at the age of eight years became self-supporting. Naturally under the circumstances his schooling was quite limited but he managed to acquire a good practical education. In 1877 he crossed the plains with a team and wagon to Oregon, locating in Jackson county. A year later he went to Portland, going from there to Grant county three years later. Here he filed on a homestead and turning his attention to agricultural pursuits, devoted his energies to the cultivation of his land for fourteen years. At the expiration of that time he disposed of his holdings and once more settled in this county, making his home here for ten years. His next removal was to Nevada but after a three years' residence there he decided he preferred Oregon so he returned to Jackson county, in 1910, this time settling in Eagle Point. Upon his return he engaged in the hotel and mercantile business and during the two years of his connection with these activities has met with a good measure of success, and has every reason to feel gratified with his achievements. Mr. Owings' business training has been a hard and bitter one, as is that of every man who is thrown out into the world to make his own way at such a tender age, but it has developed the sagacity and foresight that are never acquired in any other school. He is a man of practical ideas, determination of purpose and tireless energy and undoubtedly finds much satisfaction in the fact that such success as has come to him is the result of his own unaided effort.

In Jackson county on the 16th of March, 1881, Mr. Owings was united in marriage to Miss Hattie Ritter, who was born and reared in this county and is a daughter of the Rev. Joseph and Caroline (Morgan) Ritter. The father was a native of Indiana and the mother of Tennessee but they came to Oregon in 1865, crossing the plains with an ox team. They took up their residence in Jackson county and thereafter made this state their home. Five children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Ritter, of whom four are living. Mr. and Mrs. Owings have four children: Amie M., the wife of Fred Findley, of Eagle Point; Willard J., who is at home; Robert R.; and Carrie Ellen.

The political allegiance of Mr. Owings is given to the republican party and he and his wife are members of the Baptist church and are accorded the esteem and regard of its congregation.

JOHN W. BIGGS. Prominent among the many rising young attorneys of Harney county is John W. Biggs. He has been an important figure in the legal profession in this city since 1891, at which time he was admitted to the bar of Oregon and began general practice. Mr. Biggs is a native of Kentucky, having been born in Georgetown, that state, May 18, 1870. His parents were James D. and Lucy C. (Hatch) Biggs, the former a native of New London, Missouri, and the latter of Louisville, Kentucky. The Biggs family has been in America since colonial times. The great-grandfather was Davis Biggs, a native of North Carolina, who removed from that state to Kentucky and in 1821 to Missouri where he made his home, following his calling as a minister in the Baptist church and for a short time engaging in farming. John D. Biggs, the grandfather of the subject of this review, was the next representative of the line. He was born in Kentucky and was extensively engaged in the stock-raising business in Missouri. In this occupation he engaged actively for over thirty years, dying in Missouri at the venerable age of seventy-eight years.

His son, James D. Biggs, the father of the subject of this sketch, was educated in the Baptist College at Georgetown, Kentucky, and followed the ministry in Missouri until 1909. His son, John W. Biggs, the subject of this sketch, was the eldest of a family of seven children. His primary education was received at the Glendale Boys' School in Glendale, Missouri. He later went to McCune College at Louisiana, Missouri, finishing at William Jewell College located at Liberty in the same state. Upon his graduation he went to Bowling Green, Missouri, and taught mathematics in a small college in that city for a short time. He has the distinction of having read law under Champ Clark, now speaker of the national house of representatives. He came to Oregon and taught school for a short time in Canyon City, removing to Burns in 1893. The following year he was admitted to the bar and began a general practice of law in this city, where he has since remained. He practiced alone until 1900 when he was joined by his brother, Dalton Biggs, now circuit judge of Harney county and this partnership continued until 1906. Mr. Biggs has always been keenly interested in national and local politics, but has always avoided public office for himself.

John W. Biggs was married twice. His first wife was Miss Mabel Hazeltine, whom he married January 1, 1896. She was the daughter of G. I. Hazeltine of whom more extended mention is made on another page in this work. She died in 1904 leaving one daughter, Helen. On June 11, 1907, Mr. Biggs was again married. His second union being with Miss Mary E. Byram, a native of New York, by whom he has two children, John Byram and Edith Lucy.

John W. Biggs is a thorough lover of outdoor life. He owns a small ranch one mile north of Burns where he makes his home and gives much time and attention to the breeding of fine registered trotting stock. His activities along this line were at one time very extensive but he has now reduced his stock to six or eight horses. He has won many blue ribbons at state and county exhibitions. He has a prize mare named Judith which he raised himself. She has a record of 2:25 and is the dam of Harold Welcome, a horse which Mr. Biggs recently sold and which made a record of 2:11¼. Mr. Biggs last year sold his horse Sidney Wilkes with a record of 2:22¼.

Mr. Biggs is an able lawyer, actively interested in the details of his profession. He is a highly respected citizen and widely popular in Burns where he has been for several years a prominent member of the school board.

MRS. MAUD KUBLI is one of the large ranch owners in Jackson county. Her ranch, comprising two hundred and twenty acres of highly improved land, is located on Big Applegate creek in that county. This large body of land she is engaged in developing and cultivating and is in every way successful as an agriculturist. Her birth occurred in Oregon on the 24th of September, 1870, her parents being William and Emma (Sturgiss) Cameron, the father a native of Iowa and the mother of this state. There were five children in the family.

On the 25th of May, 1887, Maud Cameron was united in marriage to Henry Kubli, who was also a native of Oregon, his birth having occurred on the ranch, now owned and occupied by his widow, in 1860. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Kubli were born four children: Chester, Harold, Edith and Edward. The father of this family closed his earthly pilgrimage September 8, 1910, and his remains were interred in the Jacksonville cemetery. In his political affiliations he was a republican and in 1906 he was honored by election to the lower branch of the general assembly as state representative. He was a worthy exemplar of the Masonic fraternity and also belonged to the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks. His surviving widow, Mrs. Maud Kubli, is a woman universally esteemed throughout the entire circle of her acquaintances. Being a representative of one of the pioneer families of the state, in this section of which her birth has occurred, her education has been acquired and her married life has been passed, she has become one of the best known and influential among the women of her community. She is a capable business woman, a devoted mother and a loyal friend to every good cause seeking the betterment of her county and state.

LOUIS HANKS, JR., is now prominent in agricultural circles of Douglas county where he is engaged in the cultivation of one hundred and thirty-nine acres of land which he has planted in grain and prune orchards. He was born in Klamath county, March 30, 1880, and is a son of J. L. and Mary Jane (Perdue) Hanks. His father was a native of Springfield, Illinois, and his mother's birth occurred in Douglas county, Oregon. They were the parents of ten children: John, Marion, Ella, Lennie, Edward, Emma, Jessie, Affa, Louis, Jr., of this review, and William.

Louis Hanks, Jr., received his education in the public schools of Klamath county and remained at home with his parents, assisting with the work on the farm until he was twenty-nine years of age, when he started in life for himself and worked at various occupations for some time. He is now the owner of the homestead which his father operated and the acres surrounding it and he makes a specialty of his grain and his fruit orchards. He has a large number of acres planted to prune trees which he cultivates along modern, scientific lines. The quality and abundance of his harvest increases every year and his fruit always finds a ready sale on the market. Mr. Hanks also specializes in the breeeding of high-grade hogs and this branch of his business is constantly growing and is one of the most important departments of activity on Mr. Hanks' ranch.

On October 20, 1909, Louis Hanks was united in marriage to Miss Edith Montgomery of Canyonville, Oregon. She is a daughter of Thomas and Effie (Lowe) Montgom-

HENRY KUBLI

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASTOR, LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS.

ery, the father a native of Arkansas, and the mother of California. Thomas Montgomery came from his state when he was still a small child and the family settled in Redlands, California. His father was a member of the California Volunteer Regiment during the Civil war.

Mr. Hanks has been affiliated with the Democratic party since the time when he cast his first vote. His allegiance to this party's principles and policies is a tradition in his family and was handed down to our subject from his father, who was staunchly and consistently democratic all during his life. Louis Hanks takes an intelligent interest in business affairs but has never sought political preferment. He devotes his entire time and attention to improving the quality of the grain which he raises, to making his fruit harvests more abundant and to breeding his hogs along scientific lines. He is a fitting type of the young western ranchman, active, energetic and broadly intelligent,—a type which is the outgrowth of western conditions and which is doing so much to promote the progress and development of this section of the country.

JAMES T. HUSTON, who is one of the prominent residents of Ukiah, was born in Callaway county, Missouri, September 20, 1852. He is a son of John and Permelia (Branham) Huston, both of whom were natives of Kentucky and were reared and married in that state. The parents removed to Missouri in 1824, settling on a farm where the city of St. Louis now stands. Constructing the first house in that place, they resided there for some time but not liking the location, they removed to a farm in what is now known as Callaway county, where they remained until 1861. In that year they crossed the plains to California, locating in Lake county, about one hundred miles north of San Francisco, where the father engaged in the stock-raising business and resided until his death, January 22, 1891. The mother died there October 23, 1893. They were both members of the Baptist church. Four of their sons, William, John, Robert and Edwin, enlisted in the Confederate army, during the Civil war under General Price, and William was killed at the battle of Vicksburg.

James T. Huston was but twelve years of age when his parents removed to California, where he grew to manhood. He had little opportunity for an early education, there being no schools open in Missouri during the war, and on removing to California, he could only take advantage of three months' schooling during each winter. At about the age of twenty he started out in life for himself by renting a ranch, which he operated until 1876. At that time, his father having retired from active work, James T. Huston took charge of and operated the home place. In 1880 he came to Oregon, settling in Umatilla county, where he homesteaded one hundred and sixty acres of land in the Camas valley, a half mile west of where Ukiah now stands. He improved and cultivated this farm, residing thereon for ten years. In 1890 he removed to Ukiah, where in June, 1891, together with J. B. Despain, J. B. McDill, E. B. Ganbee, D. C. Whiting and John T. Dizney, he laid out the town. The tract of land which the partners purchased at that time was an old preemption claim. Mr. Huston later erected the Ukiah Hotel, which occupied one of the most imposing buildings at that time and is today one of the largest in Ukiah. He operated the same for seven years and conducted in connection a feed stable. For the first four years of this period he also managed the stage line between Ukiah and Pendleton, having two stages which made the trip of fifty-one miles daily, one leaving Pendleton and the other Ukiah, every morning. They covered this entire distance with but two changes of horses. In 1905 Mr. Huston sold the hotel and feed stable and removed to Malheur county, where he resided one year and then returned to Umatilla county, living two years in Pendleton. Subsequently he came back to Ukiah, where he has since resided. He owns three hundred and twenty acres of land, which is situated half a mile west of the town and is operated by his son, H. H. Huston.

In Lake county, California, on the 6th of January, 1878, Mr. Huston wedded Miss Belle Rippey, who is a daughter of Gibson and Elizabeth (Lake) Rippey. Her parents were both natives of Kentucky and were reared and married in that state, later removing to Missouri. About 1852 they crossed the plains with ox teams to California and located in Amador county, where the father engaged in freighting to Virginia City and Carson City, Nevada. Later they removed to Solano county and subsequently to Lake county, where they both died. To Mr. and Mrs. Huston have been born two sons: Harry H., who manages his father's ranch and engages in the dairying business; and Louis G., of Ukiah, who is also a dairyman. In politics, Mr. Huston is a democrat, and fraternally he is a member of Eureka Lodge, No. 32, I. O. O. F., and he is also a member of the United Artisans. He is a progressive man with many friends, a prominent citizen of Ukiah, and greatly interested in the welfare of that town, which he helped to establish.

JUDGE JOHN S. COKE for many years past has been known throughout this portion of Oregon as one of the most reliable jurists of this state. He was born near Morristown, Tennessee, August 21, 1867, and is a son of John S. and Mary L. (Moore) Coke, both of whom are natives of Tennessee. Mrs. Coke is a daughter of Dr. Isaac Moore, her birth having occurred in 1842 and that of her husband in the year 1828. Mr. and Mrs. Coke emigrated to Oregon in 1871 and settled in Coos county, where they have since continued to live. John S. Coke has served as collector of customs at Coos bay and has also filled the office of superintendent of public schools of Coos county. He now maintains his residence at North Bend with one of his sons and is the owner of a tract of fine agricultural land in this state. To Mr. and Mrs. Coke eight children were born: Thomas, now of Marshfield, this state; Richard J., of North Bend, Oregon; P. S., a practicing physician of Oakland, California; John S., of this review; Hugh M., of Berkeley, California; James L., of Honolulu; Frances, now the wife of Judge Harlocker, of Coquille, Coos county; and Caroline, deceased.

Judge Coke received his early education in the public schools of this state and also under the private tutelage of his father, who is a highly educated and accomplished gentleman. After completing his early education he engaged in the study of law, taking his preliminary course in law offices in Portland and at Coos bay and later completing a thorough course at the University of Oregon. At present he is circuit judge of the second judicial district of Oregon, which includes in its boundaries six counties of this state: Coos, Douglas, Lane, Curry, Benton and Lincoln. He was first elevated to the bench by appointment in 1909 and later, in 1910, he was elected for the regular six-year term, receiving a very large and complimentary plurality vote.

In 1903 Judge Coke was united in marriage to Miss Annie Laurie Anderson, a native of Oregon and a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Anderson, of Marshfield, who had six children, five of whom are still living. To Judge Coke and his wife two children have been born: Morton, whose birth occurred in 1904; and Virginia, whose natal year was 1907.

Judge Coke is a republican consistently giving the benefit of his suffrage to the party. He has served as mayor of the city of Marshfield and also as state senator for four years. He and his family are all members of the Episcopal church of Marshfield. Fraternally he is identified with the Masons and the Knights of Pythias.

Throughout the state of Oregon he is known as an able and honorable jurist and the district over which he has jurisdiction fully realizes that no mistake was made in his election to that high and honored position which he now holds in the interests of all the people. He is descended from the best blood of Tennessee and brings to his work the power and ability of a highly cultured man. He is ever to be found giving the weight and benefit of his influence to the advancement of every good measure seeking the enlightenment and advancement of the people of his state and county.

H. G. CASTEEL is a partner in the Monarch Hardware & Furniture Company of Pilot Rock, being associated in this enterprise with his brother R. L. Casteel and with J. M. Gilbert. He began his career as a farmer in Kentucky, his native state, but early in life recognized the advantages offered by the great northwest and in 1903 came to Oregon, settling in Pilot Rock. He was born in Laurel county, Kentucky, August 14, 1880, and is a son of Robert N. and Polly (Riggs) Casteel, who were natives of Kentucky and Virginia respectively.

H. G. Casteel spent his youthful days in his parents' home in Kentucky and is indebted to the public-school system of his native state for the educational opportunities accorded him. On attaining his majority he began farming on his own account, operating a part of the old homestead. In 1903, however, he severed home ties and, leaving the Blue Grass state, made his way to the northwest, settling at Pilot Rock, Oregon. Here he engaged in the confectionery, stationery and notion business and shortly afterward was appointed postmaster of the town. He resided here until October 1, 1910, when, in company with J. M. Gilbert, he purchased the mercantile business of I. R. Laurance in Ukiah. The store was conducted under the firm style of Gilbert & Casteel until March 1, 1911, when Mr. Casteel purchased Mr. Gilbert's interest in the business and the Ukiah Mercantile Company was formed. He remained a factor in the conduct of the store there until 1912, when he disposed of his interests at Ukiah and became a partner in the Monarch Hardware & Furniture Company at Pilot Rock, having returned to this city to make his home.

In 1903 Mr. Casteel wedded Miss Lilly Kinnison, of Pilot Rock, a daughter of Nathaniel Kinnison, a retired ranchman residing in this city. Mr. Casteel is a stanch republican, following in the political footsteps of the grandfather, Lemuel Casteel, who was one of only eleven voters in Laurel county, Kentucky, who cast their ballot in favor of Abraham Lincoln. H. G. Casteel has served as a member of the town council of Pilot Rock and is interested in all that pertains to public progress and improvement. Fraternally he is a member of Alta Lodge, No. 165, I. O. O. F., and he also holds membership in the encampment and with the Rebekahs. He is affiliated with the Improved Order of Red Men, with the United Artisans and with Pendleton Lodge, No. 288, B. P. O. E. His wife is a member of the Presbyterian church and the family give their support to that denomination. Mr. Casteel is a public-spirited citizen and an enterprising and diligent business man and during the years of his residence in the northwest he has won the warm regard and good-will of many with whom he has come in contact.

LOUIS C. SIVERS. The farming interests of Jackson county find a worthy representative in Louis C. Sivers, who is devoting his place to the production of alfalfa and to the raising of stock. In other connections he is also prominently known, being the leading grower of onions in this part of the state. In fact, he is a wide-awake and alert business man, who is making good use of his time and opportunities. He was born in Syracuse, New York, January 1, 1841, and is a son of Captain Henry Sivers, who commanded Admiral Sloat's flagship during the Mexican war. He had both legs shot off during the siege of Vera Cruz, after which he was sent home and there died from the result of his injuries when his son Louis was but four years of age. His widow passed away almost immediately afterward and the little orphaned boy was reared by Walter Cole. He was one of six children, John, Jacob, Henry, Louis, Mary and Susan. His first work was on the Erie canal and at length he became a cabin boy under Captain Hunter on ocean vessels, being thus engaged until after the outbreak of the Civil war. He enlisted in 1861 as a seaman and continued to serve in the navy until 1876. His last cruise was on the Kearsarge and he became a quarter gunner. Because of the violent concussion in the discharge of the guns his hearing was destroyed and, this rendering him unfit for further military duty, he was honorably discharged on the 19th of April, 1876.

At that time Mr. Sivers went to California, where he engaged in driving a six horse team. In 1882 he took up a soldier's homestead near Bybee Springs on Evans creek, comprising two hundred acres of as fine ranch land as there is on the creek. His place is beautifully located and has been cleared and put under cultivation by Mr. Sivers, who is engaged largely in the raising of stock and in the production of alfalfa and of onions, being now known as "the king of the onion growers." The southern Oregon onion is a splendid vegetable, growing to large size, and he finds a cash market here for all he can raise. In 1904 he went to Washington, where he found Rear Admiral Manning, who used his influence in securing for Mr. Sivers a well deserved pension of forty-five dollars per quarter. Mr. Sivers is still carrying a minie ball in his right leg which was imbedded there at the siege of Vicksburg, when he was serving on board the gunboats Argosia and Clary Dolson. His back also shows seven scars received in the same campaign and he was struck by a minie ball in the right arm at the battle of Fort Henry. He knows all there is to be known about naval warfare and a life on the broad deep and he can relate many interesting incidents concerning his experiences while a seaman and naval officer.

In 1879 Mr. Sivers was married to Mrs. Nancy Jane Ammons, a widow, and they had one son, Isaac, who died in the mines when twenty-three years of age. In politics Mr. Sivers is a democrat and a believer in free trade. He is always fearless in defense of his honest convictions and loyal to his principles. In the management of his farming interests he shows good judgment and unfaltering enterprise and is winning well merited success.

L. C. CHARLEY is engaging in general dairying and farming as well as stock raising in the vicinity of Brownsboro, where he owns three hundred acres of well cultivated and highly improved land. He was born in Nebraska on the 13th of July, 1856, and is a son of William and Meda (Hurst) Charley. The parents were natives of Indiana but in 1855 they went to Nebraska, returning to Indiana two years later. They remained in the latter state until 1867, when they went to Illinois, locating in Mason county. Four years later they continued their journey westward to Iowa, coming from there to Oregon in 1876. Soon after their arrival in Jackson county the father filed on a homestead which he cultivated during the remainder of his active life. He and the mother now reside in Medford where he is living retired. They are the parents of five children, four of whom are still living.

The education of L. C. Charley was acquired in the public schools of the various states in which the family resided during his boyhood and early youth, and during that time he was also assisting with the work of the farm. He remained at home with his parents until he attained his majority and then started out to make his own way in the world. During the intervening years, through his unceasing diligence, thrift and capable management he has acquired three hundred acres of fine land. It is all under cultivation and well improved and is a credit to his enterprise and activity. He has erected large, commodious barns and outbuildings and a comfortable residence on his place, which is thoroughly equipped with all machinery and implements needed in its operation. Here in connection with his general agricultural pursuits, he is engaged in stock-raising and dairying and is finding each to be very remunerative.

In 1880 Mr. Charley was united in marriage to Miss Jennie Brown, a daughter of Henry R. and Martha Brown, who are mentioned at greater length elsewhere in this work. Seven children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Charley: Nora, the wife of I. L. Bradshaw, of this county; Edna M., who was born on the 26th of September, 1886, and died on April 27, 1903; William H., who was born in September, 1887, and died July 7, 1889; Hazel M., the wife of George Nichols, Jr.; and Lemon R., Verna B. and one who died in infancy.

In his political views Mr. Charley is a republican, but he has never aspired to figure in public life, always having preferred to give his entire attention to the development of his agricultural interests in which he is meeting with very satisfactory results.

WILLIAM C. COFFMAN is one of the highly respected residents of Golden. He was born in Fulton county, Illinois, October 29, 1837, and is the son of Augustus and Margaret (Cozby) Coffman, the former a native of Virginia and the latter of Blunt county, Alabama. Augustus Coffman emigrated to Oregon in 1853, crossing the great American desert with ox teams and made his first settlement in Benton county, Oregon. He remained on the place of his first location for eighteen months and then removed to California where he resided for one year during which time occurred the death of Mrs. Coffman. He then returned to Benton county, Oregon, and there continued to live until 1859 and then removed to Douglas county, where he engaged in the cattle business and continued to live until the time of his death which occurred in 1875, at Eugene, Oregon.

William C. Coffman was reared in his father's home and received his early education in the public schools of the district in which he lived. In 1862 he moved to Idaho where he was engaged in mining for one year. In 1863 he settled in Boise, Idaho, where he remained until 1865 and then removed to Jackson county, Oregon, and after spending one winter there he moved to Deerlodge county, Montana, and later to Salt Lake City, in which place he remained for a short time. He then removed to California and shortly after returned to Jackson county where he continued to reside for a period of three years during which time he was engaged in the general teaming business. He afterward removed to Crescent City, California, at which place he was married and thereafter continued to be engaged in the teaming and sawmill business for eight consecutive years. While a resident of Crescent City his wife died and immediately following her death he removed to Lane county, Oregon, and after spending eighteen months in that county he returned to Crescent City, California, where he remained for a brief time and later removed to Colfax, Washington, and took up a government homestead upon which he continued to live for nine years. He later disposed of that property and moved to Coos county, Oregon, where he maintained his residence for three years and then returned to Washington and there continued to live until 1900. He then returned to Coos county, this state, and later settled in Golden, in Josephine county, where he has since continued to reside and where he is interested in mining.

To Mr. and Mrs. Coffman three children have been born: Mary, the wife of Louis Williams, of Washington; J. W., a resident of this county, and Sarah M., deceased. He has one grandson, Claude Wilkenson, who resides in Hood river valley. Mr. Coffman is a member of the A. F. & A. M. Lodge, No. 45, of California. He is one of the well known and respected citizens of Josephine county and is an enterprising and public-spirited member of the community in which he resides.

JUDGE RICE R. McHALEY, by virtue of his well known qualifications for the position and his acknowledged reputation for scrupulous integrity, is now occupying the bench as county judge of Grant county, Oregon, for a third term. His birth occurred in Aumsville, Marion county, this state, on the 25th of August, 1865, his parents being George W. and Mary (Jackson) McHaley, who were natives of Indiana and Missouri, respectively. His paternal grandfather was John McHaley, who emigrated from Missouri to Oregon in 1843, traveling in company with the now famous Whitman party. Reaching Oregon late in the season, they wintered in Oregon City, at which place they endured great hardships and where Mr. McHaley and his family would no doubt have perished had it not been for the generous and timely assistance given to them by Dr. McLoughlin, a name now almost sacred in the annals of the McHaley family and the people of Oregon. With the opening of the following spring John McHaley removed to Marion county, locating near Salem. Here he filed on government land and established his home. He was a man of pronounced convictions and strong will. At the time of the outbreak of the Civil war he declared himself a strong sympathizer with the southern cause, to which he proffered his services as a soldier in the field, but was rejected on account of his extreme age. Still hoping to be of service to the cause so dear to his heart, he started for Texas, no doubt with the evident purpose of finding some place where his enthusiasm and remaining strength could contribute to the success of the Confederacy. From the time he left his early pioneer home near Salem he was never heard of again. He sleeps in an unknown but the honored grave of a man who contributed the full measure of his strength to the cause which to him appeared to be righteous. He was the only member of the McHaley family to sympathize with the southern Confederacy. His wife died on the old home farm near Salem. The maternal grandfather of Judge McHaley was Thomas P. Jackson, who came to Oregon soon after the emigration of the McHaley family. He made his first location in Clackamas county and in 1869 removed to Grant county, locating near Monument on the north fork of the John Day river, at which place he entered government land, dividing his time in later years between his farm and interests he still retained in Clackamas county. His death occurred in Grant county in 1905.

George W. and Mary (Jackson) McHaley, the parents of Judge McHaley, were married in Molalla, Clackamas county, and located at Aumsville, Marion county, Oregon, where Mr. McHaley owned three hundred and twenty acres of his father's donation claim. In 1870 they came to Grant county, locating near Monument, where George W. McHaley continued to reside until 1881, at which time he removed to Prairie City, where he made his home until his death in July, 1906. At that time he owned some two thousand acres of land. He was elected to represent his county in the state legislature, serving during the session of 1882 and 1883 and also in the special session of 1883 and 1884. He was a republican in politics and was one of the most prominent and influential party leaders and representative citizens of his county.

Judge Rice R. McHaley was reared at home and educated in the public schools. Prior to his twenty-first year he had been somewhat busy in gathering cattle, sheep and horses, thus laying a foundation for his future business career. At the age of twenty-one he left the parental roof and located in what is now a part of Harney county, at that time Grant county. Here he remained but two and a half years, when he removed to Prairie City in Grant county and in 1889 received the appointment of postmaster, in which office he continued to serve for a period of five years, carrying over one year from the close

R. R. McHALEY

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASTOR, LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS

of the republican administration, from which he had received his appointment. During his incumbency of the office he had continued in the stock business and also for a short time owned and operated a butcher shop in Prairie City. In 1898 he was elected to the office of county clerk for Grant county, serving two terms in that office. At the expiration of the second term he was elected county judge. In this official capacity he has since continuously remained and is now serving his third term. He owns three hundred acres of land adjoining Prairie City and four hundred and eighty acres of land in the Fox valley in Grant county. He still continues in his cattle business and is among the most successful ranchmen of his county.

On the 2d of March, 1887, Judge McHaley was married to Miss Lizzie Hubbard, a daughter of Nathan and Mattie (Carpenter) Hubbard, a very accomplished and refined lady who has aided materially in her husband's success. She came to Oregon from Wisconsin in 1877. Her father, Nathan Hubbard, was a veteran of the Mexican and Civil wars. To the union of Judge and Mrs. McHaley have been born nine children, six of whom still survive: Avis G., Kenneth G., Elizabeth M., Rice R., Jr., Eileen and James Jackson. All are still under the parental roof.

Judge McHaley is a worthy exemplar of the Masonic fraternity, being a member of Blue Mountain Lodge, No. 31, A. F. & A. M.; Blue Mountain Chapter, No. 7, R. A. M.; and Union Council, No. 5, R. & S. M., of Union, Oregon. Both he and his wife belong to Julia Chapter of the Eastern Star of Canyon City. Judge McHaley is a republican in politics. He has inherited the responsibilities of a highly distinguished and honored name and during the busy and varied business years of his life he has maintained the unsullied name of his father and added substantially by his own integrity and ability to the capital stock of the family history. Today he is one of the most influential, enterprising and useful citizens of his county and state.

GEORGE HERBERT WILCOX, serving for the second term as mayor of Newport, and occupying as well a prominent position in commercial circles as senior partner in the grocery firm of Wilcox & Hamer, was born November 13, 1853, in Erie county, Pennsylvania. His parents were Charles N. and Elizabeth (Pike) Wilcox, both of whom were natives of the state of New York. The father followed the milling trade during the greater part of his life, being engaged for many years in the manufacture of flour.

George Herbert Wilcox, one of a family of six children, was educated in the public schools of Canon Falls, Minnesota, to which place his parents removed when he was a young lad. He was about sixteen years of age when he took up the milling business, learning the trade under the direction of his father. He has been acquainted with the business from the days of the old mill stone system and through all the intermediate processes of development and improvement to the present methods, continuing actively in that field of labor until his removal to Oregon, with the exception of two years spent in Missouri and Colorado. On the 23d of March, 1889, he arrived in Hillsboro, Oregon, where he was engaged in the milling business for four years. Subsequently he was called to public office, being elected in June, 1900, to the position of assessor of Washington county, in which he served for four years. He was afterward for two years acting deputy assessor, after which he was reelected county assessor and served for eight years. Soon after the expiration of that period he was appointed deputy sheriff and continued in office until his removal to Newport, Oregon, in June, 1910. In the meantime he had been elected mayor of Hillsboro and remained chief executive of that city from December 5, 1899, until December 5, 1900. This followed his service as one of the trustees of Hillsboro from December, 1897, until he assumed the duties of the mayoralty. On his removal to Newport Mr. Wilcox entered the grocery business in partnership with W. R. Hamer, in which connection they have become established as leading grocery of the town. They have a large and well appointed store and are accorded a liberal patronage. Mr. Wilcox has not only become recognized as one of the leading merchants of the city but, as in Hillsboro, has also been accorded high political honors in his election to the mayoralty. He assumed the duties of that position on the 1st of January, 1911, and by reelection he is now serving for the second term.

While in Hillsboro Mr. Wilcox was married on the 11th of April, 1906, to Miss Lura Waggener, a daughter of Rufus and Annabell (Baile) Waggener, who are now residents of Newport, Oregon, and have a family of five living children, of whom Mrs. Wilcox is the eldest. Her father is a Civil war veteran, having served with the Third Iowa Regiment of Volunteers. For many years he was proprietor of the Tualatin Hotel, and on selling out removed to Newport, where he is now living retired. Mr. and Mrs. Wilcox have one child, Theodore Herbert, who was born December 21, 1907. The parents are members of the Newport Baptist church and fraternally Mr. Wilcox is a Mason, belonging to the lodge and also to the Eastern Star. He is a republican of broad and liberal views, being connected with the progressive wing of the party. In fact he stands for development and improvement along all lines which are of vital interest to the individual and the community, and his cooperation can ever be counted upon in support of projects and measures for the general good.

C. S. SANDERSON, the proprietor and manager of the Hotel Dunlap, has been identified with the business interests of Central Point for eight years and during that time has won recognition as a man of more than average capability and efficiency. He was born in Vernon county, Wisconsin, on the 10th of August, 1856, and is a son of Bridget and Angelo M. Sanderson. The parents were born, reared and married in New Hampshire, whence they removed to Wisconsin in 1852, and there the father passed away in 1860. He was long survived by the mother who came to Jackson county in 1905 and here her death occurred in January, 1907. Three children were born of this union and of these two are still living.

C. S. Sanderson was reared at home and given the advantages of a common-school education. At the age of sixteen years he left the parental roof and started out to make his own way in the world. A year later, as a youth of seventeen he went on the road as a traveling salesman. He continued to follow this vocation for eighteen years, and in 1904 he came to Jackson county, becoming a resident of Central Point. During the early years of his residence here he engaged in contracting and building in which he met with very good success, but he withdrew from this on the 1st of January, 1912, to assume the management of the Hotel Dunlap. In connection with this he also handles real estate and is succeeding in building up a very good business. Mr. Sanderson's many years on the road and knowledge of hotels generally well qualify him for his duties as a landlord and that he is profiting by his observation and experience is manifested by the excellent establishment he maintains. The service and table are much superior to what is usually found in towns of this size and although he has been conducting the enterprise for only a brief period his success seems assured.

In 1885 Mr. Sanderson was united in marriage to Miss Anna Milkie, a native of Germany, who came to America with her parents when a child of four years, and to them have been born two children, B. L. and C. C.

The family affiliate with the Baptist church and the political support of Mr. Sanderson is accorded the democratic party. In addition to his other interests Mr. Sanderson is a stockholder in the Mutual Telephone Company and is secretary and treasurer of this organization. He is one of the intensely loyal and enterprising citizens of the town, whose energies are largely expended in the betterment of public conditions and in forwarding every movement that will redound to the benefit of the community generally.

FRED E. FURRY, one of the representative men of Phoenix, Jackson county, owns the original mill property in the town and has ten acres of alfalfa land adjoining the corporation limits, besides other interests. He was born in Henry county, Iowa, February 18, 1860, a son of Samuel and Amelia (Barnebery) Furry, natives of Pennsylvania and Germany respectively. The mother emigrated to the new world with her parents when a young girl. The father crossed the plains in 1860 with an ox team from Iowa, his destination being Oregon. He arrived in this state with his team and wagon, two and a half dollars in cash and a sack of flour and settled in Phoenix. He there opened a hotel and later was the first man to open a resort at Soda Springs. He was engaged in this undertaking for a considerable period but on account of failing health removed to a ranch he had previously acquired, two and a half miles northeast of Phoenix, where he purchased additional land, his holdings totaling about five hundred acres. He made the ranch his home for forty-five years, living there until his death. He was politically a stanch democrat, a power in his party and served as the representative of his district in the state legislature for two terms, and was also county commissioner for several terms.

Fred E. Furry was reared under the parental roof and acquired his education in the public schools of Jackson county. When he attained the age of sixteen years he apprenticed himself to the gunsmith's trade with John Miller, of Jacksonville, with whom he remained for nine years. He then resigned and returned home to take charge of the home ranch on account of his father's advanced age. After conducting the place for several years he purchased one hundred acres belonging to the J. W. Bishop ranch and removed to his new holdings but continued for a considerable time to operate the home ranch of his father at the same time. In 1908 he sold his ranch and removed to Phoenix, where he has since made his home. Adjoining that place he owns ten acres of fine alfalfa land and is also the proprietor of the old original mill property of that town.

Mr. Furry was married in 1886 to Miss Isabella Caton, a daughter of Captain Milo Caton, one of the pioneers of Jackson county who is still living at the age of eighty-six years. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Furry have been born six children, Milo F., Nina M., Robert S., Leo L., Raymond and Sybil. In his political faith Mr. Furry is a democrat and is now the town recorder of Phoenix. Fraternally he is a member of Tenant Lodge, No. 111, I. O. O. F., belongs to Oregon Camp, No. 438, W. O. W., and is a member of the Rogue River Tribe, No. 57, I. O. R. M. Mr. Furry is one of the prominent and progressive citizens of Phoenix, is widely known and universally respected.

S. T. HODGES. S. T. Hodges, the popular liveryman, is the owner of considerable property in Gold Hill where he has acquired the distinction of being one of its most valuable citizens. He was born in California, December 12, 1861, the son of Daniel and Elizabeth Hodges, the former a native of Missouri and the latter of Texas. In 1851 the parents journeyed to California, where they lived for several years, later removing to Jackson county, Oregon. In 1907 they came to Gold Hill, where the mother still resides, the father having passed away in July of that year. In their family were six children, of whom four still survive.

S. T. Hodges received a common-school education and started out in life for himself at the age of sixteen years. He worked at various occupations until he was twenty-one years of age, when he became a gold miner, engaging in that occupation for sixteen years with varying success. His next business venture was in the mercantile line, which he followed until 1908, when he engaged in the livery business at Gold Hill, where he is still thus engaged. In addition to his other interests he is also the owner of several pieces of property in the town where he resides.

On the 29th of November, 1887, Mr. Hodges was united in marriage to Miss Isora Gall, a native of Jackson county and a daughter of C. C. Gall. To Mr. and Mrs. Hodges four children have been born: Albert L., deceased; and Millie P., Hattie E. and Letsy, all of whom are at home.

Mr. Hodges is a democrat in his political faith, and fraternally is a member of Gold Hill Lodge, No. 129, I. O. O. F. Mrs. Hodges is a member of the Adventist church, being actively engaged in the affairs of that denomination. Mr. Hodges, being a man of much natural ability along business lines and also possessing a marked degree of industry, has made a success of his business life. His efforts have always been well directed as his judgment in business matters is good and he has always done his work in a conscientious manner. As he is just in the prime of life he looks forward expectantly to many good things along business lines in the future and in the activities of his business career he takes great pride and pleasure. He is a conspicuous figure in business circles of Gold Hill and has the respect and confidence of a very large number of people with whom he meets on the most familiar terms. He is one of the most valuable citizens of his town and in the performance of the duties of his calling most efficiently serves a large number of patrons who are pleased to give him their business.

GEORGE McGOWAN. To George McGowan's Scotch virtues of initiative and thrift the town of Burns, Oregon, owes its municipal life and to his love for the immortal Scotch poet, Robert Burns, it owes its name. George McGowan was one of the pioneer settlers of the great northwestern America, one of the sturdy, determined men to whom the country is indebted for the development of this great and prosperous region. He was born in Banffshire, Scotland, in 1845, the son of James McGowan, who died when his son was still an infant. George McGowan was the first of the name to come to America, crossing from Glasgow, Scotland, to Sydney, Australia, and thence to San Francisco, where he arrived in 1864. He immediately enlisted in the United States army service and was sent to San Diego and he and his company were appointed to guard the pack trains between Fort Yuma and Fort Whipple, Arizona. The Apache Indians were at that time in a state of insurrection and travel in that section of the country was extremely perilous. In the course of an engagement with the savages George McGowan was wounded in the hand by an arrow but continued in the service until the close of the war, when he was mustered out at Presidio, California, receiving his honorable discharge as a private. He went to, and remained in San Francisco for a short time and engaged in business there but later came to Oregon and located in Lane county, near Eugene. Here he remained until the spring of 1882, teaching school and later engaging in the mercantile business. He was one of the early pioneer settlers of Harney valley. He formed a partnership with an old and wealthy pioneer named Peter Stenger and under the firm name of McGowan & Stenger opened a small store near a place called Egan, one and a half miles from the present townsite of Burns. Their original building is still standing but the business was moved one year later to the location where this city now stands. George McGowan made application to the United States government for postoffice privileges and founded the town which he named in honor of his national poet, Robert Burns, for whose work he had always had the most profound admiration. The partnership of McGowan & Stenger continued until 1888, when George McGowan sold out his interest in the enterprise and went into the hardware business, in which he continued until 1890, and was extremely successful during that time. After he founded the town of Burns he directed his energies toward the formation of Harney county, which was then a part of Grant county, governed by a county commission. He was one of the leaders who induced the government to create what is now the Burns land district and was appointed under the Cleveland administration the first receiver of the office. He served in this capacity only a short time for when President Cleveland's term expired he resigned his office and devoted his entire attention to his hardware business until 1890, when he sold out to Mr. Calvin Geer. Mr. McGowan then removed to Portland, Oregon, where he engaged in the grocery business until his retirement from active life in 1910.

In 1873 George McGowan was married in Cottage Grove, Oregon, to Miss Mary Jane Martin, a native of that city and a daughter of Louis Martin. They became the parents of four children: Jessie, now the wife of J. J. Walker, of San Francisco; Archie; James Edmund, now in business in Spokane, Washington; and Grace, the wife of B. B. Fleckenstein, of Portland.

Mr. McGowan is possessed of rare energy and the power of concentration. He is well known for his initiative and ability to organize and to these virtues the city of Burns is indebted for much of its present prosperity as well as its past remarkable growth. He was the first postmaster of the city and was responsible for obtaining for the city postoffice privileges at an early day in its foundation. He was a charter member of Harney Lodge No. 77, I. O. O. F., and was the first noble grand master of that order. He is now spending the evening of his honorable life in retirement at Portland, Oregon, where he is well known and greatly beloved.

The second son, Archie McGowan, received his early education in the public schools of Burns and later attended Portland high school. From there he went to the University of Oregon at Eugene and after his graduation engaged in business with his father, continuing in that connection until 1899. His failing health compelled him to travel at this time and he went north to Alaska as far as Kotzebue sound, where he remained for six months. The healthful outdoor life soon caused him to recover his health and he returned to Burns where he engaged in general farming and stock-raising for five years. Then he sold his farm and stock and engaged in the real-estate business in Burns and has been remarkably successful in this line during the seven years in which he has been connected therewith. He does a large amount of business each year and has already sold over a half million dollars worth of land.

Archie McGowan has a firm faith in the future of his native section. He considers the farm lands of the great northwest the richest and the stock-raising business to be one of the most advantageous pursuits open to man along commercial lines. He is engaged in the developing of the agricultural districts surrounding Burns and owns and controls several hundred acres of choice farm land in Harney valley.

He was married in April, 1905, to Juanita Smith, of Kansas, a daughter of Harry C. and Mollie L. Smith, residents of Burns. They are the parents of one child, Burns McGowan. There is scarcely a line of activity in this city in which Archie McGowan is not an active and dominating force. He has filled all of the chairs of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and has received all of the honors open to him in that organization. He is grand master of the district and has been delegate to the grand lodge several times. The qualities of concentrated industry, remarkable business instinct, the faculty for organizing and developing which have made his father one of the pioneer settlers of Burns and a prominent man in its commercial and social history, have been handed down to the son.

C. L. SMITH is one of the successful dairy farmers of Coos county located four miles up the Coos river from Marshfield. In that county he was born April 29, 1868, and is the son of Nathan and Emily (Hobson) Smith, a more extended review of whom is published elsewhere in this work.

C. L. Smith was reared in his parents' home and received his early education in the public schools of the district in which he lived. He remained under the parental roof until twenty years of age and at that time started in life for himself, following for a livelihood various occupations for a period of twelve consecutive years. He then purchased eight hundred and eighty-nine acres of land located four miles up the Coos river from Marshfield, upon which he established his home and has since continued to devote his attention to the development and operation of his large ranch. He has made a specialty of dairy farming and in that business he ranks as one of the foremost men of his portion of the state.

C. L. Smith was united in marriage in 1894, to Miss Calla Tennison, a native of Arkansas, her birth having occurred July 17, 1873. She is the daughter of Levi and Mildred (Brandon) Tennison, both of whom were natives of Tennessee. Her parents celebrated their wedding in Arkansas where they continued to live until 1874, at which time they removed to Oregon, settling first on the west coast and there remained until 1897 when they moved to Washington. The father is still living, but the mother closed her earthly life in 1905. They became the parents of five children, three of whom are still living: Calla, the wife of the subject of this review; Charles, a resident of Seattle, Washington; Lillie, who is the wife of John Clarkson, of Seattle, Washington; and Walter and Alonzo, both deceased.

To Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Smith seven children have been born: Dorothy, born July 17, 1895, who is attending school; Harry L., born in 1897, also attending school; Bonnie, who was born September 19, 1899; Harvey, whose birth occurred in 1902; Mildred, who was born in 1905; Gracie, born in 1908; and Lillie, whose birth occurred in 1911. Mr. Smith is a stanch member of the republican party and his fraternal association is with the Myrtle Lodge of the Knights of Pythias of Marshfield. He and his family are members of the United Brethren church.

Mr. Smith is one of the enterprising farmers of Coos county and one of the largest land proprietors of the state. He is a man who is always identified with all public measures intended to advance and improve the agricultural and civic interests of his county and state.

DAVID DERSHAM, who was called to his final rest on the 12th of August, 1888, was for a number of years actively identified with the agricultural interests of Washington county, owning and operating a farm of three hundred and sixty-five acres. He was a native of Pennsylvania and a son of Samuel and Sarah Dersham, who were likewise born in the Keystone state. Subsequently they took up their abode in Wisconsin, continuing to reside in that state throughout the remainder of their lives. Their children were eight in number, namely: Mrs. Savilla Strickler, who makes her home in Iowa; Mrs. Sophia Mills, of Warren, Illinois; Mrs. Mary Richmond, living in South Dakota; Mrs. Annie Matingly, of Iowa; Moses, of Warren, Illinois; David, of this review; Mrs. Sadie Gosmer, who is deceased; and Perry.

David Dersham came to Oregon in 1874, settling in Washington county, where he was employed as a farm hand by Ulysses Jackson. After working by the month for two years, he married the latter's daughter Lydia and took up his abode on the farm, renting the property, which is now in possession of his widow, for two years. On the ex-

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC
ASTOR
TILDEN

MR. AND MRS. DAVID DERSHAM

MR. AND MRS. ULYSSES JACKSON

THE
PUBLIC
ASTOR LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS

piration of that period his father-in-law died and the farm was inherited by Mrs. Dersham. It embraces three hundred and sixty-five acres of land, two hundred acres of which is under a high state of cultivation and improvement. Mr. Dersham devoted his attention to general agricultural pursuits throughout his active business career, and gained an enviable reputation as one of the substantial and representative citizens of his community.

On the 8th of November, 1876, Mr. Dersham was united in marriage to Miss Lydia O. Jackson, whose birth occurred in Washington county, Oregon, on the 14th of December, 1855, her parents being Ulysses and Lucinda (Dobbins) Jackson. The father was a native of West Virginia, his natal day being November 6, 1824, while the mother was born in Virginia on the 19th of July, 1829. Mr. Jackson crossed the plains to this state with an ox team and, clearing the timber from a densely wooded tract, began the development and improvement of a farm. He gave his attention to the work of the fields throughout his entire business career and at the time of his death was the heaviest landowner and taxpayer in Washington county. His demise occurred on the 22d of December, 1882, while his wife was called to her final rest on the 1st of February, 1911. Their marriage had been celebrated in Washington county, Oregon, on September 4, 1851. To them were born nine children, as follows: Mrs. Lovisa Crane, who is a resident of Milwaukee, Oregon; Mrs. Mary Carpenter, living in Spokane, Washington; Mrs. Dersham; John W., of Washington county, Oregon; Ulysses, who makes his home at Fossil, this state; Mrs. Henrietta Barrett, who is deceased; Henry, who has also passed away; William C., of Washington county; and George, who is deceased.

Mr. and Mrs. Dersham had five children, namely: Dolly C., who died at the age of four years; Sadie, who passed away when eleven months old; Eva L., whose natal day was November 13, 1882, and who is still at home; and Bertha and Francis, twins, born March 18, 1885, the former of whom is the wife of John Vanlom, of Portland, Oregon, while the latter is married and resides on the old homestead with his mother. Mr. Dersham gave his political allegiance to the republican party but neither sought nor desired office. His life was upright and honorable in all its relations and he well merited the regard and esteem which were uniformly tendered him. His widow has resided in Washington county from her birth to the present time and is widely and favorably known within its borders.

BERNHARD FRIEDRICH. Bernhard Friedrich, who resides on his farm situated two and one-half miles from Molalla, was born in Baden, Germany, August 19, 1854. He is a son of Antone and Ursula (Reineman) Friedrich, both of whom were natives of the grand duchy of Baden. The father was there engaged in agricultural pursuits and was a man prominent in public affairs, having served as mayor of his community and as a justice of the peace. In 1878 he came to America, following the subject of this sketch who had preceded him several years, and located in Salem, Oregon, where death overtook him the same year at the early age of forty-eight years. His wife, who is still surviving, makes her home with her daughter, Mrs. Ida Tuefer in Portland, Oregon. Mr. and Mrs. Friedrich were the parents of seven children: Kate, who was the wife of Andrew Grieshaber and is now deceased; Bernhard, the subject of this sketch; Julius, a retired farmer who now makes his home in Portland; Thomas, who was a barber in that city and is now deceased; Alois, who is a mechanic at Underwood, Washington; Ida, the wife of Joe Tuefer, who resides in Portland, Oregon; and Thusnelda, who passed away in Germany at the age of sixteen years before her parents came to this country. Mr. Freidrich was a faithful adherent of the Roman Catholic faith, of which church his wife is also a member.

Bernhard Friedrich received a fair education in Germany and in 1872, when eighteen years of age, set out for America alone, attracted by the opportunities offered in the unlimited resources of the new world. On arriving in this country he located in Rochester, New York, and there remained for three years, when he followed Greeley's sound advice and set out for the west, settling in San Jose, California, where he found employment in a brewery. In 1877 he left the sunny shores of the Golden state for the virgin territory of Oregon and came to Portland, where he worked for some time in Weinhard's brewery. In his various positions he had saved enough money from his earnings to purchase a sample room at Salem and this he operated for the next two years, when he sold out and purchased with the proceeds seventy acres of undeveloped land near New Era, Oregon. He grubbed and cleared this property and greatly improved the place and resided there until 1907. In 1902, however, he had already bought the farm near Molalla on which he now resides. It comprises one hundred and eighty-one acres of rich, fertile land, eighty acres of which is under cultivation, and he engages in general farming and specializes in the dairy business. In July, 1909 he built an ice plant and creamery in Molalla with a capacity of one and one-half tons of ice per day, and he can handle in this plant two hundred gallons of cream daily.

In 1881 at New Era, Oregon, Mr. Friedrich was married to Miss Mary E. Crader, of Calhoun county, Illinois, a daughter of Jacob and Eliza Crader. They came to Oregon in 1880 and settled near New Era, where they owned a farm and later on engaged in the hotel business. Both parents have now passed away. To Mr. and Mrs. Friedrich six children have been born: Olive, who is now Mrs. Meindl, residing at Clackamas Heights; Frank and Otto, who took a special dairy course in the State Agricultural College and now operate a creamery at Molalla; Kate, who married Royal Davidson, a farmer residing near Molalla; and Grover and Selma, who are yet at home. In his political faith Mr. Friedrich is in sympathy with the tendencies of the socialist party and, being deeply interested in the welfare of the community, he is widely and favorably known and has many warm friends. He may well be called a self-made man, for he started out in life empty handed and by his persistence and energy has won independence and financial success and today stands among his fellowmen honored for his sterling character, his pertinacity of purpose and his well merited attainments.

HON. D. H. MILLER. Gold Hill is fortunate in having among its citizens so eminent and valuable a man as Hon. D. H. Miller, a successful hardware merchant and an owner of city property. He is a man with a notable political record and is extremely active in matters which concern the public good. He was born in Jefferson county, Iowa, May 10, 1850, the son of Henry A. and Nancy Miller. In 1840 the parents took up their abode in Jefferson county upon a donation claim, where they resided until 1866, when they removed to Marion county, Iowa. In 1875 they came to Jackson county, Oregon, where the remainder of their lives were spent. In their family were ten children of whom only three survive.

D. H. Miller attended the common and high schools and remained at home until he attained his majority. He then embarked in agricultural pursuits, choosing Marion county, Iowa, for his field of operations. He farmed there until 1875, when, becoming convinced that the west offered advantages superior to those of the Hawkeye state, he emigrated to Oregon and engaged in farming for seven years. In 1883 he removed to Medford and entered the mercantile business, in which he continued for twenty-one years. He then disposed of his interests in Medford and settled in Gold Hill, where he engaged in the hardware business. In this line of trade he is meeting with much success and in addition to the business which he owns and operates he is the possessor of several pieces of real estate in Medford and Portland.

In 1871 Mr. Miller was married to Miss Elmira Brous, a native of Marion county, Iowa, and a daughter of James M. and Mary Brous, the former a native of Pennsylvania and the latter of Ohio. In 1842 the parents removed to Iowa, where the mother passed away. The father later emigrated to Jackson county, Oregon, and resided there until the time of his death.

In his political views Mr. Miller has always been a member of the democratic party and has risen high in its councils. In 1909 he was elected to the state legislature, serving for two years. He also served for two terms as county treasurer and was for five years postmaster of Medford, having been appointed by President Cleveland. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity of Medford and also belongs to the independent Order of Odd Fellows of that city, while his wife is a member of the Order of the Eastern Star. Both Mr. and Mrs. Miller are active and consistent members of the Christian church and to the extent of their ability labor to make that denomination effective in the community. The Hon. D. H. Miller stands very high in business, fraternal, political and social circles of Gold Hill, where he has long since been recognized as one of the leading citizens of the town. Having been extensively engaged in politics, he has a state-wide political acquaintance, many of his closest friends being prominent and honored state political figures. In his immediate community and county he is widely and favorably known and as he is active in his efforts to build up and promote the various interests of Gold Hill, he is regarded as one of its most prominent men.

DARWIN BRISTOW, assistant cashier of the First National Bank of Eugene, Oregon, was born in Pleasant Hill, Lane county, this state, December 21, 1862, a son of the Hon. William Wilshire and Elizabeth (Coffey) Bristow, both natives of Kentucky. The grandfather in the paternal line was Elijah Bristow, a biography of whom appears on another page of this work.

Mr. Bristow attended the public schools of Oregon and later was graduated from the University of Oregon, in the class of 1884, receiving therefrom the Bachelor of Arts degree. His first business undertaking was as a member of the firm of Eakin & Bristow, general merchants at Cottage Grove, Oregon, which he entered in 1884 and with which he was connected for twenty years. That company established the First National Bank of that town, of which Mr. Bristow became president, a position which he held until January 1, 1904, when he removed to Eugene and with F. L. Chambers opened the Chambers, Bristow Banking Company. In February, 1907, that institution was consolidated with the First National Bank of Eugene, at which time Mr. Bristow became assistant cashier of the new organization, in which capacity he is now serving, proving a most capable and popular official. In addition to his banking interests he is also a director of the Chambers Power Company, of this city, and is numbered among the well known and representative business men of the community.

Mr. and Mrs. Bristow became the parents of six children, two of whom, Dorothy and Darwin, are now deceased, Darwin Darrel, having died March 26, 1912. The others are Greta E., William Wilshire, M. Evelyn and Helen K. In his religious faith Mr. Bristow is a member of the Christian church while his wife is a communicant of the Roman Catholic church. Politically he is a republican and has taken an active interest in the affairs of the communities in which he has lived. His official service covers one term in the city council of Eugene. He served two terms as city treasurer and five terms as mayor of Cottage Grove, in all of which offices he proved himself most capable and efficient. Fraternally he is affiliated with Eugene Lodge, No. 11, F. & A. M., of which he is past master; Eugene Chapter, No. 10, R. A. M., of which he is past high priest; Hiram Council, No. 7, of which he is treasurer; and Ivanhoe Commandery, No. 2, K. T., of which he is past eminent commander; and he has also crossed the sands of the desert with the nobles of Al Kader Temple of the Mystic Shrine. He is likewise past grand patron of the Order of the Eastern Star, his membership being in Evangeline Chapter, No. 51.

Mr. Bristow's career in Oregon has been a most notable one, not only as a business man but as a citizen in the communities in which he has lived, and his life has ever been in harmony with that of an honored father who did so much to make the name of Bristow a prominent and influential one in the history of the state of Oregon.

HERBERT H. HAYNES is one of the enterprising and successful dairy farmers of Coos county. He is a native of Oregon, his birth having occurred at the old home farm which is the original donation claim of three hundred and twenty acres taken up by his father at the time when the family settled in this state. He is the son of Jerry C. and Lois A. (Hall) Haynes, the former a native of Ohio and the latter of New York state. Jerry C. Haynes emigrated to California in 1850 with the intention of interesting himself in the mining business. He, however, instead, engaged in the lumber business in the Golden State and continued to give his attention to that industry for a number of years. He later settled in Coos bay and took up a donation claim consisting of three hundred and twenty acres located in Coos county. He did not, however, devote much of his time to the development of that property, but at once engaged in the logging business after settling in this state, and continued to devote his attention to that industry for a period of twenty years. In 1887 he retired from the logging business and established his home in Bandon, where he engaged in the hotel business for one year and then returned to the old home farm on which he continued to live until 1892, thence removing to Myrtle Point where he purchased a dairy ranch which he operates under a lease and resides at the hotel in Myrtle Point. To Mr. and Mrs. Jerry C. Haynes ten children were born: Ida, deceased; Allie, the wife of James Arrington, of Myrtle Point, Oregon; Frank, a resident of Portland, Oregon; Charles, deceased; Lois, the wife of Edward Marcy, of Marshfield, Oregon, who is in the employ of the government; J. G., a resident of Eureka, California, who is also in the employ of the government; Katie, deceased; Minnie, the wife of R. H. Noble, of Marshfield, Oregon; Herbert H., the subject of this review, and Myrtle, the deceased wife of Fred Barnard, of Marshfield, Oregon. Mr. Haynes is affiliated with the republican party but has never at any time sought public office.

Herbert H. Haynes was reared in his father's home and received his early education in the public schools of Coos county. He started in life for himself at the age of eighteen years, at which time he obtained employment as a laborer and continued to work in various places for a number of years after which he rented a dairy ranch on the Coquille river and as a renter operated that property for one year and then returned to the old home farm, which he rented and where he engaged in dairy farming for four years. He later inherited a one-third interest in that property and he and his sister purchased the deceased sister's part. He now resides on this homestead of which he and his sister Minnie are the owners and there he is engaged in the dairy business. He uses in his business sixteen well selected dairy cows.

Mr. Haynes was united in marriage, in January, 1904, at Myrtle Point, to Miss Lillie Frances Arrington, the daughter of V. L. and Julia (McConnell) Arrington, the former of whom crossed the plains with his parents in 1852. The father of Mrs. Haynes is a native of Maysville, Missouri, and the mother of Portland, Oregon. To Mr. and Mrs. Arrington four children were born: Lillie Frances, the wife of the subject of this review; Violet, the wife of Richard Hancock, of Bandon, Oregon; Vincent and Gertrude, both of whom are still under the parental roof. To Mr. and Mrs. Haynes three children have been born: Wanda Pauline, born October 25, 1905; Raleigh J., whose birth occurred November 18, 1907; and Chester Herbert, born August 3, 1909. Mrs. Haynes is the niece by marriage of Aaron Rose, the founder of the city of Roseburg, Oregon.

Herbert H. Haynes is one of the well known citizens of Coos county and has been uniformly successful in all his business ventures. His highly cultivated farm of one hundred and two acres located seven miles up Isthmus Inlet is one of the interesting and well managed dairy farms of Oregon. He is a man who is always ready to lend his assistance to the advancement of any public enterprise seeking the improvement of the people in his county and state.

ELI ELLSWORTH WILSON has been a resident of the state of Oregon since 1894 and is actively interested in the occupations which are to a large extent peculiar to western America. He has a large ranch and is engaged in stock-raising and dairying and is also the proprietor of a sawmill. He was born in Washington county, Ohio, August 10, 1862, a son of William and Sarah (Warff) Wilson, both natives of Ohio, in which state they lived and died. They were the parents of seven children: Betty, now living in Columbus, Ohio; Jemima and Ephraim, both of whom are deceased; Charlotte, who is a resident of the state of Indiana; William, who lives in Pennsylvania; Margaret, who is also deceased, and Eli Ellsworth, of this review.

The last named received his early education in the common schools of his native district but laid aside his books at the age of sixteen to take up work. In 1894 he came to Oregon and located at Ashland for one year. He then removed to Douglas county, where he bought a ranch on Cow creek which he has owned and operated since that time. He is also proprietor of a sawmill and has been remarkably successful along this line. His ranch is one hundred and twenty acres in extent and is operated under Mr. Wilson's personal supervision. He takes a keen delight in his herd of graded stock and his dairy is one of the cleanest and most modernly equipped in the county. He takes great pride in the quality of his butter and milk and they find a ready sale on the market.

In 1884 Mr. Wilson was united in marriage to Miss Emma Minch, a native of Ohio and a daughter of Adam and Margaret (Rice) Minch, both natives of Germany, who came to this country and settled in Ohio, where they died. Eli Ellsworth Wilson and his wife became the parents of twelve children: Harry W., who is deceased; C. L. and H. H., living at home; E. M., a resident of Central Point, Oregon; Doris M., who has passed away; Dolores V., living at home; Clarence A., deceased; Margaret, Rice H., Honor A., Roy L. and Josephine H., all of whom are living with their parents in Douglas county.

In his political views Mr. Wilson is consistently republican and takes an active interest in the public affairs of his district. He is a justice of the peace, in which capacity he has served for a number of years. He has held the position of school clerk for ten years and has made a remarkable record in this office. He is a true western rancher, interested in everything concerning the cultivation of the soil and the raising of high-grade cattle. His success is the result of hard work and personal experience and is due to the fact that he never let an opportunity pass unimproved.

H. E. BESSEY is the general manager of the Coos Bay Creamery, one of the best equipped enterprises of its kind in this portion of the state, the principal factory being located two and one-half miles up the river from Marshfield. He was born in Massachusetts, January 28, 1860, and is the son of Hansard and Lucy Bessey. The parents were both natives of Maine, where they spent their early years and later settled in Pennsylvania, in which state they continued to live until the time of their death.

H. E. Bessey moved to Pennsylvania with his parents when a child of nine years and four years later ran away from home and settled in the state of Maine, where he continued to live for eight years. From there he went to Eureka, California, and was employed in one of the sawmills in that state and in that occupation continued until 1885. He then removed to Oregon and settled in Coos county, where he purchased four hundred and twenty acres of agricultural land located twelve miles up the Coos river from Marshfield, upon which he established his home and continued to reside for thirteen consecutive years. Disposing of that property he shortly after organized the Coos Bay Creamery Company, of which he later was made the general manager, and has since given his entire attention to the development and operation of that business. He also owns in addition to his interest in the creamery very valuable property in Marshfield.

Mr. Bessey was united in marriage in 1894 to Miss Josephine McIntosh, a native of Coos county and a daughter of Donald and Nancy McIntosh, both of whom were natives of Nova Scotia. The parents emigrated to Oregon in 1869, settling in Coos county, where the father died in 1906. The mother is still living and maintains her residence at the old home in Coos county. Mr. and Mrs. Bessey are the parents of five children: Catherine, who was born in 1896, and who is now attending school; George, born in 1898; Lawrence, born in 1899; Lucy, born in 1902; and Frederick, born in 1906.

Mr. Bessey is affiliated with the republican party, and his fraternal relations are with the Masonic lodge of Marshfield, the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Woodmen of the World. He and his family are members of the Presbyterian church of Marshfield. He is one of the respected and enterprising citizens of his county. His success in the building up of a prosperous creamery business has confirmed in the public mind the standard of his business ability and has identified him as one of the enterprising leaders among the business men of his part of the state.

FRANK MENEFEE is the president of the United States Cashier Company which owns one of the rapidly developing industries of Portland. Their business as manufacturers and distributors of money-making, change-making, computing and adding machines, has been established but a comparatively brief period, but within that time has enjoyed rapid growth, for its output is one which appeals to all business men, its worth being of immediate recognition. Moreover, Mr. Menefee is a splendid type of the alert and energetic business man of the northwest whose labors are of effective and far-reaching force in the growth and progress of this part of the country. He was born at The Dalles, Oregon, January 31, 1866, and is a son of William R. and Nancy J. (Benefiel) Menefee. The father was born in Culpeper county, Virginia, but was only twelve years of age when his parents removed to Iowa, becoming pioneer settlers of Muscatine, where he was reared to manhood and was educated. The year 1852 witnessed his arrival in the Willamette valley, at which time he took up his abode in Oregon City, then a more populous and prosperous town than Portland. In 1855 he removed to The Dalles, then at the head of navigation on the Columbia river. He turned his attention to stock-raising about fifteen miles south of that place, at first handling horses and cattle and later sheep, becoming one of the first sheep men in that country. This was in 1873. He was prominently and widely known in his neighborhood and was one of its venerable citizens when he passed away June 19, 1906. He was born December 5, 1823, and was therefore eighty-two and one-half years of age at the time of his demise. His wife, who was a daughter of Robert Benefiel, had a family of eleven children, seven of whom reached adult age. Those who survive are: Henry, who is living in Durfur, Oregon; Mrs. Mary Gillian; Mrs. H. J. Emerson of The Dalles; Mrs. E. B. Durfur of Portland; Frank of this review; and William who is living at Heyburn, Idaho.

FRANK MENETTE.

Frank Menefee was educated in the academy at The Dalles and read law with his brother-in-law, E. B. Dufur. In 1889 he was admitted to the bar and entered into partnership with his preceptor under the firm style of Dufur & Menefee, which connection was continued until June, 1900. At that time Mr. Menefee became district attorney of the seventh judicial district at The Dalles and was reelected in 1904, continuing in the office until June, 1908. His eight years' service in that position was most creditable, being characterized by capable and unfaltering loyalty to duty. He afterward engaged in private practice at The Dalles until September, 1910, when he came to Portland and assisted in organizing the United States Cashier Company, of which he has since been president and manager. This company was incorporated under the laws of Oregon, August 9, 1909, and was capitalized for two hundred thousand dollars. It purchased the Potter patent No. 886,307, for a change-making machine known as the Potter cashier, and while this machine was yet under construction the company consolidated by purchasing on the 10th of July, 1910, the business of the American Cash Record Company, which was incorporated under the laws of the state of Washington. This company owned the United States and Canadian rights of the Bilyen and Overlin patent for a coin delivery machine known as the Bilyen Automatic Cashier. This machine had previously been constructed and was demonstrated to perfection that it would do all the work for which it was designed. At this time the company increased its capitalization one million dollars, making its capital one million two hundred thousand dollars. It has more than one thousand shareholders. It occupies a splendid factory building, excellently equipped for the manufacture of the machines and the conduct of the business. The machine will fill a need in banks and all institutions having large pay rolls, including postoffices, department stores, restaurants, theatres, railroad ticket offices, etc. There is every reason to believe that the business will develop rapidly and that it will bring a large amount of money to Portland. The main building of reinforced concrete is forty-two by one hundred and sixty feet and two stories in height. In addition there is also a boiler house and blacksmithing and woodworking departments, and about fifty people are employed. Since the organization of the present company Mr. Menefee has been its president and general manager and his well formulated plans are being carried forward to a successful completion in the management and conduct of the business. Already its money-making, change-making, computing and adding machines are extensively used all over the Pacific coast and in many other sections of the country. The capacity is five hundred machines per month or six thousand annually. Their machines have the following technical points of superiority: flexible keyboard, light and uniform key action, repeat key, error key for clearing board, governor controlled adding mechanism, lever action of operating handle, sectional unit method of assembling. In addition to Mr. Menefee the other officers of the company are Robert J. Upton, secretary, F. H. Lloyd, treasurer, F. M. LeMonn, sales manager and O. E. Gernert, assistant sales manager. Besides their well appointed and equipped factory the company has general offices in the Lewis building in Portland.

In 1903 Mr. Menefee was married to Miss Mabel C. Cowles, a daughter of Clifford S. Cowles of St. Paul, Minnesota, and they have two children, Emily and Selden, aged respectively four and two years. Mrs. Menefee is a member of the Grace Memorial church and takes an active part in the work of the women's societies. On coming to Portland Mr. Menefee purchased a beautiful home at East Nineteenth street and Broadway. He is a member of the Ad Club and very active and helpful in his support and promotion of the city's best interests. Fraternally he was connected with Friendship Lodge, No. 9, K. P. at The Dalles, served as past chancellor and was past grand chancellor of the grand lodge of Oregon. He was also a past exalted ruler of the Elks Lodge at The Dalles, belonging to the Improved Order of Red Men there and was its treasurer from the founding of the organization until his removal to Portland. In politics he is a stalwart republican and served as city recorder of The Dalles and was also mayor for two years. He has rapidly made his way to a prominent position in industrial and commercial circles and is now at the head of a growing business, the value and importance of which as a factor in Portland's growth and commercial prosperity is being widely recognized.

T. H. B. TAYLOR, of Rogue River, is the proprietor of a popular hotel at that place. He is a veteran of the Civil war and is familiar with pioneer life in this state, having lived on a farm near his present home for twenty eight years. He was born in Marion county, Illinois, May 18, 1842, the son of Eben and Mary (Ellinsworth) Taylor, the former a native of Kentucky, and the latter of Tennessee. The parents removed to Illinois in 1836 and later settled in Missouri, where they resided during the remainder of their lives. They were the parents of seven children but the subject of this review is the only one now surviving.

T. H. B. Taylor remained at home with his parents until he attained the age of twenty years, receiving a good common-school education. Shortly before attaining his majority he enlisted for service in the Civil war, joining Company C of the Eleventh Indiana Infantry. He was seriously wounded in the battle of Pittsburg Landing, his injury being to the left shoulder. He was discharged from service on account of disability but in the spring of 1863 he re-enlisted, becoming a member of Company A of the Third New York Cavalry. While participating in the engagement at Petersburg he received an injury to his left hand and shortly afterward he was transferred to the Volunteer Relief Corps, serving in that capacity until the close of the war. He received his honorable discharge in Rhode Island in 1865, after which he went to Newport, where he remained for a year and then removed to Maine. After a residence of two years in that state he settled in Iowa, where he remained for five years. In 1872 he went to California and in 1876 he came to Jackson county, Oregon, and bought a farm in Evans creek valley, six miles north of Rogue River. At the time he purchased it this farm was in a very primitive state but by hard labor and continuous effort during the period of his occupancy he succeeded in placing the greater part of it under a good state of cultivation and erecting suitable improvements. For twenty-eight years he resided on this place when he sold the property and removed to Rogue River, where he erected the Waldorf Hotel.

In 1869 Mr. Taylor married Miss Florence E. Booker, a native of Maine, and to this union was born one son, E. H. B., who died in 1908. In his political views Mr. Taylor is affiliated with the republican party and has served on the school board. He is active in his endeavors for the upbuilding of the community of which he has long been an honored and energetic citizen. As a surviving veteran of the Civil war he is entitled to and has the respect in more than an ordinary degree of his large circle of friends and associates, by whom he is held in high esteem. There are no citizens of the town or county who are more highly regarded or have a larger list of close personal friends.

JOHN THOMAS ODEN. Starting out in life on his own account at the age of seventeen years, John Thomas Oden is a self-made man and whatever success he has achieved is attributable directly to his own labors. He is now the owner of a good tract of land of forty acres not far from Rogue River in Jackson county. He is one of the native sons of Oregon, his birth having occurred in Douglas county, December 19, 1861. His parents are both natives of Missouri but in pioneer times they became residents of Douglas county, Oregon, where they reared their family of fourteen children. The mother's maiden name was Cordelia Monroe.

At the usual age John Thomas Oden entered the public schools and acquainted himself with those branches of learning which are regarded as indispensable factors in the attainment of success in the business world. Neither was his training at farm labor meager. Almost as soon as old enough to handle the plow he began work in the fields and when seventeen years of age he started out in the world on his own account. He was employed at farm labor for some time and also engaged in mining. As he prospered in his undertakings he made investment in property and is now the owner of forty acres of land, which is naturally rich and arable and on which he raises hay, grain and fruit, producing good crops of these various products. He also raises cattle and he keeps everything about his place in a neat and orderly condition. He took up his land as a homestead and his labors have brought it to its present well developed condition.

In 1891 Mr. Oden was united in marriage to Miss Olive F. McAlister, who is a native of this state. They became the parents of seven children, Nelson, Earl, Ernest, Vira F., Floyd, Ralph and Lester, all of whom are yet at home. Both Mr. and Mrs. Oden are well known in this locality and the hospitality of its best homes is freely accorded them. His political allegiance is given to the democratic party but he has no time nor inclination to seek public office, preferring to concentrate his energies upon his business affairs, which are now being capably directed and are bringing to him gratifying success.

ZACHARIAH T. KINTZLEY, a veteran of the Civil war whose life has been full of activity, is now living retired at his home, Douglas Garden, one mile east of Springfield. He was born in Clay county, Indiana, September 16, 1847, a son of George and Sarah (Wheeler) Kintzley, natives of Virginia and North Carolina respectively. The parents were married in Louisville, Kentucky, where they resided for a short time, after which they removed to Clay county, Indiana, and later to Putnamville, Indiana, where the father built a large grist mill and sawmill which he operated for seven years. He then sold his mill property and moved to Story county, Iowa, where he bought land and began farming, but died one year later, in 1855. The mother remained on the farm until 1863, when she sold the property, and moved to the vicinity of Denver, Colorado. There she resided for a short time and then returned to Story county, Iowa, where she died in 1872. In their family were seven children, namely: Adolphus, who died during the Civil war in which he was participating, and whose widow passed away at Ames, Iowa; Mrs. Mary McHiron, of Decatur, Nebraska, who is now deceased; George B., of Jasper, Oregon; Barbara Jane, who died in Springfield, Oregon; James K. and Priscilla, both deceased; and Zachariah T., of this review.

The last named was reared in Indiana and Iowa and in the schools of those states received a good education. He helped his father with the work of the mill when not engaged with his text-books, but at the early age of sixteen years enlisted in the Ninth Iowa Volunteer Cavalry, on September 23, 1863, and served until March 23, 1866, when he was discharged at Davenport, Iowa. After the close of the war he returned to Story county, Iowa, there residing for a short time, after which he removed to the vicinity of Sioux City, Iowa, where he entered upon farming pursuits and remained for five years on a farm which he had purchased. He then sold his farm and removed to Sloan, Iowa, where he was married and went into the sawmill business. He was thus engaged for ten years near that city and then moved to Sloan, where for two years he served as city marshal and for some time operated a restaurant. He was also elected sheriff, a position which he filled for two years and then, in 1890, came to Oregon, settling in Springfield after stopping for a short time in eastern Oregon, driving thence across the state to Lane county. Here he went into the furniture business, a vocation which he followed for seven years, after which he sold out and became a dealer in real estate for a time. He then retired from active life and built a home called Douglas Garden where he now lives, on a tract of ten acres one mile from Springfield. He is also the owner of two other fine residence properties in the town.

Mr. Kintzley was married, March 19, 1870, to Miss Mary C. Cain, who was born in Wisconsin, January 12, 1848, a daughter of Milton and Hannah Cain. The father was born in this country while the mother's birthplace was England. After his marriage the father worked in the lead mines of Wisconsin until 1869, when he migrated with his family to California and settled in Eldorado county. On reaching the Golden state he began gold mining, an occupation in which he continued. His wife died in 1871 but the father, who has not been heard from for some time, is supposed to be living. Mrs. Kintzley was the eldest of four children who were born unto her parents, the others being: John M., of Sioux City, Iowa; James B., residing in Seattle, Washington; and Charles, living in California. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Kintzley consisted of four children but two are now deceased: Ida F., who died at the age of four and a half years; and Edna V., who passed away at the age of seventeen months. The mother passed away on the 13th of January, 1900, leaving besides her husband two children to mourn her loss, namely: Mrs. Mary A. Doane, who resides with her father at Douglas Garden and has two children, Mary C. and Belvin B.; and George M., clerking in a hardware store in Springfield. Both were given a high school education.

In his political views Mr. Kintzley is a republican and has been quite active in the party and a stanch adherent of its principles although he has not been an office seeker and never held any public office excepting that of sheriff and city marshal while living in Iowa. In his fraternal relations he is a member of the Odd Fellows Lodge, No. 70, of Springfield, in which he has filled all of the chairs. Mr. Kintzley has a genial disposition and by his warmheartedness and business and social activity has become well and favorably known to practically everybody in Springfield as well as to a large portion of the citizens of Lane county. He has a large number of close personal friends who hold him in high esteem, and although living a retired life he still remains a conspicuous figure in Springfield where he is recognized as one of the best citizens of the community.

CHARLES F. BAXTER, who came to Oregon with his parents when a child, has lived in this state since and has been here engaged in agricultural pursuits. He is greatly interested in educational matters and has been a member of the local school board for many years. He was born in Missouri, September 9, 1860, a son of Benjamin R. and Eleanor A. (Tate) Baxter. The father was born in Missouri while the mother is a native of Virginia, and their wedding was celebrated in Missouri where they lived until 1862. They then removed to Montana, afterward coming to Oregon and settling in Polk county in 1868. The father was a Methodist Episcopal minister and had charge of various churches in Montana and was actively engaged in the ministry in Oregon until his death. He was one of those ministers who, without remuneration of any sort, preached on Sunday and worked on the farm during the week. The journey to this state was made by ox team and on many occasions the road had to be cut through the timber to make way for the passage of the wagons. The father first located on a farm in Polk county, which he operated for seven years, then removed to Benton county, near Corvallis, and operated a sheep ranch for four years, after which he removed to a point ten miles south of Corvallis, where he purchased three hundred and twenty acres of land, but owing to bad conditions he was obliged to give it up. He next removed to Lane county and again rented a farm for three years, afterward going to the Mohawk valley and shortly thereafter went to Marcola, Lane county, where he resided until the time of his death, which occurred on January 17, 1894. His wife survived him until December 10, 1908. In their family were fifteen children, of whom the following are deceased: Henry B., Virginia T., Lydia A., Laura L., Perry F., Jane T., Edwin C., Kate T., Albert S. and Lizzie D. The surviving members are as follows: Rosanna who owns a splendid farm of one hundred and ninety four acres at Marcola, and is a stanch admirer of Theodore Roosevelt; Charles F., of this review; Alexander, residing in Corvallis; George, and Mollie, the wife of Frank M. Stafford, of Lane county.

Charles F. Baxter remained at home with his parents, acquiring a good common school education and assisting his father with the farm work until he was twenty one years of age. He then took charge of the homestead farm, operating it until the death of his father, since which time he has managed it for his sister Rosanna to whom it now belongs.

Mr. Baxter was married on the 20th of February, 1889, to Miss Catherine Root, who was born in California, April 26, 1872, a daughter of Austin and Ellen J. (Smith) Root. Her parents were born in Indiana but were married in California, and after living in that state for a time they removed to eastern Oregon, and afterward to western Oregon, where the father passed away in 1906. The mother survives at the age of sixty years and now makes her home in Marcola. In their family were nine children, namely: Mary, the wife of Emmett E. Boggs, of Lane county; Mrs. Baxter; Oliver, of Lane County; Alice Mathews, also of this county; Lena Anderson, a resident of Canada; Nettie Neal and Ettie Robley, twins, residing in Lane county; Frank, of this county; and Carrie Bell, deceased. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Baxter were born six children, as follows: Edwin, born July 10, 1890, who is still at home; Nellie M., born February 23, 1893, who is the wife of Riley L. Garrison, of Marcola; Elmer, born December 26, 1895, who died at the age of nine months; Lawrence E., born May 4, 1903; Kate E., born October 18, 1908; and Ella I., born December 24, 1911.

Mr. Baxter in his political views is a republican but has never paid a great deal of attention to politics. He is much interested in school affairs, however, and has been a member of the school board for many years. He belongs to the Woodmen of the World, his membership being at Springfield. Mr. Baxter ranks high as an estimable citizen, being well known in Marcola and vicinity, where he is held in high esteem by all who known him.

A. A. RUSSELL. Iowa has furnished a large percentage of worthy citizens to Oregon and among this number is A. A. Russell, who is now living in Yamhill county, his time and energies being devoted to the further development and improvement of a farm of one hundred acres, about a mile south of Gaston, where in addition to cultivating the cereals best adapted to soil and climate, he is also engaged in dairying. He was born in Iowa, February 4, 1845, his parents being C. R. and Charlotte (Robison) Russell, both of whom were natives of Ohio. They became residents of Iowa at an early period in the settlement of the state and in 1850 removed to Missouri, where they resided for four years. The tide of emigration was continually flowing westward and in the decade between 1850 and 1860 there was a great influx of settlers in the Pacific coast country. Men who came to take charge of the natural resources of the northwest determined to make permanent residence in this part of the country. Among the number was C. R. Russell, who in 1854 crossed the plains with ox teams. It required six months to make the long journey to California, where he resided until 1864 and then came to Yamhill county, Oregon, settling near Gaston. He purchased a farm and to its cultivation and improvement devoted his attention throughout his remaining days. Unto him and his wife were born six children: Mrs. J. J. Palmatier, of Hillsboro, Oregon; Mrs. M. A. Johnson, who resides in Ashland, Oregon; Mrs. L. A. Knobloek, of Heppner, this state; and A. A., of this review. Those deceased are: F. A., who was drowned in 1875; and Mrs. L. F. Neil, of Ashland, Oregon, who passed away in 1910.

No event of special importance occurred to vary the routine of farm life for A. A. Russell in his boyhood and youth. He attended the public schools and worked in the fields, and when his time was not thus employed he enjoyed the games in which youths of the period indulged. Having arrived at man's estate he made preparations for having a home of his own through his marriage to Miss F. A. Matteson, who was born in Elgin, Illinois, in 1852, and crossed the plains with her parents in 1854. She is a member of the well known Matteson family of Yamhill and Washington counties. The occupation to which Mr. Russell was reared he decided to make his life work and has always engaged in farming, with the result that he is now the owner of an excellent property of one hundred acres, pleasantly and conveniently situated about a mile south of Gaston. He raises good crops and also keeps a number of cows for dairy purposes and the products of his dairy, because of their excellence, find a ready sale on the market and add not a little to his annual income.

As the years passed six children were added to the household of Mr. and Mrs. Russell: Lillian M., the wife of C. W. Hudson, of Portland; Francis A., who follows farming in Yamhill county; Minnie C., the wife of E. F. Magoon, a resident of Ashland; G. W. H., at home; Charles A., of Washington county; and B. A., who makes his home in Yamhill county. The parents are members of the Congregational church and do all in their power to promote its growth and extend its influence. The cause of education finds in Mr. Russell a stalwart champion and for several years he served on the school board, while for two years he filled the office of supervisor. He belongs to the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, with which he has affiliated for thirty-eight years, during which period he has filled all of the chairs and acted as representative to the grand lodge. He is faithful and loyal to the teachings of this fraternity and many of his warmest friends are found in its membership. However, he is widely and favorably known throughout Yamhill and Washington counties, having made his home in this part of the state for forty-seven years. He has been an interested witness of the events which have marked its upbuilding and in as far as possible has given his cooperation to measures for the public good.

F. C. FREY is a leading representative of the commercial fraternity of Baker, where he owns and conducts one of the largest and best equipped exclusive sporting goods stores in the state of Oregon. He was born in Minnesota on the 9th of March, 1869,

MR. AND MRS. A. A. RUSSELL

PUBLIC

and is a son of Charles and Henricha Frey, both natives of Germany. There they were likewise reared and married, immediately following which they emigrated to the United States. The father, who was a farmer, engaged in agricultural pursuits in Minnesota for some years, but about 1874, together with his wife and family he crossed the plains to Oregon. Upon his arrival in this state he filed on a homestead on the John Day river in Grant county, energetically applying himself to the cultivation and improvement of his land until his death. He met with success in his undertakings and left his widow a ranch containing about four hundred acres of finely improved and valuable land in the vicinity of Mount Vernon, this state. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Frey numbered nine, six daughters and three sons, but two of the daughters are now deceased. The members of the family who are still living are as follows: Louise, the wife of William Sproul, of Los Angeles, California; F. W., who is an agriculturist; F. C., our subject; Nettie, the wife of W. Wilson, of Canada; Ed, who is living in the Fox valley, Grant county, Oregon; Ella, who married Ira Sproul, of Fox valley, Oregon; and Dora, the wife of Charles McKroley, of Mount Vernon, this state. The mother is still living and continues to make her home on the old ranch in Grant county.

As he was a child of only five years when his parents came to Oregon, practically the entire life of F. C. Frey has been passed in the northwest. He remained on the ranch until he was fourteen, following which he attended school during the winter months and worked in the summers. When he was seventeen, he began to learn the carpenter's trade, but discovering that he possessed unusual mechanical ability he subsequently withdrew from this and went to work in the mines. He advanced rapidly and later engaged in amalgamating, continuing to follow this until his health began to fail, when he was compelled to take up another line of work. He then went to Seattle and took a position on the Seattle Telegraph, which is an evening paper, but was later employed on one of the morning journals, continuing to be identified with the newspaper business for three years. Withdrawing from this he went into the sewing machine and piano business, as representative of the Singer people and Pettis & Company. The climate of Seattle did not agree with him, and feeling the necessity of making another change he returned to Baker, where he owned some real estate. Upon his return here he built a residence on his lots and continued to engage in the sewing machine business as agent for the Singer people for about two years. Giving this up he opened a second-hand store. He began with a capital of twenty five dollars, but owing to his knowledge of cabinet making and his mechanical skill he was able to invest this to excellent advantage and realize good returns therefrom. He bought up old, broken, discarded furniture for a very small amount and took it to his work room and repaired it and sold it for a good price, which was practically all profit. This proved to be a very profitable venture and he continued in it for about eight years. At the end of that time he had sufficient capital to engage in something else, so disposing of this in 1901 he went into the sporting goods business. Here he again manifested unusual sagacity and foresight in the selection of a business, as this enterprise has flourished from its incipiency, and is now one of the largest and best known of the kind in the state. Mr. Frey carries a very large and well selected stock of goods and is not only favored with a good local patronage but does an extensive mail order business. He has applied himself energetically and intelligently to the development of his establishment and now has a stock that invoices twenty-five thousand dollars, and it is entirely clear of all indebtedness. In addition to this he owns some quite valuable real estate, which is also unincumbered, and he has some mining interests in Grant county, being one of the stockholders in the Canyon Mountain Mining Company.

On the 31st of December, 1902, Mr. Frey was united in marriage to Miss Clyde Truscott, a native of Auburn, Baker county, and a daughter of Richard and Susanna (Baldock) Truscott. The parents were both natives of England, the father having been born in 1835 and the mother on the 29th of January, 1854. Mr. Truscott, who was a civil engineer, was one of the prominent and well known mining men of this section during the early days, and for more than ten years was superintendent of the Haskell placer mines. During his later years he gave this up and engaged in agricultural pursuits, and at the time of his death, which occurred in 1900, was living on the ranch where his widow still resides. The family of Mr and Mrs. Truscott, numbered ten, eight daughters and two sons, all of whom are living. In order of birth they are as follows: Jennie, the wife of P. Miller, of Baker; May, who married Charles Grant, of Bacon; Charles, who is living on a ranch three miles from Baker; Mrs. Frey; Nile, the wife of Bert Butler; Mary, who married Frank Evans, a ranchman; William, who lives six miles from Baker; Ollie, the wife of Oscar Zimmerman, of Baker; Grace, who married Harry Spence, of Baker; and Nellie, a student in the Baker schools, who is living at home with her mother. The entire family are residents of this state and live within a radius of thirty miles from one another. In common with other pioneer families, the Truscotts had many unusual experiences. Mrs. Frey has a vivid recollection of their spending several months in a stockade during an Indian outbreak, when she was a girl of thirteen years. In the maternal line she is descended from one of Baker county's earliest pioneers, her grandfather, William Baldock, having come to this county in 1862. He immediately acquired some government land, and was the first man in Baker county to engage in agricultural pursuits. During the early years he used to freight from Umatilla to Auburn, and he was a veteran of the Rogue River Indian war. One child has been born to Mr. and Mrs. Frey, F. C., Jr.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Frey are members of the Methodist Episcopal church, and fraternally he is affiliated with the Knights of Pythias, while his political support he gives to the republican party. He is a strong champion of Baker county and is one of the active and enthusiastic members of the Baker Commercial Club, giving his unqualified indorsement to the various movements instituted by this organization. Mr. Frey has always been quite a sportsman and has mounted many of his hunting trophies, now having several deer, wild cats, wolves and coyotes in an excellent state of preservation, that he has used in window decorations. He deserves much commendation for the success he has achieved in the direction of his undertakings, as for many years he struggled against the adversities that seem to accompany poor health, meeting with conditions during that period that would have conquered a man of less energy and determination of purpose. Unceasing diligence, keen perception, honesty of purpose and a happy faculty of doing the right thing at the right time have been the salient factors in his success, and have been the means of placing him among the foremost business men in the county.

I. FRANK COFFMAN. The town of Lents owes its existence, development and improvement largely to the efforts of I. Frank Coffman, who is one of the most influential, active and respected citizens. He was born March 29, 1861, in Mahaska county, Iowa, and was one of a family of eleven children whose parents were John and Jane (Campbell) Coffman, who were natives of Pennsylvania and of Indiana respectively. They were married in the latter state and had a large family but only four are now living, namely: Van, who is a railroad engineer residing at Los Angeles, California; Peter L., of Iowa; Eliza Ann, the wife of John Farrell, of Clay Center, Kansas; and I. Frank.

The last named was a youth of eighteen years when he started out in the world on his own account. He had been reared to farm life and early became familiar with the practical methods of clearing and developing the fields. He rented a part of his father's farm for two years but afterward withdrew from agricultural pursuits and went into the coal mines of Iowa, after which his time was divided between mining and railroading until 1886. That year witnessed his arrival in Oregon and he settled in Lents, where he entered the employ of O. P. Lents. For some time he was employed in various ways but at length opened a small store and secured the establishment of a postoffice here. He was appointed the first postmaster by President Cleveland in his second administration, continuing in the position for three and a half years, when he retired from the office to make way for a republican successor. After a year's time, however, he was again appointed postmaster and so continued until about four years ago. In the management and control of the office he was assisted by his wife and while he was at the head of the postoffice two rural free delivery routes were established, one of these being the largest rural route in the United States. In the beginning of his business career Mr. Coffman purchased a steam wood saw and this proved to be a profitable investment. He sawed wood, gummed saws, ground plowshares and ground feed. In fact he did everything that would give him a start. In time he established the Lents water works which he operated with his wood saw engine but later put in a gas plant and still later put in electric motors. Mr. Coffman also was sole owner of the water works for eight years but has recently sold out to the city of Portland.

Mr. Coffman married Miss Clara Robinson, a native of Iowa and one of a family of six children, as follows: Theodore, a resident of Mississippi; John, of What Cheer, Iowa; Mary, the widow of Dr. Irwin, of Seaside, Oregon; Ida, who is the widow of Joe Oelmayer, of Iowa, and a resident of Portland, Oregon; Emma, who married S. S. Frisbie, of Mississippi; and Mrs. Coffman.

In his political views Mr. Coffman is a democrat but has never been an office seeker save for the fact that he served as postmaster. He is at the head of the community, however, inasmuch as his ability well fits him for leadership. His opinions carry weight in everything connected with public service and he is called "the mayor" of Lents although the town is not incorporated. He has given liberally of his time and money in support of interests for the improvement of the village, has proved himself a stanch friend of the public schools and in fact his cooperation is a strong element in progress along various lines. When an effort was made to change the name of the postoffice at Lents to Mount Scott he bitterly opposed this and caused the measure to be defeated, and he now has in his possession a letter from Harry Scott, late editor of the Oregonian, saying that he did not wish to deprive Mr. Lents of that honor. The spirit of advancement has characterized Mr. Coffman throughout his entire career and out of the struggle with small opportunities he has come finally into a field of broad and active influence and usefulness.

FRANCIS S. SLATER is one of the respected and influential citizens of Canyon City, Oregon, where he is engaged in the general banking business, being at present the first cashier of the First National Bank of Grant County. He was born in Baker county, Oregon, August 5, 1865, and is the son of Senator and Mrs. Slater, of whom a more complete review is published in the biography of ex-Judge W. T. Slater, of Salem, Oregon, in another part of this work.

Francis S. Slater was reared in his parents' home and received his early education in La Grande, being graduated from the high school. In 1886 and for the succeeding three years he engaged in the general land business in this portion of the state. He later accepted the position as bookkeeper in the La Grande National Bank, in Union county, and continued in that occupation for several years. He was afterward appointed deputy assessor of Union county, under John S. Clark, serving in that office for two consecutive years after which he spent one year as deputy county clerk. He then entered into the employ of the Farmers and Traders Bank at La Grande to which business he, however, only gave a portion of his time. In the fall of 1902 he accepted the position of cashier in the First National Bank, of Canyon City, Grant county, since which time he has continued to devote his entire attention to the banking business. The bank building is one of the most modern of its kind in this part of Oregon, being constructed of cut stone and furnished with modern and up-to-date deposit vaults, burglar proof safes and elegant and complete interior fittings required to accommodate the work of a complete and modern banking house.

Mr. Slater was united in marriage in 1903, to Miss Jeanette McGillis, a native of Oregon, and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. McGillis. Her father was one of the pioneers of Oregon who settled at a very early date on Sauric Island, Multnomah county, Oregon, where he passed out of this life when Mrs. Slater was but a young girl. To Mr. and Mrs. Slater two children have been born, Francis Robert and James Gilbert, both of whom are pupils in the public school.

Mr. Slater is one of the highly esteemed citizens of Canyon City and is well known throughout his portion of the state. He is a man of strict integrity in his business transactions and has the unqualified confidence of all his business associates. He is a man thoroughly familiar with the banking business in which he has spent the largest portion of his active years and is always to be found identified with every enterprise intended to improve the business and social conditions of his county and state.

REV. PLYMPTON KELLY. Among the pioneers of Multnomah county was Rev. Plympton Kelly, who was born in 1828 in Pulaski county, Kentucky. His parents were Rev. Clinton and Mary (Bastian) Kelly, who were early settlers in Kentucky, where they were married in Pulaski county. There they resided until October, 1847, when with ox teams they started overland for Oregon. They made their way as far as Missouri, where they spent the winter of 1847-1848, and in the spring set out for Oregon with four yokes of oxen and three wagons. In due time they landed in Multnomah county, where they settled upon six hundred and forty acres of government land, erecting thereon a log cabin, and began to clear the land for farming. Clinton Kelly, who had been both a farmer and minister in Kentucky, continued both his business and professional career in Oregon, preaching whenever he had an opportunity and working hard to clear and cultivate his land. He met with success in his business and a few years after settling on the homestead built a commodious and comfortable house for his family, residing here for twenty-seven years, his death occurring on the 19th of June, 1875, in his sixty-seventh year. Mr. Kelly was married three times. His first wife was Mary Bastian, who died in Kentucky, having been the mother of five children. Jane Burns, his second wife, bore him one child and passed away in Kentucky. Mr. Kelly later married Maria M. Crane, by whom he had nine children. His third wife died in Oregon in 1863. Out of the section of public land which Mr. Kelly took up he donated two acres upon which the Kelly school was built, it being the second school district formed in Multnomah county, and at the time of his death owned the remainder of that large tract of land, upon which he spent twenty-seven years of his life in Oregon. This tract is all now included within the limits of the city of Portland. Dr. Kelly still owns twelve acres of the original Kelly section, it being within the corporation of Portland.

The youth of Rev. Plympton Kelly was passed in Pulaski county, Kentucky, where he received his education in the common schools. He lived with his parents until he had attained the age of twenty-two years, when in 1850 he settled on three hundred and twenty acres of government land, where he lived and which he tilled until his death, on the 15th of September, 1906. This land now adjoins the city limits of Portland. The surviving members of his family continued to live on this farm until 1911, when they sold it and since his widow has resided in Portland in a beautiful home. During his entire life Plympton Kelly followed the business of farming but was quite active in his ministerial work as well. He was one of the pillars of the Methodist church and it was he who conferred the name of Mount Tabor on that suburb of Portland.

In Multnomah county, on the 4th of July, 1861, Mr. Kelly was married to Miss Eliza beth Clark. She was born near Adrian, Michigan, December 26, 1843, and was a daughter of Alexander and Nancy (Hitchens) Clark. The father came from New York to Michigan in 1835, being one of the early pioneers of that state. There he took up government land and lived until his death, which occurred in 1845, the mother surviving until 1856. They were the parents of two children: Elizabeth, now the widow of Plympton Kelly; and Seth, who died at the age of five years. Elizabeth (Clark) Kelly came to Oregon in 1860 with her aunt, Mrs. Kingsley, with whom she lived in Portland until the time of her marriage to Mr. Kelly. She possesses a college education and taught school in a log schoolhouse in Multnomah county previous to her marriage. To Rev. and Mrs. Plympton Kelly six children were born: Eudoxia A., who is now the wife of Alfred Niblin and resides on forty-eight acres of her father's homestead, James G., of Portland; Augustus C., who passed away at the age of twenty four; Clinton C., who died at the age of eighteen; Mary, who became the wife of Thomas Howitt, of Gresham, and died at the age of thirty-five years, leaving a daughter; and Harriet, who died at the age of nineteen.

Politically Mr. Kelly was a republican. He was for many years road supervisor in the Mount Tabor district and contributed greatly to the perfecting of the roads of the county and later to the street improvements of the city of Portland. His fraternal relations were limited to membership in the Evening Star Grange, of which he was a charter member. He was also an Indian war veteran. The life work of Rev. Plympton Kelly was of great importance in the early development of Multnomah county and has left its impress ineffaceably upon our public institutions and improvements. He was a good citizen, respected in his day and generation, and no history of Multnomah county would be complete without prominent mention of his career.

FRED S. AND RICHARD J. WILCOX. The name of Wilcox is well known in Washington county and Fred S. and Richard J., representatives of the second generation of the family in this county, are numbered among its most progressive citizens. They are twins and were born in Washoe county, Nevada, May 12, 1869, being sons of John W. and Susanna (Gill) Wilcox. The father was born in New York state and the mother at Fort Wayne, Indiana. They were married at Fort Wayne and a short time afterwards moved to Minnesota. Two years later they crossed the plains by ox team and Mr. Wilcox engaged in ranching in Washoe county, Nevada. In 1880 he came with his family to Oregon and first located near Forest Grove but after two years moved to Greenville, Washington county, and bought a small farm which he developed to a good state of productiveness. He died October 9, 1906, and his wife was called away August 9, 1888. At the time of his death he was the owner of forty-seven acres of well improved land in this county. In the family of Mr. and Mrs. Wilcox were seven children, namely: Martha A., a resident of Newport, Lincoln county; George J., record of whom appears elsewhere in this work; Ruth, who is the wife of Dr. Tamiesie, of Hillsboro; Fred S. and Richard J., of this review; and Bessie and Robert, both of whom died at the age of three years.

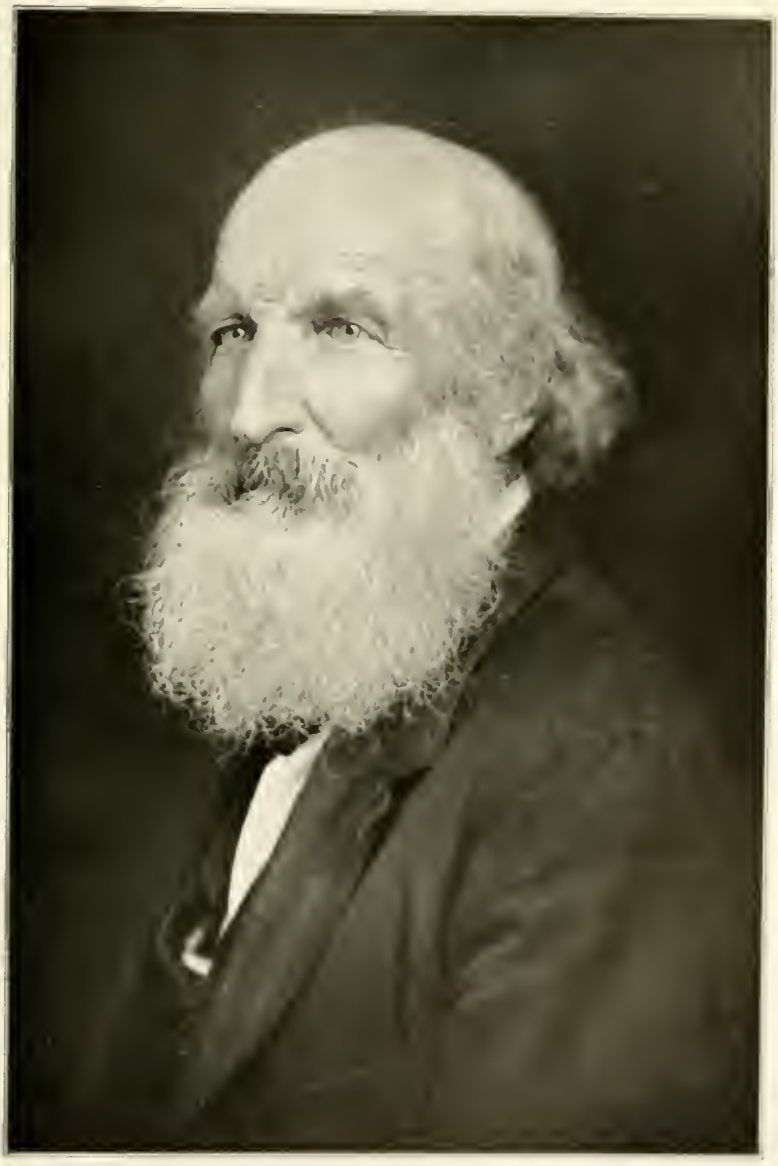
Fred S. and Richard J. Wilcox came to Oregon with their parents in 1880 and in the public schools gained their preliminary education. Fred S. continued at home with his father after the death of the mother but at the age of twenty-one, in 1890, took up a homestead near Banks. He has been continuously identified with agricultural and stock-raising interests since he entered upon his business career and is now one of the substantial men of the county, whose word is as good as his bond and who is ably performing his part in the development of this section.

Richard J. Wilcox began working in a sawmill in Washington county at the age of eighteen and continued in this employment for two years. In September, 1892, he went to Mexico and became a locomotive fireman on the Mexican Central Railway, continuing in that position for six years. He then took charge of the electric light plant in the city of Mexico, which position he held for three years. However, the railway business presented inducements which he could not resist and he gave up his position in the city to become locomotive engineer for the El Oro Mining and Railway Company. After two and one-half years he transferred his allegiance in the same capacity to the Ixtlahuaca Railroad and continued with that company until May, 1908, when he resigned from the railway service and has since made his home in Washington county.

The brothers Fred S. and Richard J. own the old family homestead, having acquired the interests of the other heirs, and are joint owners of one hundred and thirty acres of land in this county. Twenty-five acres of this land is highly developed and they have ten acres in productive orchards, also some valuable vacant property within the limits of Portland. They are unmarried and as their attention is closely concentrated on their business the results have proved highly gratifying. They are thoroughly energetic and efficient and are rapidly coming to the front as important factors in Washington county. Fred is a member of the Odd Fellows and Maccabees and Richard is also identified with the Odd Fellows, having recently transferred his membership from the City of Mexico to the lodge at Banks. The brothers are stanch advocates of the republican party but neither of them has ever sought public office. They have many warm friends who have at all times found than to be true to every obligation and fully worthy of the good fortune with which they are blessed.

AARON HARVEY, an honored pioneer resident of Oregon, is living retired at the home of his daughter on Deer creek road, about seven miles from Roseburg. He has reached the age of eighty-one years and six decades of this period have been passed in the northwest, so that he is familiar with the history of pioneer development as well as of later progress in Oregon. He was born in Staffordshire, England, October 6, 1831, and in 1837, when five years of age, was brought to the United States by his parents, Aaron and Elizabeth (Hall) Harvey, both of whom were natives of England. On arriving in the new world they established their home upon a farm in Illinois which was then one of the frontier states. The mother died there, after which the father came to Oregon in 1860 and lived with his son Aaron.

Aaron Harvey pursued his education in the public schools of Illinois, giving his attention to his text-books when his time was not demanded by farm work. He assisted his father in the cultivation of the fields until twenty-one years of age, at which time he started to Oregon with an ox train of twelve wagons. The long journey was a tedious and arduous one, involving many discom-



AARON HARVEY

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASTOR, LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS

forts and hardships, but they had no trouble with the Indians save that the red men stole a few of their horses. Mr. Harvey arrived in Oregon on the 7th of November, 1853, and located in the Umpqua valley, where he took up a donation claim of one hundred and sixty acres, which he cultivated and improved, converting the wild and hitherto unproductive land into rich and fertile fields. Year by year he carried on the work of the farm with success and he made his home there until about three years ago. He worked at carpentering to some extent also during that period, displaying considerable skill and ingenuity with tools. He is now living retired, enjoying a well earned rest.

In 1858 Mr. Harvey was united in marriage to Mrs. Elizabeth (Harris) Coats, a daughter of David and Nancy (Stovehall) Harris. Mrs. Harvey came to Oregon in 1853 but her parents remained in Missouri until her father died in St. Joseph. Her mother came to Oregon in 1854. Mr. and Mrs. Harvey are the parents of the following named: Mary, Ellen, William, Thomas, Ann, Eliza, Robert, Edna, Bessie, and Aaron, of whom the latter is deceased.

Aaron Harvey holds membership with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and gives his political support to the republican party. He was at one time elected constable but would not serve having never had aspirations nor desire for public office. However, he has always been loyal in his citizenship and in a private capacity has aided in promoting the progress, upbuilding and prosperity of the community in which he has long lived. Having made his home in this state for about sixty years he is familiar with its pioneer history, with the story of its reclamation from Indian rule and with the work of development as wilderness conditions have given way before an advancing civilization. He can remember the days when there were no railroads in the state and when the moving wagon was a feature of the old trails, but all this has long since changed and no one is more interested in modern progress than Aaron Harvey.

WILLIAM H. SCHROEDER is one of the enterprising and successful men of Canyon City, in which place he is engaged in general merchandising, being at present the general manager of the Canyon City Commercial Company, of which he is also one of the principal stockholders. He was born December 12, 1865, and is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Schroeder, both of whom were natives of Germany, the father's birth having occurred near Hamburg, where he engaged in the manufacture of corks and continued to live during all the years of his life.

William H. Schroeder was reared in his parents' home and received his education in the schools of Germany. At the age of sixteen years he emigrated to America and established his first residence in the new world with his uncle who, at that time, was living near Dennison, Pottawattomie county, Iowa. He remained with his uncle from August, 1881, until January, 1884, at which time he removed to Walla Walla. Later he settled at The Dalles, being there engaged in work on Muddy Creek for three months and then moved to Prairie City where he established his home and continued to reside until 1900. While a resident of Prairie City he was engaged in the stock business in which he was very successful, grazing his stock on the open range. He later removed to Canyon City and for the following four years served as deputy sheriff of Grant county. In 1906 he was elected county clerk in which office he served for two years and was then reelected in 1908 and served for the ensuing two and one half years. In January, 1911, he purchased a stock interest in the Canyon City Commercial Company, of which he at once became general manager in connection with L. Woldenberg. To that business Mr. Schroeder has since given his entire attention and has met with gratifying success. The principal office, warehouse and salesrooms of the Canyon City Commercial Company occupy a building fifty by seventy feet, located at a most advantageous point on Main street. The business of this establishment under the present efficient management is maintained at the very highest standard of commercial operations. It carries a large general stock of merchandise and is one of the most prominent and successful establishments of its kind in this portion of Oregon. In addition to his interests in the Canyon City Commercial Company, Mr. Schroeder is also a director in the First National Bank of Grant County, at Canyon City.

Mr. Schroeder was united in marriage, March 27, 1904, to Miss Charlotte Blake, a native of Susanville, Grant county, Oregon, and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Blake. Her father emigrated to Oregon in the early '50s and settled in Grant county in 1865 where he was engaged in the stock raising business and was identified with merchandising interests at Susanville. At the time of his settlement in Oregon he was successfully engaged in freighting supplies to the mines throughout this portion of the state. To Mr. and Mrs. Schroeder two children have been born, Frances and Elsie.

Mr. Schroeder is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, also of the Masonic lodge, and a member of the Royal Arch Masons, and of the Woodmen of the World. He is one of the most prominent and progressive citizens of Grant county and a man highly respected for his integrity. He is always to be relied upon for support of every measure tending to improve the civic and moral conditions of the people of his county and state.

LORENZO DOW SMITH is one of the enterprising and successful farmers of Coos county. His ranch of one hundred and sixty acres is located on the south fork of the Coos river, ten miles up from Marshfield, where he is engaged in the real estate business and also in dairy farming. He was born September 11, 1850, and is the son of Nathan and Emily (Hobson) Smith, the former a native of Tennessee and the latter of North Carolina. The parents emigrated to Oregon at a very early day, making their first settlement in Marion county, where they lived for one year and then went to Douglas county, settling at Oakland, where they resided until 1865, at which time they removed to the south fork of the Coos river and continued to reside there until the time of their death. The father was a loyal member of the republican party, and in early life was a member of the Quaker church, but on coming to Oregon both he and his wife became members of the United Brethren church. In their family were sixteen children: William, who died of cholera while crossing the plains with his parents in 1852; Enos and an infant, both of whom died while crossing the plains; Lydia C., now the wife of C. W. Dickman, of Portland; Levi, a resident of Marshfield; Lorenzo Dow, of this review; Mary E., the wife of Henry Flook, of Salem; Ellen M., who became the wife of John G. Flook, of Roseburg, and is now deceased; Harvey N., of Portland; Alvin, who is engaged in farming in Coos county; Henry C., a resident of San Francisco, California; John M., deceased; Robert M., also residing in San Francisco; Charles Lester, whose home is on the Coos river, in Coos county, Oregon; Jesse, also residing on the Coos river; and Annie Laura, the wife of S. B. Cutlip, residing on the Coos river.

Lorenzo D. Smith was reared in his father's home and received his elementary education in the public schools of Oregon. He remained under the parental roof until the time of his marriage and in 1889 he established his home on Daniel's creek, on a ranch which he had purchased some years before. During his residence at his father's home he was engaged frequently in the logging business throughout his portion of the state. On settling on his ranch he engaged in the cattle business, breeding and raising stock and also buying and selling stock of every description, raised in his immediate neighborhood. He also pays considerable attention to the dairy industry, in which he uses at present eighteen well selected cows. In addition to his dairy and cattle business he is also engaged in the real-estate business, to which he gives a considerable portion of his time. His present home ranch, which consists of one hundred and sixty acres located on the south fork of the Coos river, ten miles from Marshfield, he purchased in 1900 and has there since continued to reside.

Mr. Smith was united in marriage to Miss Rosa M. La Cross, a daughter of Henry and Rosclia (Cutlip) La Cross, the former a native of Canada and the latter of Oregon. Mr. and Mrs. La Cross were the parents of one child, Rosa M., whose birth occurred in Coos county, this state. The mother closed her earthly pilgrimage many years ago and the father died in 1910. To Mr. and Mrs. Smith nine children were born: Thomas F., E. George and Annie Laura, all of whom are at home; James D., deceased; and John G., Samuel V., Henry H., Florence M. and Dow L., all of whom are at home.

Mr. Smith is a member of the republican party and was deputy sheriff of Coos county for one term. He has also served as school director and road supervisor. He holds membership in the Woodmen of the World, and is a man who has attained commendable success in all his business ventures. He is widely known throughout Coos county and highly respected for his integrity in all business matters, and is one of the thrifty and enterprising citizens of his part of the state.

CHARLES E. DAUGHERTY. The history of C. E. Daugherty's early settlement in Oregon goes back to the days when the stage coach was the only means of transportation between western towns, when the great Indian, Sitting Bull, was a power on the prairies and when the large herds of cattle had to be driven by land over the plains to market. He was born in Huron county, Ohio, December 12, 1858, the son of Richard and Annetta (Baker) Daugherty. The father was born in Pennsylvania and came to Ohio at an early date. He later removed to Marion county, Illinois, and thence to Kansas in 1870. His wife was a native of New York state and went to Ohio, Illinois and Kansas with her husband and in the latter state they both died, the mother in 1873 and the father, surviving his wife for many years, died in 1898. They were the parents of eight children, five of whom are still living.

C. E. Daugherty was educated in the common schools of Huron county and remained at home until he was eighteen years of age, when he went to the Black Hills, in South Dakota, and drove a stage from that section to Carney for some time. He spent the next four years herding cattle for D. C. Rankin and in 1883 drove a herd for Sitting Bull over the Green river trail from Grant county, Oregon, to Valentine, South Dakota, taking six months to make the trip. He then went to Oklahoma, where he purchased sixteen thousand head of cattle for Hunter & Newman and drove them to northwestern Nebraska, selling them at a good price in the markets of that state. In 1890 he came to Oregon, locating in Marion county, where he bought a ranch which he operated for some time, engaging at intervals in the mason's trade, which he had learned in his youth. He lived in Marion county for three years and then sold his holdings and bought a ranch in Linn county, where he remained for a similar length of time. Subsequently he sold out and bought a ranch in Douglas county, where he has since resided. He now owns an interest in seven hundred acres of improved land in the Cow Creek valley, known as the Daniel Levins ranch, situated on the site of the old Galesville stage station. He gives most of his time and attention to the dairy business and has been remarkably successful along this line. His dairy is one of the cleanest and most efficiently equipped in Douglas county and its products find a ready sale on the market.

In 1886 Mr. Daugherty was united in marriage to Miss Effa Jane Fish and they became the parents of eight children: Archie C., deceased; William R.; Agra; Laura M.; Mabel C.; Elma; a child who died in infancy; and Mary A. Mr. Daugherty owns property in Portland and his family reside there to obtain the best educational facilities for the children. He claims Portland as his home but spends most of his time on the ranch. Mr. and Mrs. Daugherty are devoted members of the United Brethren church and have always been active in the affairs of that organization. Politically Mr. Daugherty gives his allegiance to the democratic party and is a firm believer in its principles and policies. Although he never seeks public office for himself he takes an intelligent interest in local public affairs, and is a prominent member of the local lodge of Odd Fellows. He is one of the intelligent farmers of the district, whose scientific knowledge of the details of the business is doing so much to raise the standard of agriculture and to place it upon a higher level.

CHARLES FRANKLIN McKINNEY. Controlled and owned by local interests and managed by local men, the Harney County National Bank of Burns, Oregon, stands for the development of the commercial interests of this section. To individuals, firms and corporations engaged in legitimate productive enterprises it assures all the accommodations and courtesies usually extended by conservative and progressive banking institutions. Its president and a dominating factor in its principles and policies is Charles Franklin McKinney, who has been connected with this institution since 1907. Mr. McKinney is a native of Ohio, his birth occurring in Washington, Fayette county, October 15, 1846. His parents were William S. and Sarah (Adams) McKinney. The mother was a daughter of Charles Adams, a prominent resident of Fayette county, and a grandson of John Quincy Adams, the great statesman and former president of the United States.

William S. McKinney, the father of our subject, settled in Iowa with his family in 1849. The trip from Ohio overland was made by team amid the hardships and dangers incident to travel at that time and in that section of the country. He took up a homestead in Marion county, where he resided until the outbreak of the Civil war when he immediately enlisted in the Fortieth Iowa Volunteer Infantry and served for one year, dying from sickness in 1864. The homestead which he took up in 1849 remained in the family until the death of his wife which occurred in 1898. His wife returned to Ohio when William McKinney went to war, getting money for her journey from the sale of her personal effects.

Charles Franklin McKinney served for three months in the Forty-Fifth Ohio Militia under Colonel Hinkle and Captain Marks. He was taken prisoner, paroled and returned to Ohio. Upon the death of William S. McKinney the family returned to the old homestead in Iowa in the fall of 1865 where Charles McKinney remained for five years, coming to Oregon in 1870. His life in this section of the country, then in the process of settlement, read like a story of western adventure. It was full of rugged hardships, the perils of war and the tear of Indian encroachments, and made a constant call upon the endurance and strength of the pioneer settlers.

Charles F. McKinney arrived in Jordan Valley, Baker county, Oregon, and spent some months in farming in that section. During the winter he removed to Silver City, Idaho, and in the spring of 1871 went to Boulder Creek, California, where he engaged in the lumber business. The country was wild and unsettled; night and day the lumber plant was guarded; the Indians were constantly on the warpath and the business was continued amid the dangers and hardships of the primitive settlement. During this time Mr. McKinney gave much of his attention to mining interests in California and had many rough experiences to mark this time. He never carried a gun, although he served two terms as sheriff of Mono county, but many times in the course of his work was compelled to look down the muzzle of a revolver drawn on him. The times were primitive and the customs rough and the man who did hold his own amid the dangers and hardships of life in the mining camps had necessarily to possess a rare degree of coolness and courage. Mr. McKinney remained in California until the fall of 1887 when he came to Harney county, Oregon, and engaged in the lumber business. He erected and operated a sawmill nine miles up a mountain side until 1907 when he sold out to his son-in-law, E. E. Purrington.

The year 1887 marked the beginning of Mr. McKinney's association with his present enterprise, the Harney County National Bank. At that time it was a private institution conducted by N. Brown & Son, but it was made a National bank when Mr. McKinney became connected with it and the name was changed to its present form. He was elected president, which office he has held since that time. The bank is one of the largest in the city of Burns. Its capital stock is twenty-six thousand dollars and the surplus on hand is thirty thousand dollars. Its deposits amount to three hundred seventy-two thousand seven hundred and eighty-two dollars and seventy-seven cents. It does an annual loan and discount business of two hundred eight thousand eight hundred and ninety-six dollars and ninety-four cents and its United States bonds and premiums amount each year to twenty-five thousand five hundred and sixty-three dollars and eighteen cents. These figures are a fair indication of the remarkable prosperity of the institution which in its present form is now only five years old. Much of the prominence which it has gained in that time is due to the business ability, discrimination, judgment and power of rapid execution which its president, Mr. McKinney, possesses. In the spring of 1912 Mr McKinney purchased for his bank and for the benefit of the community in general, one hundred Duroc Jersey and Poland China brood sows, to be distributed among the settlers on easy terms. The idea is to encourage the breeding and raising of hogs and to raise the standard of the breeds. This is a most commendable movement.

In February, 1868, Charles McKinney was united in marriage to Miss Emma Wilson, a native of Iowa and they became the parents of two children, Cora, now the wife of E. E. Purrington, of Burns, Oregon; and William, who is in charge of the foreign exchange department of the American National Bank of Pendleton, Oregon. Mr. McKinney is a prominent Mason, belonging to the chapter and the commandery. He is a member of Blue Lodge, No. 97, of Burns, Oregon, and is prominent in the Knights of Pythias. During his eventful career Charles McKinney has made judicious investments and has acquired by his own labor and efforts a comfortable fortune which he uses liberally to promote the happiness and prosperity of this section. He owns valuable timber land on the Columbia river which has added materially to his wealth. He is successful in business, prominent and public-spirited in public affairs and genial and hospitable in his private life.

JAMES F. HAUN is one of the large landed proprietors of Oregon, his entire holdings being in Wallowa county, this state. He is a native of Platte county, Missouri, where he was born September 25, 1858, his father being Wilson Haun. His mother, having died when he was but an infant, has left no memory whatever with him concerning her life. When he was a child eight years of age his father removed to Kansas and here the subject of this review continued to live until he was twenty years of age. In 1878 he left the parental home and, in company with his brother Jacob and his brother-in-law, William McGlenire, emigrated to Oregon, making the journey across the plains by wagon. On this long journey across the desert they were compelled to stop at two different points and devote their energies and time to whatever available labor presented itself to them in order to supply their company with funds and food with which to complete their journey. On arriving in this state they located in the Wallowa valley and were among the first of the pioneers to settle in this rich agricultural district. Here they filed upon adjoining homesteads two miles north of Lostine, on the west branch of the Wallowa river. Mr. Haun continued to reside upon his homestead for several years, after which he purchased a farm of three hundred and twenty acres in the Buttes of Wallowa county, to which he removed and on which he remained for three and a half years. He then returned to Lostine and bought his present property. Here his wife died April 27, 1900, and immediately following her death he spent two years in Lostine and one year in Ashland, after which he returned to Lostine, in which place he continued to reside until 1909. In that year he removed his buildings to Evans, which at that time was only a surveyed town site, in which he had become interested, having purchased the same in company with Messrs. Couch, McDonald and Miles. Here he operated a general store for one year. His landed holdings comprise twenty-six hundred acres, which he leases.

Mr. Haun has been twice married. He chose as his first companion in life Miss Ida M. Hayhurst, of Lostine, Oregon. Her father, William Hayhurst, passed away in Iowa, and it was in company with her mother that she made the journey to this state. By her marriage she became the mother of three children: Roy H., who is a resident of Evans, Oregon; James Ralph; and one who died in infancy. On the 12th of June, 1901, Mr. Haun was again married, his second union being with Miss Mellie Dodd, of Auburn, Illinois, by whom he had three children, two of whom are still living, Joy D. and M. Edith. Mrs. Mellie (Dodd) Haun is a daughter of James E. and Annis Dodd, the former a native of Tennessee and the latter of Kentucky. The parents were married in Illinois and are both living in that state, where the father is engaged in farming in Sangamon county. He has been prominently identified with the political life of his county, of which he has served for thirteen years as treasurer. He enjoyed the distinction of an intimate friendship with Abraham Lincoln. He is greatly interested in the Masonic craft and joined that order in 1862, assisting to organize several lodges in the state of Illinois.

Mr. Haun is affiliated with the republican party of his state but has never at any time been ambitious for political preferment. He is a member of the United Artisans. He belongs to the First Day Adventists church, and his wife is an adherent of the Presbyterian faith. James F. Haun, being one of the early pioneers of Wallowa county, had the wisdom in an early day to take advantage of the opportunity to obtain large land holdings in the very richest portion of the state of Oregon at a price easily within the reach of an enterprising man whose ambitions might lead him to wealth and independence, and this he has accomplished in a very high degree. He has given himself entirely to the care of his interests and has not failed to do his honest part as a citizen in the building up of all the necessary public institutions required by a well ordered community life. He is favorably known throughout the entire county and is recognized as an unfailing source of help in the advancement of any measure seeking the moral and social betterment of the people among whom he has for so many years maintained his home.

HARRY L. RUSSELL. Age has seemed no barrier to success in the case of Harry L. Russell, for although he has not yet reached the twenty-fifth milestone on life's journey he has nevertheless won a place for himself among the prosperous and progressive business men of his locality for whom the future holds rich promise. The width of the continent separates him from his birthplace, for he was born in Florida, on the 9th of April, 1888. His parents, John and Helen (Strengham) Russell, are natives of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and of Michigan, respectively, and were married in Kansas, in which state they made their home for five years. Later they removed to Florida where the father purchased land and planted an orange grove in the cultivation of which he engaged for twenty years. At the expiration of that period he sold his orchard and came to Oregon, arriving in this state in 1903. He located at North Bend and later entered the dairy business on Coos river, in which he continued for seven years, after which, in 1912, he removed to California, where he entered the same business, his time and attention now being thus employed. His wife also survives. They are the parents of nine children, all of whom are yet living, namely: Elmer, a resident of North Bend, Oregon; Lillie, of Oxford, Florida; Willard, of Tulare, California; Walter, of Marshfield, Oregon; Nellie, residing at Fort Meyers, Florida; Harvey, of North Bend, Oregon; Lawrence, of Tulare, California; Leonard, also of that city; and Harry L., of this review.

JAMES F. HAUN

MRS. MELLIE HAUN

As a youth of fifteen years the last named came to Oregon with his parents, and his education, which had been begun in the public schools of his native state, was continued in the schools of Oregon. After graduating from the high school at North Bend he pursued a commercial course in the Modern School of Business at Eugene, and was thus well fitted by training to assume the duties and responsibilities of business life. He remained with his parents, assisting his father in his dairy, until his marriage, which occurred when he was twenty-three years of age, after which he embarked in the dairy business independently. He purchased forty-seven acres of land located on Catching creek about six miles from Marshfield, on the county road, and there he is busily engaged in the conduct of his agricultural and dairying interests. His attention is principally given to the latter branch and his place is well stocked with a good grade of cattle. His product finds ready sale on the market for its quality is well known, cleanliness and sanitation being the salient elements in the conduct of his dairy.

Mr. Russell was married, on the 26th of December, 1911, to Miss Winnefred Rood, who was born in Lockport, New York, December 25, 1890, a daughter of Alve and Katherine Rood. Mrs. Russell, who graduated from high school and also from Albany College, taught school for about a year and a half at North Bend, and also acted as instructor in a country school previous to her marriage. She and her husband are both affiliated with the United Brethren church, in the work of which they are deeply interested, and the political affiliations of Mr. Russell are with the republican party. The honors and emoluments of office have no attractions for him, for he prefers to give his undivided attention to his business interests, and although he is numbered among the younger generation of business men in Coos county, the prosperity which has already attended his efforts augurs well for continued success in the future. He is possessed of traits of manhood which win confidence and esteem, and his list of friends is gradually increasing as his circle of acquaintances expands.

FLECK WESLEY BEYER is the well known and popular cashier of the Riddle State Bank, of which he was the principal organizer and of which he has been the cashier since the establishment of that well known financial house. He was born in Edgewood, Clayton county, Iowa, on March 9, 1882, and is the son of Henry Fleck and Alma R. (Fenner) Beyer, both of whom are natives of Iowa. The paternal grandfather was one of the early pioneers of Iowa and in the midst of his active life was killed by accident, after which the paternal grandmother returned with her family to Pennsylvania, where her people lived. The maternal grandfather was Nelson Fenner and to him belongs the distinction of having built and operated the first creamery in Iowa. The father, Henry Fleck Beyer, was reared in Pennsylvania, having removed with his mother from Iowa to that state immediately following the death of his father.

He remained in Pennsylvania where he received his early education until the age of eighteen, at which time he and his brother Jabez returned to Iowa and there engaged in the development of a homestead which had been entered by their paternal grandfather. Henry F. Beyer, the father of our subject, remained for twelve years on that property and was engaged in teaching school and also in the improvement and cultivation of the old family homestead. During these years he had saved a thousand dollars with which he engaged in the mercantile business in Edgewood, and continued to devote his attention to that business for a period of thirty-three years, during which time he also became one of the largest owners and operators in the creamery business in his part of the state, owning at one time sixteen creameries located in various sections of the country in which he lived. He is still identified with the creamery business, being owner of three of the well known establishments of that kind in this county. His initial investment in the creamery business was the purchase from his father-in-law, Nelson Fenner, of the first creamery built in the state of Iowa. He has also been engaged in the real estate and land business for many years past and is now the owner of twelve or fourteen farms located in South Dakota and Texas and is also the owner of properties in Des Moines and Kansas City. He is still actively engaged in business interests and maintains his residence in Edgewood, Iowa.

Fleck Wesley Beyer was reared in his parents' home and received his early education in the public schools of Edgewood during the winter terms and was engaged in work in Pennsylvania during the summer months. In 1898 he entered Cornell Academy at Mount Vernon, Iowa, and two years later became a student of Cornell College, entering that institution with advanced grades from the academy. He completed the required collegiate course at Cornell and was graduated from that institution with the degree of B. S. on June 18, 1903. During his student days at Cornell Academy and College he used his spare time in tutoring private students, one of whom was the son of Leslie M. Shaw, who at that time was secretary of the treasury. From the money received while engaged in private teaching he was able to save five hundred dollars with which he established the Cedar Rapids Cream & Butter Company at Cedar Rapids, Iowa, which he owned and operated until March, 1906. At the time of the opening of the business his father became an equal partner with him in so far as his name and bank account were necessary to carry on the business, but the father did not share in the profits of the concern. The first weeks' receipts did not cover the expenses of the company but within two and a half years from the time the business was started it had built up a trade whose volume of business was more than nine hundred thousand dollars annually. In 1906 Mr. Beyer disposed of the property and on account of failing health he spent the following summer in travel in Old Mexico, after which he returned and entered the law department of the Cornell University at Ithaca, New York, where he took a special course under Dean Huffcutt who at that time was special counsel to Governor Hughes of New York. The law studies of Mr. Beyer were cut short by the unfortunate occurrence of the Dean's suicide in June, 1907. Immediately after that Mr. Beyer went down to Old Point Comfort for rest and recuperation and while there became interested in the Jamestown Exposition and took a contract for the delivering of all building materials and all exhibits. He complied with all of the terms of his contract until the exposition opened and until the following June, at which time he had exhausted his financial resources, having been a loser on his contracts to the extent of more than one thousand dollars per week. In December he returned to his home in Iowa, where he spent the holidays, and in January, 1907, he started for Los Angeles, stopping off on his way at Cedar Rapids, where he attended the consistory of the Masonic lodge which at that time was being held in that city, and he there became a member of that body and took the degree, after which he continued on his way to Los Angeles. He remained in that city for six weeks and then went to Portland, Oregon, where he engaged in the real-estate and brokerage business. In September, 1908, he returned to Iowa to look after the business interests of his father, who at that time was temporarily incapacitated as a result of impaired health but at the end of the following year he had wholly recovered from his disability and Mr. Beyer entered the employ of the Peoples Savings Bank of Cedar Rapids, Iowa. He regards the entering as an employe of that bank as the real beginning of his business career, it having been his ambition from early manhood to be engaged in the banking business. In March, 1910, he left Cedar Rapids for Oregon and located at Riddle, where he at once established the Riddle State Bank, of which he has since been the cashier. The bank opened its doors for business on May 19, 1910, and has since met with remarkable success. Out of the profits of the first eleven months of business the bank paid all of its organizing expenses and created a surplus of thirteen per cent of its capital stock. This showing puts the stamp of prosperity on the business of the bank which is now placed by public opinion among the most successful institutions of its kind in that part of the state.

Mr. Beyer is a member of the Masonic lodge of Riddle, of which he is a charter member, and has helped to organize two other blue lodges. He is a member of Trowel Chapter, No. 49, R. A. M., of Cedar Rapids, and also of Apollo Commandery, No. 26, K. T., of that city; and El Kahir Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S., of Cedar Rapids. He belongs also to Cedar Rapids Lodge, No. 251, B. P. O. E. He affiliates with the republican party and has been city treasurer of Riddle since he first established his residence in that place. He is also the secretary of the Riddle Development League, an organization having for its object the promotion of the business and material welfare of the city. He is among the most enterprising and successful business men of Douglas county and a man who is devoting his time and attention to the upbuilding of the city in which he lives.

JOHN ENEGREN is one of the successful farmers and fishermen of Oregon. His home ranch and fishing grounds are located seven miles up the Coos river from Marshfield. He was born in Wasa, Finland, in 1860 and is the son of John and Marie (Sophia) Enegren, in whose family were seven children: John, of this review; Charles, who resides in Coos county; Edward, Ephraim and Julius, all of whom reside in Finland; Simon, who makes his home in Coos county, Oregon; and Adeline, the wife of Alfred Westerland, of Bonneville, Oregon.

John Enegren was reared in his father's home and received his elementary education in the schools of his native land. He remained under the parental roof until he emigrated to America, settling at Coos bay in 1892. The father ten years before had come to the new world and established his home at the place above mentioned. He met death by drowning at North Bend, in 1888. Mr. Enegren of this review before coming to America was engaged in the operation of a flour mill. On reaching the shores of the new world and after having effected his settlement at Coos bay he was there employed for one summer on the farm of Ansen Rogers. He later worked in sawmills at Coos bay for some time, after which he lived on

MRS. IDA M. HAUN

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASTOR LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS.

rented farms for fourteen continuous years. He then purchased forty-eight acres located on the river, seven miles from Marshfield, near the north fork.

In 1883 Mr. Enegren was united in marriage to Miss Ulrika Sophia, a native of Finland, and to them two children were born. John was born October 16, 1884, and resides with his father on the home ranch. He received his elementary education in Finland, where he attended the public schools for some time, and after reaching Oregon he continued his studies for five months in the English schools of this country. Edla Sophia is the wife of Carl Silvesten, who is employed in a sawmill at East Side, Oregon, and they have one child, Signe Sophia. Mrs. John Enegren, the wife of the subject of this sketch, passed away in Finland in 1889. Mr. Enegren is a member of the republican party but has never allowed his name to be used as a candidate for any office of public trust. He is a member of the Lutheran church and has ever been a devout and consistent communicant of the faith and church of his early childhood. He is one of the thrifty and successful dairy farmers of Coos county and a man whose well known integrity admits him to the confidence of all his friends and associates.

JOHN JACKSON is one of the many pioneer settlers of Oregon who crossed the plains with ox teams in 1853, took up the donation claims in this state which were then offered by the government and operated, improved and developed them into the splendid ranches and stock farms which are the foundations of the greatness of the state of Oregon. He was born in Tennessee, January 25, 1833, the son of Abraham and Nancy (Hagerman) Jackson. The mother was a native of Germany, while the father's birth occurred in Tennessee. They removed to Illinois at an early date and spent the remainder of their lives in that state.

John Jackson was one of eight children. He received his early education in the public schools of his native state and when he was twenty years old crossed the plains to Oregon. The journey was made under the most primitive conditions and six months were spent in traveling from Illinois to Portland, where John Jackson first located. The city was then in its early stages of development. The inhabitants were few and the municipal advantages limited. Our subject soon removed to the town of Jackson, where he spent a short time before he came to Douglas county and located at Canyonville. He took up a donation claim of one hundred and sixty acres near this city, improved and developed it and made it his home for several years. Later he sold his holdings and went into the mercantile business, in which line of activity he has been prominent and active ever since. He keeps a full line of general merchandise and is well equipped to supply the needs of a growing community.

In 1864 Mr. Jackson was united in marriage to Miss Mary Rose, a native of Illinois, and they are the parents of five children: William, deceased; C. S., who is now living in Roseburg, Oregon; John, Jr., principal of the Indian schools, at Elbiwood, North Dakota; Della, who married Joe Boyle and has seven children, Grace, Clifford, Thurman, Ruth, Wayne, Lawrence and Conrad; and Libby, who married A. C. Goodrich and is now deceased. Politically Mr. Jackson affiliates with the republican party and has been active in its interests all during his career. He served for some time as county commissioner and was a member of the town council for several terms. He is interested in the educational affairs of his community and has served as a member of the school board. He is a devout adherent of the Methodist Episcopal church and prominent and active in its affairs. In his business life he has been successful in the building up of a large mercantile establishment, the operation of which makes constant calls upon his energy, ability and resourcefulness.

DR. MALCOLM BRONSON, physician and surgeon of Hood River, was born in Cincinnati, Ohio, November 4, 1882, a son of Edward M. and Alice (Riley) Bronson. The father is a native of Oswego, New York, and the mother's birth occurred in Lafayette, Indiana. The father has been prominently connected with the traffic department of the Pennsylvania Railroad system for the past twenty-eight years and at present has charge of the traffic department of the Norfolk & Western Railway, with headquarters at Roanoke, Virginia, and Cincinnati, Ohio. He is a Knights Templar Mason and a Shriner and is very prominent in the railroad circles of Cincinnati.

Dr. Bronson was reared at home, acquiring his education at Kenyon College, at Gambier, Ohio. In 1902 he took up the study of medicine, reading under Dr. George C. Skinner, of Hamilton, Ohio, and in the fall of the same year he entered the Miami Medical College, from which he was graduated with the class of 1906. Following his graduation he served as interne for seven months in Mercy Hospital at Hamilton. Subsequently he served in a similar position in the Miami Valley Hospital at Dayton, Ohio, after which he went to Chicago and took up post graduate work for a short time. Before deciding definitely where he would locate he traveled through the northwest for eight months, going up as far as British Columbia. So strongly did this country appeal to him that in February, 1909, he came to Hood River, Oregon, and in August, after passing the examinations of the state board, began the active practice of medicine in this city, with offices in the Elliott Building. About two months later he formed a partnership with Dr. M. F. Shaw, with whom he is now associated. They rank at present among the foremost practitioners in Hood River.

In January, 1910, Dr. Bronson was married to Miss Cornelia Skinner, a daughter of Dr. George C. Skinner, of Hamilton, Ohio. He holds membership in the Episcopal church and is a member of the Hood River

Commercial Club, the University Club of Hood River, The Dalles Lodge, No. 303, B. P. O. E., the Eastern Oregon District Medical Society, the Oregon State Medical Society and the American Medical Association. For some time he has been health officer of the city. Through the various medical organizations of which he is a member he keeps in touch with the results being constantly reached in medical science and his familiarity with the various departments of materia medica has made him exceptionally successful in the diagnosis and treatment of disease. As a physician he possesses the necessary qualifications both as to character and learning to win him an extensive patronage and make him one of the most popular and practical of the medical fraternity.

ANDREW HONGELL is one of the well known and successful farmers of Coos county, his farm being located six miles from Marshfield on Catching Inlet. He was born in Finland in 1866, and is the son of John and Brita (Johanna) Hongell, both of whom were natives of Finland, and who died in their native land many years ago. They became the parents of five children, two of whom are still living in Finland. The others are: Andrew, the subject of this review; John, a resident of Salem, Oregon; and Alexander, who is a resident of Nevada City, Nevada.

Andrew Hongell emigrated to America in 1889 settling first in Coos county and was there engaged in the logging camps on Coos river for eight years. In 1896 he purchased fifty-five acres of land located on Catching Inlet in school district No. 12, six miles up the inlet from Marshfield. He there established his home and has since continued to give his attention to the development and improvement of his place. For many years past he has made a specialty of dairy farming and also of raising stock for his own use and for sale in the open market. Twenty acres of his farm he has brought to a high state of cultivation and his property is now one of the best improved and among the most valuable farms in the district in which he lives.

Mr. Hongell is a loyal member of the republican party and one of the reliable and respected citizens of the county in which he lives. He is also a member of the Lutheran church and is ready at all times to do his part to advance and improve the conditions of the people in his county and state.

C. B. MATTSON is the owner of a highly developed farm of forty-five acres located seven miles from Marshfield on Catching Inlet, Coos county, Oregon. He was born in Coos county, January 7, 1885, and is the son of John and Sophia (Stora) Mattson, of whom a more extended review appears in another part of this work.

C. B. Mattson was reared in his parents' home and received his early education in the public schools of Coos county. He remained under the parental roof until he was twenty-one years of age, at which time he started in life for himself as a farmer on his father's homestead. He purchased forty-five acres of the old home farm located seven miles up the river from Marshfield on Catching Inlet and since having established his residence there he has continued to be engaged in the cultivation of highly improved property.

Mr. Mattson was united in marriage in 1906, to Miss Rose E. Harris, a native of Humboldt county, California, her birth having occurred February 8, 1885. Mrs. Mattson is the daughter of Captain W. C. and Amelia H. (McCall) Harris, the former a native of Nevada and the latter of California. Her parents lived in California until 1889 after which time they settled in Coos county. The father for many years was captain of a boat plying the western California coast and after settling in Oregon he operated a boat and also engaged in the merchandising business. In addition to these properties he also owned a cheese factory which he has recently sold. To Mr. and Mrs. Harris eight children were born, five of whom are still living: Clarence, a resident of Sumner, Oregon; Rose E., the wife of the subject of this review; Myrtle, who is the wife of John Barker, of Sumner, Oregon; and Ruth and Wilda, both of whom are at home. Mrs. Mattson was reared in her parents' home and received her education in Humboldt county, California, and also in Coos county, Oregon. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Mattson two children have been born, Lorin and Jean.

Mr. Mattson is affiliated with the republican party but is liberal in his view regarding political matters. He is one of the well known citizens of Coos county and numbered among the most successful and enterprising farmers of the community in which he lives.

CHARLES P. BISHOP. Success has followed the enterprising efforts and determined purpose of Charles P. Bishop who is associated with the Pendleton Woolen Mills, and is closely connected with the commercial interests of Oregon. He was born in Contra Costa county, California, September 23, 1854, his parents being William R. and Elizabeth J. (Adams) Bishop. The father was born in Indiana, was educated for the ministry and became a preacher in the Presbyterian church. For a number of years he continued active in the pulpit, but for the past third of a century has lived retired. In 1850 he made his way westward to California, and six years later came to Oregon. He afterward engaged in farming in that state and for the past thirty-two years has resided in Portland where he still lives retired at the advanced age of eighty-six years, while his wife has reached the age of seventy-eight. His life has been a busy one and has constituted a forceful element for progress and improvement along material, political and moral lines. He has been a stalwart republican since the organization of the party and represented Multnomah county in the state legislature in 1893. He is also a member of the Masonic lodge, and in these different connections has become one of the well known men of Oregon.

Charles P. Bishop was reared at home, acquiring his education in the public schools, although his opportunities in that direction were somewhat limited. He was twenty years of age when, in 1874, he started out to earn his own living, becoming a clerk in a store at Brownsville, Oregon, where he was employed for two years. He then served as a salesman in the store of the Brownsville Woolen Mills Company for two years at Brownsville, and from each experience in life he learned the lessons it contained, and developed power and energy to take up the succeeding work that devolved upon him.

While thus engaged Mr. Bishop was united in marriage to Miss Fannie Kay, a daughter of the late Thomas Kay of Salem, Oregon. Through the succeeding six years Mr. Bishop was a junior member of the firm of Glass & Bishop of Crawfordsville, Oregon, dealers in general merchandise. Whatever he has undertaken he has carried forward to a successful completion, his determination and honorable purpose enabling him to overcome all difficulties and obstacles in his path. In 1884 he removed to McMinnville, and founded the firm of Bishop & Kay, proprietors of a clothing store. During five years he successfully conducted a good trade in that connection but in 1889 sold his interest in the business and joined Thomas Kay, Sr., in the building of the Thomas Kay Woolen Mills at Salem, Oregon. He became a dominant factor in the upbuilding of the industry, and in 1891 he purchased the Salem Woolen Mills store and developed a large mercantile establishment which is now the most extensive retail clothing store in Oregon outside of Portland. It is now managed by Mr. Bishop's eldest son, Robert C. Bishop, the father however, still owning the business.

In 1907 Charles P. Bishop crossed the ocean and spent two years traveling in Europe. On his return he and two sons, Clarence M. and Roy T. Bishop, purchased the old Pendleton Woolen Mills, erected the present substantial building, and with new machinery outfitted one of the most modern plants in the state, Mr. Bishop becoming president of the company. His position as a foremost business man has long been widely acknowledged.

Mr. Bishop gives his political allegiance to the republican party, and for five years —from 1899 until 1904—served as mayor of Salem, giving to the city a businesslike and progressive administration that brought about various needed reforms and improvements. He belongs to the Pendleton Commercial Club, the Commercial Club of Portland and the Commercial Club of Salem, thus taking an active interest in all that tends to advance business conditions and promote public progress in the state. He likewise holds membership in the Illihee, a social club of Salem, and is widely known in various relations, commanding in all the respect, confidence and good-will of those with whom he has been brought into contact. His business interests have been of the most important character, contributing to public progress as well as to individual success, and yet he has not limited his activities to commercial and industrial interests alone but has cooperated in those wide fields of labor which touch the general interests of society and promote the welfare of humanity at large.

HENRY KAINO is one of the successful dairy farmers of Coos county, located on his highly developed ranch of twenty acres off Catching Inlet, where he is engaged in the operation of a well known dairy farm. He was born in Finland in 1859 and is the son of Leander and Louise (Mattson) Kaino, both of whom were natives of that country.

Henry Kaino, an only child, was reared in his parents' home and received his elementary education in his native land. At the age of ten years he was employed on one of the farms in Finland and in that occupation continued until 1879, at which time he emigrated to America, settling first in Michigan, where he was engaged for one year in the lumber woods. Later he worked as a farm hand for one year, after which time he removed to California and there found employment in the lumber business for one and one-half years, when he removed to Astoria, Oregon, and there engaged in fishing for one season, after which he returned to California. He remained in the Golden state for one year and then removed to Oregon, settling in Marshfield, where he was engaged in business for two years. Becoming an employe in one of the lumber camps near Marshfield he continued to devote his attention to that occupation until 1895, at which time he purchased twenty acres of unimproved land located off Catching Inlet. The land at the time of his purchase was a wild swamp covered with brush and forbidding as a place upon which to establish a home and engage in agricultural pursuits. He, however, was not deterred by the appearance of the property and, having the will and ambition to make for himself a desirable home, he at once improved his property and has continued so to do until he is now the owner of one of the most productive and valuable farms in his section of the state. In the operation of his place he makes a specialty of dairying, having at present ten dairy cows.

On October 31, 1885, Mr. Kaino was united in marriage to Miss Mary Wiklund, who was born March 5, 1860, and is a daughter of Matt and Mary E. (Stora) Wiklund, in whose family were ten children, four of whom are living, namely: Alfred, who resides in Finland; Mary, now Mrs. Henry Kaino; Helen, who is the wife of John Weaver, of British Columbia, by whom she has two children, Carl and Leonard; and Tilda, who resides in Marshfield. To Mr. and Mrs. Kaino four children were born: Henry Albin, who was born March 1, 1887, and died December 19, 1887; Elna Julia Mary, born February 16, 1891, who is at home with her parents; Walter Henry, born February 14, 1893, who also resides at home; and Edith Helen Elizabeth, born March 30, 1895, who is a student in the high school at Marshfield.

Mr. Kaino is affiliated with the republican party and has served as school director for two terms. He belongs to the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and he and his wife are members of the Lutheran church and the children have all been confirmed in that faith. Mr. Kaino is one of the enterprising and successful farmers of Coos county and a man whose success in life is due entirely to the faithful attention he has given to the conduct of his affairs.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN NICHOLS is one of the many men actively engaged in the cultivation of the soil, the raising of high-grade stock and in the operation of a fruit ranch, which industry is doing so much to make southern Oregon a wealthy and prosperous section. He was born in Douglas county, January 11, 1872, the son of Israel B. and Isabel (Riddle) Nichols, the former a native of Ohio and the latter of Illinois. The father came to Oregon in 1853 and took up a donation claim in Douglas county, married in this section and died in 1893 upon his holdings. The mother died in 1892. In his family were twelve children, ten of whom are living.

Benjamin F. Nichols received his early education in the public schools of Douglas county and remained at home until he was twenty-one years of age. He then began farming and stock-raising and was so successful in this line that he is now the owner of two hundred and eighty acres of cultivated and improved farm land and a large herd of graded cattle in the Cow Creek valley, near Riddle. He is also the proprietor of large fruit orchards and in this branch of his activity he takes a keen and intelligent interest. He is well versed in the details of fruit cultivation and has a scientific knowledge of the care of apples, prunes and berries. His fruit is of fine quality and his harvests grow more abundant every year. He has recently added to his activities by the purchase of a livery barn in the village of Riddle. This he operates with great business ability and common sense and is rapidly making a success in this line proportionate to his prosperity in the purely agricultural field.

On January 9, 1896, Mr. Nichols was united in marriage to Miss Lenora Yarbrough, a daughter of George W. and Emma (Brown) Yarbrough, former residents of Josephine county, who are now living in Douglas county, Oregon. The father of Mrs. Nichols was born in Missouri and the mother in Washington county, Oregon. The former came to Oregon in 1844 with his parents when he was only four years of age. They settled in Linn county and afterwards moved to Josephine county. The mother's parents came to Oregon in 1843 from Missouri and settled in Washington county, being among the earliest settlers and pioneers in Oregon. Mr. and Mrs. Nichols are the parents of three children: Lenora Mildred, who was born June 15, 1898; Stilley R., born September 1, 1900; and Ruth Jane, born August 7, 1906.

Mr. Nichols has always been active in local political affairs. He is a consistent republican and a firm upholder of the principles and policies of that party. He has recently been nominated for representative from his district and has held the position of county stock inspector for six years. He is a member of Riddle Lodge, No. 136, I. O. O. F., and has filled all the chairs in that organization. He belongs to Roseburg Lodge, No. 47, K. P., and is a member of the Grange at Riddle. He is an intelligent, active and broadminded man, well versed in all matters pertaining to his life's occupation, able in politics, capable in business and well beloved by his many friends.

JUDGE THOMAS F. FLOYD for many years has been one of the active and highly respected citizens of Josephine county. He was born in New York, April 26, 1827, and is the son of Heathcoat and Lucy S. (Tozer) Floyd, both of whom were natives of New York. Judge Floyd was reared in his parents' home and received his elementary education in the public schools of the district in which he lived. He remained under the parental roof until he was twenty-eight years of age and at that time he emigrated to Oregon and in 1855 settled in Josephine county, where he filed upon a government homestead, which he improved and cultivated for a number of years, after which he disposed of that property and removed to Kerby, where he now lives a retired life.

In 1860 Judge Floyd was united in marriage to Miss Julia Briggs, a native of New York, and to that union four children were born: George and Lucy, both deceased, the former of whom passed away in 1904 and the latter in 1894; Harriet; and Thomas F. Judge Floyd is a member of the republican party and for many years was one of the influential men in the councils of that political organization. As a representative of that party he was elected to the office of county judge, in which he served the people of Josephine county for four years. He also served as school commissioner of that county for a period of four years. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity and also belongs to the Odd Fellows lodge. Judge Floyd is one of the highly respected citizens of his portion of the state of Oregon and has always contributed his influence and assistance to the advancement of every public measure having for its object the improvement of the people in his state and county.

CHARLES T. JOHNSON is widely known throughout his portion of the state as one of the successful fishermen of Coos bay. He was born in Coos county, Oregon, in 1876, and is the son of Stephen F. and Mary E. (Gibbs) Johnson, the former a native of Denmark and the latter of the Willamette valley, this state. The parents celebrated their wedding in Curry county and later the father with his family removed to Coos county, where he has since continued to be engaged in farming and also in the dairying business. He has been the owner of extensive real-estate holdings in his portion of the state, having recently sold two hundred and forty acres of choice agricultural land, and still owns one hundred and sixty acres upon which he now resides, which he has brought to a high state of cultivation. In his family were five children, of whom four are still living, namely: Charles T., of this review; Mrs. Laura G. Counts, of Grants Pass; and Emily E. and Rachel C., both of whom reside in Portland.

Charles T. Johnson was reared in his parents' home and received his early education from his mother, supplementing this by diligent study and reading. He was the first white child born within ten miles of his parents' home and his playmates were Indians. He remained with his parents until he was fifteen years of age, at which time he started in life for himself and was engaged for a brief period as a farm laborer. He afterward took up the occupation of a fisherman and to that business he has since devoted his entire attention, maintaining his home and the headquarters of his fishing operations at Empire, on Coos bay.

In January, 1911, Mr. Johnson was united in marriage to Mrs. Kittie Lanagon, a widow. By her first marriage Mrs. Johnson became the mother of five children, Elmer, Artie, Joseph, Mary and Seth. She was reared in her parents' home and received her early education in the public schools of Coos county. Charles T. Johnson is one of the successful men in his line of business and is well and favorably known among his associates for his habits of industry and the strict integrity of his business transactions.

HENRY ALBERT RASOR. The banking institutions of a city require as their officers and directors thoroughly honest men. They are institutions of so much weight in a community and of so much financial importance that the characters of the men who form their policy and direct their movements must be honorable and upright to a high degree. A bank official of this kind is Henry Albert Rasor, now vice president of the Riddle State Bank, to which position he was elected four months after its organization. He was born in Coffey county, Kansas, February 9, 1867, the son of David and Amanda (Chambers) Rasor, the former a native of Ohio and the latter of Indiana. His parents moved to Kansas in 1860 and lived there continuously until the time of the father's death with the exception of four years' residence in Roseburg, Oregon, where they resided on account of the failing health of David Rasor. When he returned to Kansas in 1900, for the purpose of closing out his affairs and removing permanently to this state, death overtook him. His wife survived him for three years, dying in Aberdeen, Washington, in 1903, where she had been living for some time with a son.

Henry Albert Rasor was reared at home and attended the public schools of Kansas. He remained in that state until he was twenty-one years old and came west to Washington in 1888. Here he spent six months in a logging camp at Grays Harbor, removing from there to Westport, Oregon, where he took up a preemption claim of one hundred and sixty acres. This he sold one year later and came to Roseburg, where he took up a timber claim and followed the occupation of timber cruising for three years. Upon the death of his father he returned to Kansas and settled up the estate. While he was in Kansas, Mr. Rasor was married to Miss Minnie O. Hefner on the 28th of December, 1892, and returned with his wife to Oregon, where he spent one year logging in Grays Harbor. The death of his mother obliged him to return again to Kansas, where he spent four years looking after the interest of the estate. Later he engaged in various lines of activity until 1902, when he came to Riddle, Oregon, and settled on a farm two and a half miles from town. He engaged in the occupation of general farming for eight years, making a remarkable success of this line of business and acquiring large tracts of land. He still owns three hundred and fifty acres, which he keeps under cultivation. In 1910 he moved into the town and was one of the leading factors in the organization of the Riddle State Bank, with which institution he is now connected. Four months after the foundation of the enterprise Henry A. Rasor succeeded B. F. Nichols as vice president and in this position he is now serving. He is active in other commercial lines in the city and is well and prominently known in various enterprises. He is owner of the Riddle opera house and he built the Pacific Highway Garage, which he now operates.

Politically Mr. Rasor gives his allegiance to the republican party. He takes an intelligent interest in local affairs and has served for one year as a member of the town council. He belongs to Riddle Lodge, A. F. & A. M., and is prominent in the Modern Woodmen of America. There is hardly any line of business or social activity in Riddle with which he is not prominently identified. He has a keen business instinct which makes his judgment of the value of an investment sound and discriminating and his advice is often sought and followed.

WILLIAM LACKSTROM is successfully engaged in farming on his highly improved ranch consisting of one hundred and five acres located off Catching Inlet near County Landing in Coos county. He was born in Finland, April 11, 1866, and is the son of Leander and Breta (Vitick) Lackstrom, both of whom were natives of Finland, and to them twelve children were born, four of whom died in early life, and one son Victor is also deceased. The others are: Hannah, who resides in Finland; William, the subject of this review; John, who is a resident of Seattle, Washington, and the father of three children; and Otto, Ina, Verner and Senne, all of whom are residents of Finland.

William Lackstrom was reared in his parents' home and received his early education in the schools of Finland. At the age of nineteen years he emigrated to America, settling in Marshfield, where he learned the carpenter's trade and for some years was engaged at work in the shipyards at Marshfield. In 1911 he purchased one hundred and five acres of highly improved land located off Catching Inlet, in Coos county, and has since given his entire attention to mixed and dairy farming, having at present seven dairy cows.

Mr. Lackstrom was united in marriage to Miss Selma Stora, of Finland, on August 9, 1889. She is the daughter of Carl and Louisa (Stora) Stora. To the parents of Mrs. Lackstrom twelve children were born, of whom only six are still living. John is a resident of Marshfield, Oregon. Matt is a resident of North Bend, Oregon, and the father of three children. Sophie married John Mattson, of Coos county, Oregon, of whom a review is published in another part of this work and they are the parents of five children. Hannah is the widow of Victor Lackstrom by whom she has one child. Hilma, who completes the family, married Conrad Hajquist, of Marshfield, Oregon, and they have one child.

Mr. and Mrs. Lackstrom are the parents of five children, namely: Rudolph, who was born July 24, 1891, and resides in San Francisco, California; Arthur, deceased; Albin, born May 25, 1898, who is attending school; Elvira, born December 21, 1903, who is also attending school; and Ferdinand, born April 3, 1907, who completes the family.

Mr. Lackstrom is liberal in his political views, giving the benefit of his support to the party which in his estimation represents the best interests of the people. He is a member of the Fraternal Order of Eagles and he and his family are members of the Lutheran church. He is one of the successful dairy farmers of his portion of the state and a man held in high esteem by his friends and associates.

J. M. MITCHELL for many years has been one of the substantial citizens of Wallowa county, in this state, owning at present one of the most highly improved farms all under irrigation within one-half mile of the city of Joseph. He was born in Lafayette county, Missouri, November 18, 1848, and is a son of Frederick and Rebecca (Hill) Mitchell, both natives of Appomattox county, Virginia, where they were married. Shortly after this event the family removed to Missouri and in this state maintained their residence until 1852. In that year Frederick Mitchell, taking his family with him, crossed the plains to Oregon, making the journey with horses and oxen. The long trip consumed seven months of that memorable year. On reaching this state he made his first settlement in Milwaukie, Multnomah county, in November, 1852. He brought with him across the plains sixty-four head of cattle and on reaching his destination had the misfortune to encounter one of the most severe winters ever known in this part of the Pacific coast, the snow being two feet on the level all over the valley and ranch lands during the greater portion of the winter. His splendid herd of sixty-four head of cattle when spring dawned upon him had dwindled to a small bunch of eight half-starved animals with which to establish his intended stock industry. In 1853 he removed to Douglas county and there continued to reside for the succeeding ten years. Closing out his interests in this county at that time he removed in 1863 to the Grande Ronde valley, Union county, where he spent the remaining days of his life. His wife passed to her reward in the land beyond in the year 1886 and he passed away in 1887.

James M. Mitchell was reared at home and acquired his education in the public schools of this state. At the age of twenty-one he began life for himself, his first business venture consisting in the purchase of agricultural land at Cove, in Union county. Here he at once engaged in farming and the cattle business. In 1879 he filed upon a desert claim in Wallowa county and later, fearing the title was not perfect, he relinquished this claim and preempted open government land one-half of a mile east of Joseph, to which place he removed his family in 1880. He still owns this ranch together with fifty-five acres which he subsequently purchased and he is also the owner of a one hundred and sixty-acre timber claim. His home ranch, consisting of two hundred and fifteen acres is all under a complete and well established irrigation system, affording an ample supply of water for his stock, orchards and diversified farming. On this place he continued to live until 1894 and in that year he removed to Joseph, where Mrs. Mitchell purchased the hotel property and for the succeeding fifteen years conducted the well known Mitchell Hotel. This hostelry is one of the most famous institutions of its kind in the northeastern portion of this state. Mrs. Mitchell being a woman of rare business ability with special qualifications as a hostess succeeded in making this hotel an establishment little short of famous both for its equipment and management as well as the generous treatment accorded the traveling public. The Mitchell Hotel was known to be a place where the best was always to be obtained at a reasonable price and where the weary traveler could find lodging and rest "without money and without price, anchored under the lee of the generous friendship of its far-famed proprietress." Since 1894 Mr. Mitchell has been extensively engaged in contracting and construction work, giving special attention to ditching and grading. In 1910 he secured the contract for the construction of the city waterworks of Joseph and in that year installed the present water plant of this city.

J. M. Mitchell was united in marriage to Miss Mary A. Boothe, of Grande Ronde valley, in the year 1870, his bride being the daughter of Rev. L. J. Boothe, who crossed the plains and located in this state in 1865. To Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell have been born seven children, six of whom are living: Fred W., who resides near Midvale, Idaho; Anna,

MR. AND MRS. J. M. MITCHELL

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY

ASTOR, LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS.

the wife of L. E. Caviness, of Joseph; Herman, engaged in ranching near Joseph; Henry, living on the home ranch, who is engaged in farming and stock-raising; Welton, also at the home ranch; and Guy E. living with his parents at home.

Mr. Mitchell is a member of the democratic party, following the standard of that political organization in its national and state campaigns. He is a public-spirited citizen, well known throughout the county as one of its most enterprising men and at all times ready to give the benefit of his influence to any measure seeking the advancement of the best interests of his state and community.

SAMUEL T. MOTHERSHEAD. In the year 1849 when the famous California gold fields were discovered, when the country thrilled with stories of the sudden transformation of poor laborers into men of millions, when the air was filled with the clang of pick and shovel, Willis F. Mothershead set out from his home in Louisville, Kentucky, and traveled overland by team until he reached California. Here he remained five or six years, made his fortune and removed to Missouri where he engaged in farming a tract of land five miles from De Soto, in that state, and died in 1907, at the age of seventy-four years. Willis Mothershead was the father of Samuel T. Mothershead, the subject of this review, who is a prominent resident of Burns, Harney county, Oregon, where he is engaged in the real-estate and abstract business.

Samuel T. Mothershead was born in De Soto, Missouri, September 23, 1872. His father, at that time had returned from California and with his wife, Melissa (Wiley) Mothershead, was residing on the farm in Missouri. The father, a democrat, was prominent in this section and took an active part in political matters. He worked hard for the benefit of the party, was a delegate to many state conventions and a leader of the party in De Soto, although he never sought office for himself. Samuel T. Mothershead was the youngest of four children. He received his elementary education in De Soto and came west in January, 1892, locating immediately in Burns. He had learned the trade of printing and his first occupation in this city was in that line. He later founded the paper called the Burns Times, which he operated in partnership with M. Fitzgerald, one of the earliest white settlers of Harney valley. Mr. Fitzgerald's duties as a soldier had brought him west and as he liked the life there and was interested in the development of the new country he remained at Camp Harney. He was a man of more than ordinary ability and under his direction the paper which the two partners operated was remarkably successful. They sold out at a good profit, after two years and their periodical was combined with the Burns Herald and is now published under the title of the Times Herald. A short time afterward, Samuel T. Mothershead accepted the position of deputy sheriff, serving under A. J. McKinnon for six years. Mr. McKinnon was later killed by an insane man whom he had assisted in taking to the asylum. This man followed Mr. McKinnon to California, upon his release from the asylum, and took his life in that state. After his experience as deputy sheriff Samuel Mothershead served two years as deputy assessor and in 1904 was elected county clerk. He was elected to this office three times and has the distinction of being the first office holder in Harney county to serve three consecutive terms. When he gave up his duties as county clerk he engaged in the real-estate and abstract business which is his present occupation. His business is extensive in both its branches. He is a keen judge of the value of land and his investments have always proved judicious. He takes a marked interest in his abstract department and has a complete set of abstracts of the county. He keeps these thoroughly up-to-date and his business along this line is increasing year by year. He is known as the pioneer in this line of activity in the county.

On September 21, 1898, Mr. Mothershead was united in marriage to Miss Ella R. Swain, a daughter of A. S. Swain, a pioneer of Harney county and a prominent resident of this city. Our subject and his wife became the parents of three children: Mildred, who died in 1908, at the age of eight years; John S., and Frank C.

Mr. Mothershead is a thirty-second degree Mason, a member of Blue Lodge, No. 97, and of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. He is a member of Oregon Consistory, No. 1, and the Portland and Al Kader Temple. He is secretary of the A. F. & A. M. lodge, is prominent in the Knights of Pythias, and is likewise, an active member of the Woodmen of the World. He is a worthy citizen of Burns, active in politics where his influence is always given to a worthy cause and he is well known and widely popular in its social life.

MONROE MULKEY. One of the pioneer agriculturists of Polk county, whose labor for many years contributed toward the development of this section of the state, was Monroe Mulkey. He was born on a farm in Cass county, Missouri, on the 11th of January, 1839, and is a son of Thomas and Sarah (Carpenter) Mulkey. The father was of German extraction but the mother was descended from a long line of New England ancestors. They were married in Missouri and there the father engaged in farming and also preached in the Christian church until the spring of 1847. On the 1st of April, of that year, with his wife and family, he started across the plains to Oregon. The journey was made with wagons and ox teams, and our subject assisted in driving a flock of sheep, which were the first brought into the state of Oregon. It was a long, hard trip and on Christmas day they camped at the foot of Mount Hood. They remained there for two weeks and then started across the mountains. This was considered to be practically impossible, no one ever having been known to attempt the trip in mid-winter with an ox team. It was a desperate undertaking, every step of the way being fraught with danger, but they were true pioneers and already worn with the long journey were anxious to reach their destination. They made the passage without any mishap of a serious nature, and located temporarily on the Clackamas river, nine miles from Oregon City. The hardships and exposure incident to the trip and their mode of living was not without its effect on their health and the following spring the father succumbed to mountain fever. Soon thereafter the mother with her family drove to Yamhill county, settling on the present site of McMinnville. Here two years later, in 1850, she was married to R. J. Lamsfield, who had crossed the plains in 1846. Eight children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Mulkey, as follows: Zerelda; Cyrenus; America; George, who died at Walla Walla in 1862; Monroe; Hamilton; Emily and William. All of the family accompanied the parents on their removal to Oregon with the exception of Zerelda, who was married and remained in Missouri until 1852. Mr. and Mrs. Lamsfield had two children, May Ellen and Robert W., who were still in their early youth when the mother passed away at the age of forty-five years.

There was no one upon whom the hardships of pioneer life inflicted greater self-denial than the ambitious young people who accompanied their parents to the northwest, realizing that thereby they cut themselves off from practically all educational advantages. Of such as these was Monroe Mulkey, who received very little schooling after leaving his native state at the age of eight years. In common with other youths on the frontier his services were required at home, especially as his mother was a widow and the family was practically dependent upon him and his brothers for support. He remained on the farm until he was eighteen at about which time he was married and began working for himself. His bride was yet younger than he was, but they were strong, healthy and energetic and had no fears for the future. They began their domestic life on a farm, their home being a log cabin fourteen feet square. After residing there for five years they removed to what is now known as one of the finest and most valuable ranches in the county. This contained five hundred acres of very fertile land, and here he engaged in general farming and stock-raising until 1877. In the latter year they came to a place near Monmouth that contained one hundred and thirty-three acres. Mr. Mulkey's undertakings thrived and he prospered, becoming known as one of the substantial ranchmen of this vicinity. In his later years he lived retired in Monmouth, having a competence that, together with the income from his property, provided him with all of the necessities of life and many of the luxuries.

In 1858 Mr. Mulkey was married to Miss Margaret Garrison, a native of Missouri and a daughter of Abraham H. and Margaret Garrison, who crossed the plains in 1846, passing their last years in Yamhill county. To Mr. and Mrs. Mulkey seven children were born: L. D., who is on the old homestead; Nora, who is living in Oregon; Samuel A., a dentist at Sheridan, this state; Wilbur, who is living in southern California; and Alice Amanda, Rosalie and Marion, all of whom are deceased. Mrs. Mulkey passed away in 1885 and Mr. Mulkey was later married to Mrs. Sarah Martin, who crossed the plains in 1875. He died May 11, 1912, after an illness of only a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. Mulkey reared their children in the faith of the Christian church, in which they held membership. In politics he was a republican, and although he was never an office seeker, during the greater part of his active life he was road supervisor in his district. Mr. Mulkey's residence in the state of Oregon covered a period of sixty-five years, during which he witnessed a wonderful transformation as pioneer conditions have been swept away by the introduction of modern comforts and conveniences, bringing the frontier of fifty years ago into connection with the world's great centers.

ROBERT E. SMITH is the well known and popular cashier of the First Trust and Savings Bank of Roseburg, Douglas county, Oregon, and is one of the leading and influential citizens of his part of the state. He was born in Minneapolis, Minnesota, February 11, 1876, and is the son of Emery T. and Anna J. (Demmon) Smith, the former a native of Kennebunk Port, Maine, and the latter of Montpelier, Vermont. The paternal grandfather, Robert S. Smith, was a well known lumberman and shipbuilder and the maternal grandfather was a lawyer and the first attorney of St. Anthony, Minnesota which later became the city of Minneapolis. The father celebrated his marriage in Minneapolis, at which place he settled with his parents when a young man and at the time of his marriage was engaged in importing silks. In 1907 Emery T. Smith, the father of the subject of this review, established his home in San Francisco and was there engaged in the silk importing business.

Robert E. Smith was reared in his parents' home and received his early education in the public schools of Minneapolis. After passing through the lower grades he was graduated from the high school in that city and afterward pursued a course of study in the State Agricultural School at Minneapolis. He then began work in the lumber woods of the northwest and was for some time the assistant manager for the Brooks Scanlon Lumber Company of Minneapolis. In 1907 he came to Roseburg intending to engage in the timber business but as conditions were not favorable at the time he changed his plans and bought out the Douglas Abstract and Trust Company of which corporation he has since been the president. In May, 1910, he organized the First Trust and Savings Bank of Roseburg of which he has since been the cashier and is devoting his attention largely to the banking business. Professionally he is a civil engineer, surveyor and attorney at law.

In addition to his abstract and banking interests he is also the owner of extensive tracts of timber land in Oregon and California.

Mr. Smith was united in marriage October 2, 1906, to Miss Sibyl E. Kuykendall, of Eugene, Oregon, a daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Kuykendall. Her father is one of the prominent physicians of this part of the county. To Mr. and Mrs. Smith two children have been born: Dorothy A. and Robert W. K.

Mr. Smith is a member of Laurel Lodge, A. F. & A. M.; is a thirty-second degree Mason and a Shriner. He is the lecturing knight of Roseburg Lodge, No. 326, B. P. O. E., is past council commander of the Woodmen of the World, and a member of Rising Star Lodge, I. O. O. F. He is the president of the Oregon Title Men's Association and is also president of the Boy Scouts' Association. He is likewise a member of the Roseburg Commercial Club, of which he served as vice president in 1911, and is the secretary of the Roseburg Park Fair Association. He gives his political allegiance to the republican party and is a member of the Pilgrim Congregational church while Mrs. Smith is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church of Roseburg. Robert E. Smith is placed by public opinion among the influential and leading citizens of Douglas county and is a man whose character and business integrity entitle him to be numbered among the most desirable and useful citizens of the state.

JAMES J. DONEGAN. A native of Oregon and for many years prominently identified with its political and commercial life, is James J. Donegan, assessor of Harney county and active in real-estate circles of this city. He was born in Jacksonville, Jackson county, Oregon, August 29, 1872. His parents were Patrick and Margaret (Lynch) Donegan, both natives of Ireland. His father came to America about 1853 and went to San Francisco, California, by way of the Isthmus of Panama. From there he went to Crescent City, California, where he remained for some time. Later he came to Oregon by mule team and located in the mining camp at Sterling, where he engaged in his trade of blacksmithing until he removed to Jacksonville upon its founding, in 1855. He opened a little blacksmith shop and did an increasing business there, remaining in the camp until his retirement from active life in 1910, when he went to San Diego, California, where he now resides. Mr. Donegan, of this review, was one of a family of eight children, four of whom are still living. When he was twelve years of age his father married for the second time, his second wife being Mary Fleming, a native of Ireland, whither Patrick Donegan had returned in the late '70s for a visit.

James J. Donegan received his early education in the public schools of Jacksonville and is a graduate of the local high school. He settled in Harney county in 1889 and remained there for one year, after which he returned to his native city. His father at that time owned a large tract of land on the Rogue river and Mr. Donegan and his elder brother Hugh, now a civil engineer of San Francisco, traveled to their father's holdings and engaged in the occupation of sheep ranching until 1894, when he again went to Harney county and located in Burns. There he operated a saloon business until 1908, giving up that occupation upon his election to the office of county assessor, in which capacity he has served for four years. In 1911 he became associated with Samuel Mothershead, in the organization of a real-estate, insurance and abstract business and he has retained this connection ever since. The firm has offices in the Masonic Temple and are doing a satisfactory and constantly increasing business. They represent some of the best old line companies in the state and have gained a reputation for capable business methods.

Mr. Donegan was married on the 30th of August, 1896, to Miss Margaret Smith, a daughter of John Smith, who with his father was murdered by the Indians during the uprising of the Bannocks who were later joined by the Piutes. Mr. Donegan and his wife became the parents of five children, one of whom died in infancy, the others being: Carmen, who is now a student in the public school of Burns; Patrick Hugh; James D., deceased; and Frances Mary. Mr. Donegan is one of the most popular residents of the city of Burns. He is a member of Portland Lodge, No. 142, B. P. O. E. He helped to organize the Native Sons of Oregon and was the first president of the Harney county branch. As county assessor he has made a record for clean, upright and successful policies. He is a fluent speaker and this quality has aided him materially in his public life. He never allows personal prejudice to interfere with the conduct of the affairs of his office and no hint of anything unworthy or dishonorable has ever been attached to his name.

JOHN C. STRONG, who for the past four years has been engaged in dealing in farm implements and vehicles at Myrtle Point, has gained a creditable position among the enterprising young business men of Coos county. He was born in Josephine county, this state, November 14, 1884, and is a son of Lewis and Catherine (Wimer) Strong, in whose family were twelve children of whom the following nine are now living: James F., a farmer residing at Myrtle Point; Jacob W., also of the same place; Lucy, the wife of E. W. Jones of Myrtle Point; Henry A., of Myrtle Point; Lewis M., who is engaged in the manufacture of cheese at Arago, Oregon; Viola, the wife of Seldon Warner, of Myrtle Point; Alberta, the wife of William J. Floyd, of Riverton, Oregon; Alice, the wife of C. L. Neil, of Ruckles, Oregon; and John C., of this review.

The last named started in the business world for himself at the age of eighteen years. His father was a farmer and John C. Strong was reared upon the home farm and through the period of his teens worked for his father. When eighteen years of age he began working for his brother on a ranch and a year later he rented a tract of land of one hundred and eighty seven acres, which he cultivated for a year. He then bought a forty acre farm, upon which he resided for two years, at the end of which time he sold out and joined his father in the implement and vehicle selling business in Myrtle Point. Four years have been devoted to this undertaking and his labors have been crowned with success, owing to his close application, his unfaltering energy and his wisely directed efforts. His political allegiance is given to the democratic party but he does not seek nor desire office, preferring to concentrate his energies upon his business affairs. He has always lived in Oregon, is imbued with the spirit of progress which has brought the state to its present condition and his interest in its welfare is manifest by active cooperation in movements for the development and advancement of the county in which he lives.

On the 11th of September, 1907, Mr. Strong was united in marriage to Miss Maud P. Clinton, a native of Oregon and a daughter of R. J. and Mary (Carter) Clinton. They became the parents of two children: Dorward E., who was born September 20, 1909; and Ernest E., whose birth occurred October 23, 1910. The family is well known at Myrtle Point and their circle of friends is a constantly increasing one.

JESSE MOORE, deceased, long occupied a prominent place among the honored residents of Umatilla county. For nearly sixty years he lived in this county, coming from Missouri when but eleven years of age. He is remembered as an upright and sincere man who knew no higher motive than duty and who did not hesitate to cast his lot on the side of right and justice. He was born near Jamestown, Missouri, February 16, 1840, and was left an orphan at an early age. He came to Oregon in 1851 with two uncles, crossing the plains to the Willamette valley with ox teams. They located near Sheridan but shortly afterward one uncle returned to Missouri and a few months later the other one died, thus leaving Mr. Moore a stranger in a strange country. He worked for his board until after he was sixteen years of age. Amid the environment of pioneer life he, when still a youth, became acquainted with the hard labor which the early settler endured. The opportunities for education were limited and in his case consisted principally of attendance at the country school for a few months under a teacher whose accomplishments were limited to reading and writing. After he was sixteen years of age he began to work and received as his first wage a horse and saddle. The following year he began freighting from The Dalles to Baker City and was thus engaged for two years. By careful saving and the exercise of much restraint in providing himself with the comforts of life he succeeded in accumulating sufficient capital at the end of that time to purchase a half interest in a pack train consisting of sixteen ox teams and a trail wagon. After making one trip he purchased the entire outfit and conducted it until he was twenty-two years of age. At that time, in 1862, he located on the present home ranch of one hundred and sixty acres at Butter creek. He secured this property in exchange for ten tons of hay, a saddle, a horse and one hundred dollars cash. At that time the nearest neighbor was over sixteen miles distant. Mr. Moore added to the tract until at the present time it comprises two hundred and forty acres. As he brought this property under a good state of cultivation he took up a homestead claim of one hundred and sixty acres and purchased sufficient adjacent territory to bring the property up to a tract of four hundred and eighty acres. He owned another ranch two and one-half miles further up the river. This property is well improved and adapted for both agricultural pursuits and horse raising. He kept only a very high grade of race horses and received for his running horse Leanington, the sum of three thousand dollars. He also raised cattle and draft horses but not so extensively. His was one of the first pieces of property to be irrigated, a fact which showed his belief in adapting his agricultural methods to the progress of the times. The first irrigated land there being one hundred and sixty-seven acres was put under to alfalfa. Mr. Moore's death occurred October 29, 1910. At that time few agriculturists of Umatilla county had met with a success equal to his, and the appearance of his property and the extent of its yields proved the wisdom of his judgment in adopting all practical and modern methods in his pursuits.

Mr. Moore was married on the 25th of October, 1882, to Miss Avarilla Mitchell, whose birth occurred near Gaston, Oregon, May 2, 1859, and who died on the 17th of October, 1895. She was a daughter of John A. Mitchell, a pioneer of Missouri. To their union five children were born: Jesse Franklin, whose birth occurred in September, 1883, and who died August 14, 1901; Celia I., who was born February 10, 1886; Kate Irene, born September 4, 1887; Mabel I., who was born July 20, 1890, and who is now the wife of T. W. Harris; and Hiestand Mitchell, whose birth occurred December 25, 1892.

In politics Mr. Moore gave his support to the republican party and in religious faith he was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church. He also held membership in the Ancient Order of United Workmen. Mr. and Mrs. Moore were willing and active supporters of all methods, social or otherwise, tending to promote the moral and intellectual interests of the community, and as their lives were thoroughly upright and honorable they were recognized as worthy and useful representatives of the best class of citizenship in this region.

ABNER RIDDLE, prominent in agricultural circles in Douglas county, where he owns and operates extensive ranches and prune orchards, is one of the earliest settlers in the state of Oregon, where he has been located since 1851. He was born in Illinois, October 29, 1841, a son of William H. and Maximilla Riddle, both natives of Ohio, who came to Illinois after their marriage and in 1851 crossed the plains to Oregon with ox teams. They came in the party of which Captain Hill had charge and spent six

JESSE MOORE

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASTOR, LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS.

months upon the journey. They located in Cow Creek valley, where the father took up a donation claim of three hundred and twenty acres and lived upon his holdings until the time of his death. He was the father of ten children, six of whom are still living.

Abner Riddle came to Oregon with his parents in 1851. He was living in this state at the time of the outbreak of the Civil war and enlisted in Company C, First Oregon Cavalry, on January 10, 1861, and served four years, receiving his honorable discharge at Vancouver in January, 1865. He returned to Douglas county and settled on the farm where he now lives. He gradually added to his holdings until he had three hundred and seventy-five acres but has sold and given to his family all but one hundred and thirty-seven acres of land, mostly under cultivation as prune orchards. He has always been intensely interested in the scientific development of agriculture and never allows any new discovery along this line to escape his attention. His prune orchards are among the most valuable in Douglas county and his harvest increases every year.

In January, 1866, Abner Riddle was united in marriage to Miss Alice C. Rice, a daughter of Harrison Rice, who came to Oregon from Illinois at an early date and died in this state. To Mr. Riddle and his wife were born six children: Ernest D.; Maud A., who is the wife of Louis Grant, the postmaster of Riddle; Grace L., who married O. V. Logston; Blanche A., who is a school teacher; Claude A., at home; and Lena, a high-school graduate, who is yet under the parental roof. Mrs. Abner Riddle died in 1903.

Abner Riddle has always voted the republican ticket and has been actively interested in the political affairs of his district all during his life. He served two terms as county commissioner and was a member of the school board for many years. He is a devout adherent of the Baptist church and is one of the trustees of that institution. He has been prominently connected with the development of his section for many years and is the brother of John B. Riddle, from whom the town of Riddle received its name. The fruit ranches and stock farms of Douglas county are among the most important sources of its wealth and Abner Riddle has been a prominent figure in their development for many years.

CHARLES R. FRANKLIN is one of the respected and prominent citizens of Elkton, Douglas county. He has been identified with the expansion of the states of Oregon and Washington since his early youth and has been a contributing force in the growth of this section of the country. He was born in Walla Walla, Washington, September 10, 1859, and is the son of George B. and Olive (White) Franklin. His father was a native of New York, born April 22, 1819. The mother's birth occurred in Ohio on the 5th of August, in the same year. George B. Franklin made the journey from Ohio to the northwest three times, traveling with ox teams. His first trip was made in the early days and his last in 1859. In the interval between his second and third journeys he went east and returned to Washington by Panama and up the coast by train to Walla Walla. He was a millwright by trade and a skilled worker in wood, and many of the mills throughout the Pacific coast country are the products of his hands. He also did much work in the mines, building shafts, and installing equipment, gaining his reputation for mechanical skill in this direction. He traveled extensively over the country in this way and commanded a high salary. He is still living at the age of ninety-three years and resides in Dayton, Oregon, where he is numbered among the representative and prominent citizens. His wife passed away August 26, 1891.

Charles Franklin was reared at home and acquired his education in the common schools of his native state. When he was twenty years of age he went to Boise City, Idaho, where for some years he followed the occupation of sawmilling, which he had learned under the instruction of his father. At the end of that time he went to the Oregon coast and worked at logging in the lumber woods near the Coquille river. He was married in 1890 and remained in Coos county for six or seven years following. At the end of that time he was sent to Alaska as manager of a crew of men working for the Ford & Stoakes Salmon Canning Company of Astoria. He made a success in this line of work where his talent for organization and his power of controlling subordinates were valuable assets. He remained in Alaska for one season and then returned to Coos county, where he sold his property and removed to The Dalles. His parents were then living in that section, where his father was operating the Fifteen Mile House located twelve miles from the city. In 1892 Mr. Franklin established his residence in Douglas county, locating in Elkton where he has since resided and has been identified with some of the most important commercial enterprises here.

On November 29, 1890, Mr. Franklin was united in marriage to Miss Anna Halter, a native of Nebraska, who came with her parents, John and Elizabeth (Epp) Halter, to Oregon in 1880. To their union have been born three children: Ethel, who is now a teacher in the Douglas county district schools; Edith, who is following the same profession; and Gladys, who lives at home. Mr. Franklin is a republican. He belongs to Elkton Lodge, No. 67, A. F. & A. M., and Elkton Lodge, No. 192, I. O. O. F. His wife affiliates with the Methodist Episcopal church. He has sought success along the road of hard work and persistent labor. He has not found the path a royal highway but has achieved his end by worthy and honorable methods.

E. B. WATERS. The history of the settlement of any new section of a country is a record of hard work amid the hardships and dangers of primitive conditions. The pioneers of Oregon, men of sturdy and courageous spirit, capable of battling with elementary conditions, the qualities which made them successful and gave to this country the rich and prosperous state, are active in the second generation and are making the commercial industries in this state factors to be reckoned with in the development of American resources. Mr. E. B. Waters, county clerk of Burns, Oregon, is of the second generation. He is a native of the state, having been born in Harrisburg, Linn county, Oregon, November 8, 1862. His father was A. W. Waters, who came west from Iowa in 1852. He crossed the plains with ox teams this being the general method of travel in those days. He settled first in California, afterward came to Josephine county, Oregon, and later to Harrisburg, Linn county. In 1870 he moved to Umatilla county, then to La Grande, Union county, where he engaged in the stock-raising business for a short time. In 1875 he bought a newspaper in Salem, Oregon, The Statesman, which he conducted with great ability and enterprise for two years. In 1876 he was appointed United States marshal and moved to Portland, but retained his interest in The Salem Statesman. He held the office of marshal until 1880 and when his term expired was elected state senator from Multnomah county. In this office he remained until he came to Harney county in 1884, where he made his home for nineteen years. He was admitted to the bar there, and practiced law in Burns from 1884 until 1903 when failing health compelled him to retire from active life and thus he lived at Weiser, Idaho, until his death in 1906 at the age of seventy-three years. In 1862 he was made captain of a volunteer militia company. The troops were assigned to the duty of protecting the citizens of the community from Indian depredations. Mr. Waters served as captain until the close of the war when he received his honorable discharge.

E. B. Waters, the subject of this sketch, was one of five children. He received his primary education in the public schools of La Grande and was graduated from the high school at Portland, Oregon. He learned the printer's trade and followed it until 1884 when he came to Harney county. For some years he engaged in ranching and stock-raising here and had considerable success in this line of work, abandoning it in 1899 to accept the position of postmaster, in which capacity he served for six years. In 1910 he was elected to his present position of county clerk.

During his mature life Mr. Waters has been prominent in the Knights of Pythias, but beyond this has no fraternal affiliations. He is well known in this section of the country as an exemplary citizen and a capable official. His friends and admirers are numbered among the most prominent and important residents of Burns. His record in business life has been an excellent and worthy one and has been unmarred by any hint of dishonor or corruption.

S. W. NOAH. A native son of Oregon and one whose family history is intimately connected with the stirring events of pioneer settlement is S. W. Noah, now in active operation of one hundred and twenty-four acres of ranch land in Coos county. He was born in Olala, Oregon, when that state was still a territory in the section which is now known as Douglas county, on the 2nd of January, 1859. His parents were John and Mary M. (Jones) Noah, the former a native of Iowa and the latter of Indiana. His mother came to Oregon with her parents in 1852 in the caravan drawn by ox teams, of which Jacob Jones was the captain. The train started from Northfield, Indiana, on the 15th day of March, 1852, and reached The Dalles, Oregon, on the 19th of September, in the same year. Of the number of people who started on the journey forty-six reached The Dalles and four died on the plains, Lydia Jones, Mrs. Sarah Jones, Mrs. Lewis Jones, and Mark Dugan, succumbing to the hardships and perils of the pioneer journey. The caravan consisted in all of ten wagons. It was composed of the following people: Jacob Jones and his wife and five children: Harvey, George, Henry, Lydia, and Mark; Mr. and Mrs. George Jones and five children: Susan, Elizabeth, Mary, Nancy, and Joseph; John Jones, his wife and three children: Caroline, Emeline, and Margaret; Ike Jones, his wife and six children; Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Jones and their two daughters: Sarah Jane, and Mary Ann; Lewis Jones, his wife and child, David; D. Imbler, with his wife and three children: John, Sarah, and Emily; George Shirts, his wife and two children: Samuel Jones; Jesse Davenport; James Richardson; Mark Dugan; and Nelson Knight. The mother of our subject spent her first winter in Oregon at the home of Dr. John McLaughlin of Oregon City and in the following spring came to the present site of Roseburg where she joined her father and the remainder of the family. She lived at home with her parents until December 18, 1857. The father of our subject came to Oregon in 1853, making the journey by the southern route. He settled first in Douglas county and shortly afterward enlisted in the American army and served during the Indian war for six months and eight days. It was he who delivered the dispatch to the southern battalion at Whiskey Run containing the conditions of the battle and a few days later the war was ended as a result of his bravery and activity. He received his honorable discharge at the end of the war and in 1857 married and followed farming and freighting for a number of years thereafter. In 1872 he moved to Coos county and engaged in the logging business which he followed until his death, December 22, 1901, at the age of sixty-eight years. His wife survived him until September 21, 1907, dying at the age of sixty-five years, eight months and seventeen days. Mr. and Mrs. John Noah were the parents of fifteen children, thirteen of whom are still living: Joseph L., who is now deceased; S. W., the subject of this sketch; Alice, the widow of G. W. Yoakum, who is deceased; Viola, deceased; Marietta, who makes her home in Portland, Oregon; Story, of Butte City, Montana; Mrs. Hattie Musson of Marshfield, Oregon; Mrs.

Elizabeth Condron of Marshfield; Edward and Fred, both of whom reside in Allegany, Oregon; Alonzo, who lives in Vancouver, Washington; Mrs. Kronholm of Marshfield, Oregon; Mrs. Louise Summers, who lives in Prescott, Arizona; George, who now makes his home in Allegany, Oregon; and Lorenzo of La Grande, Oregon.

Mr. Noah received his early education in Douglas county and pursued his studies until he was nineteen years of age. He then started active life for himself, working in a lumber mill and he has the distinction of having cut the first timber in Douglas county that was felled with a saw. He followed various lines of occupation until 1906, when he bought one hundred and twenty-four acres of farm land on Coos river in Coos county which he now operates as a dairy ranch. He gives his personal attention to the supervision of his holdings and his dairy is one of the finest and most efficiently equipped in this section of the country. Mr. Noah is at the present time state game warden of Oregon and has served in this capacity with great success for the last six years.

Mr. Noah was united in marriage to Miss Stacy Ellen Watson. Mrs. Noah's parents are both dead. Her father passed away in Missouri and her mother's death occurred in Douglas county, Oregon. Mrs. Noah died October 19, 1910, and is buried in the Coos River cemetery. She was the mother of two children: Wesley, born December 25, 1885, and who is now a licensed gasoline boat captain; and Ollie, born in 1884, who also received a high-school education and is now the wife of D. C. McKay, of Coos River.

Mr. Noah is a republican and a firm believer in the principles of that party and is an intelligent thinker on public issues although he has never sought public office. He holds membership in the Woodmen of the World and this is his only fraternal affiliation. His life reaches back into the early days of pioneer settlement and he can still remember many of the hardships and privations which the citizens of that early time were obliged to undergo. It is no longer an Oregon frontier. The next generation in that state will be as rich in the comforts of civilization as are the citizens of any other section of America; yet in their hearts and influence their lives will always be the memory of their forefathers, "the brave who pushed their way into the western wilds and molded out of the chaotic struggle of pioneer life, civilization, society and government."

I. R. LAURANCE of the Ukiah Mercantile Company, was born in Prairie City, Grant county, Oregon. He is a son of Isham and Anna (Whittier) Laurance, the father a native of North Carolina and the mother of Maine. Isham Laurance was one of the pioneers of Oregon. He crossed the plains in the early '50s and went north where he settled in the Willamette valley for a short time, but soon afterward removed to Grant county and there spent the remainder of his life. For a number of years he was engaged in ranching but later he became identified with the milling business, operating a grist mill for several years which was located four miles from Prairie City. Subsequently he entered the mercantile business and also became interested in extensive mining properties. At the time he located in Grant county he was a poor man, but through thrift and energy he rapidly gained financial resources which later helped make him successful. Politically he was a democrat but he never sought public office and fraternally he was affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. He died in May, 1910, at the age of seventy-six, being survived a little more than a year by his wife, who passed away in June, 1911.

The mother, Anna V. (Whittier) Laurance, came to Oregon about the year 1875, going to the home of her sister in Grant county. She was a school teacher, having followed that profession in her native state and also later in Minnesota. Shortly after her arrival in Oregon she married Mr. Laurance who at that time was engaged in the mercantile business. She was a great help to him in his office work and also assisted him materially in his business.

I. R. Laurance was reared under the parental roof and received his education in the public schools of Oregon. While attending high school in Portland a large fire, in Prairie City, which destroyed half the town, burned down his father's mercantile store and he was forced to return home. The following year, however, he returned to Portland and completed a business course. He then assisted his father in the mercantile business for a year and a half, and in 1905 came to Ukiah where he purchased the mercantile business of C. A. Despain, which he operates under the firm name of the Ukiah Mercantile Company.

In 1908 Mr. Laurance married Miss Lola Sturdivant, who is a daughter of Joseph Sturdivant, a prominent ranchman residing three miles from Ukiah. To Mr. and Mrs. Laurance one child, Sheldon M., has been born.

In politics Mr. Laurance is a republican, and he has served as postmaster of Ukiah for five years. Fraternally he is identified with the Pendleton Lodge, No. 288, B. P. O. E. He is one of the progressive business men of Umatilla county, and is a popular and well liked merchant.

PETER ULAM. The large fruit orchards of southern Oregon are rapidly covering many thousands of acres. The amount of land under cultivation in apple, prune and pear ranches is increasing yearly and is becoming one of the chief sources of wealth in this section of the country. A man prominent in this line of activity and one who has been identified with it for a great many years is Peter Ulam, now the owner of extensive fruit orchards in Douglas county. He was born in Iowa, February 12, 1860, a son of J. C. and Sarah (Hires) Ulam, the former a native of Pennsylvania and the latter of Scott county, Iowa. In 1866 they went to South Dakota, where they remained for four years and in August of the year 1870 came to Oregon. They located first near Roseburg, where they remained for eight years and then moved near Canyonville, where the father died four years later. He was survived by his wife until July 28, 1903, in which year her death occurred. They were the parents of three children: Ada, the wife of John Thomas, of North Yakima, Washington; Peter, of this review; and Jennie, who married Peter Clemens, of Burns, Oregon.

Peter Ulam received his early education in the public schools of South Dakota and Oregon and remained with his parents until he was twenty-two years of age, when he went to Harney county and engaged in the horse business in that section for five years. At the expiration of this period he returned to Douglas county and bought the ranch of eighteen acres upon which he now lives. Besides this tract of land, which he has entirely under cultivation as a fruit ranch, he is also the owner of two hundred and forty acres of land in the same district. Mr. Ulam is a practical farmer and has improved and cultivated his holdings for many years. He is well versed in the science of fruit farming and the quality of his product and the abundance of his harvests increases every year.

Mr. Ulam has been twice married. In 1883 he wedded Miss Matilda Worley and they became the parents of two children: Georgia, the wife of Wendell Wright, of Roseburg; and one who died in infancy. Mr. Ulam's first wife died on November 28, 1886. Three years later he was again married, his second union being with Miss Etta Butler, a native of Illinois. They are the parents of four children: J. C., Clay, Peter, Jr., and Addie Clifford, all of whom are living at home.

Mr. Ulam gives his political allegiance to the democratic party. He takes an intelligent interest in local public affairs but has never sought office for himself. He is a member of Riddle Lodge, A. F. & A. M., and of Azalia Lodge, No. 136, I. O. O. F., and has filled all the chairs of the latter organization. He is well and prominently known in his district and has gained a reputation for the practical and scientific manner in which he operates his fruit farm.

PHILIPP MEIER. Among the worthy and representative citizens of Sublimity is numbered Philipp Meier, who is the proprietor of an excellent hardware and implement store and a blacksmith shop. He was born in Kunten, Switzerland, September 27, 1855, the son of Martin and Barbara (Westein) Meier, both of whom were natives of Kunten and spent all their lives there, the father being a farmer by occupation. They were the parents of three children: One who died in infancy; Bertha, of Switzerland; and Philipp, of this review.

The last named was educated in the common schools of Switzerland and learned the trade of blacksmith. In 1886 he came to the United States and located at Mount Angel, Oregon, where he worked at his trade for twelve years, after which he removed to Portland and was engaged in blacksmithing for eight years. Subsequently he came to Sublimity and started a blacksmith shop and two years later added an implement and hardware store. He now has an excellent store and blacksmith shop with eight lots in connection and a fine residence on the same.

In 1884 Mr. Meier wedded Miss Mary Waser, who died in 1899, leaving three children: Edward, who is in business with his father and is married to Mary Kentz; and Rosa and Mary, both of Portland. In 1901 Mr. Meier was again married, his second union being with Miss Rosa Buergi and they have become the parents of four daughters, Anna, Bertha, Theresa and Martha. In his political views Mr. Meier is independent and in casting his vote he always considers the man who is best qualified to fill the office. He and his family are members of the Catholic church, and fraternally he is identified with the Catholic Order of Foresters and with the Swiss Order in Portland. Energetic and honest in every connection and having the good will of all who know him, Mr. Meier is very successful in both lines of his business.

H. S. JORY, who passed away January 4, 1912, was for many years identified with the business interests of Salem, as a dealer in fruit driers. He built up an excellent trade in the face of difficulties and obstacles which would have utterly discouraged many a man of less resolute spirit, and he based his success upon the sure and stable foundation of honorable and persevering effort. He was born in St. John, New Brunswick, on the 28th of November, 1833, coming of a family of English origin, his parents being James and Mary (Stevens) Jory, who came to America from England in 1831 after their marriage. They located in New Brunswick, where they resided for six years before removing to St. Louis, Missouri. Subsequently they removed to Pike county, Illinois, and lived there ten years before settling in Brown county, Illinois. Having heard much of the possibilities which the far west offered, they set out in 1847 to cross the plains with ox teams. They came direct to Oregon and located near Salem upon a donation land claim of six hundred and forty acres. The log cabin which they erected for their home was covered with a clapboard roof and had puncheon floor and door. They resided here until their deaths. To them ten children were born, two of whom survive, Thomas and William.

After receiving his education in the common schools H. S. Jory assisted his father at home until he was twenty- one years of age. At that time he learned the carpenter's trade and later patented a fruit drier. He engaged in promoting the sale of his drier and was manager of the firm of H. S. Jory & Son, manufacturers of fruit driers and fixtures.

MR. AND MRS. H. S. JOBEY

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASTOR LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS

The business has constantly grown in importance and it is now one of the important industrial and commercial concerns of the town, while its owner became one of the substantial residents of Salem. He proved his worth in many public connections and his fellow townsmen, recognizing his ability and loyalty in citizenship, frequently called upon him for various public services.

On January 27, 1857, Mr. Jory was married to Miss Mary Budd, whose birth occurred in Pike county, Illinois, in January, 1837, and who is a daughter of Aaron and Phoebe Budd. Two of Mr. Jory's brothers married two sisters of his wife. To Mr. and Mrs. Jory five children have been born: Charles, who is a resident of Stockton, California; Oliver, who is in business with his father; Oscar, who died in infancy; and Alfred and Ralph, deceased. The two last named were drowned in the Willamette river.

In politics Mr. Jory gives his support to the prohibition party during his later years but in early life was a republican. He served as justice of the peace for four years. He was a member of the Good Templars and held membership in the Methodist church of Salem, to which his wife also belongs. Because of his long residence in Oregon he witnessed much of the growth and upbuilding of Salem and this part of the state. His close application in business and his excellent management brought him a good competence, and he was thus able to leave his family in comfortable circumstances.

MRS. ANNIE HONAN, who resides in La Grande, has lived in Oregon for many years and owns valuable property in the city and in the Grande Ronde valley. Her circle of friends is an extensive one and the hospitality of the best homes of this section is freely accorded her. Mrs. Honan was born in England, and when a young lady of nineteen years accompanied her father to the United States in 1866, settling in Portland. Her father remained in this country, however, but a short time and then returned to England. Mrs. Honan, however, continued to reside in the northwest and in 1869 became the wife of George Coggan, also a native of England, who in early manhood came to the new world. He crossed the plains and settled on land in the Willamette valley, where he farmed for a few years and then removed to the Grande Ronde valley. There he engaged in raising horses and for nine years operated a stage line between Monticello and Olympia, a distance of more than one hundred miles. He afterward leased portions of the line, while he turned his attention to business interests in Portland, for a time conducting the St. Charles Hotel.

In the year 1878 serious Indian troubles occurred and Mr. Coggan went to La Grande, whence he was summoned to Pendleton by General Howard, who wished to see him on business. Accordingly he set out for Pendleton in his buggy, and at Meacham overtook the stage. Owing to the alarming reports concerning the Indians, the driver refused to make the journey to Umatilla, stopping at Meacham. Mr. Coggan therefore with two companions, Messrs. Bunker and Foster, set out on horseback, proceeding safely on their way until within six miles of Pendleton, when they were attacked by the Indians with the result that Mr. Coggan and Mr. Bunker were both badly wounded, the former surviving his injuries for but a brief time. Mr. Foster, escaping, hurried on to Pendleton and the next morning started out with a rescue party to bring back Mr. Bunker and also the remains of Mr. Coggan. Upon reaching the place where the three men had encountered the Indians they found General Miles, who had come with troops from Walla Walla, fighting the Indians over the remains of Mr. Coggan. It was well he had come, as General Howard had taken his troops away that morning, not waiting for Mr. Coggan, and leaving the whole country and every one at the mercy of the Indians, who went on the war path as soon as he had gone. The red men were captured and White Owl, the Indian chief who had shot Mr. Coggan, was tried at Pendleton, convicted of murder and hung for his crime.

Three years later, or in 1881, Mrs. Coggan became the wife of Dr. Michael Honan, a native of Ottawa, Canada, who was graduated from the Bellevue Hospital Medical College of New York city. He was not only a physician of superior scientific attainments but also a gentleman of wide general culture and accomplishments, speaking fluently a number of languages. Following their marriage Dr. and Mrs. Honan spent several years in travel, visiting France, Italy and England. Dr. Honan passed away in 1890 and since his death Mrs. Honan has been successfully managing her extensive property interests. Having long resided in Oregon, she has a wide acquaintance in the state and is held in high regard by all who know her. She possesses excellent business ability and under her capable control her properties are continually increasing in value. Her social qualities are of a most attractive character and win for her a constantly increasing circle of friends.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN SWARTZ. The farming interests of Douglas county are well represented by A. L. Swartz, now engaged in general agriculture one and a half miles north of the town of Riddle. He was born in Marion county, Oregon, on February 25, 1863, and is one of the oldest native sons of this state. His parents were Alonzo and Julia (Matthews) Swartz. The father was born in Illinois but came to Oregon in 1853 with his parents. They crossed the plains with ox teams, coming in a wagon train with Colonel Nesbitt. Arriving in Marion county, Simon Swartz, grandfather of our subject, took up a donation claim three and a half miles east of Salem. Julia (Matthews) Swartz crossed the plains to Oregon from New York in 1852 with the ox team which brought the Buff family. Neither of her parents lived to complete their journey but died on the way of cholera, which was then raging along the trails. The parents of A.

L. Swartz were married in the west and settled in Marion county, four miles east of Salem, where the father operated a sawmill for some years on the Little Pudding river. He retired from the sawmilling business and bought a farm in 1871, three miles east of Salem, where his death occurred at the age of sixty-eight years. He was a prominent man in the pioneer life of the west and was a veteran of an Indian war. At the time of the Whitman massacre and the Indian uprising in 1855, he served on the staff of Governor Grover. It was during this war that Captain Bennett was killed.

A. L. Swartz was reared at home, acquiring his education in the common schools of Marion county. From his early manhood he worked in a sawmill, spending thirteen years of his life in this occupation in the employ of his uncle, R. L. Swartz. After the expiration of that period he removed to Portland and spent three years there in the same line of activity, when he returned to Marion county. Here he engaged for some years in the operation of a bee ranch and in 1898 moved to his present farm in Douglas county, where he has since resided. During the last fourteen years of his life he has been intensely interested in mining and has been remarkably successful along this line.

In 1883 Mr. Swartz was united in marriage to Miss Ella Stotlar, of Marion county. Her father, O. D. Stotlar, was one of the pioneers in the early settlement of California, removing subsequently to Oregon, where he made his home until his death. A. L. Swartz and his wife are the parents of five children: Elba May, the wife of E. M. Neal, of Douglas county; Palmer S., Harry H., Jessie L. and Lila, all of whom are living at home.

Mr. Swartz gives his political allegiance to the democratic party but takes no very active part in local affairs and has never been an aspirant for public office. He holds membership in Riddle Lodge, A. F. & A. M., and in Alpine Lodge, No. 47, K. P., of Roseburg. He is one of the prominent citizens of Douglas county and has been actively identified during his career with the development of its natural resources. He has aided in the cultivation of its soil and in the development of its mineral products. His success has been gradual but continuous since the beginning of his active life and he is now recognized as among the foremost citizens of his native state.

ALFRED A. NICHOLLS is one of the respected citizens of Empire, where he now lives. He was born in County Cork, Ireland, in 1872, and is the son of Henry E. and Catherine (Dugan) Nicholls, the former a native of London, England, and the latter of Ireland. In their family were nine children: Thomas and Henry are both deceased. Caroline is a resident of Empire, Oregon. George is also deceased. Charlotte, who is the owner of a productive farm of one hundred and sixty acres, is the wife of William McCullen and they have one child named Charlotte. Charlie is a resident of Empire. Alfred A. is the subject of this review. Georgiana, the wife of Glen Rozell, of Empire, has the distinction of being accorded by public opinion a place as the best rifle shot in Oregon. Among her many accomplishments in the use of her rifle is the success she has attained as the "Mistress Nimrod" of the mountains. During her hunting adventures she has killed bear, deer and wild cat and specimens of all the other known wild animals of the Rocky mountain region. Constance, who completes the family, is the wife of Nick Basendorf, and they have three children, their residence being near the Cape Argo lighthouse. The father of this family was at one time one of the richest men of Coos bay, where he took up his residence in the early '70s. On reaching Oregon he at once chartered a vessel for the purpose of importing a large grist mill from London, which he intended to install at Coos bay and operate as a commercial custom mill, but his death, which took place at the time when he was engaged in the construction of the plant, resulted in the defeat of his plans and the mill was never completed as he had intended.

As a child Alfred A. Nicholls emigrated to America with his parents, settling in Coos bay. He was reared in his parents' home and received his early education in Empire City. Later he was engaged in work on a pile driver for a period of five months and then became an employe in a sawmill for one year, after which he learned the trade of marine engineering. He was then employed by the government on a jetty at the mouth of Coos bay and later was connected with the life-saving station for two years, during which time he took part in the rescue of fifty-six people, one man only being lost, at the time the steamer Emily was wrecked off the Oregon coast, July 17, 1893. At the close of his time of service at the life-saving station he was engaged in coal mining for four years and then spent four years at Grays Harbor. In 1899 he went to Libby and was there engaged in mining until 1901. On April 1, 1911, he entered the service of the United States government as engineer on a live-saving boat on the Coquille river, continuing in that occupation until he removed to Empire and was there engaged in the employ of the Simpson Lumber Company.

Mr. Nicholls was united in marriage to Miss Bertha Oldland, a native of Oregon and a daughter of Watts and Izora (Meyers) Oldland, the former of whom was born in the southern part of Wales and the latter in Pennsylvania. In the family of Mr. and Mrs. Oldland were eight children. James, who resides at Libby, is married and has two children. Stanley makes his home on Coos bay. Bertha is the wife of Alfred A. Nicholls, of this review. Walter and Edward are both residing in Coos county. Fannie married Morris McDonald, of Oswego, Oregon, and they have three children. Frances is the wife of Homer Mauzey, of Marshfield. Della, who completes the family, is attending the Marshfield high school.

As a retired citizen of Coos county Mr. Nicholls is held in high esteem by his fellow citizens and is a man who has always so conducted his life as to win the respect and confidence of all the people with whom he has been associated.

C. W. WOMACK, who lives retired at Lostine, is one of the pioneer settlers of Wallowa valley. He was born in Shelby county, Illinois, on October 4, 1844, the son of William and Martha A. (Jordan) Womack, both of whom were natives of Tennessee. The parents were married in Illinois, where they had removed in youth with their parents. After their marriage they resided for a short time in Shelby county and then removed to Lee county, Iowa, and later to Putnam county, Missouri. In 1886 they came to Oregon, locating near Lostine in Wallowa county, where they purchased one hundred and sixty acres of land. Later they moved into the town of Lostine, where they both passed away, the father, October 15, 1901, at the age of eighty-four years, and the mother February 9, 1901, at the age of eighty-three. They were both members of the Methodist Episcopal church. The father belonged to the Masonic lodge, having joined that order in the early '60s.

C. W. Womack was reared under the parental roof and acquired his education in the common schools, attending an old time log schoolhouse, with its split logs for benches and its puncheon floor. In 1863, at the age of nineteen, he went with the gold seekers to Pike's Peak, in Colorado, where he spent the summer, returning that winter to his home in Missouri. In the spring of 1864 he started across the plains for Oregon, making his way with ox teams in a wagon train of about eighty-three wagons. He was six months on the road, between the Missouri river and Boise, Idaho. He stopped in Boise for one year and in 1865 came to Oregon, locating at Webb Foot, Marion county. There he resided only one year, when he went to Wasco county, locating thirty miles from The Dalles. He there took up land and for several years operated a sawmill. He was one of the pioneers in that section of the state and the town of Wamic which has been built there was named for him. In 1877 Mr. Womack removed to Wallowa valley, taking up a homestead on the south fork of the Wallowa river, one and a quarter miles west of where Lostine was later built. This land was then a part of Union county. Mr. Womack resided until 1907 on this farm, to which in the meantime he had added by purchase until he owned in all two hundred and eighty-two and a half acres. In that year he rented his farm and moved into Lostine, where he is now living retired.

On the 1st of November, 1877, Mr. Womack was married to Miss Melvine McCubbin, daughter of Abraham McCubbin, who came to Oregon from Missouri in 1852. Mr. McCubbin located in Clackamas county, but later removed to Jackson county, then to Washington county and subsequently to Wasco county, where he passed away in 1881 at the age of sixty-five years. His wife, whom he married in Missouri, was Miss Sarah Dean. She passed away in 1897 at the age of sixty-eight years. To Mr. and Mrs. Womack have been born six children, five of whom are living. They are: William, of Alberta, Canada; Fred, a ranchman near Lostine; Charles of Alberta, Canada; Sadie, who is the wife of Jene W. Hall, of Lostine; and Grover of Alberta, Canada. In his political views Mr. Womack is republican. His wife and daughter Sadie are members of the Christian church. Many years have passed since Mr. Womack arrived in Oregon, and he is justly numbered among her honored citizens. He has the remarkable record of one who has always by his upright life won the confidence of all with whom he has come in contact.

HARRY W. PRATT. One of the growing industries of Douglas county and one which is responsible in a large measure for its prosperity and rapid development is that of fruit farming. The prune and apple orchards of southern Oregon are increasing in size and in the quality of their harvests every year and their growth is contributing to the wealth of the section and to the individual prosperity of their owners. Prominently identified with this line of activity in Myrtle Creek is Harry W. Pratt. He was born in Greenup county, Kentucky, November 22, 1855. His parents were Jonathan H. and Sarah (Morton) Pratt, both natives of Kentucky, where they were reared and married. In 1860 they removed to Kansas, locating in Miami county, about twenty-five miles from Kansas City. The father held a degree in law and had been admitted to the bar and practiced his profession for some time but devoted his later years to farming in Miami county, where his death occurred in 1910. He had long survived his wife, who died in 1875.

Harry W. Pratt received his education in the common schools of Miami county, Kansas, and lived with his parents until 1878, when he crossed the plains to California with a mule team. He spent three years traveling in the state, becoming acquainted with its commercial opportunities. In 1881 he moved north to Oregon and spent fifteen years mining in the eastern part of this state and in Idaho. In 1895 he bought thirty acres of fine fruit land near Myrtle Creek, in Douglas county, which he is at present operating. He is principally interested in the cultivation of prunes. His harvest increases in volume every year and he is constantly adopting new methods and more scientific equipment for the cultivation of his trees.

In 1881 Mr. Pratt was united in marriage to Mrs. Rosa (McCarty) Adams, a daughter of Dr. A. G. McCarty, a practicing physician of Douglas county, who came to Oregon from Indiana in 1877 and located in Myrtle Creek, where he was extremely successful in his profession up to the time of his death, in 1895. Mr. and Mrs. Pratt are the parents of a son, Harry C., who lives at home.

Mr. Pratt is entirely nonpartisan in his political views. He takes an intelligent interest in current events but has never sought public office for himself. He is a member of Umpqua Camp, No. 444, W. O. W., while his son holds membership in Myrtle Creek Lodge, A. F. & A. M. Engaging as he does in a comparatively new industry Mr. Pratt has attained remarkable success during his period of activity. He keeps an open mind on all subjects and is actively interested in each new discovery which puts fruit farming on a more scientific basis. His orchard is run on modern lines. He pays great attention to the quality of the soil and the soundness of his young trees and is a practical workman along scientific lines.

GEORGE ELMER DAVIS is one of the leading and representative attorneys of Vale, Oregon, and has a large and still increasing practice, based upon efficiency, industry and ability. He has been admitted to the bar in Missouri and in Oregon, dating his residence in the latter state from the year 1890. His remarkable legal knowledge and attainments have been recognized in his election to the office of judge of the ninth judicial district, in which capacity he served with gratifying success for over six years. As a lawyer he is recognized as a strong and able practitioner, shrewd, calculating and thoroughly reliable, and during his twenty-two years' identification with the legal profession in this state he has been connected with some of the most important local litigation.

He was born in Bowling Green, Clay county, Indiana, on the 28th of March, 1862, and is a son of John H. and Amanda Ann Davis. He was educated in the public schools of his native section and later attended the Lancaster Academy at Lancaster, Missouri, completing his studies in the Missouri State Normal School at Kirksville. While pursuing his education he followed the various occupations familiar to the southwestern farmer's boy of fifty years ago and upon leaving school entered upon those two pursuits which have been followed by so many ambitious American youths—teaching school and studying law. He followed both of these lines for several years in Missouri and Kansas and was finally admitted to the bar of the former state in 1889. One year later he removed to Oregon and entered the law offices of H. B. Nicholas in Portland. He carried on his studies, making wise use of every favorable opportunity, and, having succeeded in greatly increasing his knowledge, he was admitted to the bar of Oregon in May, 1891. He immediately opened offices in Portland, where he practiced his profession with steadily increasing success until the winter of 1898, when he removed to La Grande. After a brief residence in that community he went to Canyon City, which is the county seat of Grant county, where he soon won a leading place in legal circles and where he continued a successful practice until June, 1904, when at the general election of that year he was elected judge of the ninth judicial district of Oregon, comprising the counties of Grant, Harney and Malheur. In this position he was signally successful and was recognized by the bench, bar and laity of eastern Oregon as an able and conscientious judge. Having served for over six years, he retired in January, 1910, and resumed the practice of his profession at Vale. A vast project for the irrigation of thousands of rich acres of land in this section had already been inaugurated and special inducements were held out to Judge Davis if he would remove to Vale and accept the presidency of the Vale-Oregon Irrigation Company and to act as its general counsel, both of which positions he now fills.

On July 3, 1898, Judge Davis was united in marriage, at Vancouver, Washington, to Miss Anna Harriet Johnson, a daughter of Jacob and Catherine Johnson, of Litchfield, Minnesota. They have become the parents of two children: Julia Lilian, aged eleven; and John Elmer, aged eight.

In politics Judge Davis is by nature a pronounced partisan and a republican. He has never been an office seeker but his great ability, his power of organization and his constructive skill have been rewarded at various times by his election to positions within the gift of the people. He began his public career at the age of twenty-two years, when he was elected county school superintendent of Schuyler county, Missouri. His next official position was that of judge of the circuit court of Oregon. In 1910 he was strongly urged by his many friends to become a candidate for congress, but despite their earnest solicitations and the high promise of success he refused to enter the contest. He is now serving as president of the Vale Chamber of Commerce and a director in the United States National Bank. He is a member of Canyon City Lodge, No. 34, A. F. & A. M.; of Blue Mountain Chapter, No. 7, R. A. M.; Blue Mountain Council, No. 6, R. & S. M.; and Baker Commandery, No. 9, K. T. He is also prominent in Hobah Lodge, No. 22, I. O. O. F., and in Excelsior Encampment, No. 3, of Canyon City. He is well known in Vernon Lodge, No. 43, K. P., at Canyon City; Vale Camp, No. 5496, M. W. A., at Vale; and Baker Lodge, No. 338, B. P. O. E. He has met with success in life, being a man of varied interests, with the capacity of making them separately effective. He is an able lawyer; a conscientious and high-minded public official; and a worthy, progressive and liberal man.

WILLIAM A. J. MAYES is one of the prosperous farmers of Douglas county. He was born in Crawford county, Arkansas, September 7, 1852. His parents were John and Pernetta Ann (White) Mayes, the former a native of Arkansas and the latter of English descent. The family moved to Texas when William Mayes was only one year old and remained in that state until the fall of 1861, at which time they returned to Arkansas and remained there until 1876, when they again returned to Texas and from there in the fall of 1892, they came to Douglas county, Oregon, and settled in the town of Riddle, where the father died in November, 1895, and the mother in January, 1909. They were the parents of five children: William A. J., of this review;

GEORGE E. DAVIS

Joseph M., now living in Oklahoma; J. T., who is a resident of California; and James W. and Mary Ann, both of whom are now deceased.

William A. J. Mayes received his education in the common schools of Texas. When he laid aside his books he worked upon his father's farm until he was thirty-five years of age, when he engaged in the occupation of agriculture on his own account in Texas and farmed in that state until he came to Oregon in November, 1902. He bought a ranch of sixty-nine acres in Douglas county which he now owns and operates and which he is gradually bringing to a high state of cultivation.

On August 1, 1886, Mr. Mayes was united in marriage to Miss Eliza B. Chandler, a native of Kentucky, and a daughter of R. M. and Susanna Chandler. Mr. and Mrs. Mayes are the parents of six children: Grace, the wife of Amos Blasing; Kittie, now a school teacher in Douglas county; Eva Belle, who married U. Y. Ash; Johnann, living at home; Marion, who is attending school; and Wiletta, who is also yet under the parental roof.

Politically Mr. Mayes gives his allegiance to the republican party but beyond casting his vote at each election he takes no very active part in public affairs. He is a member of the Woodmen of the World and is also active in the affairs of the Grange. He has devoted most of his life to farming and his experience along this line has been a practical asset to him in the cultivation of the ranch of which he is now the owner.

A. L. BOONE owns and resides upon a beautiful farm of forty acres, located on Applegate creek, Jackson county, this state. He was born July 17, 1873, and is the son of J. C. and Mary (Davy) Boone. He continued to live in his father's home until he was twenty-five years of age and at that time he emigrated to California, where he became interested in mining. He has devoted nearly his entire time since leaving home to this line of work and is still interested in mines in various localities throughout the west. He removed to this state in the fall of 1903 and at that time purchased the farm upon which he now resides. He is engaged in diversified farming and gardening and in this business is very successful.

On February 6, 1896, he was united in marriage to Miss Gertrude Allen, a native of Virginia. To Mr. and Mrs. Boone five children have been born, Frank, Martha, Virginia, Goldie and Annie. Mr. Boone is a socialist in his political affiliations and is also a member of the W. O. W. He is at present giving his entire time to the development and cultivation of his farm and is known throughout his community as a reliable and desirable member of society.

JAMES M. BELCHER. One of the oldest surviving pioneers of Yamhill county is James M. Belcher, whose residence here covers a period of sixty-two years. The greater portion of this time has been passed on his fine ranch in the vicinity of Lafayette, where he located on his arrival here in 1851. He was born in Virginia on the 11th of July, 1823, and is a son of John and Sarah (Brown) Belcher. The father was a native of England, whence he emigrated to Virginia, residing there until 1830, when he removed to Missouri. There he was joined two years later by his wife and their two elder children. Agricultural pursuits always engaged the attention of John Belcher, who acquired the title to a fine tract of fertile land in Missouri that he cultivated until his death in 1843. He was survived by the mother, who subsequently went to Texas, where she passed away in 1863. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Belcher numbered seven, four of whom are now deceased. Those living are as follows: James M., our subject; T. J., who is a resident of Texas; and A. S., who lives in Salt Lake City.

James M. Belcher, who was a lad of nine years when he accompanied his mother to Missouri, was given the advantages of such an education as was afforded in the district schools of that period. In common with all youths of the pioneer period he matured early, and while still in his boyhood could do the work of a man in the fields. He assisted his father with the operation of the homestead until the latter's death, following which he engaged in agricultural pursuits for himself, cultivating that portion of the farm belonging to him. At the end of seven years he decided to go to the northwest, following a strong desire to try life in a new country, as had his father before him, so in 1850 together with his wife and family he joined an emigrant train and started across the prairies to Oregon. It is hardly possible for the present generation to appreciate the courage and fortitude it required for those brave men and women, who formed the advance guard of civilization, to undertake this journey. It took them five months to cross the plains and during that time they encountered the usual perils and hardships endured by practically all of the early settlers, and were compelled to leave some of their party in unmarked graves on the western prairies. Upon their arrival in Yamhill county, Mr. Belcher filed on a donation claim of six hundred and forty acres that he still owns. He erected thereon a crude cabin with a clapboard roof, while the hard, firmly packed soil of the prairies served for a floor and the door was provided with a string latch. During the succeeding fourteen years he applied himself energetically to bringing his land under cultivation and making further improvements upon his claim. The life was hard and oftentimes most discouraging, but he and his wife possessed the courage and determination of purpose that characterized the pioneers of this section and turned their defeats into opportunities, profiting by each experience. In 1864, Mr. Belcher removed to Lafayette and went into the mercantile business, continuing to be connected with the commercial activities of that town for twelve years.

In Missouri on the 15th of February, 1844, Mr. Belcher was united in marriage to Miss Margaret Chrisman, who was born in Lee county, Virginia, on the 21st of October, 1826, and is a daughter of Walker and Ada Chrisman. The parents were likewise natives of Virginia, whence they removed to Missouri in 1835. They, too, started across the plains in 1850, being members of the same party as their daughter and son-in-law, but when they were crossing the plains the mother passed away. The father came on to Yamhill county, where he resided for some years and then went to California. After remaining there a short time he returned to this county, and here he died in 1877. Mr. and Mrs. Chrisman had eleven children, all of whom are now deceased with the exception of three. Seven children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Belcher, but only two are living: C. T., who is a resident of Portland; and Belle, who is living at home with her parents.

Mr. Belcher was formerly a member of the Odd Fellows fraternity and in politics he has always been a democrat, and during his early years he held various minor offices in his district. He is one of the widely known men of the county and can relate many interesting reminiscences of the pioneer period and of the old settlers who have long since passed away. During the long period of his residence here he has witnessed the marvelous development that has followed the advent of the railroad and the introduction of the conveniences of modern civilization. The forests and prairies have been transformed into beautiful farms and orchards, while Indian villages have given way to thriving towns and cities. Not only has he witnessed all of these changes, but it is men such as he who have made possible this development, their enterprise, fortitude and determination of spirit providing the sustaining force that carried forward the movement of progress.

MARION F. DAVIS, the present popular and efficient postmaster of Union, is one of the best known residents of that section of the Grande Ronde valley, having for many years been closely identified with business, political and fraternal interests in his locality. For more than thirty-six years he has made his home in Union county and during that period he has gained for himself a position of prominence among his fellow citizens.

He was born in Fond du Lac county, Wisconsin, on the 26th of September, 1864, a son of Wilber F. and Francelia L. (Bramon) Davis, natives of Ohio and New York respectively. His maternal grandfather was Albert H. Bramon, a native of Massachusetts, while his paternal grandfather was Gardner Davis.

The paternal grandmother, who in her maidenhood was Prudence Markham, was born in 1792 and passed away at Union, Oregon, after having reached the very old age of ninety-three years. Either her father or her uncle, William Markham, served in the Revolutionary war. At an early age Wilber F. Davis removed to Genesee county, New York, where he resided for several years, after which he went to Fond du Lac county, Wisconsin, there continuing until 1862, when he went to Colorado and a portion of that and the following year was spent in mining. The remainder of his time was devoted to hunting, disposing of his product at the Denver market. On this trip he was accompanied by William Frazier, also from Wisconsin, who later went to Iowa, remaining in that state for a couple of years and then crossing the plains to California, where he lived for about three years. At the end of that time he came to Oregon, locating in the Grande Ronde valley, where he continued until his death in 1900. It was through his influence that Wilber F. Davis was induced to come to Oregon, arriving in the Grande Ronde valley in 1874. He purchased property at Union, whereon he built a house, and then returned to Wisconsin for his family, which he brought to Oregon in 1876, being accompanied on his trips west by his brother Jarvis E. Davis. The family was established in the home at Union which had been prepared for them and in that city Wilber F. Davis followed his trade as a carpenter for a time, later purchasing a sawmill, and then removed it to the mining camp of Cornucopia, which he conducted until 1885. There he became interested in mining, and later was identified with the Last Chance mine, where he erected a mill, investing his entire capital in the enterprise. In the following spring, however, his mill was carried away by a great snowslide, and later he started another mill, but lack of funds compelled him to abandon that project and he returned to Union, where he was variously engaged until his death, which occurred on the 10th of August, 1910. He had become very well known during his residence in the Grande Ronde valley and was very popular among his fellow citizens. During the Indian troubles in the years 1877 and 1878, he was one of the volunteers under Captain Creighton, who, while performing patrol duty found the bodies of Coggan, Smith and several other freighters who had been killed by the red men. He also served as councilman and mayor of Union for several terms. He survived his wife, Francelia L. Davis, for two years, her death occurring on the 19th of June, 1908, when she was sixty-three years of age. In their family were three children, of whom the subject of this review is the eldest. The others were Emma May, who passed away in 1878 at the age of nine years; and Wilber B., now residing in Chicago, Illinois.

Marion F. Davis was a lad of twelve years when the family home was established in Oregon and his education, which had been begun in the schools of Wisconsin, was continued in Union, where he pursued a high-school course. After the completion of his public-school course he entered the University of Oregon, from which he was graduated in 1885, and with the broad general information thus acquired he returned to Union well equipped to enter upon an independent career. He was appointed deputy United States marshal and also served as city recorder for one year, after which he acted as deputy sheriff for some time. He then retired from public life for a time and in partnership with his cousin L. J. Davis took control of The Republican, which paper they continued to conduct for twelve years. At the expiration of that period the cousin took up the practice of law and Marion F. Davis assumed the duties of postmaster of Union, to which position he was appointed on the 14th of February, 1899. He has since continued the incumbent in that office, the duties of which he is performing in a manner that has brought satisfaction to his constituents and reflected credit upon himself.

Mr. Davis was married on the 11th of October, 1893, to Miss Cora M. Compton, a native of Michigan. She is a woman who takes a deep interest in the different organizations of women and in 1900 was elected to the position of presiding officer in the state organization of the Pythian Sisters. In 1906 she was chosen to represent that order in Oregon in the Supreme Temple and is at present one of its supreme officers. Her father was a soldier in the Civil war, having served in the Twelfth Indiana Volunteer Infantry. From that fact she became identified with the work of the woman's auxiliary to the Grand Army of the Republic. In 1907 she filled the position of department president of Oregon, and in August, 1911, in the city of Rochester, New York, at the national convention she was elected national president of the Woman's Relief Corps.

Mr. Davis is also prominently known in fraternal circles of Oregon, being a past master of the blue lodge of Masons. He is also identified with the Knights of Pythias, having served in all of the chairs of the home lodge and having passed through all of the chairs in the grand lodge of Oregon. He acted as grand chancellor of the state from October, 1905, until May, 1907, and at the session of the grand lodge held in June, 1911, was elected supreme representative to the Supreme Lodge for a term of four years. Thus in the various interests that go to make up community life in Union he has taken a prominent part, his identification with business, political and fraternal matters having brought him to a foremost place among the best known and most representative citizens of his section, no history of Union county being complete without reference to his record.

M. C. DAVIS is engaged in the real-estate business in Portland, dealing in timber and farm lands. He owns his own property and handles it exclusively, and in the conduct of the business his sound judgment and keen discrimination are manifest in the success which has crowned his labors. He came to the Pacific coast from the middle west, for he is a native of Iowa, born in 1865. His parents, Joseph and America (Hood) Davis, had a family of eleven children, of whom M. C. Davis is the youngest. Of this number three sons and four daughters are yet living as follows: Caroline, now the wife of F. M. Boxley, of Iowa; Arthur, who is living in Portland; Elias, of Iowa; Catherine, the wife of Edward Solomon, of North Dakota; Permelia, the wife of William Brassfield, of South Dakota; Emeline, the wife of William Hanson, of Iowa; and M. C., of this review.

In his native state M. C. Davis was reared and early became familiar with farm work through the assistance which he rendered his father in the cultivation of the fields. When nineteen years of age he rented the old homestead, for his father was then well advanced in years and desired to retire from active life. For two years thereafter M. C. Davis carried on the work of the farm and prospered in his efforts. He then started for the Pacific coast, having with him about six hundred dollars in money, which was the result of his two years' work as an agriculturist. He made his way to Seattle and there worked at the plasterer's trade for a time but afterward returned to Iowa and entered the high school, feeling the lack of education. He afterward pursued a three years' college course, and thus equipped by liberal intellectual training, again came to the northwest, feeling now that he was prepared to win success. Portland was his destination and here he set up a household of his own, being married in January, 1893, to Miss Frances H. Borders, of this city, a daughter of C. W. Borders, the founder of the Pacific Pottery, which was the first successful enterprise of this character established on the Pacific coast. In her father's family were seven children, of whom four are yet living, Mrs. Davis being the eldest. The others are: John W., a practicing dentist of Portland, Oregon; H. P., who is also a dentist of this city; and Charles W., who is a real-estate dealer and manager for the Empire Investment Company of Portland. The marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Davis has been blessed with six children: Ora May, who was born in 1895 and pursued her education in the schools of Salem and of Portland, Oregon, and is now preparing herself for the teaching of English literature; Elwood Percy, who was born in 1897; Margery Fern, born in 1900; Arthur Lloyd, born in 1902; Harold Webster, in 1905; and Donald Forest, in 1907. All of the children are yet pursuing their education.

Mr. and Mrs. Davis began their domestic life in a rented cottage, at which time sixty dollars constituted his capital. Moreover, the year was that of a widespread financial panic—1893. However, he was resolute in his efforts to obtain work and secured a position in a crockery store where he was paid a salary of two dollars per day. Later he was promoted to the position of foreman at two dollars and a quarter per day, and worked there for two years. He and his wife lived very economically, so that he saved his money and was enabled to make his first purchase of property, becoming owner of a lot in North Portland, on which he built a home in 1895. After occupying a position with the first firm in Portland for six years he began working in a planing mill at a salary of sixty-five dollars per month, which was the largest amount he had received up to that day. He was thus employed for some time. In addition to his business duties he took an active interest in public and political affairs and was nominated by his party for the office of state legislator but was defeated by a very small majority. He then went to Astoria, Oregon, where he became chief engineer for the Tong Point Lumber Company at a salary of one hundred and twenty dollars per month. There he continued until the spring of 1906, when he started for Alaska with one hundred cases of eggs and a complete outfit and equipment with which to engage in merchandising. His father-in-law was to have been associated with him in this venture but died in camp on the way and Mr. Davis had a very hard trip but finally landed at Fairbanks. However, his business ventures in the north were not successful and he returned to Portland, where he opened a real-estate office that he is still conducting. He platted and sold the Wiberg Heights addition to Portland and has handled other city property but now deals largely in timber and farm lands. He is practically dealing in none but his own property, which he handles exclusively. He also owns several farms in addition to timber land of considerable acreage. He has recently purchased an improved business lot, for which he paid forty thousand dollars. This indicates something of the extent and magnitude of his operations and establishes his place as one of the foremost real-estate dealers of the city.

Mr. Davis gives his political allegiance to the democratic party and his religious faith is that of the Methodist Episcopal church. He belongs to the Woodmen of the World and by reason of his activity along these lines and in business connections he has become widely known, while the sterling traits of his manhood and citizenship have gained for him the unqualified regard and confidence of those with whom he has come in contact.

JUDGE WILLIAM CANNON HUBBARD.

For four years Judge William Cannon Hubbard served on the bench of the county court of Marion county, and prior to that time he had proven his worth as a citizen in other public offices. He had also given practical demonstration of his business ability along agricultural lines and is still the owner of valuable farming property although in recent years he has disposed of much of his land. He was born in Pike county, Illinois, November 8, 1836, his parents being Charles and Margaret (Cannon) Hubbard. The father was a native of Kentucky and the mother of Missouri, in which state they were married. Charles Hubbard had been previously married and by the first union there were two children. Soon after he wedded Margaret Cannon he removed to Illinois, where he resided until 1847, when he crossed the plains with ox teams to Oregon, making his first location on Clear creek, about seven miles from Oregon City. A year later, or in the fall of 1848, he took up his abode on French prairie, in Marion county, where he acquired a donation claim of six hundred and forty acres. Upon that property he resided to the time of his death, which occurred in 1884, when he was eighty-four years of age. He had placed many substantial improvements upon his land and had converted the wild prairie into rich and productive fields. Hubbard Place, on the Southern Pacific railroad, is built upon that claim and was named in his honor. He had for thirty-seven years been a resident of Oregon at the time of his demise, and had taken an active and helpful part in the work of pioneer development and improvement as well as in the labors that brought about the later day prosperity. His wife passed away in February, 1880, at the age of sixty-nine years.

Judge Hubbard spent his youthful days with his parents and acquired his education in the public schools. In the winter of 1854 he began earning his own living, becoming a partner in an enterprise to furnish saw logs for a mill near his home. His time was thus occupied from November until the following June. In 1855 he left home and went to the mines at Yreka, California, where he was engaged in mining until July, 1857, when he returned to Marion county. He then took up the occupation of farming, in which he continued until 1892, winning a substantial measure of success along that line. His methods were practical and progressive and his labors resulted in the development of productive fields and the harvesting of large crops. At one time he owned six hundred acres of land in the Mission bottoms, in Marion county, but since his removal to Salem has disposed of portions of this tract from time to time until his holdings now include about two hundred and forty-five acres. He was first called to office in 1882, when elected county commissioner of Marion county. His record in that position received public indorsement in a reelection in 1884, so that he remained in the office until 1886, or for two complete terms. In 1892 he was elected county judge and removed to Salem, where he has since resided. He served upon the bench for four years but since that time has lived retired.

In 1859, Judge Hubbard was married to Miss Helen M. Cooley, of Marion county, a daughter of Christopher Cooley, who came to Oregon from Clay county, Missouri, in 1845. Unto Judge and Mrs. Hubbard have been born seven children of whom four are yet living: Walter S., engaged in the drayage business at Seattle, Washington; Orville B., mining in Alaska; Ira W., a farmer of Idaho; and Dolly H., the wife of Joseph Graber, a plumber of Salem, Oregon.

Politically Judge Hubbard has ever been a stalwart republican since age conferred upon him the right of franchise and at all times is conversant with the vital questions and issues of the day. He is well known in the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, holding membership with Chemeketa Lodge, No. 1.

MR. AND MRS. W. C. HUBBARD

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASTOR LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS

the first lodge organized in the state. He has passed through all the chairs in the local organization and enjoys the high regard of his brethren of the fraternity in an unusual degree. Few citizens of Oregon can boast of a longer residence in this state than Judge Hubbard, who for sixty-five years has lived within its borders. Oregon was then a territory and was indeed a frontier district, it requiring months to reach the older and more thickly settled portions of the country—months of travel across the plains or by the water route around Cape Horn or across the Isthmus of Panama. The early settlers endured many hardships and privations and they also faced the danger of Indian attack, but with courageous spirit they met the conditions that existed and in the course of years have gained the reward of their labors and their sacrifices, for the lands which they entered in early days have become valuable with the rapid settlement of the state and the improvements that have been introduced. Judge Hubbard has ever been an interested witness of the changes that have occurred since he first came to the northwest and has borne his part in the work of early progress in Marion county.

ALBERT J. GOODBROD is one of the best known among the early pioneers of this state, in which he has spent the major portion of his long and active life. He is indeed one of the battle-shattered veterans of the Civil war and notwithstanding the hardships of his early pioneer days and the all but death-dealing experiences through which he passed as a defender of the stars and stripes, he is still an active member of society and one of the successful agriculturists and fruit-growers of Union county.

He was born at Wittenberg, Germany, February 27, 1841, and is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Goodbrod, both of whom were natives of that country. Thomas Goodbrod with his wife and two children emigrated to America in 1852 and on reaching the new world he established his home at Newark, New Jersey, where he maintained his residence for many years and where five of the nine children born to himself and wife were called in one year from the fireside of their parents' home to the land beyond, the cause of their death having been the result of an acute and malignant attack of measles.

Albert J. Goodbrod was reared in his father's home and received his early education in the public schools. After coming to America he became an apprenticed baker and continued in that work until he had acquired a complete knowledge and understanding of the trade, and for some years gave his entire time to the pursuit of that vocation. At the age of seventeen years he heard the cry of his adopted country calling for volunteers in defense of her flag and on the 3d day of January, 1862, he enlisted in Company B, Eleventh New York Volunteer Cavalry, which later in army parlance was nicknamed "Scott's Nine Hundred," with Colonel James P. Swine in command. He was mustered into the United States service in New York city and left at once with his regiment for Washington, D. C., where for a brief time only the personnel of the regiment was maintained. Some of its companies were commissioned to do duty in Maryland, others were distributed through various places where the army was in the field and some were retained in Washington. Company B, to which Mr. Goodbrod belonged, was first engaged at Muddy Branch and in various parts of Maryland, also doing patrol duty at Washington, D. C. It has the distinction of having at one time served as a bodyguard to President Lincoln. Later it was transferred to New Orleans and in June, 1863, Company B and Company L, of the old New York regiment, were sent to Virginia for the purpose of heading off a part of Lee's army. On that expedition they encountered the enemy at Fairfax Courthouse, June 27, 1863, and at once gave battle. Acting on the offensive, they assaulted by a desperate charge their well protected and half hidden foes, who immediately responded with true southern valor and fury and in vast and overwhelming numbers. The repulse of the Federal troops in that engagement was complete and Mr. Goodbrod was numbered among the many wounded and dead left upon the battlefield. In retreating with his command he was shot in the back, the bullet piercing his left lung and passing out through his shoulder, leaving that part of his body broken and shattered. His wound was too severe for further attempt to escape and he fell, a helpless German-American soldier boy, among his dead and wounded companions on the battlefield. There he lay for several days, suffering and struggling against the violence of his wound for an added lease of life, as the Confederate troops passed over the ground so recently covered by the enthusiastically fighting Federal forces but now a plain of Confederate victory covered with the spoil of Union sacrifice. Mr. Goodbrod was only disturbed by having his weapons of warfare removed from his person and he was left as one dead among the many others of his silent comrades. In that condition he was later found by a squad detailed from his own command to bury their dead and by them rescued and later removed to a hospital in Washington, D. C., where he remained for several months. In the engagement above described those of his command who did not escape or die upon the field were taken prisoners by the Confederate troops. Mr. Goodbrod eventually recovered from his wounds and completed the term of his enlistment in doing duty in the ranks at Washington, D. C. On the 30th day of September, 1865, he was honorably discharged and mustered out of service at Memphis, Tennessee, but March 1, 1866, he reenlisted in Company D of the First United States Cavalry and with his command was sent to San Francisco, doing detached duty. His company was sent to Camp Lyons where its purpose was in part to release Company B of the First Oregon

Volunteer Cavalry, and on the way to that camp they encountered a band of three wagons and sixty-seven Chinamen who were moving across the country to Silver City, Idaho. The Chinamen were allowed to travel and camp with the company until they reached Dry creek, on the Winnemucca stage route, and at that place Major Hunt, who was in command of Company D of the First United States Cavalry, ordered the Chinamen to separate from the shelter of his troops on account of insufficient water with which to supply so large a company moving in the same direction. He accordingly directed the Chinamen to move on to the Owyhee river by a new route, the distance to water for their party being only seven miles away, promising them at the same time to rejoin them on the day following. Company B started on its march early in the morning following the departure of the Chinamen and on entering the canyon they found a dead Chinamen who had been recently killed by Indians, having been shot to death with arrows from the red men's bows. Major Hunt immediately detailed a portion of his command to make a careful and vigorous search in and about the environs of the canyon and the scouting party very soon came upon the battlefield, where they found sixty-five dead Chinamen, only one among their original number having escaped with his life, the entire party having been attacked by the savage Piute Indians and in their defenseless condition had become the helpless victims of the native wild Indian of the west. Two of the bodies of the women had been horribly mutilated but the men had been spared the degredation of being scalped, which is the final tribute of the savage red man to his pale-faced brother. This refusal of the Indian to take the Chinamen's scalp was no doubt occasioned by the Chinaman's quene, which in some respects simulates the custom of the Indian's manner of wearing the hair. The massacre as above recited occurred on May 6, 1866. Mr. Goodbrod remained in the service under the command of the famous Indian fighter, General Crook, during nearly the entire time of his second enlistment and with his command took part in all the engagements under that famous general in suppressing the Indian at that time in the inter-mountain territory. On March 1, 1869, he was honorably discharged from duty and mustered out of service at Camp Lyons, after which he settled in eastern Oregon, spending, however, some time in Pendleton, Walla Walla and Baker City.

In 1876 Mr. Goodbrod located in Union, where he was engaged for five continuous years in the operation of the Centennial Hotel. He later sold this property and located his present home on a most picturesque spot at the south end of the Grande Ronde valley, where he is now engaged in the cultivation and growing of apples and small marketable fruit. In this business he has been very successful and in addition to the other improvements upon his place he has built a perfectly equipped cider mill and is engaged in the manufacture of cider, a portion of his product being converted into high grade vinegar.

Mr. Goodbrod was united in marriage December 10, 1890, to Louisa Shoemaker, of Oregon, and to them three children have been born: George A. and Adrian, who are students in the high school at Union; and Miriam E., who died in infancy.

Mr. Goodbrod has served for three terms as city marshal and as councilman for two terms. He has, however, avoided as far as is consistent with good citizenship political positions of any kind. He is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and in that fraternal society has maintained an uninterrupted membership for the past twenty-eight years. He is also a member of the Improved Order of Red Men and Preston Post, No. 18, G. A. R., and has passed through all of the chairs in the post and state, serving in 1900 as department commander of this state. He has been twice a member of the council of administration and is a member of the National Encampment.

Mr. Goodbrod as a pioneer of this state, a veteran of the Civil war and a private citizen of Union county, has so lived among his associates and friends as to be understood and recognized by them to be one of the most honored, respected and useful citizens of Oregon. By virtue of his loyalty to the flag of his adopted country and his consistent interest in the nation's welfare he has for many years past been known in this portion of the state as General Goodbrod, a title which he honorably bears as an evidence of the high respect in which he is held by his generous countrymen and comrades of the Grand Army of the Republic. Though his years are now leading him into the sunset days of his earthly pilgrimage he is nevertheless deeply interested in every matter of public interest that concerns the welfare of his country and his state and he is always enthusiastically identified with every measure of a public character that seeks to improve the condition of the people with whose business life and society he has for such a long period been closely identified.

GEORGE M. HAWLEY, of Cottage Grove, is a retired farmer and stock-dealer who has been active in political matters, in which he still takes an active interest. He was born in Lane county, Oregon, September 9, 1857, a son of Ira and Elvira (Riley) Hawley, the father a native of New York and the mother of Indiana. In their family were eight children, namely: Nirom, of Moscow, Idaho; Lyman, deceased; William, of Lorane, Oregon; Annie, the deceased wife of Frank Stockwell, of Idaho; George M., of this review; Robert D., of Creswell, Oregon; James H., of Divide, Oregon; and Alice, deceased. The youngest son is now making his home on the old donation land claim which was taken up by his father after he crossed the plains in 1852. The father had previously made the journey to California in 1849, remaining in that state until the following year, when he returned to Illinois by way of Cape Horn, and in 1852 again came west, taking up a claim at Divide, Oregon.

George M. Hawley remained under the parental roof until he attained his majority, and when he left home his father gave him three hundred and seventy-five acres of land near Creswell, Oregon. He lived on that land until in 1911, when he sold out and removed to Cottage Grove, retiring from business. For five years during his early career he followed the business of buying and selling stock, but he later disposed of that business and gave his entire attention to diversified farming, which he continued until the time of his retirement.

Mr. Hawley was married twice and by his first union has two children: Oscar, who is married and resides at The Dalles; and George Francis, also making his home at that place. Mr. Hawley's second union occurred March 31, 1894, when he wedded Miss Minnie Ozment, a daughter of J. S. and Elizabeth (Dilon) Ozment, both natives of North Carolina. The Ozment family crossed the plains in 1869 from the latter state and settled in Lane county, Oregon, where Mrs. Hawley was born and where her marriage took place. In his political faith Mr. Hawley is a republican and has held numerous local offices. He was justice of the peace at Creswell for two terms, was road supervisor for twelve years, has been school clerk and served on the school board for several years, and is now a candidate for county commissioner. In his fraternal relations he is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Woodmen of the World. In his religious views he is liberal and attends different churches. Mr. Hawley, who is one of the early sons of Lane county, has been an active and valuable man in the development of the resources of his community and in later years particularly has assisted in no small way in the public projects of the county. Following for many years agricultural pursuits on a large scale, he labored hard and faithfully and is well entitled to the rest from hard work which he is now enjoying. He is widely known throughout the entire community and is greatly respected by all who are acquainted with him.

JOSEPH W. HARMON, who has for several years past been engaged in the general mercantile business at Selma, Josephine county, is a pioneer of this state, having come here when a child with his parents in 1873. He was born in Missouri in 1869, a son of Tilmon G. and Lydia (Hathaway) Harmon. He removed with his parents across the plains to California in 1873, where they resided for a time, afterward removing to Oregon. He is a brother of the Hon. Carlton E. Harmon, who is mentioned on another page of this work. He received a good common-school education and afterward taught school for one term. He remained at home until he attained the age of twenty-three years and then engaged in agricultural pursuits in Josephine county, where he purchased a ranch of one hundred and sixty acres and made his home upon that place for many years, improving it and bringing it under a high state of cultivation. He afterward sold his homestead and removed to Selma where he purchased a general mercantile store which he has conducted for four years. He is doing a very satisfactory business and his dealings are all characterized by strict integrity and fair dealing.

Mr. Harmon was married in 1897 to Miss Eva Martin, a native of Iowa, and to their union have been born three children, all of whom are living at home, Celeste, Ray and Tilmon. The wife and mother died March 6, 1905, and was buried in the Deer Creek Valley cemetery. After her death the children made their home with Mr. Harmon's parents until the fall of 1911 and since that time have been living with him in Selma. Mr. Harmon is a well known and popular citizen of Selma, where he is regarded as an efficient business man and a valued member of society. He exerts himself to acceptably serve his customers and as he possesses wise discrimination in the solution of business problems and conducts his store on a Golden-Rule basis he is enjoying a very satisfactory trade. He is one of the valued citizens of the town and is popular in all circles in which he moves.

CHARLES S. FITZPATRICK, who passed away at his home in Lostine on March 11, 1905, was born at McMinnville, Oregon, February 13, 1854. His parents were James and Margaret (Veck) Fitzpatrick, who came to Oregon from Illinois in 1853, crossing the plains with ox teams. They located in McMinnville, Yamhill county, where they remained but a short time, when they removed to California, where they lived for eighteen years. They then returned to Oregon and located in Wasco county, residing there about eighteen years when the mother passed away. The father later came to Wallowa county and took up his home with his son, Charles S., of this review. He was the father of eight children and outlived them all, passing away in February, 1906, in his eighty-sixth year.

Charles S. Fitzpatrick was reared under the parental roof, acquiring his education in the public schools. After attaining manhood, he located on a ranch which he had taken up as a homestead in Wasco county, and here he engaged in raising horses, cattle and sheep, some of which he had acquired before he was twenty years of age, having started in the stock raising business for himself when he was a mere boy, on his father's farm. He resided in Wasco county until 1901 when he sold his ranch and came to Wallowa county, where he purchased a farm three miles north of Lostine. He lived on that farm until 1903 when he moved into Lostine. Some years prior to that time he had established himself in the mercantile business in Lostine, taking in with him his son, Frederick W., as partner and manager, the firm being known as Fitz patrick & Son. After his removal to Lostine he gave his entire attention to his business interests until the time of his death. At that time he owned about fifteen hundred acres of land on the east fork of the Wallowa river, about five miles east of Lostine. His wife and two sons, Frederick and James, now own this land.

In 1874, Charles S. Fitzpatrick was wedded to Miss Margaret McCubbin. Of this marriage five children were born: Grace, the wife of S. P. Crow; Alfred, of Salem, Oregon; William, who died in infancy; and James and Frederick W. Mr. Fitzpatrick was extremely successful in the financial world and his wife as a result thereof now has a goodly competence. He was a democrat in politics, but never sought nor desired public office, preferring to give all his time to his business interests. He was a member of the Christian church and his wife and children also adhere to that denomination. He was one of the most successful stockmen and farmers of Wallowa county and on entering the mercantile business was extremely prosperous in that line. He was one of the most esteemed men of this county and a highly honored citizen of Lostine. When he passed away his death was deeply deplored by a wide circle of friends and acquaintances, and his loss was most keenly felt in his home, for he was always devoted to the interests of his family.

ALLEN P. SNYDER has long been identified with the agricultural development of Grant county, where he owns a highly cultivated and valuable ranch of four hundred and forty acres. His birth occurred in Westmoreland county, Pennsylvania, on the 24th of January, 1844, his parents being John and Hannah (Storor) Snyder, the father a native of the Keystone state and the mother of Ohio. The first member of the American branch of the Snyder family was the great-grandfather of our subject, Nicholas Snyder, a native of Germany. He located in Pennsylvania, where he engaged in farming, and there his son Nicholas was born and reared and upon attaining manhood adopted the vocation of agriculture. He always made his home in the state of his birth, where he passed away at the venerable age of ninety-eight years. In 1852, John Snyder, a son of Nicholas Snyder, Jr., removed to Missouri with his wife and family, locating eighteen miles from Alexandria. He was also a farmer, and lived on his homestead in Missouri until 1865, when he removed to a farm seven miles north of Springfield, Missouri, and there passed away when he was sixty-five years of age. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Snyder numbered fourteen children, twelve of whom lived to attain maturity, our subject being the seventh in order of birth.

Allen P. Snyder, who was a lad of eight years when he accompanied his family on their removal from Pennsylvania, began his education in the schools of his native state and completed it in Missouri. He remained at home until he was nineteen years of age, and then in common with the majority of youths he was seized with a desire to try his fortune in a new country and determined to go to California. He made the journey from his home to Omaha in company with his brother Nicholas and on their arrival in that city joined an emigrant train consisting of about eighty wagons. They were provided with a military escort of eighty men, and one of the emigrants, who had served in the war under General Bragg, organized the men and boys of their party into a company to serve under his command in case they had trouble with the Indians. Fortunately, however, they were not molested, making the entire journey without experiencing any unusual hardships or difficulties. They arrived in the Round Valley, Plumas county, California, early in September, and later in the autumn Mr. Snyder went to Virginia City, Nevada, where he worked in the mines for about a year. From there he returned to California, and for a time continued mining and prospecting but later engaged in ranching in Sonoma county, that state. He subsequently went to Idaho, where he worked for three months in the Poorman mine, teaming in the fall from Boise to Silver City and spending the winter of 1866 on the Payette river. At the expiration of that time he went to freighting, coming to Oregon in the spring of 1867 and following that occupation until 1871, when he located on his present ranch, one-half mile below Dayville in Grant county, which he had purchased the year previously. It is comprised of four hundred and forty acres, more than a hundred of which is located in the river bottom, and all is under irrigation. Mr. Snyder has worked tirelessly in his efforts to develop his place, and has been well rewarded for his efforts, as it is one of the most attractive and valuable properties in that section of the county. He has a comfortable residence, ample barns and sheds for the protection of his stock and grain, and an equipment that is in every way fully adequate to his needs. In connection with diversified farming he engages in raising horses and cattle, in which he has met with good success. His early experiences were very similar to those of the other pioneers and he suffered the loss of some horses and cattle at the time of the Indian outbreak in 1878. His family were not exposed to any danger, however, as he had previously provided for their safety by removing them to the Willamette valley, where they remained until the uprising was quelled. The Snyder ranch is very pleasantly located on the John Day river a half mile below Dayville, and is a most desirable place of residence.

On the 6th of December, 1876, Mr. Snyder was married to Miss Missouri Officer, who was born while her parents were crossing the plains on the 13th of August, 1845, at a place known as Ash Hollow, Wyoming. She is a daughter of James and Eveline (Cooley) Officer, the father a native of Tennessee and the mother of Kentucky. The paternal grandfather, Thomas Officer, was also a native of Tennessee, whence he removed with his family to Missouri, and there passed the remainder of his life. In 1845 James Officer started

A. P. SNYDER

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY

ASTOR, LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS

across the plains with his wife and family for Oregon. They made the journey with an ox team and were members of a party piloted by a Mr. Meek, a brother of Joseph Meek. He lost the trail, and the men deeply aroused by the possible dangers that confronted themselves and families threatened to mob him but he made his escape, leaving them to their fate. They passed through Harney county to The Dalles, and then went down the river, spending the winter in some cabins that had been used by former settlers. In the spring Mr. Officer continued his journey to Portland and purchased a donation claim twenty-five miles south of that city, where he passed the remainder of his life. It is interesting to know that their party was rescued and started on the right trail through Harney county under the guidance of a young girl, one of their members. Before starting west she had made a careful study of the geography of this section, paying particular attention to the streams and their source, and by means of this knowledge they finally reached The Dalles. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Officer numbered eleven children, Mrs. Snyder being the ninth in order of birth. The others are as follows: Martha A., deceased; Eli Casey, who is mentioned at greater length under the sketch of his son Floyd L.; Susan M., deceased; John E., also deceased; Robert V., whose history is also given elsewhere in this work; Francis M., Joseph Thomas, Nancy and Ellen, who are deceased; and David. To Mr. and Mrs. Snyder there have been born the following children: Jessie, the wife of E. A. Cummins, a farmer in John Day valley; Frankie, deceased; Della, the wife of Harlan Hayes of Canyon City, Oregon; Dora, the wife of Donald McClennan of the John Day valley; Ada, the wife of John Damon, a rancher of Grant county; and Alice May, the wife of Otis Mascall.

Mr. Snyder is one of the prosperous and highly esteemed ranchmen of the valley where he has resided for over forty years and has actively cooperated in promoting its progress and development. He is a man of well defined purposes, honorable motives and incorruptible integrity, as has been manifested in his business transactions, thus acquiring the enviable reputation of being thoroughly reliable and trustworthy in all of his dealings.

CHARLES SHERBONDY has for four years been engaged in the operation of a ranch of twenty-one acres located two miles north of Eugene on Irving road, and is now the owner of one of the most attractive places in that immediate vicinity. He was born in Ohio in 1843 and is a son of Levi and Elizabeth (Smith) Sherbondy, both natives of Pennsylvania, and the parents of five children, of whom our subject is the eldest. In order of birth the others are as follows: Homer and Esther, both of whom are deceased; Joseph and Thomas, who are living in Akron, Ohio.

The boyhood and youth of Charles Sherbondy were in every way similar to those of other youths of that period. He was reared at home and educated in the common schools, but in 1861, at the age of nineteen years, he left the parental roof and went to the front, serving through the entire period of the Civil war. He was under Generals Shields, McDowell, Logan, Sherman and Hooker, and participated in some of the notable and most closely contested battles of the Rebellion. When mustered out he located in Pennsylvania and prospected for oil and coal for a time, but subsequently returned to his native state, continuing to follow the same line of work. After his marriage he removed to Illinois and turned his attention to agricultural pursuits. Six years later he again started westward, Kansas being his destination on this occasion. He farmed there for eighteen months and in 1877 he and his wife decided to come to the northwest, so they joined an emigrant train containing forty-two wagons and started across the prairies on the long perilous journey. It was fraught with unusual danger at that time as the Indians in eastern Oregon were on the warpath, but the emigrants made the trip without encountering any particular difficulty, other than was experienced by all who made the journey across the plains during the pioneer days. They first settled at Junction City, where they purchased eighty acres of land which they cultivated for two years. At the expiration of that time, Mr. Sherbondy disposed of his tract and together with his family removed to the coast, locating in the vicinity of Florence. There were very few white settlers in that portion of the state at that time, the country being almost entirely inhabited by Indians, nevertheless, he purchased a hundred and sixty acres of land with the expectation of permanently making it his home. He placed a portion of his land under cultivation and in connection with his farming engaged in stock-raising. During a large portion of the time while living on the coast, Mr. Sherbondy engaged in boat building, which trade he had previously learned. In 1900, he disposed of all of his interests there and removed to Lane county, buying forty acres of land near Eugene. He cultivated this with very good success for four years, but at the end of that time disposed of his holding and withdrawing from active work retired to Eugene. As he is an energetic, enterprising man and had always led an active life, this manner of living ultimately became unendurable and in 1905, he bought his present ranch and resumed his agricultural pursuits. During the period of his ownership he has wrought quite extensive improvements in his place thus greatly enhancing the appearance and value of the property.

For his wife and helpmate, Mr. Sherbondy chose Miss Martha Forrer, a native of the state of Pennsylvania and the second in order of birth of the twelve children born to John and Mary (Meek) Forrer, likewise natives of the Keystone state. The other members of the family are as follows: Katherine, the widow of Jacob Kurtz, of Ohio; Mary, the wife of John Martin; Susan, who married Christian Orr; Christiann, the widow of David Zook; Elizabeth, the wife of Daniel Burneman; Frances, who married David Bear; Arvilla and Fannie, both of whom are deceased; one who died in infancy; George; and Sadie, the wife of Mr. Demmick. All of the family with the exception of Mrs. Sherbondy reside in Ohio. The marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Sherbondy was celebrated on the 13th of August, 1868, and in the following September they moved to Illinois. They have no children of their own but adopted a son, William, at the age of fifteen months. He was born on the 17th of April, 1875, and came to Oregon with Mr. and Mrs. Sherbondy, who gave him the advantages of a good common-school education. He was reared on the farm and in April, 1900, established a home of his own by his marriage to Miss Laura McAfee, and they have become the parents of four children, Hazle, Oscar, Claude and Clarence. He is the owner of a ranch near Gardiner, this state, and is meeting with very good success in its cultivation.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Sherbondy are members of the Christian church, and he is an honored member of the Grand Army of the Republic. He votes the republican ticket and has held the office of school director but has never been prominently identified with local governmental affairs, although he is a very public-spirited man and takes an active and helpful interest in promoting the development of the community.

J. B. KOOCH, who for twenty-six years has resided four miles south of Enterprise, where he engages in general farming, is one of the foremost ranchmen of the Wallowa valley. He is a native of Tennessee, his birth having occurred in Wayne county that state on the 27th of January, 1857, and is a son of David and Fannie (Collier) Kooch. The parents were born, reared and married in Tennessee and there the mother passed away in 1863. Seven years later the father with his family moved to Kansas, remaining there until 1875, when the lure of the west again called him and he crossed the plains to Oregon. The journey was made with wagons and horse teams and occupied several months. On the 10th of September, 1875, he arrived in the Grande Ronde valley, Union county, and remained there until 1877. In April of that year he removed with his family to the Wallowa valley, settling on Aldee slope, where he had previously homesteaded the land now owned by his son, J. B. Kooch. The improvement and cultivation of this land engaged his entire attention during the succeeding ten years, at the end of which time he sold his property to his son and removed to Enterprise. While residing in Kansas, David Kooch married Mrs. Ross, who thus became his second wife and who passed away in Enterprise in 1896. He thereafter made his home with his son, our subject, until his death in 1898. From his earliest youth he had manifested much independence of thought and had pronounced views on right and wrong, so despite the fact that he was the son of a strong southern sympathizer and had two brothers in the Confederate army, he enlisted in the Union army as a member of a Tennessee regiment and went to the front, where he remained for four years. He was republican in his political views and always conversant with the principles of the party but never sought public office. In matters of faith he adhered to the teachings of the Baptist church. A man of much strength of character and determination of purpose he was one of the highly esteemed pioneers and assisted to the best of his ability in promoting the development of the country. In both the maternal and paternal lines our subject is descended from old Tennessee families.

J. B. Kooch was a lad of six years when his mother passed away and his father was still at the front fighting for his country. As the schools had been disrupted by the unsettled conditions then prevailing in the south, his education was not commenced until he had attained the age of nine years, and was then pursued irregularly and for only a brief period as he early left home and went out to make his own way in the world. He first worked as a farm hand, but subsequently engaged in teaming, while later he clerked in a general store for eighteen months. After his marriage, however, he again turned his attention to agricultural pursuits, settling on Trout creek where he had previously preempted a claim. He energetically applied himself to the operation of his ranch until 1885 when he disposed of it and purchased his father's homestead, and here he has ever since resided. Mr. Kooch is a very capable agriculturist, whose progressive ideas and practical methods have brought him prosperity. He has always given his personal supervision to the tilling of his fields on which he plants such cereals as are best adapted to the soil. In connection with general farming he raises hogs and has met with very gratifying returns from both. As the years have passed he has made extensive improvements on his ranch, which is now in a high state of cultivation and fully equipped with such modern conveniences and appliances as will expedite the work and minimize the labor of its operation.

In 1882, Mr. Kooch was united in marriage to Miss Dora Basim of this county, and a native of Missouri, and they have become the parents of seven children: Della, the wife of Everett Stubblefield, of this county; Elmer, a ranchman of Baker county; Etha, who married Grover McClain, of Roberts, Idaho; Burl, who is engaged in farming in this county; and Lora, Mamie and Mildred, all of whom are at home.

The family worship in the Baptist church in which the parents hold membership. Mr. Kooch is a republican, and although he takes an active interest in all public affairs he, like his father, has never sought public office. A man of positive aim and definite purpose, he has always directed his undertakings with foresight and clear judgment and is known as one of the most substantial agriculturists and stockmen of Wallowa county.

The most salient factors in his prosperity have been his marked enterprise and integrity, which have won him the confidence and esteem of all with whom he has had dealings and the commendation of the community where he has resided for more than a quarter of a century and has many stanch and loyal friends.

FRANK KNOWLES is one of the successful and up-to-date merchants of the city of Florence. His birth occurred in New Hampshire in November, 1854, his parents being E. C. and Lucinda (Atwood) Knowles, who were born, reared and married in that state. In 1858 they removed to Minnesota and were residents of that state until 1881, when they removed to Oregon and settled at Mapleton in Lane county, where Mr. Knowles passed away in 1905. His widow is still living at the age of seventy-nine and maintains her residence at Florence. To Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Knowles were born five sons and three daughters, and of this family five are still living: John, now a resident of Jeffers, Minnesota; Albert, of Mapleton, Oregon; Frank, of this review; George O., of Cottage Grove, Oregon, and Mrs. Cora E. Witherson, the editor of The West. Jane, Ezekiel and Mary are deceased.

Frank Knowles was reared in his parents' home and educated in the common schools of the districts in which he lived. He remained under the parental roof until twenty-two years of age and at that time removed from Minnesota to California in the month of November, 1876, making the journey by rail, which at that time required the period of nine full days. The slow progress made by the train was occasioned by the imperfect construction of the railroad track, which at that early period was new and unsettled in its roadbed. On his arrival in the Golden state he settled first at Nord, and there spent one and a half years, after which he removed to Mapleton, Oregon, where he filed upon a homestead of one hundred and forty-two acres, upon which he established his home and continued to live for the following twenty-nine years. In 1907 he removed to Florence, where he engaged at once in the general mercantile business, to which he has since devoted his entire attention. He still owns his beautiful farm near Mapleton and is also the owner of the real estate and improvements connected with his mercantile establishment and in addition to these holdings he is the owner of several fine business lots in Florence and with his wife is joint owner of a valuable tract of commercial timber, consisting of two hundred and eighty acres near the city of Mapleton.

In 1877 Mr. Knowles was united in marriage to Miss Elizabeth Morton, who was born in Nova Scotia in 1856, her parents being Lemuel and Sarah (Foot) Morton, who were likewise natives of Nova Scotia and who spent the early years of their married life in their native land. In 1872 Mr. and Mrs. Morton removed to Minnesota, where they maintained their residence until Mrs. Morton's death, after which the father of Mrs. Knowles removed to Oregon, where he made his home with his son-in-law, Frank Knowles, until the time of his death, which occurred at sixty-seven years of age. To Mr. and Mrs. Morton six children were born, three of whom are still living: Charles, of Minnesota; Mrs. Elizabeth Knowles, and Mrs. Laura Workman, of Spokane, Washington. Caleb, Wilson and William are deceased. To Mr. and Mrs. Knowles five children have been born. Maud, the eldest, is deceased. Mabel is the wife of Joseph Simmons, of Deadwood, Oregon, who is in the employ of the State Fish Hatchery. Previous to his present position he was engaged in educational work as a public-school teacher. Grace has passed away. Rosa is the wife of William E. Wells, of Mapleton, Oregon, who is now retired. Ruth is attending college at Albany, Oregon.

Mr. Knowles is affiliated with the republican party but very liberal in the use of his franchise, giving the benefit of his suffrage to the men whom he believes best represent the vital and most pressing interests of the people. During his residence in Florence he has served as a member of the city council. He served as master of the Grange, at Mapleton, for more than a year, during the years 1903 and 1904. Frank Knowles is in every way one of the representative citizens of Lane county. He is highly esteemed as a business and educational interests of the and associates as one of the enterprising and influential citizens whose help is always to be relied upon in the advancement of any measure calculated to further develop the business and educational interests of the community in which he lives.

JOHN C. BECK is justly entitled to recognition as one of the enterprising and public-spirited citizens of Lane county, this state. He is a native of Denmark, his birth having occurred in that country in 1861, and is a son of Chris Peterson Beck and Inger Marie Johannessen, both of whom were natives of Denmark. In their family were seven children: John Peter, of Minnesota; Ida and Margaret, deceased; John C., the subject of our sketch; Peter Christian, Jens and Johannah Marie, all of whom are now deceased.

Mr. Beck began to earn wages at the early age of six years. At that period in his life he worked as a sheep herder during the summer season and lived with his father's family during the winter. In this employment he continued to be engaged until he was ten years of age. His inclinations, however, led him in the pursuit of knowledge and such was his ambition from early boyhood that notwithstanding the fact that he was constantly employed he still found time to devote himself to educational pursuits and by the time he had attained his eighteenth year he had sufficiently educated himself to qualify as teacher in the public schools of his native land. Much of his early education was acquired in the open fields of Denmark and supplemented by the sacrifice necessary to be made in attendance upon the night schools. At the age of eighteen he entered educational work and continued to be engaged as a teacher in the public schools for three years thereafter. He was then required by government law to enter the service of the army of Denmark and as a soldier of his native land he served in the ranks of her army for six months, at the end of which time his wedding occurred and he was immediately thereafter recalled to the colors, to which call he was required to immediately respond. During the time he was engaged in the army he did not at any time see active service in the field. On retiring from military duty he was engaged in farming on twenty acres of land which he had previously acquired. That property he eventually disposed of and emigrated to America. On reaching the shores of the new world he continued his journey from the eastern seaport westward, making his first stay in Minnesota, and in that state for one year engaged in educational work, teaching in one of the Minnesota public schools and later renting a farm which he operated for two years. In 1883 he purchased eighty acres of farm land upon which he established his home and continued to reside until 1889, at which time he disposed of that property and removed to Oregon, settling at Point Terrace on the Siuslaw river, where he purchased seventy-six acres and has since been engaged in farming and fishing. In addition to his interest in farming and in the conduct of his fishing business he has also cut and sold at a handsome profit a large amount of timber. To him belongs the credit of having laid out the town of Rockport, the site of which by good fortune is located upon his own farm. The Southern Pacific Railway survey crosses his place, taking a strip of one hundred feet in width, exactly paralleling one of his boundary lines. He has already disposed of twenty acres to good advantage and expects to realize the building up of a new and thriving inland town, which he has named Rockport, located within the surveyed limits of his own home on the Siuslaw river. Here he follows mixed farming, giving particular attention to the growing of fruit, berries and garden truck, and in addition to the cultivation of his farm he engages in salmon fishing and also has a dairy, in the conduct of which he is very successful, as well as in the breeding and raising of fine hogs for the market.

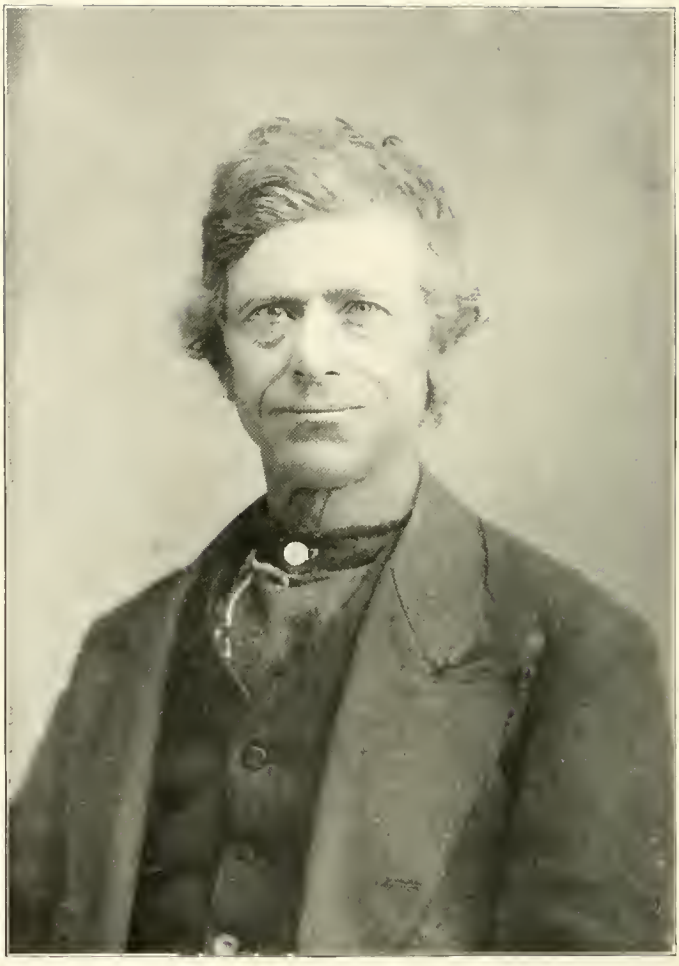
Mr. Beck has been twice married, his first wife being Anna Magdalena Peterson, a daughter of Peter Troelsen, of Denmark, and to this union three children were born: Mattie Catherine, the wife of Bruce David, a sawmill operator of Point Terrace, by whom she has four children, Edwin, Leonard, Jennie and Myrtle; Chris, a farmer of Point Terrace, who is married to Irma Neely and they have one boy, Willie; and Mary, deceased. The mother of these children closed her earthly pilgrimage in Denmark, her native land, in 1888, and in the state of Minnesota, in 1889, Mr. Beck was united in wedlock to Miss Johanna Marie Johannasen, a daughter of Laust and Enger Marie Johannasen, in whose family were ten children: Jens and Jens Christian, both of Denmark; Johanna Marie, now Mrs. Beck; and Johannah Catherine, Maren, Lausine M., Hans, Christian, Ludvikka and Nels, all of Denmark. To Mr. and Mrs. Beck seven children have been born: Laust Christian, deceased; Anton Marius, an engineer of Point Terrace; Anton Marinus, deceased; Lausine Marie, who is a pupil in the public schools; Johannah Catherine, who is also attending the public schools; Johnnie, at home; and Merrill, deceased. In 1890 they also adopted a six-year-old nephew of Mr. Beck, M. C. Beck, who carries their name. He proved a great helper to his new parents during their hard struggles and remained with them until he was married to Miss Mary Fredericksen. They have two children, Clifton and Myrtle, and he has built his home on a piece of land acquired from Mr. Beck's home place.

Mr. Beck politically is affiliated with the socialist party, following the standard of that organization in its national and state campaigns. He has never been a candidate for public office, preferring to give his attention to his private interests. In his religious life he is associated with the Evangelical Lutheran church, of which he is a member. John C. Beck is regarded by his friends and associates as one of the enterprising and successful men of Lane county and is identified with every enterprise intended to advance the material, educational and religious welfare of the people among whom he has established his home, where he is now engaged in a successful effort to place a new town on the map of Oregon, which later should increase substantially the value of the real-estate holdings of all the people within its immediate vicinity.

ALMORAN HILL, now deceased, who was one of the early settlers of Oregon and gained recognition as a successful farmer and a man of unimpeachable character, was for sixty-six years a resident of Washington county. He was born in Sheridan county, Missouri, December 26, 1822, a son of Wright and Frances (Christian) Hill. The father was born in Tennessee and became a settler of Missouri, continuing there during the remainder of his life.

Mr. Hill of this sketch grew to manhood in his native state. At the age of nineteen he was married and in 1843 started with his wife across the plains with an ox team and wagon. They joined with others who collected on the Missouri river the same spring. The party was the largest that had undertaken the journey on the overland trail up to that time. There were six hundred wagons in the caravan and in accordance with the custom of those days, officers were chosen before leaving the river, Jesse Applegate being selected as captain. It required six months lacking two days to accomplish the journey, the start being made May 12 from St. Clair, Missouri. Fortunately the Indians

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASTOR, LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS



ALMORAN HILL

MRS. SARAH J. HILL

THE
PUBLIC

were not upon the war path at this time and they were free from many disasters which overcame other parties in the years following. A little boy was run over and killed on the route and several persons were drowned in the Columbia river near The Dalles, but with these exceptions no fatalities occurred. They left their wagons and oxen at Fort Walla Walla until the following spring and came down the Columbia river in a batteau and three skiffs. Peter H. Burnett, who subsequently was elected the first governor of California, was captain during this voyage. The travelers arrived at Fort Vancouver November 10 and were most hospitably received by Dr. McLoughlin, who extended to them every assistance within his power. Mr. Hill and his wife spent a week at Oregon City, where one of the brothers of Mrs. Hill had settled, and then came to Washington county. On February 20, 1845, Mr. Hill took up a donation land claim upon which he established his home. He built a little log cabin with a clapboard roof, in which he and his family lived for eighteen months. There was no floor to the cabin and the latch-string always hung on the outside of the door. The family then moved into another log house with one room and continued there until 1860 when a more commodious log residence was erected. This house still stands as it was originally built and is one of the interesting historic structures of this region. About sixty acres of land was cleared at the time the claim was taken up, the rest being thickly set in timber. Mr. Hill applied himself with great diligence in the establishment of a comfortable home and also cleared the land, finally developing the farm into one of the productive properties of the neighborhood.

On July 4, 1841, Mr. Hill was married on the Big Sock river, in Missouri, to Miss Sarah Jane Reed, who was born at Indianapolis, Indiana, July 26, 1823. She is a daughter of Joseph C. and Hannah Joan (Clemens) Reed. The father was born in Connecticut and became one of the pioneers of the middle west. In his family were twelve children, all of whom grew to maturity except one. Of the children of Mr. and Mrs. Hill ten attained maturity. The eldest child died in infancy in Missouri. Diantha was born when her mother was on her way to Oregon and became the wife of Thomas Jenkins. She died in February, 1911. A son William went to Alaska and has not been heard from for six years past. It is, therefore, believed that he is dead. The other children were born on the home place in Washington county. Francis Marion was married and is now a widower with four children who make their home with Mrs. Hill. Narcissa married James Allen and died leaving two children. Mary Ann was the wife of William Davis and is also deceased. She was the mother of one child. Margaret is the widow of William Campbell and has one child. Tryphena married Edward Money and they have four children. Hannah is the wife of Herbert Cowles and they are the parents of eight children. Sarah Jane, who married Edward Tate, is now a widow and has one daughter. Almoran Lincoln is married and has three children. Mrs. Hill has had thirty-seven grandchildren, ten great grandchildren and three great-great-grandchildren.

Mr. Hill died February 2, 1909, in the eighty-seventh year of his age. In politics he adhered to the republican party. He was for a number of years a member of the school board but held no other offices as he had no desire for political honors. He was a stanch friend of education and the Hill schoolhouse which stands on part of the original donation claim located by him was named in his honor. He was a member of the Christian church and he and his family attended the church many times at Hillsboro, fourteen miles from home. He enlisted in the Cayuse Indian war and went with other volunteers as far as The Dalles and there learned that the Indians had given up hostilities. He was a brave, straightforward, manly and generous-hearted man who nobly performed his part in opening the way for civilization. Mrs. Hill proved indeed a worthy helpmate to her husband and a kind and considerate mother to her children. She still resides in the old home which is endeared to her by countless associations. She is one of the esteemed pioneer women of Oregon. Her mind reverts to the time when there were no towns in Oregon apart from the fortified settlements on the large rivers and the country was occupied by Indians and wild animals. She was a witness of the great transformation represented by steamboats, railways and the automobile and in her declining years is receiving the loving care of her children and descendants even to the fourth generation. That she has earned the gratitude of those who appreciate the sacrifices of the pioneer women of the northwest is the opinion of all who know her.

ORLANDO THOMAS PROUT, who resides two and one-half miles northwest of Joseph, is one of the prominent ranchmen of Wallowa county. He was born in Branch county, Michigan, July 12, 1854, the son of Silas and Betsy (Prine) Prout, the father a native of the state of New York and the mother a native of Wales. The parents were married in Michigan and located in Branch county, that state, where the father followed the carpenter's trade in connection with his work as a farmer. At the opening of the Civil war he enlisted in the Fourth Michigan Cavalry and died in a hospital in Murfreesboro, Tennessee, in 1863. The mother passed away in Quincy, Michigan, in March, 1864.

Orlando T. Prout was reared at the home of his parents and acquired his education in the common schools of his native state. At the early age of sixteen he started out in life for himself and was engaged as a teamster in the lumber regions of Michigan. After working at teaming for a year he apprenticed himself to a stonecutter in Quincy, Michigan, but after one and one-half years he gave up this apprenticeship and went to Nebraska. Two years later he went to Colorado, locating in Golden, where he remained for about four years, being employed on a ranch and at railroad work. Subsequently he worked his way through to Oregon, consuming about a year or more on his journey westward. In 1882 he arrived in Wallowa county and located on his present ranch, which he took up as a homestead. Here he has since followed general farming and is now one of the good, substantial and well-to-do men of this county. He is president of the Joseph Warehouse Company and his interests have connected him with other prominent business relations.

In 1885 Mr. Prout was united in marriage with Miss Sarah C. Cole, a daughter of Wiley P. Cole, who came to Wallowa county from Nebraska in 1880. Mrs. Prout passed away in March, 1911, leaving eight children. They are: Jasper, who is a ranchman living on Pine creek, this county; Eva, who is the wife of Arthur Hewitt, of Joseph; and Roy, Earl, Clarence, Lawrence, and twins, named Aubrey and Audrey, all of whom are at home. Mr. Prout is a democrat and he has always been interested in everything that stood for public advancement. Throughout his entire residence on his ranch in this county, which covers a period of over thirty years, he has ever been actively identified with all measures of reform and progress.

WALTER ROSS McCORNACK, deceased, was born in Illinois on July 13, 1845, and was the son of Andrew A. and Maria McCornack. His father was a native of Scotland and his mother of Londenderry, Ireland. Andrew A. McCornack emigrated to America at an early date and settled in Illinois. His wife emigrated to this country with her parents in 1840, the family settling in Illinois. She remained under the parental roof until the time of her marriage, which was celebrated in the days of her early womanhood in the state of Illinois. Mr. and Mrs. McCornack removed to Washington in 1853 and from that state to Lane county, Oregon, in 1858. Twelve children were born to them, of whom all are still living except Walter R., of this review. The record of the surviving children is as follows: E. A., of Eugene; Dr. W. A., of Oakland, California; E. P., of Salem, this state; Dr. H. F., of Eugene; Mrs. J. G. Stevenson, of Eugene; Mrs. C. M. Collier, also of Eugene; Miss Mary, of Eugene; Mrs. Dr. E. P. Geary, of Portland, Oregon; J. K., of Palouse, Washington; Mrs. F. A. Wells, of San Francisco, California; and Frank H., of Klamath Falls, Oregon. The father of this family passed away in 1872 and the mother in July, 1901.

Walter R. McCornack established his permanent home in 1893 on a ranch located on the north fork of the Siuslaw river, four miles above Florence, and to the care and development of this beautiful farm he continued to give his attention until the time of his death. Some years prior to his locating his home he served as deputy sheriff for Lane county for some years and was also appointed to the office of deputy county clerk of that county for several succeeding terms.

In the year 1874 Mr. McCornack was united in marriage to Miss Elizabeth E. Hazleton, whose birth occurred in Canada, January 16, 1854, her parents being Louis and Rebecca (Beals) Hazleton, who were born, reared and married in Canada. Louis Hazleton was born July 10, 1830, and his wife exactly three years later. To them six children were born, four of whom are still living: Elizabeth E., the widow of Walter R. McCornack; John W., a resident of Manitoba, Canada; Sarah, who died in infancy; Peter, of Manitoba, Canada; Equilla, who likewise passed away in infancy, and Mrs. Mary C. Williams, of Manitoba, Canada. The father of this family passed away in July, 1865, and the mother is still living in Manitoba, Canada, at the age of seventy-nine. To Mr. and Mrs. McCornack two sons were born. Eugene R., born November 30, 1881, now resides on the old homestead, and is a half owner of seven hundred and sixty acres of agricultural land. He married Josephine Herring and two children have been born to them: Edna Elizabeth, born February 5, 1909; and Emily Lois, born January 23, 1911. Kenneth H., born October 10, 1887, is engaged in stock-raising and dealing in Florence and owns a half interest with his brother in the old homestead containing seven hundred and sixty acres. Both of the sons of Mr. and Mrs. McCornack received a good English education in the public schools. The father of this family passed away at his home in 1903. His widow continued to live upon the home ranch until 1911, when, during the month of September of that year, she removed to the city of Florence, where she built one of the finest among the many handsome residences of that city, in which she now resides.

Walter Ross McCornack was a member of the Presbyterian church, to which his widow and children still belong. During all his life he was recognized by his friends and associates as being a man of the highest type of Christian character, devoted to the best interests of the community in which he lived, and in his death the county of Lane suffered the loss of one of its best known and most useful citizens.

KARL A. MILLER is the well known cashier of the Glendale State Bank, which is one of the up-to-date and successful banking houses of Douglas county, Oregon. He was born in Portland, Oregon, December 8, 1874, and is the son of Arthur F. and Jennie R. (Stevenson) Miller, the former a native of Fort Wayne, Indiana, and the latter of Springfield, Illinois. The father was the son of Henry Miller who crossed the plains from Fort Wayne, Indiana, to Oregon in 1852. He traveled in company with the emigrant train until he reached Granger, Idaho, at which place the train continued on its way to California and the paternal grandfather of Karl A. Miller finished his journey to Oregon where he settled near Milwaukie, in Clackamas county, and there filed upon a homestead. Arthur F. Miller, the father of the subject of this review, located in Portland, Oregon, shortly after his marriage and has there since continued to reside. He has devoted the greater portion of his life to the grange work and is the president of the life insurance branch of that organization and is also secretary of the fire insurance branch and is superintendent and one of the directors of the Multnomah County Fire Association. He was associated for some time with the Northern Pacific railway in the collection of grasses and grains for exhibition purposes and during the Columbian Exposition in Chicago in 1893 he had charge of the Oregon department of forestry. The mother of the subject of this review was the daughter of J. W. Stevenson, who crossed the plains from Springfield, Illinois, with ox teams in 1853 and settled in Washington between the Cascades and Cape Horn. The family was living at that point when the massacre occurred at the Cascades and were near enough to the site of that tragedy to know much of the suffering endured by the victims.

Karl A. Miller was reared in his father's home and received his early education in the Sellwood grammar school and after passing through the lower grades was later graduated from the Portland high school, after which he completed a business course, in the College of Portland, graduating from that institution with the class of 1893. He then went to Chicago and was there assistant to his father in the forestry department of Oregon at the World's Fair exhibition. He later accepted a clerkship in the Citizens Bank, of Portland, and was identified with that institution for seven years.

While in the service of that institution he was advanced to the position of assistant cashier which position he resigned to accept the position as bookkeeper in the Wells Fargo Bank and during his three years' service in that financial house he was advanced to the position of receiving teller. When the Wells Fargo Bank was sold out he took up work as cashier in the Portland Trust Company, in which employment he continued until 1908. He then came to Glendale to accept the cashiership and business management of the Glendale State Bank since which time he has continued to give his undivided attention to the interests of that Institution.

Mr. Miller was united in marriage December 21, 1900, to Miss Frances May Cline of Portland, Oregon. She is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. C. E. Cline, of Portland, Oregon. To Mr. and Mrs. Miller two children have been born, Bayard A. and Alden E. In 1895 Mr. Miller received the appointment as notary public and has continued to serve in that office. His fraternal relations are with Azalia Lodge, No. 119, F. & A. M. He is the school clerk of Glendale and also the treasurer of that city. Mr. and Mrs. Miller are members of the Presbyterian church of which he is treasurer and one of the elders.

Karl A. Miller is one of the substantial and enterprising citizens of Glendale and a man who always is to be relied upon to give his support to the advancement of any worthy cause which will improve the civic and moral conditions of the community in which he lives.

MADS C. JENSEN is one of the enterprising agriculturists of Lane county, in which he lives, his farm being located at Point Terrace, six and one-half miles up the river from Florence. He was born January 5, 1876, and is the son of Lanst and Annie (Knudson) Jensen, both of whom were natives of Denmark. His mother's parents followed farming for a livelihood and his paternal grandfather was by trade and occupation a blacksmith. Lanst Jensen emigrated to America with his family in the year 1882, reaching the shores of the new world on the 29th day of October of that year. He made his first settlement in the state of Minnesota at the time when the subject of this review was seven years of age. On reaching Minnesota Mr. Jensen purchased a farm of one hundred and twenty acres in Polk county of that state and later added to his original purchase one hundred and sixty acres of good Minnesota land. Upon that land he established his home, where he continued to live until 1901, at which time he removed to Oregon and settled on the Siuslaw river, where he engaged in the business of farming. The first real estate he purchased in this state was located but a short distance east of Mapleton. That property he later disposed of and removed to a point farther down the river, near Acme. To Mr. and Mrs. Lanst Jensen five children were born: Stina, the wife of Peter Larson, of Minnesota, and the mother of ten children; Christina, the wife of James C. Johnson, residing on the Siuslaw river, their family consisting of five children; Jensina, who is the wife of Antone Knudson, of Minnesota, and the mother of five children; Mary, who is the wife of Omar Wisdom, of Glenada, and the mother of two children; and Mads C., of this review.

Mads C. Jensen was reared in his parents' home and educated in the common schools. He remained under the parental roof until twenty-two years of age and at that period in his life he became a joint partner with his father in all matters of business interests, a relationship which continued until 1909. At that time they purchased one hundred and sixty three acres of land and later Mr. Jensen individually became the owner of one hundred and sixty acres of the above described property, which is still in his possession. His father later purchased thirty acres, upon which he now lives. Mads C. Jensen established his home upon his tract of one hundred and sixty acres, where he is now engaged to some extent in agricultural pursuits, giving the major portion of his time and attention to the business of fishing and dairying.

Mr. Jensen was united in marriage to Miss Darthea Frederickson, a daughter of Nels and Enger (Jensen) Frederickson, in whose family were seven children: Jens, deceased; Metta, the wife of J. M. Gibson, of Point Terrace, and the mother of two children: Fred, of Point Terrace; Jens, of Acme; Mary, the wife of Mads C. Beck, of Point Terrace, and the mother of two children: Jensina, who resides with her sister, Mrs. Mads C. Jensen; and Darthea, the wife of our subject. Mr. and Mrs. Jensen are the parents of four children: Lawrence, born July 30, 1899; Edward, born December 14, 1900; Lillie, born May 17, 1904; and Melvin, born July 23, 1910.

Mr. Jensen is not affiliated with any particular political party. He is liberal in his political views and gives his support to the men whom he believes represent the best interests of his state and county. He has never sought political preferment of any kind. Fraternally he belongs to the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and his religious association is with the Lutheran church. He is one of the representative men of the community in which he lives and is loyally devoted to the interests of his family and friends. He is regarded as a man of strict integrity in his business associations and at all times ready to lend his assistance to the advancement of any public interest tending to improve the condition of the people in his state and county.

JEREMIAH COBB BAISLEY. While all days have not been equally bright in the business career of Jeremiah Cobb Baisley, he has on the whole made steady progress in his mining, farming and stock-raising—the three interests which have claimed the greater part of his time and attention. He was born on the 7th of March, 1842, in Jefferson township, Luzerne county, Pennsylvania, and is now living upon a well improved farm near Durkee, Oregon, where he is carrying on agricultural pursuits along improved lines. His father, Amos Baisley, was born in New Jersey and is a son of a Revolutionary soldier. The mother, who bore the maiden name of Hulda Hazen, was also born in New Jersey and in that state was married. Amos S. Baisley, who was both a farmer and carpenter, removed from his native state to Pennsylvania and afterward to Missouri, whence, in 1863, he crossed the plains with ox teams to Oregon, accompanied by his family. He located land in the Powder river valley below Baker City and afterward discovered placer gold mines below the Virtue gold quartz mines. He worked his placer lands with considerable profit and at the same time improved his farm. After his death, which occurred December 8, 1871, his widow returned to Pennsylvania, where she passed away a few years later. The father left his family in comfortable financial circumstances. There were three sons and four daughters. Sarah, born in 1838, became the wife of Richard Williams, of Missouri, and they had three sons and two daughters. Barbara Ann became the wife of William Adams and is now a resident of the Powder river valley. They have four sons and two daughters. Jeremiah C. is the third of the family. Malinda is the wife of W. James, living about five miles west of Baker, and they have two daughters. Samuel B., living on a farm about six miles west of Baker, married a Miss Warfield and they had two sons and two daughters. Mary died when about seven years of age. James L., living in Baker, married Miss Bowman and had six daughters.

Jeremiah C. Baisley was educated in the public schools of Glasgow and of Mercer county, Missouri. His first work was in placer mining on his father's property near the Virtue gold quartz mine. While they had water to work with this paid them well, Mr. Baisley and his father clearing sixty-four dollars in a single day with a rocker. He afterward purchased land near Durkee, also homesteaded one hundred and sixty acres and preempted one hundred and sixty acres. He likewise bought other land adjoining until he now has in one body eight hundred and forty acres on Durkee creek suitable for grain and pasturage and nearly all enclosed and under cultivation. He has raised as high as fifty-five bushels of wheat to the acre and has an orchard of about eighteen acres bearing apples, pears, plums, apricots, peaches, etc. A large part of his land is excellent fruit land. He owns the waters of Durkee creek, having purchased the right from C. W. Durkee, whose location dates back to 1862. By means of ditches constructed for irrigation purposes he has been using this water for between twenty and thirty years and in order to add thereto he now has under construction a large ditch seven miles in length, intended to carry two thousand inches of water. He hopes with the use of reservoirs to irrigate all of the property and it is his plan to subdivide this into ten, twenty and thirty-acre tracts for truck and fruit farms, for which it is well adapted, while the railroad, three miles distant, will afford excellent shipping facilities. Mr. Baisley has dealt largely in cattle and horses, at times running on the land several hundred head of cattle and from one to three hundred head of horses annually. He now has a large number of cattle and horses, including some fine Percheron stock.

On the 24th of October, 1867, Mr. Baisley was married to Miss Mildred Peyton, of Monticello, Howard county, Missouri, a daughter of Andrew Jackson and Nancy Jane (Smith) Peyton. Her father was born in 1815 and was the son of a Mexican war soldier. Her parents went from Madison county, Kentucky, to Missouri, where they were farmers, stock-raisers and slaveowners, living near Glasgow. Her grandmother was a half-sister to the famous scout Kit Carson. Her father was married twice and by his first wife had a son and four daughters, while by his second wife, Mrs. Baisley's mother, he had two sons and two daughters. His eldest child, Sarah, became the wife of Addison Houston. Elzira Miller Peyton, the second of the family, born January 14, 1839, lives in Baker county. She took up a homestead claim of one hundred

MISS ELZIRA M. PAYTON JERRY C. BAISLEY MRS. JERRY C. BAISLEY

THE
PUBLIC
ASTOR
TILDEN

and sixty acres, a desert claim of forty acres and a timber culture claim of one hundred and twenty acres. She secured title to all these and eventually sold the land. She is now seventy-four years of age, a hale, hearty and cheerful old lady. She has been of much assistance to her sister in rearing the thirteen children of the Baisley family. The other children of the Peyton family by the first marriage were: John Benton, who wedded Euretta Hulsey; Eliza F., the wife of David Dunn; and Mary, the wife of William Boyd. All three are residents of Missouri. The children of the second marriage were as follows: Mildred Ann, now Mrs. Baisley, was born January 27, 1850. She had a first cousin, John A. Peyton, who was born on the same day and he became a noted educator, school superintendent and for several years was assessor of Baker county but is now deceased. Andrew Jackson, born December 21, 1852, married Jane Alice Maddox, and lives in Missouri. Semira Jane, born November 3, 1854, is the wife of James Fical, of California. James Oscar, born in 1856, died when he was eleven years of age.

Mr. and Mrs. Baisley became the parents of seven sons and six daughters: Edna, born March 22, 1869, is the wife of William Jackson Peyton, of Unity, Oregon, and has three sons and a daughter. Oliver Oscar, born November 25, 1871, was married October 11, 1888, to Drusilla Peyton, and they have two sons and two daughters: Maymie, born July 13, 1890; Arthur Calvin, who was born October 11, 1891, and is now a registered pharmacist; Wineda, born August 22, 1899; and Wilbur Bradley, born October 4, 1901. Minnie, born February 1, 1873, married Edward Henley and has one daughter. Jennie, born May 9, 1875, is the wife of Samuel Lycette. Clyde, born December 28, 1876, died at the age of eleven years. Tennessee, born December 12, 1877, is the wife of John Cannon and they have a son and two daughters. James Jackson, born February 1, 1879, married Lila Cunningham and died leaving a wife and one daughter. Frank S., born November 19, 1881, married Maggie Groesnickle. The ninth, a daughter, died in infancy. Cordell, born May 6, 1884, is at home. Roy N., born February 1, 1886, married Nellie Boyd and has a daughter. Howard, born June 19, 1888, is deceased. Beulah Blanch, born March 21, 1891, is the wife of Edward Gerber.

Mr. Baisley is a democrat in principle but at local elections votes for the candidate whom he regards as best qualified for office. He has served as school director in Baker county for four years and has also been a loyal and public-spirited citizen since his stalwart advocacy of the Union as a soldier in the Civil war. He enlisted with the volunteers at Chillicothe, Missouri, October 23, 1862, and after spending the winter at Cape Girardeau on the Mississippi was sent in 1863 to Vicksburg and joined General Burns' command. In an attack on the city he was wounded and taken prisoner but was afterward paroled and sent to Jefferson Barracks. Because of his wounds he was granted a furlough and was sent to his home in Mercer county, Missouri, after which he was never called into active service again. He has led a busy and useful life, has ever been generous and open-handed and it is truly said of him that he never turned any one from his door hungry. He has reached the Psalmist's allotted span of three score years and ten and is still an active and enterprising citizen and one who has gradually worked his way upward to success.

CHARLES EDWARD FOSTER, chief engineer of the paid fire department of Astoria, was born in Portland, Oregon, October 6, 1869, his parents being Isaac and Jane (Coyne) Foster. The father's birth occurred in Manchester, England, while the mother was born in County Galway, Ireland. Their marriage was celebrated in Portland, Oregon, in 1866. Isaac Foster followed the trades of a boilermaker and molder. He was disabled by an accident, however, which prevented his continuance in those lines, then he became proprietor of a cigar, tobacco and notion store in Portland, carrying on business there until December, 1876, when he came to Astoria and resumed business along the same lines. He was numbered among the progressive merchants of this town for about eight years, or until 1884. His death occurred in June of that year, at which time he was the owner of a fine business property in this city. His widow still occupies the old home in Astoria where she reared her family of four children, namely: Charles Edward; Thomas F., now living at Port Orchard, Washington; Mary A., the wife of R. A. Cearns, of Astoria; and Harry J., who is connected with the fire department of Astoria. One son, William, died at the age of two years in Portland, Oregon.

After his father's death, which occurred when he was fourteen years of age, Charles E. Foster worked with his mother in the store until twenty years of age. He then became engaged in the transfer business in Astoria and the succeeding eight years were thus passed. At the end of that time he turned his attention to bookkeeping and did business as collecting agent and accountant until November, 1901, when he was appointed the chief engineer of the paid fire department, which position he still fills. He had first become identified with the volunteer department in 1883, when with other lads he organized the Engine Tender Company of Rescue Engine Company, No. 2. He served as foreman of the junior company until 1888, when he was elected a member of Rescue Engine Company. He served as secretary of that company for two years and in September, 1892, was elected foreman, which office he filled until 1893, when he was chosen chief engineer of the department. In 1894 he was reelected and served until August, 1895, and he also acted as secretary of the department from 1890 until 1893. He was appointed to his present position by the fire and water committee in October, 1901, and his long training well qualifies him for the responsibilities and obligations which now devolve upon him.

In January, 1903, Mr. Foster was married to Miss Margaret E. Gilmore, a native of Astoria and a daughter of Cornelius and Bertha (Ferry) Gilmore, natives of Ireland and Nebraska, respectively. The father died in 1898 but the mother is still living in Portland. Of their family of eight children six still survive, namely: Mrs. Foster; Charlotte, at home; Mary, the wife of T. A. Leahy, manager of the Ford & Stokes Hardware Company of Astoria; Catherine, the wife of F. Balmer, of Spokane, Washington; and Genevieve and Florence, both at home. Two children, Annie and Cornelius, died when young. Mr. and Mrs. Foster now have four children: Charles Coyne, who was born November 8, 1903; Thomas Henry, July 18, 1906; Francis Gilmore, January 3, 1909; and Genevieve Evelyn, March 23, 1911.

Mr. Foster and his family are members of the Roman Catholic church and he is a member of various fraternal organizations, including the Knights of Columbus, the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks, the Fraternal Order of Eagles, the Independent Order of Red Men, the Foresters of America, the Ancient Order of United Workmen, the Modern Woodmen of America, the Knights of the Maccabees, and the Woodmen of the World, his membership being with lodges in Astoria. In politics he is a republican and while he is not a politician in the commonly accepted sense of the term he has served as road supervisor for two terms. He has served as a member of the Oregon State Militia, being a member of Company H, from which he holds an honorable discharge. He is popular with the men who serve under him and who recognize that his promotion has been well merited. He never regards the duties of his office lightly but loyally and faithfully meets the tasks that devolve upon him and is calm and clear-headed in times of danger, using his men and apparatus to the best advantage.

THOMAS ROBERT MONK, who is engaged in the photograph business in Tillamook, was born in Crawford county, Indiana, on the 18th of January, 1862, and is a son of Robert S. and Rachel (Tucker) Monk. His parents were also natives of Crawford county, the father's birth having occurred in 1834 and that of the mother in 1835. Robert S. Monk, who was a farmer, responded to his country's call in 1861, enlisting and going to the front as a member of the Fifty-Eighth Indiana Regiment. The hardships and privations incident to camp life in the army undermined his constitution and he contracted a disease to which he succumbed in 1862, during the infancy of our subject. He left a widow and one other child, Simon, both of whom are now deceased.

Reared by his mother, Thomas Robert Monk acquired his education in the graded and high schools of Marengo, Indiana, then began his real life work as a wage earner. He early decided that he wished to become a physician and entered the medical college of Louisville, Kentucky, being graduated in 1896. During the first year of his professional career he engaged in practice in Indiana, but subsequently located in eastern Oregon and for twelve years thereafter was identified with the medical fraternity of Union county. At the expiration of that period he came to Tillamook, and finding here a good opening for a photograph gallery bought out J. A. Dahlgran, and has ever since been successfully engaged in conducting a studio here.

In 1885 Dr. Monk was married to Miss Ida Coppock, a daughter of Jesse Coppock, a farmer of Nebraska. Four children were born of this union: Robert S., who is a hospital steward in the United States navy, stationed on the torpedo boat, Smith; Nellie, who is the wife of Bliss McKennon, of Alicel, Oregon; Lloyd, who is also a resident of Oregon; and Lois, who lives in Salem. Mrs. Monk passed away in 1897 and on the 19th of October, 1902, Dr. Monk was again married, his choice being Miss May J. E. Conrad, who was born and reared in Logansport, Indiana. Mrs. Monk is a daughter of Edward J. Conrad, a farmer and stockman, who is also a native of Logansport, while her mother, whose maiden name was Elese Geisseler, was born in Geneva, Switzerland.

Dr. Monk is a republican in politics and in 1906, while living in Union county, was coroner. Fraternally he is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks.

BUTLER DE LASHMUTT. For a quarter of a century Butler De Lashmutt has owned and occupied the farm on which he now resides—a good tract of land of one hundred and thirty-five acres, five miles south of McMinnville. This is a rich agricultural district and the soil responds readily to the care and labor which is bestowed upon it, so that Mr. De Lashmutt is meeting with success in his efforts to cultivate the fields and improve his property. He was born in Iowa, November 17, 1852, his parents being John K. and Amanda (Hodges) De Lashmutt, the former a native of Kentucky and the latter of France. The mother accompanied her parents to the new world and went with them to Iowa, in which state John K. De Lashmutt had located in early manhood. There they became acquainted and were married, and in 1852 they joined the vast throng of people who in that year crossed the plains to the Pacific coast. They made the journey with ox teams to Oregon and Mr. De Lashmutt took up a donation claim of six hundred and forty acres in Polk county. With characteristic energy he began the task of transforming the wild land into productive fields, working on year after year until about 1877, when he removed to Washington county, trading his homestead place in Polk county for a farm in Washington county, upon which he lived for ten years. He then traded that property for the old homestead and once more took up his abode upon the land which had come into his possession as a donation claim. For ten years he lived upon that place, after which he sold out and took up his abode upon a farm near Falls City, Oregon, where he spent one year. After disposing of that property he purchased a store in Sheridan, conducting the business for two years, at the end of which time he bought a farm near Willamina, upon which he spent the succeeding two years. Again he sold out and at that time took up his abode in Amity, where he lived retired in the enjoyment of a well earned rest until his death, which occurred when he was seventy-six years of age. His first wife had died soon after their arrival in Oregon. Later he married again and afterward lost his second wife. His third wife passed away soon after his demise. There were seven children born of the first marriage, of whom four are yet living: B. B., a prominent resident of Spokane, Washington, who at one time was mayor of the city of Portland, Oregon; P. L., a resident of Yamhill county; Isabelle, the wife of Ed Wicks, who resides at The Dalles, Oregon; and Butler, of this review. Of the four children born of the second marriage two are yet living but Fillmore and Catharine, the eldest and the youngest, are now deceased. The others are: Douglas, whose home is in Benton county, Oregon; and Elworth, a resident of Pendleton, Oregon. There were two children of the third marriage: Jennie, who has departed this life; and Mrs. Abbie Bently, who resides at The Dalles.

Butler De Lashmutt was only six months old when brought by his mother to Oregon and in the schools of Portland he pursued his education, completing the high-school course and afterward attending the Old Portland Academy. He also spent some time as a student in a business college and at the age of twenty-one years went to Albany, where he kept books for two years. He afterward removed to Ballston, where he engaged in farming, working in the fields during the day and teaching in the night schools. He also taught penmanship and thus his life passed for twenty years. Surely this is an indication that indolence and idleness are utterly foreign to his nature. After a time he took up his abode upon a farm at Falls City, where he carried on general agricultural pursuits for seven years and continued to teach in the night schools during the same period. Later he removed to The Dalles, Oregon, where he engaged in the real-estate business for a year and a half, at the end of which time he purchased one hundred and thirty-five acres of land situated about five miles south of McMinnville. This was in 1886 and during the intervening period, covering a quarter of a century, he has since lived upon this farm, which presents a neat and thrifty appearance, the spring time planting giving promise of rich harvests in the late autumn.

In 1875 Mr. De Lashmutt was married to Miss Ella Martin, a native of Polk county, Oregon, and a daughter of J. S. and Amanda (McKane) Martin. Mrs. De Lashmutt was educated in Salem, attending the university there, and made her home in Polk county up to the time of her marriage. She has become the mother of seven children and the family circle yet remains unbroken by the hand of death. These are: Warner, a railroad man, now living in Spokane, Washington; Albert, who is connected with newspaper interests in Spokane; John, at home; Le Roy, who is engaged in the telephone business in Idaho; Earl, who is interested in the hop industry at McMinnville; Victor, who is engaged in the same line of business in McMinnville; and Mildred, at home. John and Albert were both soldiers in Company K of the Oregon volunteers in the Philippine war.

Mr. De Lashmutt gives his political allegiance to the republican party and has held some local offices, serving as constable of Polk county, as road supervisor and school clerk, ever discharging the duties of those positions in a conscientious and capable manner. Both he and his wife hold membership in the Methodist church and their influence is always given on the side of right, justice and truth, of reform and progress. They are well known people of Yamhill county, where their many sterling traits of character have gained for them high regard. Mr. De Lashmutt is ever a champion of improvement and development, is exceptionally earnest in his advocacy of the public-school system, and does all he can to further material, intellectual and moral progress in this part of the state.

NORRIS G. RUSSELL. The operation of a finely improved ranch of fifty acres located three miles northwest of Yamhill engages the attention of Norris G. Russell, who represents the third generation of his family to be identified with the agricultural development of this state. His birth occurred in the vicinity of North Yamhill in 1863, and he is a son of William and Elvira (Perkins) Russell. The father was born in Ohio on the 3d of July, 1832, but at the age of two years removed to Indiana with his parents and there he was educated and reared to manhood. At the age of about twenty he joined a party of emigrants to the northwest, making the long journey across the plains from Indiana to Oregon with ox teams. When he first located here he worked for a time on the donation claim of John Perkins but subsequently acquired property of his own. The mother was born in Indiana in 1842, but spent practically her entire life in the immediate vicinity of North Yamhill, having accompanied her parents on their removal to the northwest when she was a child of one year. She was a daughter of John Perkins, who owned six hundred and twenty acres of land two miles northwest of North Yamhill, known as the John Perkins donation land claim. Her preliminary education was acquired in the crude and inefficient district schools of the period, after the completion of which she attended the only college in this section of the country at that time. She was graduated from this institution and at the age of about eighteen years was married to William Russell. They began their domestic life on a quarter section of land owned by the father and located in the vicinity of the Perkins claim. A few years later they sold this and bought a place containing nine hundred acres about four miles north of the Perkins homestead. Here they reared their children and spent the remainder of their lives. Of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Russell there were born four chiblren, of whom our subject is the second in order of birth, the others being as follows: John H., who was born in 1860, living at North Yamhill; Elizabeth, now Mrs. Perrine, who was born in 1864 and is living near the old home place; and Clara, who is deceased.

The early years in the life of Norris G. Russell did not differ particularly from those of other lads reared in pioneer homes. In the acquirement of his education he attended the district schools, meanwhile assisting his father in the operation of the ranch. He was married upon attaining his majority and immediately following located near the old Perkins sawmill where he was employed for about eighteen months. He and his wife subsequently spent a year on the Perkins farm, then removed to Oak Point, Washington, on the Columbia river, where he engaged in the lumber business for three years. At the expiration of that time they returned to the old donation claim, which he operated for four years, during that time acquiring the capital to purchase the place they now occupy, and where they have ever since resided. Mr. Russell owns one of the best cultivated and most highly improved ranches in this section of the county. He has a very pleasant residence, large commodious barns and substantial outbuildings, while the grounds about his house and his fields are kept in the best condition. There is a general air of thrift and capable management about the place that invariably accompanies prosperity. He is meeting with more than the average degree of success in his undertakings and is recognized as one of the substantial ranchmen of the county. His personal attention has always been given to the tilling of his fields, that are almost entirely devoted to the raising of grain, and the harvesting of his crops. He makes a careful study of his soil, its needs and requirements, and under his capable and intelligent direction each acre produces its maximum yield annually, the quality in every way being proportionate to the quantity.

Mr. Russell was united in marriage on the 16th of May, 1884, to Miss Ella Simmons, who was born on her father's claim located three miles west of Carlton, this state, in 1867. She is a daughter of John A. and Julia Simmons, natives of Indiana, the father's birth having occurred in 1843 and that of the mother in 1845. In the early years of their married life they crossed the plains with an ox team, locating on a claim three miles west of Carlton, where they resided for a number of years. They later sold this place and went to North Yamhill, and there the mother passed away in 1888. The father is still living, however, and continues to make his home in Yamhill. Of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Simmons there were born six children, as follows: William, who is deceased; Ida May, who was born in 1863, the wife of Robert Petty, of Roseburg, Oregon; Benjamin F., who is engaged in farming near Yamhill; Mrs. Russell; Gertrude, the deceased wife of Ernest Farrow; and Dora, who is also deceased. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Russell numbers the following children: Mamie, who was born in 1886, now deceased; Nina, born on January 9, 1889, the wife of Florance McCarthy, who is operating the place adjoining the Russell homestead; Scena, who was born on May 22, 1891, now Mrs. Fred Reimers, of Portland; Leta, born on the 15th of March, 1893, the wife of Isham Johnston, who is living near Carlton; and Veral, born on October 7, 1902, attending school.

The political allegiance of Mr. Russell has always been given to the democratic party, and for the past nine years he has been serving as road supervisor, but he has never been an office seeker. His fraternal connections are confined to his membership in the Masonic order, and he has the distinction of being identified with the third oldest lodge in the state. He is a man of high principles and integrity, who is accorded the regard and esteem of all who know him in either a social or business way. Progressive in his ideas yet practical in his theories he is meeting with success in his agricultural pursuits by reason of his concentrated and intelligently directed efforts.

CHARLES H. BASYE, who is one of the well known and popular men in Jacksonville, is the proprietor and owner of a prosperous blacksmith shop in that city. He was born October 15, 1858, in this state, and is the son of William H. and Elizabeth (Streighthoof) Basye. William H. Basye emigrated to this state in the year 1846, making the journey overland with ox teams, six months and six days being required to reach the border of this far western and then undeveloped territory, his wife following him to his new home later on during the same year. On reaching this state his journeys led him directly through what is now the city of Portland. At that time it was a spot in the wilderness on which stood one lone settler's cabin, housing the entire population. Continuing his journey he filed upon a government claim of one hundred and sixty acres at Albany in Linn county, where he established his home and continued to reside for the succeeding twelve years, after which he removed to Del Morte county, California, and there continued to reside for a period of five years. The place has since been known as the Basye Place. On his removal from this location he settled in Applegate valley, this state, where he purchased of a Mr. Davison a ranch consisting of three hundred and twenty acres. He was one of the volunteers in the Cayuse Indian wars, remaining with his command until the Indians were subdued and peace was reestablished throughout this portion of the state. At the conclusion of the uprising he received his honorable discharge at The Dalles, Oregon.

Charles H. Basye remained in his father's home until twenty-seven years of age. In his nineteenth year he became an apprenticed blacksmith in Salem where he remained until perfecting himself, becoming a master in his craft, after which time he returned to the parental roof and on the home ranch opened a shop and general blacksmithing business. He removed to Jacksonville in the year 1886 and after purchasing a suit-

CHARLES H. BASYE

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASTOR
TILDEN

able property in that place he opened a blacksmith shop and has since continued to engage in general blacksmithing and repair work.

In the year 1887 Mr. Basye was married to Miss Alice Bailey, a native of this state, and to this union three children were born: Zepha E; Cora L; and Charles L., deceased. The mother of this family reached the end of her earthly pilgrimage in 1899, her youngest child, Charles, dying at the same time, and both were interred in one grave in the city cemetery.

Mr. Basye is affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and is a member of the Fraternal Order of Eagles of Jacksonville. He has been three times chosen a delegate to the State Grand Lodge of this order, being elected for his third term in 1912, and is also a district deputy. He is an industrious, respected and representative citizen of Jacksonville and a man well known throughout this portion of the county.

ARTHUR N. BUSICK, who has been a resident of the state of Oregon for exactly a half century and now resides on Catherine creek in Union county, has been actively identified with general agricultural pursuits throughout his entire business career, devoting his attention principally to the stock business, although recently he has been engaged in dairying. His birth occurred in Putnam county, Missouri, on the 5th of December, 1857, his parents being Andrew H. and Arminta (Fickle) Busick. The father, a native of North Carolina, started for Oregon in April, 1862, joining a party who had begun the westward journey with a few ox teams but whose number was continually increased en route until the emigrant train was quite a long one. One night, while the emigrants were camping on Green river, the Indians stampeded the cattle, some of which were lost. Some of the wagons were badly damaged by the stampeding cattle and some of the children were injured in the upsetting of the wagons. After arriving in the Soda Springs country in Wyoming the party was divided, some going on to California and others to the mines in Idaho. Andrew Busick, the father of our subject, was the only one to continue to the Grande Ronde valley, locating three-fourths of a mile east of Union on Catherine creek, where he established his home and where his wife passed away in 1867. In 1869 he leased his farm and worked in the valley and later engaged in the butchering business, while subsequently he went to the mines. At the present time he is living retired in California at the ripe old age of seventy-eight. He has the distinction of being the first grain grower in the Grande Ronde valley and is well entitled to mention in this work as one of the valued pioneers of Oregon. Unto him and his wife were born four children.

Arthur N. Busick, who was the eldest child in his father's family, spent the period of his boyhood in the Grande Ronde valley and most of the time lived with his uncle, Jackson Fickle, who is now eighty years of age and still resides in the valley. After reaching young manhood he ran stock together with his uncle until 1886, in which year he was married and located on his present property on Catherine creek. He has devoted his attention principally to live stock but recently has been engaged in dairying. His undertakings have been attended with a gratifying measure of success and he is widely recognized as one of the substantial and enterprising citizens of Union county.

In 1886 Mr. Busick was united in marriage to Miss Effie Cusick, of Linn county, Oregon. Her father, R. G. Cusick, who was a native of New York, came across the plains to California in 1849 and returned by way of Cape Horn. In 1853 he made his way to Oregon by ox team in company with his mother, a Conklin, who was one of the early Holland settlers of the Empire state. She was eighty-two years of age at the time of her removal to the northwest and was beyond doubt the oldest woman who had crossed the plains up to that time and probably for many years after. The chair in which she sat during the long journey is still in possession of the family. She was so feeble that it was necessary to help her in and out of the same. R. G. Cusick purchased a claim and took up his abode in Linn county, this state, where his demise occurred in 1884. He was twice married, his first union being with Miss Harriet Hollenbeak. After her demise he wedded Miss Evelyn Berry, who became the mother of Mrs. Effie Busick, the youngest of four children. Mr. and Mrs. Arthur N. Busick have four children: Eunice, Alpha, Robert and Dorothea, all of whom are attending school.

Mr. Busick is an independent democrat in politics and is a member of the Woodmen of the World. He has been a most enthusiastic champion of education and has spent a great deal of time and money in furthering this cause.

ANDREW STORGARD is one of the enterprising and successful business men of Marshfield and is numbered among the influential and highly respected residents of that place. He was born in Finland in 1866 and is a son of Eric and Annie Storgard, both natives of Finland in which country they passed away many years ago. They became the parents of a very large family, only two of whom are still living: Andrew, of this review; and John, who still resides in Finland.

Andrew Storgard emigrated to America in the year 1886 and upon reaching the shores of the new world he made his first settlement in California, where he remained for three years, and afterward removed to Coos Bay, this state, and settled in Marshfield. Upon establishing his residence in that city he was engaged in various occupations until 1891 when he established himself in business, in which he continued until 1894 and in that year he returned to Finland. He continued to reside there until 1902, in which year he returned to Marshfield and engaged in the boarding-house business, in which he continued until 1909, after which he became the owner and proprietor of a popular cigar and stationery business at Marshfield, to which he has since given his entire attention. In addition to his cigar and stationery business he is also engaged in the real-estate business. He is the owner of a considerable amount of property in and about the city of Marshfield and in addition he also owns valuable options on various lands and other properties throughout the city and county in which he lives.

Mr. Storgard was united in marriage to Miss Annie Styris, a native of Finland, in which country her parents are still living. To her father and mother were born nine children, three of whom are still living in Finland and six in the United States. To Mr. and Mrs. Storgard five children have been born: Eric A., born in 1897, who is attending the high school; Elsa, who died at the age of eleven years; Annie E., born in 1900; Estella A., born in 1904; and Mildred E., in 1910.

Mr. Storgard is a member of the socialist party. Both himself and wife were liberally educated in the schools of Finland and he and his family are all members of the Lutheran church. Mr. Storgard is known as one of the genial and progressive residents of Marshfield. He is a man of great energy and in every respect regarded as a competent and successful business man. He is at all times actuated by a public-spirited interest in the general good and enjoys the esteem and confidence of his fellow citizens.

KNUD AAGE BENDSTRUP, now general manager of the Booth Fisheries Company at Astoria, has made his home in this city since 1903, in which year he arrived in America. He was born in Denmark on the 30th of December, 1871, a son of Carl and Elizabeth Bendstrup, who spent their entire lives in their native country, the father passing away in 1899, while the mother's death occurred in 1911. Of their family of four children, Knud and Frederick are now in the United States, while Jens and Holger are still residents of Denmark.

In the schools of his native country Knud A. Bendstrup acquired his education and was employed in various ways there until he sought the opportunities of the new world, coming to America in 1903. He at once took up his abode in Astoria, and secured employment in connection with the cold storage plant, there remaining until January, 1910. At the latter date he accepted the position of general manager of the Booth Fisheries Company and has since served in this capacity, giving entire satisfaction to the corporation which he represents. The company finds him energetic, capable, reliable and progressive, and his labors are constituting an element in its success.

On the 1st of September, 1909, Mr. Bendstrup was married to Miss Magdalena Lauridsen, who was born in Denmark and was the daughter of Jens Lauridsen. Her mother died in Denmark, after which her father sailed for the new world in 1894, and has since lived at Bear River, Washington. Of the six children of the Lauridsen family four are still living in America, while one remains in Denmark and another is deceased: Those still living are: Marie, the wife of S. Jensen, of Astoria; Laurids, a resident of Portland, Oregon; Karen, also living in Astoria; Mrs. Bendstrup; and Sophia, the wife of Christian Krarup, of Denmark.

Mr. and Mrs. Bendstrup are members of the Lutheran church and he is well known in the Odd Fellows lodge of Astoria. Commendable ambition led him to seek a home in the new world and has prompted him to put forth earnest effort in the attainment of honorable success in a business way. Gradually he is progressing and his present position is one of large responsibility, bringing to him also a goodly remuneration.

FRANK D. BESTER. Although still a young man, Frank D. Bester has met with such lucrative returns in the direction of his agricultural pursuits that he is now in a position to retire from active work. He was born in Jones county, Iowa, on the 30th of July, 1872, and is a son of Stephen D. and Jane A. (Henry) Bester, natives of Ohio and Pennsylvania, respectively. His parents removed in 1876 to the Pacific coast, first locating in California, where they spent a year. In 1878 they came to Oregon, taking up a homestead of one hundred and sixty acres in Tillamook county. This is now the property of our subject and is known as the Bester Ford. The father devoted his energies toward the cultivation and improvement of this place until he died in 1892. The mother survived eighteen years thereafter, her demise occurring in 1910. Of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Bester there were born six children, four of whom are still living: Charles E., who is a resident of Coos county, Oregon; Frank D., our subject; Lola M., the wife of Charles Stokes, of Forest Grove, this state; and John, who is a resident of Coos county. Those deceased are Nellie M. and Estelle.

As he was a little lad of only six years when his parents removed to Tillamook county, Frank D. Bester has spent practically his entire life amid its scenes. It was but sparsely settled at that period, containing great stretches of uncultivated prairie and acres of timber. Here he was educated and reared to manhood, sharing with his parents the hardships incident to life in a new country. From his earliest boyhood he rendered assistance in the work of the ranch, assuming heavier tasks and greater responsibilities with the passing years. The limited social life of the country in addition to the privations incident to pioneering doubtless made the youth early feel that business afforded greater opportunities financially, while the advantages of enjoyment afforded in town were not to be scorned, so when he attained his majority he left the homestead and obtained employment as a clerk. Two years spent in the routine of commercial activities convinced him that he preferred the freedom to be enjoyed by a life in the open, so he returned to his father's ranch. He first operated this as a renter, meeting with such success in his undertakings that he was subsequently able to become its owner. Prosperity still followed him and later he increased his holdings by the addition of another eighty acres. His undivided attention was given to the development of his place, with constantly increasing returns, until he had acquired sufficient means to enable him to retire from the active cultivation of his fields. Mr. Bester then purchased fifteen acres known as the Roberts' corner, where he is now erecting a large modern residence, surrounded by beautiful grounds, and there he expects to live in retirement.

Christmas day, 1898, Mr. Bester was married to Miss Clara G. Turney, who was born in Goldendale, Washington, and is a daughter of Morton and Lydia (Skidmore) Turney. The father was a native of Indiana and the mother of Iowa, but they emigrated to Oregon in 1890, locating on a farm. They are now making their home in California. Twelve of the thirteen children born of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Turney are still living. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Bester there have been born a daughter and two sons, as follows: Edna M., who is deceased; Arthur F., who was born October 5, 1900; and John L., whose birth occurred on the 25th of May, 1902.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Bester are members of the Methodist Episcopal church, in the work of which they take an earnest and active interest. Politically he is a republican, but has never been an aspirant to official honors, always having preferred to give his undivided attention to the direction of his own affairs. He is affiliated with the Fairview Grange, through the medium of which he maintains relations with other members of the agricultural community. During the thirty-three years of his residence in the county Mr. Bester has seen many changes; the agricultural and commercial interests of the county have developed, the prairies and forests have been converted into productive ranches, while mere settlements and stations have grown into thriving towns of recognized importance.

HON. EDWARD H. HARTWIG is a representative of the Hood River bar and occupies a prominent position among western lawyers. He was born at Shawano, Wisconsin, November 8, 1874, a son of William and Marie (Neuman) Hartwig. The parents were both born in Germany, where they were reared and married. In 1868 they came to the United States and at once settled in Wisconsin, their emigation from their native country occurring immediately after the father's release from the army. The farm upon which he located on arriving in this country was the one upon which his death occurred in May, 1902. The mother still resides upon the home place, which is being managed and cultivated by her youngest son.

Edward H. Hartwig was reared on the home farm and acquired his early education in the public schools. After graduating from the Shawano high school in the class of 1896, he took up teaching as a profession and during the four years in which he was engaged in that occupation he pursued the study of law, reading privately during spare hours and also in various law offices during vacation months. He became accustomed to work hard for whatever education he desired to acquire, as he had supported himself while attending the high school. During that time he lived with a physician and did the general work around the house and stables. Thus, when he determined to make law his life work he was prepared to carry out his resolve even though it involved many hardships and privations. In the autumn of 1898 he entered the Northern Indiana Law School at Valparaiso, Indiana, from which institution he was graduated May 30, 1900. The course which he had successfully followed at the Indiana Law School entitled him to admission to the bar in Indiana and also to practice in the United States circuit courts. He resigned his position as teacher in the spring of 1900 and came west, arriving in Portland, Oregon, in April of that year. He spent the next summer in finding a location which he thought would afford good opportunities for an opening, his final selection being Hood River, where he began to practice law in the winter of 1901. On November 11, 1902, he was admitted to the bar of Oregon, on the 24th of May, 1906, to the Washington bar and on March 10, 1912, to the bar in California. His ability had already become recognized when in the winter of 1903-4 he went to Goldendale, the county seat of Klickitat county, Washington, where he assisted W. B. Presby, who was at that time a member of the state senate and was United States commissioner of that section. A railroad was being built from Lyle to Goldendale and prospective settlers were fast arriving. Judge Presby was called upon to handle much more business than his time allowed and Mr. Hartwig's services for six months were very valuable. After he had completed this work for Judge Presby he returned to Hood River, where he has since been active in the legal profession and where he has practiced longer than any of the other members of the bar. He has become one of the leading attorneys of the city and for the past eight years has served as deputy district attorney of this county, the district attorney residing in The Dalles. As a member of the Hood River county bar he has been identified with much important litigation in the western courts and has earned an enviable position as a counsellor and able advocate. In no profession does advancement depend more entirely upon individual merit than in the practice of law and, realizing this fact, Mr. Hartwig gives to his clients the benefit of his talents and untiring support and he has gained the respect of all lawyers, while the public accords him a distinctly representative clientage. Mr. Hartwig takes a great deal of interest in real estate in the Hood River country. He is the owner of twelve and one half acres adjoining the town, eight acres, two and one-half miles west of Hood River and also one hundred and sixty acres near Lyle, Washington. His interest in the civic improvement and welfare of his town has always been very noticeable becoming more conspicuous since his election to the office of mayor in 1910. He has not only used his influence for good government but has also been an agitator for many improvements which will add to the attractiveness and appearance of Hood River. He advocated the building of sewers in the hill district and also cement walks, which are now being laid throughout the city limits. The latter are six feet wide in the residence district and ten feet in the business section. This adds greatly to the appearance of Hood River and is appreciated by all its citizens.

On the 12th of December, 1908, Mr. Hartwig was married to Miss Ethel Entrican, a daughter of Mrs. Annette M. Entrican. Mrs. Entrican spends her summers with Mr. and Mrs. Hartwig but during the winter is a resident of California. To Mr. and Mrs. Hartwig one child, Edetha Annette, has been born. Mr. Hartwig gives his allegiance to the republican party. Both he and his wife are members of the First Congregational church. He is a member of Idlewilde Lodge, No. 107, I. O. O. F., of Hood River; Arleta Assembly, No. 103, of the United Artisans; the Business Men's Association of Hood River, of which he has been secretary for three years; and the Hood River Commercial Club.

JOSEPH C. OLIVER, one of the popular citizens of the John Day valley and perhaps the heaviest tax payer in Grant county, was born in Portugal, March 16, 1850, a son of Anthony and Luvovina Oliver. The father dying before Joseph's birth, he was reared by his maternal grandmother, who took him when an infant and cared for him until he attained his seventeenth year. He received a good common-school education in his native land and early in youth became intensely interested in the business and social opportunities afforded by the new world. Accordingly as soon as he could arrange it or when he was seventeen years of age he crossed the Atlantic and then the great American continent to Oregon, making his first stop in Portland, where he remained for two and a half days. At that time where the heart of Portland now is large trees were being felled and split into rails for the use of the community. From that city he came up the Columbia river by steamer to The Dalles and there took a stage for Grant county, arriving in Canyon City, March 27, 1868. From there he went to the mining camp of Dixie, four miles from Prairie City, working in the mines for wages one year. He then bought a half interest in a mining claim on Dutch Flat, near Canyon City, and there was engaged in mining until 1870, when he sold his interests and for another year worked for wages in the mines. He then repurchased the interest in his former mining claim but in 1872 again sold and, tiring of mining, invested his money in a few head of cattle which he cared for on the open range near John Day. From that time until now he has been prominently identified with the cattle business in the state of Oregon. In 1877 he rented a ranch near John Day, on which he lived for three years, and in the spring of 1880 purchased the present ranch four miles east of John Day, where he has since resided. He now owns between fifteen and sixteen thousand acres of good land constituting one of the finest ranches in the John Day valley, and is said to be the wealthiest man in this district.

In 1879 Mr. Oliver married Mrs. Lizzie Gregg, who was formerly a Miss Miller and a native of Bavaria, Germany. On coming to the United States in 1871 she first located in San Francisco. She was subsequently married, in Canyon City, Oregon, to August Gregg, who died in 1878, leaving his wife with three children, namely: William Otto, whose death occurred in 1906; Henry J., now a resident of Portland; and Mary Elizabeth, the wife of H. F. Pound, of Canyon City. To Mr. and Mrs. Oliver have been born three children, two of whom are still living, Herman and Frank, who now carry on the ranch for their father. The former married Elizabeth Lawrence, of Prairie City, Oregon, and has one child, Anna Elizabeth. Frank married Margaret Gunther, of Prairie City, and also has one child, Clara Margaret.

Politically Mr. Oliver is a republican and though he has never been an office seeker he takes a lively interest in political as well as civic affairs. He took out his naturalization papers shortly after coming to the United States and has always taken a deep interest in the affairs of his community. Fraternally he is a member of Canyon City Lodge, A. F. & A. M.; Blue Mountain Chapter, No. 7, R. A. M.; and Baker Commandery, No. 9, K. T.; and he also belongs to Habah Lodge, No. 22, I. O. O. F., at Canyon City, which body he joined in 1872. He is one of those men in whom are found an unusual amount of courage and energy. He came to a country in which the language and customs of the people were all new to him, when only seventeen years of age but he has met with a success which has continued to grow throughout the years that he has been a citizen of the Pacific coast and particularly during more recent years while living in Oregon. He is one of the most respected and valuable citizens of Grant county and enjoys the highest reputation for integrity among all who know him.

FRANK KELLY is a native son of Oregon. He was born on the 20th day of March, 1877, and is the son of Henry and Mary (Parks) Kelly. His father and mother were among the early pioneers of this state and for many years were numbered among the prominent citizens of Josephine county. Henry Kelly closed his earthly pilgrimage in 1885 and was buried in Grants Pass. His wife passed away in 1890 and was buried in the cemetery at Kerby. Unto them were born two sons: Frank, of this review; and Alfred, now a resident of California.

Frank Kelly was reared in his father's home and received his early education in the public schools. At the age of twenty-one

J. C. OLIVER

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASTOR, LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS

he left the parental roof and began his independent business career in life. The first few years after starting for himself he was employed at various kinds of work in the vicinity of his boyhood home. He later purchased a farm near Kerby, consisting of ninety acres, and to the development and care of this splendid piece of agricultural land he has since devoted his entire attention, specializing in the raising of hay and grain.

Mr. Kelly is a republican in politics but has never at any time sought political preferment. He is one of the well known and highly esteemed men in this section of the state.

JOHN WILLIAM WALKER, a prominent business man of Lincoln county, whose home is at Waldport, has been a resident of this place since 1903. He was born at Cottage Grove, Oregon, December 14, 1865, a son of John Walker, who was born in Bedford county, Virginia, in 1827. The father continued to reside in his native state until 1845 and then removed to Missouri, where he was connected with the tanning business for five years. In 1850 he yielded to the gold excitement and crossed the plains to California, where he mined for two years. He then came to Jackson county, Oregon, and engaged in mining for a year, at the close of which time he took up a donation claim in Lane county. He subsequently engaged in farming in various parts of the state but finally located in Lane county and was one of the founders of the town of Walker, which was named in his honor. He is still living there and has now reached the advanced age of eighty-five years. The maiden name of the mother of our subject was Mary Jane Chrisman. She was born in Jefferson county, Missouri, and came to Oregon with her father in 1850. He engaged in farming at Muddy and in the hotel business at Canyonville, locating permanently near Walker.

In his infancy John William Walker removed with his parents to a farm near Creswell and shortly afterward to the present site of Walker. He received his preliminary education in the common schools and, desiring to secure instruction along practical lines, became a student of the Columbia Commercial College at Portland, from which he was graduated after taking the regular course. He applied himself successfully to farming in the region of Creswell with the exception of one year which he spent in a general store at Walker. On account of over application his health became impaired and in 1903 he took up his residence at Waldport. After resting for a year and becoming thoroughly recuperated he associated with his brother in law, Marian Lebow, and purchased of C. L. Deven the only general store then in the town. Under capable management the business prospered and Mr. Walker bought out his partner's interest in the spring of 1911 and in the July following purchased the store which had been operated by the Waldport Lumber Company, thus acquiring practically the entire mercantile business of this section. He carries a large and carefully selected stock of goods and has attracted a liberal and growing patronage.

In 1890 Mr. Walker was married, in Lane county, to Miss Rachel England, who was born in Lake county, California, a daughter of David and Eliza (Hopkins) England, the former of whom was born in Kentucky and the latter in Ohio. The father was taken to Iowa very early in life and was reared in that state. He emigrated to California in 1865 and was engaged in farming, coming to Lane county, Oregon, early in the '70s. He spent the remainder of his life as a farmer in this state. Six children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Walker: Amy, Ira, John, Dora, Neva and Raymond.

Mr. Walker is identified with the Artisans and has served as master of the lodge. He is in sympathy with the principles of the republican party and thoroughly believes that the organization has within itself the ability and progressiveness to manage successfully the affairs of the state and nation whatever may be the issues. An evidence of the esteem in which he is held by the community was indicated by his election as mayor of the town in 1911, an office which he now holds. Being a man of sound business judgment, he has succeeded in his undertakings and each year adds to his prosperity. He has a wide acquaintance and is held in high esteem wherever he is known on account of his many admirable traits of character.

CHARLES V. KUYKENDALL. By perseverance and in spite of obstacles Charles V. Kuykendall has succeeded in turning an unused tract of land into a profitable one, and has used the natural resources of Oregon to their best advantage. His home is a mile west of Yamhill and he has been a resident of Yamhill county since 1875. He was born in 1851 in Hampshire county, West Virginia. His parents, Luke and Anna (Williams) Kuykendall, his grandparents and his great grandparents were all born and reared in West Virginia, excepting his paternal great grandfather, who came to America from Holland. His father was twice married. By his first marriage he had three children, all of whom have resided in Danville, Illinois, since 1850, namely: William; Jacob; and Mrs. Susan Smith, who is a widow and has now reached the age of seventy-five years. To the second union seven children were born: Joseph, Eliza and Luke, all deceased; Mrs. Switzler, of Portland, Oregon; Charles V., our subject; and Fannie and Sallie, deceased.

Having come from West Virginia in early life, Charles V. Kuykendall started out in life on his own account at the age of nineteen years. While a young man he married Eliza Davis, the daughter of Thomas C. and Nancy (Hines) Davis, of Yamhill county. Mr. and Mrs. Davis were both natives of Missouri but were married in Yamhill county in August, 1850, three years after they had come across the plains to settle on a donation claim. They were the parents of four children: Mrs. Sarah Hanning, deceased;

Mrs. Mary Harris, of Portland; Mrs. Belle Beard, of Yamhill county; and Mrs. Charles V. Kuykendall.

Mr. Kuykendall began his property holding by taking up a homestead claim on the coast. In the early days these claims on the extreme western border of the country were the most difficult to cultivate and the great hardships to be endured could scarcely be borne by any but the strongest men. The wild state of the immediate country made access to it almost impossible and the limited number of comforts to be obtained by any means made the thought of living there almost prohibitive. Mr. Kuykendall did not feel that he could take his wife to undergo the hardships which were to be encountered in this unsettled district and so he gave up the claim and remained in the country farther east. He came to Yamhill county in the autumn of 1875, and rented his father-in-law's farm for ten years. Desiring to hold land rather than to rent it, he gave up that lease and purchased eighty-four acres. To this tract he later added one hundred and fifty acres One of the valuable resources of this land is the large clay pit from which clay is shipped to Portland. This is a good paying product and brings four cents per ton. His whole farm is under a good state of cultivation and is utilized to excellent advantage. His timber tracts, comprising two hundred acres, six miles north of Yamhill, are covered with virgin timber and this will in time prove a most valuable holding.

Mr. and Mrs. Kuykendall are the parents of twelve children: Mrs. Lena Walker and Mrs. Blanch Walker, both of Portland, Oregon; Mrs. Zella Wilson, residing in McMinnville, Oregon; Mrs. Kathleen Lampman, of Stayton, Oregon; Lawrence and Charles, who are still at home; Jennie and Hazel, both educated at college and both teaching; Mrs. Mary Hutchcroft, of Newberg, Oregon; Marvin, who is still attending school and lives at home; Opal, who died at the age of five years; and one who died in infancy.

Politically and socially Mr. Kuykendall is liberal in his views. He is a member of the socialist party and, although he does not desire to show his interest by seeking office, he is earnest in his efforts to spread a broad social doctrine. He, with his wife and children, are members of the Christian church, which again shows his liberal views. His life has been characterized by progress and by ability. In making the best use of his opportunities he has added to the development of his county and has made it possible for others to succeed as he himself has done.

WILLIAM M. RENSHAW is a cigar dealer of Eugene, who has made for himself a creditable position in the business circles of the city, where his trade has now reached large proportions. He came to Oregon in 1851, brought by his parents, for he was then less than a year old. He was born in Springfield, Missouri, November 7, 1850, a son of William D. and Mary J. (Walker) Renshaw. The father was a native of Tennessee, his birth having occurred near Nashville in 1823. The mother was of Scotch-Irish lineage, the family, however, being long represented in the south. William D. Renshaw was a farmer by occupation and in addition to cultivating the crops best adapted to soil and climate he also engaged in raising stock. In 1837 he left Tennessee for Missouri and became the owner of a large farm near Springfield, upon which he lived for about fourteen years, or until 1851, when, attracted by the development of the northwest, he made his way across the plains to Oregon, traveling with ox teams. It was a long, tedious and wearisome trip, and there were some dangers as well as difficulties to be encountered. However, they did not have much trouble with the Indians but some of their stock was stolen by the red men. After six months spent upon the way they reached Oregon and settled near Salem. He remained for a year at his original location and then established his home six miles south of Eugene, where he secured a donation claim of three hundred and twenty acres, whereon he engaged extensively in stock-raising, his sound judgment, judicious investment and unfaltering energy winning him success. He was also a very popular resident of the community, having the social qualities and manifesting the personal worth that gained him the confidence, high regard and friendship of all with whom he came in contact. He died in 1888, at the age of sixty-five years, and his death was deeply regretted by a large circle of friends. His political indorsement was ever given to the republican party but he was never ambitious for office. His religious faith was that of the Presbyterian church and to its teachings he was always loyal. In early manhood he wedded Miss Mary J. Walker, who was born in Georgia or in Tennessee and in her girlhood days went with her parents to Greene county, Missouri. She was born in 1828 and died in 1887. By her marriage she became the mother of the following named children: Theodore M., William M., Hugh A., Elmer L., Samuel O., Sarah L. and Hattie. The elder daughter is the wife of Charles Mayhew and the younger the wife of Jefferson Gwin.

William M. Renshaw was but an infant when brought to Oregon and was, therefore, reared amid the wild scenes and environment of frontier life. He was educated in the public schools and remained upon the home farm until he reached the age of nineteen years, during which period he was thoroughly trained in the work of the fields and the care of the stock. He afterward spent four summer seasons employed on the government survey in eastern Oregon and in 1873 he embarked in business on his own account, establishing a butcher shop, which he conducted until 1878. He then went to Grant county in eastern Oregon, where he engaged in stock-raising for two years, but in 1880 returned to Eugene, where he again conducted a butcher business for two years. On the expiration of that period he turned his attention to the liquor business, in which he continued for twenty years, and in September, 1902, he leased the Smeed Hotel, which he conducted for five years, making it the leading hotel of the city. In 1907, however, he retired from the hotel business and after a period of rest opened his present cigar store. He handles the best line of tobacco and cigars and has built up a trade which is most gratifying.

Mr. Renshaw was married in 1878 to Miss Eleanora Cochran, a daughter of James Cochran, who came to Oregon from Indiana in 1853. Mrs. Renshaw was born in the western part of this state, and has been a lifelong resident of Oregon. Mr. Renshaw is very widely known in fraternal circles, holding membership in Eugene Lodge, No. 11, F. & A. M.; Eugene Chapter No. 10, R. A. M.; Eugene Lodge, No. 357, B. P. O. E., of which he has been a trustee for ten years; and Eugene Lodge, No. 15, A. O. U. W. He is likewise an honorary member of the Improved Order of Red Men and of the Foresters. He has a wide acquaintance and is popular among all classes, having the business and social qualities which commend him to the good-will and confidence of all who know him.

NORRIS STAPLES is a retired lumberman of Astoria, and although now largely resting from strenuous business cares is the president and manager of a brick manufacturing company. Carefully directed industrial and commercial pursuits brought him in former years a substantial income that now enables him to rest in considerable measure from further labor and his prosperity is proof of what may be accomplished when one has determination, energy and sound judgment. He was born in Minnesota on the 30th of December, 1866, his parents being John and Mary (Garlinghous) Staples. The father was born in Maine and the mother in Ohio, but their marriage was celebrated at Minneapolis, Minnesota, where they resided for ten years. Subsequently they removed to Elk River, Minnesota, and lived there for twenty years or until the mother's death, when she was about fifty years of age. The father afterward came to the Pacific coast, settling at Spokane, Washington, where he passed away at the venerable age of eighty-four years. They had a family of seven sons and one daughter: Richard H., who died at the age of forty-five years; Clarence, who died when forty-two years of age; John, of Post Falls, Washington; Cyrus, who is living in the state of Washington; Norris, of this review; Herbert L., who passed away near Great Falls, Montana; Alice, the wife of Herbert Brickell, of Wardner, Idaho; and Eugene, who is living near Davenport, Washington.

Norris Staples spent his youthful days under the parental roof and has been a resident of the Pacific coast country a number of years. He acquired a common school education to serve as a foundation for his later advancement in life, and after spending a considerable period in the employ of others he used the capital that he had saved from his earnings in establishing business on his own account when thirty two years of age. At that time he opened a logging camp which he conducted with most gratifying success until 1904, when he sold out and has since practically lived retired in Astoria, where he owns an elegant home and various business properties. He has not altogether, however, put aside business interests, for he is now president and manager of a brick manufacturing company. Other than business affairs, however, make demand upon his time and attention and no duty or obligation of citizenship is ever neglected by him. His political allegiance is given to the republican party, and although he can in no sense be called an office seeker, he is now serving on the executive board of the centennial committee of the sanitary and reclamation committee.

On the 13th of November, 1894, was celebrated the marriage of Norris Staples to Miss Mattie S. Behnke, a native of Iowa and a daughter of Frank and Doretta Behnke, both of whom were natives of Germany. They were married, however, in Iowa, and at an early day came to the northwest, settling in Washington where they resided until the father's death in 1890. Later the mother removed with her family to Astoria where she is now living at the age of sixty years. Mr. Behnke was a soldier of the Civil war, earnestly supporting the Union cause during the sanguinary struggle which proved the supremacy of the national government. Unto him and his wife were born five children: Frank, now living in Astoria; Charlie, who died at the age of twenty-four years; Mrs. Staples; and Fred and Christopher, also residents of Astoria. Mr. and Mrs. Staples are the parents of two children: Elva D., who was born September 29, 1895, and is now attending the high school of Astoria, and also pursuing studies in music; and Harvey D., who was born April 8, 1897, and is yet in school.

Mr. Staples holds membership with the Elks lodge and also with the Concatenated Order of Hoo-Hoos, an organization of lumbermen. His manner, frank, genial and jovial, wins for him friends wherever he goes and the reliability and integrity which he displayed in the conduct of his business affairs gained for him the confidence and high regard of all with whom he was associated in commercial relations.

ROBERT TILDEN BOALS, M. D., one of the rising young physicians of Tillamook, was born in Parsons, Kansas, February 6, 1877. In the maternal line he is of Irish extraction, his mother, whose maiden name was Mary Kane, having been born in the Emerald Isle. In April, 1881, his father, J. W. Boals, with his family migrated to Oregon, locating on a homestead on the Columbia river. His entire attention was thereafter devoted to the improvement of this place, which he brought to a high state of cultivation before his death in 1905. Of the five children born of the union of Mr. and Mrs. Boals, but two are now living: S. M., who is a lumberman of Mayger, Oregon; and our subject. Mr. Boals was a veteran of the Civil war, having been a member of the One Hundred and Seventh Pennsylvania Volunteers, and spent three years in service at the front.

As he was a child of only four years when brought to Oregon, Robert Tilden Boals has spent practically his entire life on the Pacific coast. In the acquirement of his early education he attended the public schools of Kalama, Washington, and those of California, later attending the Oregon State Normal School, while he spent two years in the University of California. Having decided to adopt the profession of medicine for his life vocation he then matriculated in the medical department of the Oregon State University, from which institution he was graduated with the degree of M. D. with the class of 1903. In order to acquire a more practical understanding of the science of healing he accepted an internship in the Multnomah county hospital, where he spent a year. At the expiration of that period he went to Portland to take a similar position in St. Vincent's hospital. He subsequently spent six or seven months in the children's hospital at San Francisco, of which city he was a resident at the time of the earthquake. Feeling at the expiration of that period that he was fully qualified, both theoretically and practically, to assume the responsibilities of a private practice, he came to Tillamook, where, in September, 1906, he established an office for the general practice of medicine, for which he is ably qualified. He has met with very good success since locating here and is succeeding in building up a lucrative practice among a most desirable class of people.

In December, 1907, Dr. Boals was united in marriage to Miss Clara Tohl of Nehalem, Oregon, a daughter of William Tohl, one of the pioneer farmers of that vicinity. Unto Dr. and Mrs. Boals has been born one son, Robert.

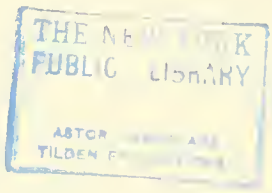
His political support Dr. Boals gives to the republican party, but his interest in civic affairs is practically limited to the casting of a ballot on election day. Fraternally he holds membership in the Masonic order and the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, while Mrs. Boals belongs to the Shakespearean club of Tillamook. Dr. Boals is a conscientious practitioner, constantly studying and keeping in close touch with every progressive movement of the science, yet is not too keen to lay aside a well tried and thoroughly proven method for one more recently advanced, if he is not thoroughly convinced of the latter's efficacy. His spirit of good-cheer and helpfulness, as also his close attention to the needs of his patients and his unremitting efforts to relieve their suffering, have won him the high regard as well as loyalty of those who have employed his services.

OTIS I. CIRCLE, who since 1909 has been a prominent merchant of Marcola, became identified with the state of Oregon in 1902, when he became a clerk in a general merchandise store. He was born in Rice county, Kansas, May 30, 1875, a son of I. F. and Margaret J. (Martin) Circle. The father was born in Indiana and the mother in Iowa, their wedding being celebrated, however, in Missouri. Shortly after their marriage, in 1872, they removed to Rice county, Kansas, and settled on a homestead near Plum creek, where the family resided for fourteen years. In the early days in Kansas the father killed buffalo and other game for food for his family. Before leaving that state he was obliged to turn his farm over to his creditors in payment of bills accumulated during three successive dry years, which yielded him no crops. He removed to Missouri in 1888, settling in Carroll county, where he remained for two years, and then removed to Iowa and there purchased a farm of eighty acres upon which he resided for six years. At the end of that time he traded this farm for a hundred and sixty-acre tract of land which he operated for four years, and then, selling out, removed to Oklahoma, settling in Noble county, where he purchased one hundred and sixty acres, upon which he lived for five years. In 1903 he removed to Oregon and settled at Eugene, where he retired and now makes his home. Shortly after going to that city he purchased an eighty-acre tract which, however, he recently sold. He is living in a beautiful home in the city of Eugene. In his family were eleven children, seven of whom are still living, four having passed away in infancy, the surviving members being: O. I., of this review; E. M., of Florence, Oregon; S. W., of California; Lella May, at home; Lester, of California; Lewis, of Marcola; and Taylor, living with his parents in Eugene.

Otis I. Circle remained with his parents until twenty-one years of age and then for four years worked as a farm hand. After that he worked in a store for fifty cents a day for nine months, after which, his services proving satisfactory, his salary was raised to twenty dollars a month. He then spent five months in school, after which he returned to work in the store and was paid thirty-two dollars and fifty cents per month for three years. In 1902 he migrated to Oregon and settled in Eugene, where he began working in a store. He lived in that city for six years, being continuously employed in general mercantile stores there, and then, in 1909, he purchased a general store at Marcola and in its operation he is assisted by his father, who is a silent partner, the father having come to this state shortly after the son's arrival here. The store now owned by Otis I. Circle and his father is the leading one of Marcola and comprises a large stock of general merchandise. Mr. Circle also owns his own home in the town where he is engaged in business.

In 1905 Mr. Circle was married to Miss Nellie Leeper, a native of Douglas county, Oregon, where she was born December 31, 1879, a daughter of W. H. and Annie Leeper. Her father was a native of Iowa and the mother's birth occurred in Oregon. In the latter state they were married and here they have since maintained their home, now living retired in Philomath. The grandfather of Mrs. Circle crossed the plains to this state at a very early day. In the family

O. L. CIRCLE



THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASTOR
TILDEN

of Mr. and Mrs. Leeper were three children, of whom one passed away in infancy. The surviving brother of Mrs. Circle is George, who makes his home in Eugene. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Circle were born two children: Neva, whose birth occurred December 16, 1906; and Nola May, who was born December 1, 1909. The family are adherents of the Methodist Episcopal church and contribute liberally to the support of the church work. Mr. Circle is one of the most prominent and successful business men in Marcola, his methods being modern and progressive, while at the same time he has earned a reputation for square dealing. He is a remarkably good buyer, using excellent judgment in the selection of stock, a fact which in a great measure explains the success which he has so largely attained in his mercantile career in Marcola. Having received a college education he is well equipped to successfully manage business affairs and is also valuable as a citizen of his community, being a useful member of society. Although his residence in Marcola has been comparatively brief, he enjoys a very wide acquaintance in the community in which he is well known and universally respected.

WILLIAM SWIGER, a farmer and dairyman of Union county, has been actively identified with agricultural interests in this state for almost a quarter of a century and has won a gratifying measure of success in this connection. His birth occurred in Sarpy county, Nebraska, on the 10th of October, 1860, his parents being Nathan and Polly (Wilkinson) Swiger. The father was born in Muskingum county, Ohio, on the 6th of January, 1830, while the mother was a native of Jackson county, that state. John Swiger, the paternal grandfather of our subject, removed from Pennsylvania to Ohio in early manhood, settling in Muskingum county of the latter state. Subsequently he took up his abode in Illinois, where he spent the remainder of his life, passing away in La Salle county about 1850. Nathan Swiger, the father of William Swiger, was married in Illinois and in 1858 or 1859 removed to Nebraska, locating in Richardson county, where he remained until 1864. In that year he joined a party journeying westward with ox teams, and all along the road others fell in with the train, some being bound for Montana. They experienced no trouble with the Indians, and Mr. Swiger eventually reached the Grande Ronde valley, where he remained until 1865. In that year he removed to the Willamette valley, where he continued to reside until the fall of 1869, when he returned to the Grande Ronde valley and located in High valley, Union county. There he made his home until the spring of 1889, when he sold out to his son, William, and purchased property from H. P. Stewart on Little creek, three miles east of Union, where he spent the remainder of his life, passing away in May, 1890. Throughout his active business career he had been successfully engaged in the pursuits of stock raising and farming. Unto him and his wife were born seven children, four of whom still survive.

William Swiger, who was the fourth in order of birth in his father's family, spent his boyhood days in the Willamette and Grande Ronde valleys. In 1889, when a young man of twenty-nine years, he started out as an agriculturist on his own account. At the time of the division of the home farm, comprising nearly six hundred acres, the homestead fell to his share. The creek and two small branches run through the property, so that the land is well supplied with water. Mr. Swiger gave his attention principally to stock-raising during his earlier business career but has recently taken up dairying, which is proving a profitable source of income to him.

Mr. Swiger has been twice married. On the 18th of October, 1882, he wedded Miss Laura M. Crosby, her father being James Crosby, who was a native of Ohio and came to Oregon in 1850. Unto them were born the following children: Willis V., who is now a student in a medical college at San Francisco; Ernest E., a resident of Oregon; and Lloyd M., who makes his home in West Berkeley, California. The wife and mother was called to her final rest in 1891 and in November of the following year Mr. Swiger was again married, his second union being with Mrs. Hilda Snivley, who came to this state in 1882. Earl Vernon, the only child of this marriage, is still at home.

At the polls Mr. Swiger casts his ballot in support of the men and measures of the democratic party. The cause of education has ever found in him a stanch champion and for the past eighteen years he has served in the capacity of school clerk. Fraternally he is a member of the Woodmen of the World. Practically his entire life has been spent in the northwest and he is therefore thoroughly familiar with its history and growth, which has always been to him a source of justifiable pride.

WILLIAM F. KEADY. Some men possess several talents and have little difficulty in making a success of anything they undertake. To this class belongs William F. Keady, postmaster of Waldport, Lincoln county. He is a highly efficient public officer, a musician of acknowledged standing throughout the northwest, and a business man who has demonstrated his ability to compete successfully in an open field with those who make a specialty of their respective lines.

He was born at Salem, Oregon, October 14, 1871, being a son of William P. Keady. The father was born at Springfield, Illinois, in 1850, and received his education at Kankakee in the same state. He was employed by his father upon the Kankakee Times, a weekly newspaper, which was in a highly flourishing condition during the latter part of the '60s. In 1869 Mr. Keady emigrated to the Pacific coast and engaged in placer mining at French Camp, California, for a short time. After giving up this work he located at Salem, Oregon, where he became connected with the printing business which he had learned in his earlier years. He gained an excellent reputation in his calling and was appointed state printer for the unexpired term of W. B. Carter, who was his partner in publishing the Corvallis Gazette. In 1882 he was elected upon the republican ticket from Benton county as representative to the state legislature and displayed an ability which gained for him the speakership of the lower house when he was returned for a second term. He removed to Multnomah county in 1887 and in 1892 was elected to the legislature from this county and again occupied the chair as speaker of the house. He was connected for a number of years with the Oregon Water Power & Railway Company and was also for ten years in the employ of the Oregon Railway & Navigation Company. Since 1905 he has been identified with the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway, with headquarters at Seattle, Washington. The maiden name of the mother of our subject was Julia G. Wilson. She was born in Indiana and crossed the plains as a child in 1851, the family locating in Tillamook county, Oregon.

William F. Keady possessed advantages of education at Salem, Portland and Corvallis, passing through the various grades of the public and high schools. He became a student of the Oregon Agricultural College at Corvallis and was graduated from this institution in 1896. After leaving college he took the civil service examination and passed so creditably that in 1897 he was appointed United States customs examiner at Portland. This office he filled for nine years and, for five years of this period was chairman of the board of examiners. He resigned on Christmas day, 1906, and came to Waldport, Oregon, where he assisted in organizing the Waldport Lumber Company. After serving as secretary of the company for nine months he disposed of his interest and engaged in the real-estate business. Since May, 1910, he has served as postmaster of the town and has discharged his duties in a way that meets the hearty approval of the patrons of the office and the officials at Washington.

In 1898 Mr. Keady was married to Miss Maud Cauthorn, who was born at Corvallis, a daughter of James A. and Martha M. Cauthorn, who were pioneers of Benton county, Oregon. Mr. and Mrs. Keady are the parents of four children: James C., who is now twelve years of age; Kenneth W., aged ten years; Martha M., six years of age; and Paul F., who is three years old.

Mr. Keady gives his political allegiance to the republican party, in which he was an active worker before appointment to the office of postmaster. He served most creditably as secretary of the republican county central committee in 1908. He and his wife are members of the Episcopal church at Corvallis. Fraternally he is identified with the Artisans and the Woodmen of the World, being a past master of the former organization. He possesses musical ability of a high order and for three years led a band of twenty-four pieces at Portland known as the Woodstock band. He has played in a number of bands and in 1907 organized and incorporated a band of eighteen pieces at Waldport, which under his efficient direction has become recognized as the best band in this part of the state.

GEORGE W. SHARP is one of the active and aggressive farmers of Yamhill county. Like his father, Elisha Sharp, he is a native of Illinois, having been born there in 1870. His mother, Ellen (Houston) Sharp was born in Texas but at the age of four she was sent to Illinois to one of her great-aunts to be reared, and the remainder of her life was spent in that state. At sixteen years of age she married Elisha Sharp, who was two years her senior. Her death occurred in 1881 and that of Mr. Sharp in 1885. To this union nine children were born, namely: Oliver, Walter, Oscar and Tempie, all deceased; Mrs. Flora Hubert, of Portland, Oregon; Dr. Florence Manion, also of Portland; Mrs. Mary Breeze, of Los Angeles, California; George W.; and Mrs. Catherine Miller, of Yamhill county.

George W. Sharp left school and started upon his independent career at the age of fifteen. For five years he was employed near his home by a railroad company and worked at grading and on the river levees. After this, realizing the opportunities the west offered to the beginner, he removed to Portland, Oregon. There he made his start by working in a sawmill for two years and in this way made it possible for him to purchase eighty acres of the farming land which has since proved so productive.

Shortly after his establishment upon his own farm he married Kate Miller, who was born in New York state in 1874. Her parents, Claus and Anna (Clintworth) Miller, both born in Germany in 1844, were married before leaving their native country to settle in New York state, where they lived until 1875. At that time they moved to Nebraska and later came on farther west to Oregon. In Nebraska Mr. Miller farmed and raised stock. When he came to Oregon he lived for a few years near where the town of Gaston now stands and later in 1890, removed to Yamhill county, settling six miles north of Yamhill. It was here that their daughter Kate was married to George W. Sharp in 1893. Mr. and Mrs. Miller were the parents of four children: John and William, both of Yamhill county; Mrs. Anna Jones, of Washington county; and Mrs. George W. Sharp. To Mr. and Mrs. Sharp six children have been born: Ann, born in 1894, who has finished high school and will soon complete her college course; Elisha, born in 1896; Merle, born in 1898; Paul, born in 1901; Lawrence, born in 1904; and Maurice, born in 1908. Elisha, Merle, Paul and Lawrence are all attending school.

Mr. Sharp's whole attention has been given to farming and agricultural pursuits, and since purchasing the original eighty acres he has added five hundred acres to his farm. All this land is in a rich agricultural country and has been cultivated by Mr. Sharp for fruit growing principally. In addition to this he has a hop yard and also raises thoroughbred cattle and other stock. Being a comparatively young man, his progress seems far above the average and gives promise for even greater achievements in the future.

He is a member of the Woodmen of the World. Finding that his agricultural pursuits must have his whole attention if he is to continue to progress in the future as he has done in the past, he has never sought election to any office and he does not engage in any political activity. This concentration of effort doubtless accounts for the success which he has experienced. At fifteen years of age he started upon his independent career and he has constantly advanced, so that today he stands high among the successful farmers of his county.

REV. FRANCIS E. SCOFIELD, who since September, 1909, has been preaching in the Methodist Episcopal church at Myrtle Point, was born in New York, a son of Wilson and Mary (Scofield) Scofield, in whose family were four children: Elizabeth, deceased; Ruth, the wife of Joe Baker, of Illinois; Loretta, the wife of Ira W. Russell, of Canada; and Francis E., of this review.

The last named spent the first eighteen years of his life in the Empire state and was reared upon a farm which his father owned and cultivated. The public schools afforded him his educational privileges and his experiences were those which usually fall to the lot of farm lads. On leaving New York he made his way to Illinois but remained only a brief period and then went to Iowa, where he engaged in teaching school. His father also went to that state and purchased a farm which he afterward sold to his son Francis, who lived thereon for several years. Our subject then went to Kansas, where he remained for four years, taking up a homestead and also purchasing land. He there engaged in raising sheep and cattle until he determined to locate in the far west and made his way to California. After spending the summer in that state, however, he came to Oregon in 1876 and settled at Dora, where he engaged in farming for twelve years. In 1888 he removed to Marshfield, where he began preaching regularly having previous to this time done some ministerial work in the communities in which he had lived. His parents were Methodists and he was reared in that faith. A church was organized in Coos county before he removed to Marshfield and Mr. Scofield joined that church, which was of the Baptist denomination. He was chosen its preacher and continued there to deliver the gospel message for nine years, after which he returned to his old home at Dora and engaged in preaching for the Congregational church there. In September, 1909, he came to Myrtle Point and accepted the pastorate of the Methodist Episcopal church here. He, however, also often preaches in the Presbyterian church. Rev. Scofield is an exponent of one of the signs of the times—that feeling which recognizes that Christianity in its broadest and best sense transcends denominationalism and though people may differ on minor points, in the essential points of Christian religion they are one. This has enabled him to work in harmony with various churches and at each point to do a notable work for the good of the community.

In Fort Dodge, Iowa, the Rev. Scofield was married to Miss Estella Emmons, a native of New York and a daughter of Amasa Emmons, who removed to the west during her infancy. Her brother Avery and a sister, Emma, live in Iowa, and another sister, Roxanna, is a resident of Nebraska. The Rev. and Mrs. Scofield have become parents of four children: Ida R., the wife of Professor Fargo, of Salem, Oregon, who was at one time a teacher in the McMinnville (Oregon) College; Mrs. Edna Dailey, a widow who is a trained nurse living with her parents and has one son, Wilbur; Ivan, a practicing dentist of Grants Pass, Oregon, who is married and has six children; and Clara, who is the wife of Clark Bunch, of Myrtle Point, by whom she has two children, Audrel and Rosella. In his business affairs Mr. Scofield has always been successful and at the present time is engaged in loaning money on property. He is a man liberal in his political views and yet never neglectful of the duties of citizenship. He is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. His honorable, upright life and his example and teachings all are potent elements for moral progress in his community.

J. H. McCUBBIN, who passed away at his home in Lostine on January 31, 1910, was well known in that town and throughout the surrounding county and his qualities were such as gained for him the respect and friendship of all with whom he came into contact. In his business career he won success and was honored by reason of the straightforward methods which he always followed. He was born in Miller county, Missouri, on October 25, 1845, the son of William R. and Nancy Bilyeu McCubbin, who came from Miller county, Missouri, to Oregon, locating in Clackamas county, twelve miles east of Oregon City. There they took up a donation land claim of three hundred and twenty acres and resided thereupon until their death.

J. H. McCubbin was reared on his father's farm and acquired his education in the common schools. When a young man he apprenticed himself to the blacksmith trade to his brother-in-law, J. D. Brazee, with whom he later entered into partnership in that business. For about one year after his marriage, in 1872, he resided in Clackamas county, but in 1873 removed to Wasco county where he engaged in farming and did such blacksmithing as his few neighbors wished done. In 1877 he came to Wallowa valley where he purchased two hundred acres of school land adjoining the town of Lostine and subsequently he added to this until his holdings comprised in all four hundred and eighty acres. He lived on that place until 1906, when he rented the same and moved to Lostine where he spent the remaining years of his life in retirement.

On the 4th of September, 1872, Mr. McCubbin was united in marriage to Miss Marietta Young, who is a native of Clakamas county and a daughter of Joseph and Emily (Barnes) Young. Her parents moved from Missouri to Oregon in 1847, locating in Clackamas county, where they took up a donation land claim and resided on the same until the mother's death, when the father went to Wasco county and there made his home with his son Jerry until his death. To Mr. and Mrs. McCubbin were born six children of whom four survive: Rebecca, the wife of James T. Johnson of Morrow county; Bertha J., who is Mrs. H. A. Kuhn of Wallowa county; Dolly E., who is Mrs. F. L. Pearce of Bellingham, Washington; and Violet W., the wife of W. W. Kuhn of Lostine. The deceased were: Andrew J., who died in infancy; and Mary A., who passed away when twenty-two years of age. The demise of Mr. McCubbin, the husband and father, was deeply deplored by a wide circle of friends and acquaintances.

In politics Mr. McCubbin was a Jackson democrat and took an active interest in local party work. He served as county assessor of Union county when Wallowa county was yet a part of the same, and in 1880 while in that office, was census taker of this county. After the division of Union and Wallowa counties, Mr. McCubbin was for two terms assessor of Wallowa county. Fraternally he was a member of the Lostine Lodge, A. F. & A. M., and of the Anthony Chapter No. 88, of the Order of the Eastern Star, of which chapter Mrs. McCubbin is also a member. Mr. McCubbin was one of the foremost citizens of Wallowa county and was highly esteemed by all who knew him. He was quick to recognize the rights of others and he looked at life from a rational standpoint that brought him a clear understanding of the conditions of the world, its possibilities, and the obligations that rested upon him in his relation to his fellowmen and in citizenship. Mrs. McCubbin resides in Lostine and has a wide circle of friends and acquaintances there who hold her in the highest esteem.

HEIKKI KOLJONEN. A successful representative of the medical profession in Astoria is Dr. Heikki Koljonen, whose name indicates his Scandinavian birth. He is a native of Jamsa, Finland, born May 11, 1874, his parents being Charlie and Serafia Koljonen, who were also natives of Finland, where the mother died in 1899 and the father in 1907.

Of a family of nine children Dr. Koljonen is the only one that ever came to America. He was a young man of thirty years when he crossed the Atlantic. In the meantime he had acquired a high-school education and had taken up the study of medicine when nineteen years of age. In time he was graduated from the Imperial Alexander University at Helsingfors, Finland, completing a course in medicine and surgery in 1903. The following year he crossed the Atlantic to the new world and first settled at Ashtabula, Ohio, where he entered upon active practice, remaining there until 1906. In that year he came to Astoria, where he opened an office and continued in practice until 1908. He then went abroad for further study and research, pursuing a medical course in Berlin, Germany, in 1909. Later in the year he went to Finland, where he practiced for a year and a half in a state surgical hospital at Helsingfors, but in the meantime he had come to appreciate greatly the wider opportunities offered in the new world, and returned to America, settling in Astoria, Oregon. In February, 1911, he opened an office in this city where he has since remained, having a well appointed suite of rooms in the Page building at the corner of Twelfth and Commercial streets. He not only has a good practice among his fellow countrymen but also other people as well and the prompt, capable and conscientious manner in which he performs his professional duties is winning him gratifying success.

In 1908 Dr. Koljonen was married to Miss Annie Schistad, who was born in Astoria in 1888, a daughter of Peter and Annie Schistad, the former a native of Norway and the latter of Finland. The parents were married in Astoria and are still living here. Mrs. Koljonen is their only child. Both the Doctor and his wife have many friends in this city, occupying an enviable position in the social circles in which they move.

GEORGE W. MOODY was well known in the vicinity of Richland and through the Eagle valley where during an active life he carried on general agricultural pursuits. He died in 1910, being at that time in the seventy-fourth year of his age, his birth having occurred in Kentucky in November, 1836. His parents were Michael and Mary (Mercer) Moody, natives of North Carolina, who in 1842 removed from Kentucky to Missouri where they continued to live until called to the home beyond.

George W. Moody was hardly six years of age at the time of the removal to Missouri, and in that state his boyhood and youth were passed with the usual experiences that fall to the lot of the farm lad. He was about twenty-six years of age when in 1863 he started across the plains with ox teams, attracted by the interesting tales he had heard concerning the northwest and its opportunities. It was a long and tedious journey, for the slow moving animals covered only a few miles each day. The roads, too, were in poor condition and there were various difficulties and hardships to encounter, but at length Mr. Moody reached his destination and took up his abode in Burnt River valley where he remained for a year. He then went to Auburn and was engaged in mining for six years. In 1874 he removed to Eagle valley and secured a homestead upon which his widow now resides. He at first owned one hundred and sixty acres of land there but later gave forty acres of this to one of his sons. The remainder of the place is still in the possession

MR. AND MRS. GEORGE W. MOODY

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASTOR, LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS

of Mrs. Moody and is a finely improved farm, equipped with all the accessories and conveniences of a model place of the twentieth century.

Mr. Moody was twice married. His first wife, who died in 1880, was the mother of three sons and two daughters, as follows: Willard, who was murdered several years ago; Henry, who is married and resides in Eagle valley; George, also a resident of Eagle valley; Laura, the wife of Albert Young, a resident of Baker; and Fannie, the wife of William Cole, of Haines, Oregon. Mr. Moody was afterward wedded to Mrs. Polly (Young) Kaetcham, a daughter of Mitchell and Rosa (Daniels) Young, and a native of Mason county, Illinois. She came to Oregon in 1887 and since then has lived in Eagle valley. She had two children by her marriage to John Kaetcham: Elizabeth, the wife of F. F. Severs; and Charles, a resident of St. Louis, Missouri.

Mr. Moody was a republican in his political views, ever standing by the party which was the defense of the Union during the dark days of the Civil war and which has ever been recognized as the party of reform and progress. When hostilities broke out between the north and the south his patriotic spirit was aroused and he donned the soldier's uniform, doing active duty at the front in defense of the cause in which he firmly believed. He ever manifested a spirit of patriotism in his allegiance to his country and his loyalty constitutes an example that might well be followed by others. He also manifested various other sterling traits of character and enjoyed the high regard and good will of all with whom he came in contact.

GILES B. JOHNSON, general agent for the Spokane, Portland & Seattle Railroad at Astoria and also agent for the Great Northern Express Company at that place, was born in Watervliet, Michigan, on the 6th of October, 1872, his parents being J. T. and Elizabeth Johnson, the former a native of Michigan and the latter of Germany. The father was of English lineage and was married in his native state, where he continued to make his home until 1889, when he removed westward with his family and settled in Portland, Oregon. He there worked at the millwright's trade for a short time and later took up his abode at Clatskanie, where he conducted a hotel for several years. He next removed to Hoquiam, Washington, where his wife died. Shortly afterward the father returned to Michigan, and still makes his home upon a farm. In the family were four children: L. B., now a resident of Kalamazoo, Michigan, and proprietor of the business conducted under the name of the Kalamazoo Label Company; Giles B., of this review; H. M., who died at the age of nineteen years; and W. M., who is bookkeeper in a paper mill, and resides with his father.

Giles B. Johnson spent his youthful days under the parental roof until the age of sixteen years and then started out in business life on his own account. He was connected with farming interests in the middle west until 1890, when he came to the Pacific coast, settling in Portland, where he pursued a business course. He then purchased an interest in a mercantile store, which he conducted a short time. In May, 1892, he removed to Tillamook county, Oregon, where he aided in building the first telegraph line in the county, extending from Forest Grove in Washington county down the river to Tillamook City, Oregon. Subsequently this line was extended to Nehalem, at the mouth of the Nehalem river. When this was completed Mr. Johnson became superintendent and manager of twenty miles of the line, which he operated for a year and a half. On the expiration of that period he purchased a half interest in the Nehalem Times, a weekly paper, and soon afterward purchased the interest of his partner, Ira B. Malin, who had purchased the same from J. S. Dellinger, the pioneer newspaper publisher of Tillamook county, who at the present writing owns and publishes the Morning Astorian. Mr. Johnson continued as publisher of the Nehalem Times until the spring of 1898, when he removed the plant to Tillamook City, later selling out. In the same year he entered the employ of the Astoria & Columbia River Railroad as local agent at Seaside, where he remained a year, when he was transferred to Rainier, Oregon, where he stayed five years. In 1905 he came to Astoria as local agent for the railroad, which position he filled until 1908, when he was made general agent of the Astoria & Columbia River Railroad Company, which in March, 1911, changed its name to the Spokane, Portland & Seattle Railroad. He is also agent for the Great Northern Express Company at Astoria and his service in both connections is highly satisfactory to the public as well as to the corporations which he represents.

In his political views Mr. Johnson has always been a republican and upon the party ticket has been elected to several offices. He served as police judge and city auditor of Seaside for one term, resigning the office upon his removal from that city. He also occupied the same position at Rainier for four terms and at different times has been prominent in the councils of the party, aiding in shaping its course in an official capacity. He served as secretary of the Columbia County Central Committee for two years and was also chairman of that committee. From 1902 until 1904 he was a member of the second congressional district committee of Oregon and during the legislative session of 1905 was chief clerk of engrossed bills in the senate, and also served in a similar capacity in the senate during the session of 1907. He is not a sentimentalist but a worker and his efforts whether in political or business lines are always resultant and productive.

In January, 1904, Mr. Johnson was married to Miss Centennial Lovell, a native of Michigan and a daughter of John and Mary Lovell. Her father died in 1892 but her mother now resides in Seaside, Oregon. In their family were four children, of whom Mrs. Johnson is the youngest. By her marriage she has become the mother of a daughter, La Veta R., who was born April 21, 1895, and is now attending the high school in Kalamazoo, Michigan, and also pursuing a course in both instrumental and vocal music. Mr. Johnson is well known in fraternal and club circles, holding membership with the Woodmen of the World and with Astoria Lodge of Elks. He is likewise a member of the Irving Club of Astoria and the Astoria Motor Boat Club, and attractive social qualities render him popular among all with whom he comes in contact.

GELO FREEMAN PARKER, who is serving for the second term as county surveyor of Clatsop county, Oregon, and makes his home in Astoria, was born in Petaluma, California, January 17, 1854. His father, Freeman Parker, was a native of Washington, Vermont, born April 5, 1822, and married Laura Adaline Roberts, whose birth occurred in Barre, Vermont, June 1, 1821. Both were representatives of old New England families. Freeman Parker attended the Norwich University of Vermont and afterward engaged in teaching school, in surveying and in farming. He went to California by the Panama route during the great gold rush of 1849 and in 1852 he brought his wife and eldest son by the same route, proceeding by boat up the Chagres river, his wife being "packed" or carried on the backs of donkeys or men over the route where the canal is now building. All were sick with Panama fever and Mrs. Parker's brother, dying, was buried at sea when they were a few days out from San Francisco. Arrived in California it was a year before Mrs. Parker saw another white woman and such respect was entertained for her because of her character and because of the fact that she was the only white woman in that vicinity, that men spread their brocaded silk sashes upon the ground for her to walk upon. She died at the age of fifty-four years. Freeman Parker has remained through life a man of liberal education, because of his broad reading, and is still vigorous mentally and physically and is beloved by all. At the age of ninety years he still resides on the old farm at Petaluma, worn out by gratuitous attention to the sick.

G. F. Parker acquired a common-school education in his native town but ill health prevented his pursuing a college course during the years he would otherwise have given to further study. He worked upon the home farm until he had reached the age of twenty and then removed to Astoria, Oregon, in 1874. He there secured a clerkship in the general mercantile store of C. L. Parker with whom he continued until 1880. He afterward filled the positions of county and city surveyor until 1887 when, under the firm name of Parker & Hanson, he began merchandizing on his own account and continued in that business until 1897. At the time of the gold discoveries in Alaska he went to Skagway and was appointed by General Distin to the position of United States deputy surveyor for Alaska and also served as mineral surveyor. He was on the engineering corps of the White Pass & Yukon Railway during its construction and until his return to Astoria in 1902. Since the 6th of July, 1908, he has served as county surveyor of Clatsop county, Oregon.

On the 20th of August, 1885, in Astoria, Mr. Parker was married to Miss Lucy J. Powell, the fifth of the nine children of Henry and Martha Powell. Both of her parents were born in Aitringham, Cheshire, England, the former in 1824 and the latter in 1827. In 1849 they became residents of Illinois and in 1875 arrived in Astoria, Oregon. Her father died in 1892, followed three years later by his wife. He was a man of unusually estimable character, a prominent church worker and was an elder in the Presbyterian church at the time of his death. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Parker have been born three children: Lois L., Kenneth H. and Lenna G. The daughter Lois is the wife of Lincoln Beaumont Chambers, first lieutenant in the Coast Artillery, U. S. A.

Mr. Parker has always been a progressive republican but has never sought or desired office aside from the position of surveyor. He is a man of broad, liberal views, whose ideas of life are practical, being based upon thorough understanding and study of conditions. He has had many interesting experiences during his residence upon the coast and in his sojourn in Alaska, has firm faith in the future of the west and is thoroughly imbued with the spirit of enterprise which has been the dominant factor in the upbuilding of this section of the country.

ALBIN W. NORBLAD. It is always interesting to note the rise of one whose business prominence and success entitles him to more than passing mention, and in this connection it is pleasing to record the history of Albin W. Norblad, who at the age of seven years sold newspapers in Grand Rapids, Michigan, and is now a leading and growing lawyer of Astoria. He was born in Malmo, Sweden, on the 19th of March, 1881, a son of Peter and Bessie (Anderson) Norblad, who were also natives of that country. Coming to America during the early childhood of their son Albin they settled in Grand Rapids, Michigan, where they resided until the death of the father in 1910, since which time Mrs. Norblad has become a resident of Astoria. Their family numbered three children, of whom Albin W. is the eldest. The others, Clara and George, are still with their mother.

Following the arrival of the family in Grand Rapids Albin W. Norblad attended the public schools until twelve years of age, but for five years prior to that time also carried and sold newspapers, thus contributing to his support. He was a member of the Evening Press Newsboys Band, with which he made a trip through the southern states, the band winning a gold medal offered by John Philip Sousa to the boys' band making the greatest advancement in music in a year. Leaving school at the age of twelve, Mr. Norblad secured a position with the Grand Rapids Furniture Company of Chicago, with which he continued for a number of years. Later he obtained a position as a newspaper reporter and while acting in that capacity promoted his education by attending the Chicago Seminary of Science for four years. Thus laying a good foundation for further progress along educational lines, he entered upon a three years' course of law at the Chicago Law School and was graduated in June, 1905. In April of the same year he was admitted to the bar and at once began practice in Grand Rapids, where he remained for a few months. He then removed to Escanaba, Michigan, where he again followed his profession, forming a partnership with Judd Yelland, which continued until 1908. He was appointed acting prosecuting attorney of Delta county, Michigan, and filled that position until July, 1908. His partnership with Mr. Yelland was discontinued on the election of the latter to the office of probate judge and Mr. Norblad then practiced alone in Escanaba until 1909. The west, with its broader opportunities, however, attracted him and, coming to the coast, he settled at Astoria, where he entered into partnership with G. A. Hemple for the practice of law, this relation continuing until June, 1910. He has since been alone, with offices at Nos. 3 and 4 Page building, Astoria. He has been admitted to practice in the Oregon and Michigan federal courts and also in the supreme court of the United States. At the present writing (1911) he is serving as city attorney, having been the nominee of both the republican and democratic parties at the primary, a fact which indicates his standing as a man and citizen and the confidence reposed in his professional ability. He is a lawyer of ability, his preparation of his cases is thorough and exhaustive, and his presentation of an issue clear and forcible. He is seldom, if ever, at fault in the application of a legal principle and his devotion to his clients' interests is proverbial. He is also attorney for the Port of Astoria and city of Warrenton.

On the 29th of September, 1906, Mr. Norblad was married to Miss Edna Lyle Cates, who was born in Wisconsin, and is a daughter of Lew and Liva Cates, both of whom were natives of Iowa. The mother died in 1890 and in 1909 the father removed to Cottage Grove, Oregon, where he is now publishing a paper known as the Cottage Grove Sentinel. In the Cates family were four children: Ina, now the wife of Asa Curtis, of Astoria; Mrs. Norblad; Harry, a resident of Michigan; and Grace, who is living with her sister Mrs. Norblad. A. W. Norblad, Jr., the only child of our subject and his wife, is an interesting little lad of four years, his birth having occurred September 12, 1908. The parents are both members of the Presbyterian church and are widely and favorably known socially in their adopted city. Mr. Norblad is now lecturing knight of the order of Elks, is a member of the Knights of Pythias lodge, the Modern Woodmen camp, the Odd Fellows society and the Masonic fraternity, in which he has attained high rank, being now a thirty-second degree Mason and a member of the Mystic Shrine. He also belongs to several Scandinavian lodges and the Phi Alpha Delta, a law fraternity. At one time he was secretary of the Business Men's Association of Escanaba, Michigan, and in 1910 president of Astoria Chamber of Commerce, and his military history covers service with the Second Michigan Infantry and the First Illinois Infantry, and with the Michigan Naval Brigade, having been commissioned a lieutenant of the latter. Each experience in his life he has regarded as a preparation for the duties and labors to follow, and he has made each day count for the utmost, actuated at all times by a laudable ambition that has prompted him to put forth earnest and effective effort in the attainment of the goal which lies before him.

ROLLIE W. WATSON, who for the past four years has been engaged in the real estate and insurance business in Tillamook county, was born in Cottonwood Falls, Kansas, on the 9th of January, 1874. He is a son of Clarence C. and Ida Ella (Hinckley) Watson, the father a native of Lynchburg, Virginia, and the mother of Dublin, Ohio. His father, who was engaged in the railroad and mercantile business during the entire period of his active career, passed away in Pueblo, Colorado, in 1890, at the age of about fifty years. The mother is still living and makes her home in New Mexico. Of the union of Mr. and Mrs. Watson there were born three children: Ferry, the wife of Dr. C. B. Brown, of Roy, New Mexico; Rollie W., our subject; and Frances E., who is a resident of Tennessee.

The education of Rollie W. Watson was obtained in the public schools of Cottonwood Falls, Kansas, which he attended until he was thirteen years of age, when he went to sea. For seven years thereafter he was in the merchant marine service on the Pacific coast, then went into the navy. He entered the naval service of the United States in July, 1895, remaining therein until December, 1902. During this period he served on seventeen different vessels, among them being the following: Mohican, Marion, Independence, Olympia, Petrel, Machias, Monocacy, Princeton, Isla de Luzon, Calamianes, Vicksburg, Yorktown, Manila and General Alava. He served with two honorable discharges in both of which he is credited with excellent personal qualifications. He was in the Spanish American war from 1898 up to the time of his first discharge. Some of the engagements took in all of the ports of the Island of Mindanao, and during the Moro uprisings he assisted in establishing naval stations at Bassa Land, on the Island of Jolo, in the southernmost part of the Philippine archipelago. The lighthouses in the southern part of the islands were reestablished by the General Alava, during the period of Mr. Watson's service on that boat. They took many outposts and established garrisons, their duties being at times most arduous and difficult

He was on the islands from 1898 to 1902 and during his service was wounded in the wrist. He has since been awarded a pension by the government for injuries sustained.

After receiving his discharge in December, 1902, Mr. Watson came to Tillamook and engaged in newspaper work, becoming proprietor of the Herald, which journal he edited until 1907, when he disposed of it and entered the real-estate and fire insurance business. He has met with a goodly measure of success in this undertaking, having a well established business with a constantly increasing patronage.

On the 13th of January, 1903, Mr. Watson was united in marriage to Miss Hope M. Nolan, who is a native daughter of Tillamook, and a representative of one of Oregon's pioneer families. Mrs. Watson is a daughter of M. E. and Margarete E. (Jenkins) Nolan. The father, who is deceased, was a packer and owned a donation claim of three hundred and twenty acres, while the mother, who is living in Portland, came to the state with her family in 1860. Mr. and Mrs. Nolan had the usual experiences that fell to the lot of the early settlers, and he was a veteran of the Cayuse and other Indian wars. Two children have been born of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Watson: James Clarence and Rolletta Jewel.

Mr. Watson is one of the public-spirited men of the county, who has the greatest confidence in the wonderful possibilities afforded by Oregon both commercially and agriculturally and is one of the enthusiastic members of the Tillamook Commercial Club. He is also one of the board of directors of the Oregon State Good Roads Association, being an ardent good roads booster. Fraternally he is a Mason and an Odd Fellow, and also belongs to the Knights of Pythias, the Order of the Eastern Star and the Rebekahs, being an earnest worker in all of these organizations. Mr. Watson's extensive travels and varied experiences have made him not only a very interesting man socially, but have been the means of his developing those qualities that give most promising assurance of his success.

JOHN MAKI, manager of the Western Workmen's Company, a publishing concern, to which position he was appointed on coming to Astoria in 1910, was born in Finland in 1880. His parents were Mathew and Elizabeth (Ollinn) Maki. The father died in Finland in 1896 and the mother still resides there. To them were born nine children of whom three are living in America, Matt, now a resident of Duluth, Minnesota; Jacob, also of that state; and John. The other six are still residents of Finland.

The boyhood and youth of John Maki passed uneventfully. A portion of his time was devoted to the acquirement of an education and later he utilized the means presented for earning a living, but, awakening to a realization of the fact that business opportunities in America were superior to those of his native country, he came to the new world in 1903, first settling at Ashtabula, Ohio. There he worked in the employ of a railroad for three months, after which he removed to Duluth, Minnesota, where he was employed in the Cutler Company warehouse for three years. Realizing that his advancement might be more rapid if he had better educational facilities, he resolved to overcome this lack of earlier years and attended business college near Duluth, pursuing a three-years course which he completed by graduation in 1908. He was then appointed manager of the college and occupied that position for two years, and in 1910 came to Astoria, where he accepted the position of manager of the Western Workmen's Company, a publishing company, which is his present business connection. He is well qualified for the work that is entrusted to him and is extending the scope of the business which is meeting with substantial success. His political views are in accord with advanced ideas of socialism. He has never had occasion to regret his determination to seek a home in the new world, for he not only found the opportunity he has sought but also pleasant social relations which have brought him many friends.

MRS. MAGGIE BUCKLEY is the widow of James D. Buckley, having her residence on the beautiful estate, comprising three hundred and fifty-one acres of highly improved land, located in Jackson county adjacent to Ruch postoffice, Oregon. This property consists of the entire real-estate holdings possessed by Mr. Buckley at the time of his death. Mrs. Buckley was born in Trenton, New Jersey. She is the daughter of James and Mary (McGovern) Riley, both of whom were natives of Ireland. She emigrated to Oregon with her grandparents in 1869, making the journey down the Atlantic seaboard and by way of Panama, landing safely in due time in the golden state of California. From this state the family moved to Oregon and made their first settlement on Bear creek. She made her home with an uncle until the time of her marriage which occurred June 13, 1870, on which date she was united in wedlock to James D. Buckley, who was a native of Ireland and who emigrated from his native land to Oregon in 1852 and in 1854 he preempted a government homestead of one hundred and sixty acres in Jackson county, settling in the Rogue river valley. Having duly made entry of his homestead he moved at once upon the land and there built his home and immediately occupied himself with the development and cultivation of his land.

As the years of sunshine and shower contributed their share to his ceaseless industry he reaped abundant harvests, the value of which far exceeded the expenses necessary for the family and the operation of the land, and he was enabled to add by purchase to his original homestead and continued so to do until he was the owner of three hundred and fifty-one acres of the very best agricultural land in the Rogue river valley. As a farmer he paid special attention to the breeding and raising of fine stock. While

JAMES D. BUCKLEY

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY

ASTOR, LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS.

thus engaged in the work of improving and enlarging his farm and home he was suddenly called to rest from his earthly labors and ended his pilgrimage at his home in the midst of his strength and active years.

He was a member of the Pioneer Society of Southern Oregon and also a member of the Masonic lodge. He died a member of the Catholic church, the faith in which he was born and reared. In the family of Mr. and Mrs. Buckley seven children were born: Rose; John D.; James T.; Mary Catherine; Frances, who died in 1884; David P.; and George. Mrs. Buckley, upon the death of her husband found herself confronted with the large task of caring for the interests of the family, and in the conduct of the estate of her husband she has proven herself to be a woman of unusual business ability and with the efficient assistance of her daughter Catherine has maintained the high reputation of the family as one of the most progressive and successful in agricultural pursuits in Jackson county. She is a woman highly respected by her friends and loved and revered by her children, in each of whom she takes a vital and sustained interest.

WILLIAM U. CROW, a retired agriculturist of Wallowa county, was born in Noble county, Ohio, April 30, 1844, a son of Peter and Sarah (Pryor) Crow, both of whom passed their entire lives in Noble county. The father was engaged in agricultural pursuits.

Reared in his native state, William U. Crow at the usual age attended school in an old pioneer log schoolhouse which was furnished with slab benches and puncheon floors. His education was naturally limited, as at that time the district schools taught only the most rudimentary branches of study. In 1863 Mr. Crow undertook the management of the home farm, which he operated in connection with other land until 1888. Disposing of this property in that year, he came to Oregon, where his son S. P., and daughter Sarah L., had preceded him. Upon arriving in this state he located in the Lost Prairie country of Wallowa county, where he remained for a short time. Subsequently he purchased a ranch of one hundred and sixty acres on Scotch creek, three miles west of Joseph, and took up his abode on that property. He resided there for sixteen years, disposing of the property in 1905 and removing to Marion county, where he purchased a farm of forty acres, three miles east of Salem. That was his home for three years, when he sold the land and returned to Wallowa county, locating in Lostine, where he has since resided. His agricultural pursuits taught him to be a man of unremitting energy and persistent purpose. Whatever property he undertook to farm he brought to a high state of cultivation, and this netted him substantial profits and made possible the fruits and luxuries of life which he is now enjoying.

On February 19, 1863, Mr. Crow was united in marriage to Miss Susan M. Cooley, of Noble county, Ohio. To them six children were born: Sarah L., the wife of Ben Worstel, a resident of Ohio; Simon Peter, a merchant of Lostine; Charles E., deputy sheriff of Wallowa county; Samuel M., also a merchant of Lostine; Mary M., the wife of Stewart Hambelton, of Newberg, Oregon; and Michael who is identified with the commercial circles of Lostine.

Mr. Crow has been a member of the Masonic fraternity since May, 1865. Mrs. Crow holds membership in the Baptist church, while her husband is identified with the Methodist Episcopal church. Wherever he is known he is held in high esteem. He is devoted to the welfare of his family, has always been faithful to every trust reposed in him and by reason of his upright life he enjoys the respect of the entire community.

BYRON BRANSON owns and operates one hundred and six and a half acres of land, two and a half miles northeast of Sheridan, where he has continuously resided for the past twelve years. He was born in Polk county, Oregon, on the 22d of June, 1864, and is a son of G. W. and Mary E. (Wood) Branson. The father was a native of Illinois and the mother of Missouri, and they were married in Yamhill county. Until he had attained the age of nineteen years, G. W. Branson made his home in his native state, but in 1849 he joined his parents, who were living in Oregon. After remaining with them for a short time he went to California, to prospect for gold but, this venture not proving equal to his dreams, he returned to Oregon a few months later, and bought his father's donation claim. This was located on the present site of the town of Willamina, its operation engaging the attention of Mr. Branson for some years. He subsequently went to Benton county, where he cultivated rented land, going from there to Polk county and then to Walla Walla, Washington. After a residence of a year in the latter city he returned to Yamhill county, where he resided until his death in January, 1898. The mother survived until July, 1908. Of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Branson there were born fifteen children, twelve of whom are living, as follows: H. C., who is a resident of Polk county; I. N., who is living in Yamhill county; George W., who makes his home in McMinnville; Byron, the subject of this sketch; Adaline, of Sacramento, California; Amos, who is living in Yamhill county; Troy, who is a guard in the state penitentiary at Salem; Dora, who married Neil Stottenberg, of Yamhill county; Helen, the wife of C. Moe, of California; and Harvey, William and Jesse, all of whom are residents of California.

Although he was born in Polk county, Byron Branson was reared in Yamhill county, his education being obtained in the common schools. He remained at home until he was twenty-four years of age, during that period becoming thoroughly familiar with the best methods of operating the fields and caring for the crops. When old enough to begin for himself he rented some land in this county which he operated for two years, and then removed to his present place, which he cultivated as a renter. He met with financial success and acquired the means to purchase a place of his own, buying one hundred and twenty acres which he operated for eight years. After settling upon this place misfortune followed misfortune in quick succession, and despite the most rigid economy practiced by himself and family he was compelled to dispose of his property, to meet his obligations. He again operated rented land for a time, saving his earnings and later bought two hundred acres on the hills three miles from Sheridan. His efforts here proved to be more successful, and at the end of three years he disposed of this place, having doubled his money during the period of his residence. He then purchased the place where he is now residing and which he had formerly cultivated as a renter, locating here in 1899. Mr. Branson has made quite extensive improvements on this property during the period of his ownership, and it is now clear of all incumbrance. Such prosperity as has rewarded his efforts is the result of his perseverance and determination of purpose, as despite the misfortunes and hardships he has encountered, he has never lost his courage, but has kept on steadily and persistently, feeling confident of ultimate success.

On July 2, 1888, was celebrated the marriage of Mr. Branson and Miss Rosa J. Tharp, also a native of Polk county and a playmate of his childhood. Mrs. Branson is a daughter of G. W. and Rosa Jane (Eaton) Tharp, who came to Oregon from Illinois, locating on a claim in Polk county where they continued to live during the remainder of their days. Of the twelve children born of their marriage, seven are living: Frank, who makes his home in Albany; Mary, the widow of George Leibold, of Sheridan; Martin, who is also living in Sheridan; Tilly, the wife of M. F. McMillan, of Eugene; Rosa J., now Mrs. Branson; Leonard, who is living in Willamina; and Lilly, the wife of Ernest Broders, of Eugene. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Branson there have been born three children: Delmer, whose birth occurred on September 5, 1890; Archie, who was born on the 27th of July, 1894; and Alta, who was born on the 3d of April, 1896. All are still at home with their parents.

In matters of faith both Mr. and Mrs. Branson are Methodists and hold membership in the church at Bellevue. Fraternally he is a member of the Woodmen of the World, and he is a republican, although not active in politics as his time and energy are largely demanded in the development of his own interests.

J. H. BENNETT. A successful representative of the commercial interests of Whiteson is J. H. Bennett, who is conducting a general mercantile business here. His birth occurred on a farm a half mile from Whiteson on March 26, 1853, his parents being Levi and Mary Matilda (Stephens) Bennett. The father, who was born in Peoria, Illinois, was left an orphan at the age of four years and from then until he was fourteen lived at various places in that vicinity. Soon after attaining the latter age he joined a party that was crossing the plains to Salem, driving an ox team all of the way. Upon his arrival at their destination he assisted the others of his party in hauling the lumber with which to construct the first residences in the town. Later he came to Dutchtown, where for a time he attended school, going from there to Moors Valley and then to Whiteson. Very little of the country in this vicinity was settled at that time, the conditions surrounding the inhabitants being primitive in the extreme. He acquired a claim a half mile from Whiteson, to the cultivation and improvement of which he immediately applied his energies. His experiences were not unlike those of the other pioneer settlers, upon whom were visited all of the hardships and privations that characterize life on the frontier. He has always been a public-spirited, enterprising man and readily assumed his share in promoting every movement that in any way tended to advance the development of the country. Having from his earliest childhood been more or less dependent upon his own resources he developed those qualities that made of him a very capable business man. It was after his arrival in Oregon that he met the lady who subsequently became his wife. She, too, was an orphan and a native of the state of Indiana, and came to this state about the same time as Mr. Bennett. They reside on their homestead a mile from Whiteson, the father continuing to take an active interest in the operation of his land, despite his eighty years. Of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Bennett there were born five children: C. N., who is living at home; J. H., our subject; Rosa, the wife of E. G. Murphy, a farmer of Yamhill county; Jemmina, who is at home; and Rosetta, who is deceased.

J. H. Bennett spent his boyhood and youth in a manner very similar to the sons of other frontiersmen, obtaining his early education in the crude log schoolhouses of the vicinity of his home, during their irregular sessions. The knowledge obtained thus was later supplemented by a winter's term in the school in Amity. He remained at home until he had attained his majority, assisting with the operation of the ranch, thus acquiring the knowledge which enabled him later to engage in truck gardening. This occupation he followed for a time near The Dalles, when he went into business for himself. During the succeeding seventeen years he remained in that section identifying himself with various occupations. Returning to Whiteson at the end of that period he established a general mercantile business, that he has ever since been conducting. He has applied himself intelligently to the operation of his enterprise, and consequently has met with a very gratifying degree of success. Mr. Bennett makes a careful study of the needs and requirements of his patrons, carrying a well selected and varied stock that meets the tastes and circumstances of his customers. Gracious and affable in his manner, he strives to please all, it being his policy never to permit a patron to leave dissatisfied. In addition to his large stock of goods he owns the building in which he is conducting his business and four blocks of town property, on a portion of which he has erected dwellings, and some other property. Prosperity has attended his efforts, but it has been earned by the exercise of tireless industry, judicious management and clear judgment in the direction of his affairs.

In his political views Mr. Bennett is somewhat independent, although he formerly gave his entire support to the republican party, but he now casts his ballot for the candidate he deems best adapted to meet the needs of the situation. Fraternally he is affiliated with the Masonic order and the Eastern Star at Amity, and formerly he held membership in the Knights of Pythias. Mr. Bennett is widely known in Yamhill county, where he has a large circle of friends, whose allegiance he holds by reason of his many fine personal qualities.

W. J. ODELL, who is successfully engaged in dairy farming in Yamhill county, was born in Tennessee on the 11th of December, 1862, and is a son of John V. and Margaret (Chatman) Odell, both of whom are also natives of Tennessee. The father, who was reared and educated in the state of his birth, after leaving school learned the blacksmith's trade. For a time he followed this in Tennessee but subsequently removed to North Carolina, continuing to engage in blacksmithing. He later returned to his native state, where he passed away at the age of seventy-five. The mother survived for ten years thereafter, her death occurring when she was seventy-two. Five children were born of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Odell, of whom our subject is the youngest, the others being as follows: Anna, the wife of Frank Spradling, of Yamhill county; John, who is deceased; Denitia, who married Joe Keaton and is living in Tennessee; and Samuel, who passed away in Tennessee.

The boyhood and youth of W. J. Odell were spent in his native village, whose schools he attended in the acquirement of an education. After the completion of the common branches he entered his father's shop where he learned the blacksmith's trade, continuing to follow this for twenty years. When he was twenty-five he left the parental roof and established a home of his own, continuing to be a resident of Tennessee until 1902, when together with his wife and family he removed to Oregon, settling in this county. Upon his arrival here, Mr. Odell located on a ranch and turned his attention to general farming, but is now making a specialty of dairying. Although this was a new undertaking for him he has met with a very gratifying degree of success, by reason of his practical and painstaking methods of directing his activities. He is a man of progressive ideas and carefully plans whatever he undertakes before attempting its execution, fully realizing that farming is a business and its success requires as careful and systematic management as is necessary in the development of any enterprise. As he is not afraid to experiment he has made many mistakes, but it is in this way that he has acquired the practical knowledge he now possesses regarding the various branches of agriculture.

In 1888 was celebrated the marriage of Mr. Odell and Mrs. Mary Stamfer, also a native of Tennessee and a daughter of Samuel and Mellie Seals. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Odell there have been born ten children: George L., who is married and living in Yamhill county; Charles H., who is a resident of California; Laura D., the wife of Elmer Cushman, also of Yamhill county; Hattie E., the wife of Frank Loop, of this county; and Hubert C., Hobart R., Carson, Amanda E., Arthur J., and Herman C., all of whom are living at home and attending school.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Odell hold membership in the Baptist church of McMinnville, in the faith of which denomination they have reared their family, and fraternally Mr. Odell is affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, belonging to McMinnville Lodge, No. 30, I. O. O. F., and the Woodmen of the World, also of McMinnville. His political prerogatives Mr. Odell always exercises in support of the men and measures of the republican party, but he has never been an office holder. During the period of their residence in the county both Mr. Odell and his family have made many friends and they are held in high esteem.

PAUL CLARK, who is proprietor of the Albee Feed Barns & Livery Stables, was born in Pasco, Washington, on November 2, 1891. He is a son of Joshua and Addie V. (Woodruff) Clark, the father a native of Bloomfield, Iowa, and the mother of Watertown, Ohio. Joshua Clark crossed the plains with his parents in a wagon train in the early '60s when he was a youth of only eighteen years, and settled with them near Forest Grove, Oregon. In early manhood he went to Portland where he was employed in a wholesale meat house for several years, after which he went to Washington and engaged in the stock raising business, locating in Franklin county, where he became a very prominent and influential man. He served as sheriff of Franklin county for two terms and as county assessor for nine years. During his residence there he acquired some mining interests in Umatilla county, Oregon, and in 1895, he came here to look after the same. In the fall of 1896 he located at Albee where he resided until his death. For some years he was engaged in the shingle mill business and also operated a hotel at Albee. At the time of his death he owned one half section of land near this town. He was twice married, his first union being with Miss Mary Tennyson, of Gold Beach, Oregon, who passed away in 1882, leaving three children: Fred, of Ellensburg, Washington; Jessie, who is the wife of James Pepper, of Phoenix, Arizona; and Edith, the wife of Gus Schubert of Athena Oregon. In 1889 he married Miss Addie V. Woodruff, who as a young woman had removed to Nebraska and later to Kansas, where she engaged in teaching. Thence she went to Spokane, Washington, where she again engaged in the profession of teaching. Subsequently she taught in Pasco, Washington, where she met Mr. Clark. By Joshua Clark's second marriage eight children were born, six of whom survive. They are: Paul, of this review; and Grace, Hazel, Earl, Jean and Fay, all of whom with the exception of Grace who is a trained nurse in the St. Joseph's Hospital at Phoenix, Arizona, are living at home. The father was a democrat, and was a member of the Modern Woodmen of America. He was progressive, widely known and a prominent man in his community. He passed away, January 17, 1909.

Paul Clark was reared under the parental roof and acquired his education in the common schools. In the spring of 1911 he and his mother purchased the feed barn at Albee, of which he is now the efficient manager. The mother, Mrs. Clark, is a cultured, capable woman, and now has charge of her hotel, and through her excellent management meets with much success. She is greatly interested in education and uses every effort to give her children the best advantages possible. Paul Clark, brought up by his capable mother, has had excellent training in both business and social life, and is one of the promising young men of Camas valley. He is well liked and highly honored by all who know him.

C. H. VOEGTLY, one of Harney county's successful men, has been in Oregon since 1886 and has been actively identified with the hardware trade of that county for a little more than twenty years. He is a native of Allegheny, Pennsylvania, born on January 8, 1861, and is a son of Nicholas H. and Mary (Steiner) Voegtly, also natives of Pennsylvania. The family is of Swiss origin and was founded in America by Nicholas Voegtly, the great-grandfather of our subject, who left Switzerland for the United States in 1807 and in 1811 he returned with his family. His eldest son, Nicholas Voegtly, Jr., bought a tract of land then known as Dutchtown in Allegheny county, where he farmed and worked at his trade until his death at the age of eighty years. His son, the father of our subject, spent his school days in Allegheny, where he engaged in the flour and sawmill business for several years. His mills stood upon land a portion of which is now occupied by the great plant of the Heinz pickle works. He took an active part in local public affairs all during his life and was one of the most prominent residents of Allegheny. He served a number of terms in the Pennsylvania state legislature and was elected mayor of his city in 1888. His death occurred in 1893, when he was fifty-nine years of age. His wife survived him until 1911, when she died at the age of seventy-four years.

C. H. Voegtly was the second in a family of seventeen children. He was reared at home and educated in the public schools of Allegheny. He later attended the Western University at Pittsburg and after his graduation learned the machinist's trade, working for some time in the employ of the Westinghouse Electric Company. He has in his possession a number of old books and documents relating to his family history and dating back over two hundred years. He is the owner of a certificate of apprenticeship, dated December 19, 1883, and written with one of the first typewriters used in Pittsburg. The certificate is entirely in capital letters and is signed by the secretary of the Fort Pitt foundry and speaks in the highest terms of Mr. Voegtly's ability as a machinist. He also has a valuable document of a similar nature which belonged to his great-grandfather in 1764 and which states that the latter had served his full apprenticeship to the shoemaker's trade.

In 1886 Mr. Voegtly removed from Pennsylvania to Oregon and engaged in herding cattle and horses in Grant county for six years. The name of part of the county was later changed to Harney and Mr. Voegtly is still a resident of that section. He became interested in the hardware business in 1891, when he bought the stock of Calvin Geer. The store stood upon the lot adjoining his present location and Mr. Voegtly made important improvements and additions to the property and conducted business there until 1899. He still owns the original building and is now using it as a warehouse and machine shop. In 1899 he erected his present large and modern hardware store, which is a beautiful brick building with stone facings, two stories high and has a floor space of twenty-five by ninety feet. Mr. Voegtly utilizes the lower story for his business and carries a general stock of heavy and shelf hardware. He also carries an extensive line of farm implements and carriages and is well known in Harney county as a progressive and up-to-date merchant. He has the agency for the John Deere Plow Company and carries a full line of their implements. Beside his hardware business Mr. Voegtly is the owner of a large amount of farm land in Harney county. His residence is situated upon one hundred and sixty acres adjoining Burns. The city is built up to the farm on the north side and makes his property extremely valuable. It is in such a condition that it could easily be laid off into town lots and will in a few years be made into city property.

Mr. Voegtly has been twice married. In December, 1894, he wedded Miss Mary Tupker, a daughter of A. Tupker, of California, and they became the parents of two children: Nicholas H., now a student in the Burns public schools; and Mary Flora, now deceased. Mr. Voegtly's first wife died March 1, 1900, and one year later he was again married. His second wife was Luella Williams, a daughter of M. F. Williams, a former resident of Ohio, who is now living in Canyon City. Mr. Voegtly is the father of two children by his second marriage: Charles Raymond, now attending the public schools of Burns; and Frank L., deceased. The family residence is an elegantly equipped modern home which Mr. Voegtly erected in 1907. He has a private acetylene gas plant and a steel garage

C. H. Voegtly.

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY

upon the place. The house stands in the midst of one hundred and sixty acres of improved farm land adjoining the city of Burns and is one of the most pleasant and beautiful homes in Harney county.

Politically Mr. Voegtly gives his allegiance to the republican party and has in the past served as a member of the city council. He is prominent in Masonry, belonging to the blue lodge, the chapter in Canyon City, the commandery in Baker, the consistory in Portland and is also a member of the Mystic Shrine. He is one of the most prosperous and successful business men in Harney county and by his power of organization and his discriminating judgment has built up one of the most flourishing mercantile establishments in this section of the country.

LEANDER LEBECK. A distinguished financier has said: "If you do not succeed do not place the blame on circumstances or environment but where it belongs—on yourself; success is won by the price of earnest, self-denying effort." This statement finds verification in the lives of those who have made failures and those who have attained prosperity. Mr. Lebeck is numbered with the leading business men of Astoria who have gained their advancement through energy and determination, guided by sound judgment. He is today one of the leading contractors of the northwest, his industrial interests making constant demand upon his time. He was born in Finland in 1863, a son of John and Annie Lebeck, who were residents of that country until called to their final home, the mother passing away in 1874, while the father's death occurred in 1909, when he was eighty-four years of age. He was married three times and of the five children born of the first union only one is still living, a daughter who yet resides in Finland. By the father's second marriage there were four children, two of whom are in America, Leander and Mary, the latter the widow of Leander Haggman and a resident of Astoria. By the father's third marriage there were two children, both of whom are now deceased. His third wife still survives her husband and is yet a resident of Finland.

The youthful days of Leander Lebeck were passed in his native country to the age of seventeen years and his educational advantages were only such as he could secure before he reached the age of nine years. Industry and energy, however, were early developed and awakened in him a realization of the fact that one of the most potent forces in life is diligence. He was seventeen years of age when he crossed the Atlantic, making his way at once to Astoria, where he worked in a lumber yard for a short time. He afterward secured employment on the construction of the city gas works and later engaged in the fishing business with a partner, the connection continuing for four years. On the expiration of that period he turned his attention to the construction business, with which he was connected until 1886, when he extended the scope of his labors to include contract carpentering and construction work. Gradually he has forced his way upward, enlarging the field of his labors until he has gained a place among the foremost contractors and builders of the northwest. He built the greater part of all the docks that front on the Columbia river at Astoria and also the docks on the Washington side of the river. He was the builder of a quarantine station, also of an addition to Napton Mills and the Elmore Cannery. He has likewise erected a great number of the buildings for the Taylor Land Company, also built the railway warehouse and tracks and roadway in Astoria, together with the Calendar dock and roadway. The excellence of his work has stood the test of time and, combined with his reliable business methods, has secured for him a growing patronage that is perhaps second to that of no other contractor operating in Astoria or this section of the state. Substantial evidence of his progress and prosperity is shown in the fact that he owns two of the finest residences of the city and also several other dwellings and additional properties in Astoria. He likewise has one hundred and sixty acres of land near Seaside, on which are six million feet of lumber; a ten acre tract of land near Astoria; and business property at Alderbrook, Oregon.

In 1888 Mr. Lebeck was married to Miss Millie Kaonkkonen, who was born in Gamly Carleby, Finland, a daughter of Wilhelm and Bridget Kaonkkonen, who are still residents of that land. In their family were three sons and three daughters, four of whom are now living in America. The record is as follows: Hilda, the wife of Andrew Omla, still in Finland; Fannie, who is yet living in that country; and Charles, Frank, Fritz and Mrs. Lebeck, all of Astoria. Mr. and Mrs. Lebeck have become the parents of four children but Hilfred, the eldest, died at the age of seven years. Arthur, born July 8, 1893, is attending the high school and is studying architecture. Einard W., born in 1895, is also a high-school student. Hilfred J., born in 1897, is attending a convent, making a special study of music.

Mr. Lebeck and his family are members of the Lutheran church, and his political faith is that of the democratic party.

He has held the office of city councilman of Astoria for six years and was also pilot clerk for three years, after which he resigned. He belongs to the Ancient Order of United Workmen of Astoria, the Knights of Pythias, Con Conley Tribe, No. 7, I. O. R. M. and the Finnish Brotherhood of the World. He is, indeed, a self made man and as the architect of his own fortunes has builded wisely and well. His record may justly serve as a source of encouragement and inspiration to others, for it indicates clearly that the way is open to ambitious, energetic young men and that the rewards of labor when directed by sound judgment are sure.

CLEMMONS G. SCOTT. For over thirty-five years Clemmons G. Scott, a resident of Carlton, has been identified with the agricultural interests of Yamhill county and during that time has helped to develop the rich farming district in a way which has aided the progress and general improvement of the county as well as given him encouraging and substantial rewards. He was born in Indiana, July 9, 1845, and is the son of William and Sarah (Ferrell) Scott. His grandparents were all natives of Kentucky, but his great-grandfather Scott was born in Ireland. Grandfather Ferrell passed away in Kentucky but the three other grandparents died in Indiana. William Scott was one of five children, three sons and two daughters, all of whom are deceased with the exception of Mrs. Martha Bartlett, of Bartlettsville, Indiana. Mrs. Scott was one of eight children, all of whom are now deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Scott were married in 1842 and in 1865 crossed the plains with ox teams, coming direct to Yamhill county and first locating near Dayton. Purchasing one hundred and sixty acres near Wheatland almost immediately, they removed there and made that farm their home until after Mrs. Scott's death, when they sold it. At the time of its purchase there was a house on it and they were able to take immediate possession and begin to clear land, a task which occupied Mr. Scott thereafter, and when he sold it shortly before his death, all except ten or fifteen acres had been brought under a state of cultivation. Mrs. Scott's death preceded that of her husband by about five years. They were the parents of five children, namely: Clemmons G., the subject of this review; Harmon, an agriculturist of Pullman, Washington, and the father of three children; Mrs. Martha Addison, the mother of four children, who is living on a farm at Dayton, Oregon; Mrs. Elizabeth Fishback, deceased, who was formerly of Monmouth, Oregon, and the mother of nine children; and Vardemon, who died at Salem, Oregon, in 1910.

Clemmons G. Scott started out for himself at the age of twenty-two years, having remained at home and assisted his father on the farm until his marriage. He began his independent career by renting a farm which he cultivated for eight years. He then purchased two hundred and eighteen acres near Carlton, in Yamhill county, and made that his home until 1905. Selling this property, he moved to what was known as the Hibbard place, having purchased it some time previous. Here he remained until the spring of 1910, when he sold the farm and bought thirty-eight acres within the city limits of Carlton, where he is now living a retired life. It is a valuable and attractive property and one of the finest in Carlton, being modern in all its appointments, and well suited for the home of one of the town's most prominent and respected citizens.

Mr. Scott has been twice married. His first union was with Miss Mahala A. McCutcheon, who was born in Iowa in 1847 and died in Yamhill county in 1904. By this marriage he had three children, namely: James W., who resides in Carlton and is the father of one son; William, who is principal of the Forest Grove public schools; Mrs. Sarah Tucker, who is a resident of Corvallis, where Mr. Tucker is a hardware merchant. Mr. Scott's second marriage, in September, 1906, was to Mrs. Mary A. Fouts, the daughter of W. T. Kutch, of Carlton, who was born in Iowa in 1859. By her former marriage she was the mother of the following six children, all living in Carlton: William, Mrs. Lydia Steward, Mrs. Sadie Armbrose, Roy, Braxton and Carl, the two latter residing with Mr. Scott and assisting him with his farm work. No children have been born to Mr. Scott by his second marriage.

Mr. Scott is a democrat and although he has not sought public office, he has served as road supervisor. He is a member of the Grange and of the Baptist church, although his parents belonged to the Christian church. For twenty-four years he has served as superintendent of a Sunday school in Carlton. His chief interest in social welfare has been in the schools and he has served in many positions relating to those in his district. His life activities have all been along the lines of progress and development and the energetic, persistent adherence to duty which he has manifested has been effective and is most praiseworthy. He has well earned the place he now occupies as one of Carlton's most successful and esteemed citizens.

KARL KNOBLOCH, who is conducting a blacksmith shop at the corner of Thirteenth and Duane streets, Astoria, was born in Torneo, Finland, on the 17th of March, 1868. His parents, Ludvig M. and Hannah M. (Berg) Knobloch, were natives of Germany and Sweden respectively. They were married in the latter country but soon thereafter crossed the border into Finland, where they resided for some years then returned to Sweden and there the father passed away in 1894, but the mother still survives at the venerable age of seventy-two years. Of this union there were born eighteen children, of whom our subject is the only one to have become a citizen of the United States.

Karl Knobloch was only a youth of eighteen years when he broke the home ties and crossed the Atlantic to the United States. He was already a graduate of the high school of his native land, where he had also learned the trade of blacksmithing. He first located in the vicinity of Tower, in St. Louis county, Minnesota, where he clerked for four years, after which he bought out a blacksmith shop. After operating his shop for about eighteen months, he decided to see more of the western portion of the United States and traveled from state to state until 1893, when he came to Astoria. He remained here but a brief period, going away for six years, at the expiration of which time he returned. In 1903 he bought a blacksmith shop in West Astoria that he operated for three years then disposing of it, purchased his present stand. He is associated with J. H. Saarinen in this establishment, which they are conducting as a general repairing and horse-shoeing place. The undertaking is proving highly successful and very lucrative, being one of three similar places conducted in a town of thirteen thousand inhabitants.

In Astoria, on the 30th of June, 1900, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Knobloch and Miss Edla Rimpela, who was born in Kalvia, Finland, where she lost her parents during her infancy. Four children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Rimpela, two of whom are still living in Finland. Mrs. Knobloch came to America alone in 1891 settling in Astoria, where her sister Josie afterward passed away. Of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Knobloch there has been born one son, Ludvig Oliver, whose birth occurred on the 11th of January, 1905.

Mr. and Mrs. Knobloch affiliate with the Lutheran church and he is also a member of the Knights of Pythias fraternity, the Modern Woodmen of America, the Moose order and the Finnish Brotherhood, all of which organizations are located in Astoria. He casts his ballot in support of the republican party and is at present serving as a member of the city council. He has always been most loyal and patriotic in matters of citizenship, and served for three years in the United States cavalry before the Spanish war, and for five years he was a member of the Wyoming state militia, and is first lieutenant in the Oregon state militia. All community matters that are subject to improvement, particularly those affecting the temperance question enlist his indorsement and cooperation. Mr. Knobloch is quite a linguist, speaking Swedish, Finish, German and English and he is also a very good musician and has taught music. He has traveled extensively in this country and has also seen a good deal of Europe, and having been a close observer has benefited very much by what he has seen. Good success has attended his efforts since he has been in Astoria and in addition to his business property he owns a hand-some residence and two hundred and forty acres of timberland in the state of Washington.

J. D. JONES, who for twenty-one years was successfully identified with the agricultural and stock-raising interests of Tillamook county, is now living practically retired in Tillamook, where he owns a beautiful residence and devotes his energies to transactions in real estate. He was born in Pennsylvania on the 4th of October, 1841, and is a son of Willard and Hannah (Donalson) Jones, the mother also a native of the Keystone state, while the father was born in the state of New York. The family were residing in Pennsylvania at the time of the father's death, but the mother passed away in Ohio. There were five children born unto Mr. and Mrs. Jones, as follows: Ephraim, who is a resident of New York state; Levi, who lives in Pennsylvania; J. D., our subject; and two daughters who are deceased.

Agricultural pursuits have engaged the attention of J. D. Jones during the greater part of his life, his boyhood and youth having been spent on a farm in his native state. His early years did not differ in particular from those of other lads of the same period and like circumstances, his time being quite equally divided between the work of the school room, the performance of such tasks as were assigned by parental authority and those pastimes that delight the heart of all country boys. He acquired a common school education after which he gave his entire attention to the work of the home farm until he had attained his majority, when he set to work for himself. For four years thereafter he rented land in Pennsylvania that he cultivated, then laying aside agricultural pursuits he engaged in milling for about eight years. At the expiration of that time he went to Ohio, continuing milling operations there until his removal to Indiana where he resided for six years. In 1877 he came west, locating in Polk county, Oregon, and there for five years he engaged in ranching, subsequently locating in Yamhill county where he followed the same pursuit for two years. From there he removed to Tillamook county, where he filed on one hundred and sixty acres of land on Big creek, Nestucca, in the vicinity of Tucker Falls. The cultivation and improvement of this engaged his attention for twenty-one years thereafter, his efforts being rewarded in a most gratifying manner. He made a specialty of stock-raising and dairying, realizing lucrative returns from both owing to the judicious management and capable direction of his interests. Believing implicitly in the wonderful possibilites this country afforded both agriculturally and commercially, Mr. Jones invested his capital in real estate, acquiring, together with his sons, eleven hundred and twenty acres of valuable land in Tillamook county. They have recently disposed of two hundred acres of this at a handsome profit, but still own nine hundred and twenty acres, in addition to some property in Tillamook. In 1906, Mr. Jones decided to withdraw from the exacting activities of ranching and coming to Tillamook erected a beautiful residence where he is now living practically retired. He gives his personal attention to the supervision of his property and also engages in some real estate transactions, having lived too active a life to be contented to do nothing.

On the 18th of October, 1862, Mr. Jones was united in marriage to Miss Mary P. Lowell, who was born in the state of New York and is a daughter of Daniel and Mary A. (Wiseman) Lowell. Her parents were both natives of the state of Maine but were living in Ohio at the time of their death and there they were both laid to rest. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Lowell numbered five, two of whom are now deceased. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Jones there have been born four children: Mattie, the wife of Charles Buell, of Vancouver, Washington; Clarence H., who is living in Portland; and Durett L. and R. A., both of whom make their home in Tillamook county.

In political matters Mr. Jones is a republican, but has never been an office seeker, while Mrs. Jones is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church. He is now one of the very prosperous residents of Tillamook, but in order to attain this position both he and his wife endured all of the hardships and privations incident to pioneering, their determination of purpose and confidence in the ultimate successful outcome of their undertaking sustaining them despite many disappointments and misfortunes.

JOHN B. HERRIOTT is one of the progressive men of Jackson county, Oregon. He is the proprietor and owner of a fine sawmill property located on Big Applegate creek, in Jackson county, where he resides. He is a native son of Oregon, his birth having occurred November 29, 1885, his parents being William W. and Amanda E. (Knox) Herriott. The father was a native of Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, while the mother was born in Hancock county, Illinois. The parents of Mrs. Amanda E. Herriott emigrated to the Applegate valley from the Willamette valley in the year 1859, locating at Murphy in Josephine county, where they filed upon a donation claim still occupied by the maternal grandparent of our subject, Mrs. Sarah Knox, who is now eighty-one years of age. At fifteen years of age William W. Herriott, in company with another boy of the same age, crossed the plains, reaching Oregon some time in the early '50s. After his marriage he lived for some time at Steamboat, at which place he owned the famous Steamboat mine, at that time the richest mine in the state. This property he eventually sold to a Chinese company and later purchased a ranch on Thompson creek and some time afterward he bought the present home ranch one mile southeast of Applegate postoffice. Here he spent the remaining days of his life, reaching the end of his earthly pilgrimage in 1898. His wife was called to her final rest on the 27th of February, 1909.

John B. Herriott was reared in his father's home and educated in the common schools. At present he is associated with his brothers, Thomas and George, in the lumber business, the brothers owning their own mill on Big Applegate creek in Jackson county. He also owns a small ranch on which he has established a comfortable home.

On the 30th of March, 1911, Mr. Herriott was united in marriage to Miss Maud M. Pernoll, a daughter of William Pernoll, of whom more extended mention is made in connection with the sketch of John W. Pernoll on another page of this work. Mr. Herriott is affiliated with the republican party, following the standard of that dominant organization in its national and state campaigns. He is one of the progressive, live citizens of Jackson county and is always a ready supporter of every measure tending to the improvement of the community in which he lives.

THOMAS W. HERRIOTT is the owner of a ranch containing ninety-four acres, located on Big Applegate creek in Jackson county, and is also associated with his brothers, John B. and George, in the manufacture of lumber. He is a native of this state and was born on March 10, 1872, his parents being William W. and Amanda E. (Knox) Herriott, of whom more extended mention is made in the preceding sketch of John B. Herriott, a brother of our subject.

Thomas W. Herriott left his father's home at the age of sixteen and became an apprenticed blacksmith. Mastering the trade, he continued to follow this vocation for a period of sixteen years, during which time he conducted his own shop for a number of years in Central Point. He afterward purchased the home farm of ninety-four acres on Big Applegate creek, to which he removed and where he has maintained his residence for several years past. He is associated with his brothers, George and John B., in the manufacture of all grades of lumber, their mill being located on Big Applegate creek in Jackson county. In this business the brothers have been very successful. In addition to this manufacturing enterprise they have also constructed a large, serviceable dam and extensive water power plant on the Big Applegate river, which provides an abundance of water for the irrigation of all their farm lands.

In the year 1902 Mr. Herriott was married to Miss Helen Grieve, a sister of the present efficient county recorder of Jackson county. In politics he is a devoted and loyal member of the republican party, while fraternally he is identified with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Modern Woodmen of America. Mr. Herriott is one of the progressive men of this section of the state. His integrity of character and warm-hearted friendship have been helpful in making personal friends of his acquaintances, and he is regarded throughout Jackson county as one of its reliable, progressive and substantial citizens.

THOMAS F. LATHROP, a resident of Wallowa, has since January, 1911, been employed in the government forestry service, having charge of district 7, Wallowa National Forest Reserve. He was born in Summerville, Union county, Oregon, August 27, 1877, a son of Thomas M. and Elizabeth (Fox) Lathrop, the father a native of Fort Wayne, Indiana, and the mother of Missouri. Thomas M. Lathrop was a volunteer at the outbreak of the Civil war and he served throughout the entire period of hostility. After the close of the war he enlisted in the regular army and spent four years on the plains, fighting the Indians, his regiment being stationed at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas. There he met and married Miss Elizabeth Fox and in 1870 they crossed the plains to Oregon. For the first three or four years of their residence here they lived in the western part of the state and then removed to eastern Oregon, locating in Union county, near Summerville. In the spring of 1882 they came to Wallowa county, where they homesteaded one hundred and sixty acres of land in the Leap country, nine miles east of Wallowa, and where they have resided for the past thirty years. Thomas M. Lathrop is a democrat in politics and for several years has served as road overseer in his district.

Thomas F. Lathrop grew to manhood on his father's farm and acquired his early education in the public schools. When he was twenty years of age he started out in life for himself, going to Montana, where he engaged in the sawmill business for five years, during which time he saved one thousand dollars. He then intended to go to Alaska but met with a country minister, with whom he had worked in a sawmill and who persuaded him to use his money in the acquiring of an education. Therefore, he went to Wayne, Nebraska, where he entered the State Normal school. Enrolling as a student there, he completed the four years' course in three years, attending fifty weeks out of fifty-two weeks each year. During his last year at this institution he taught review arithmetic, for his board. He finished this course in the spring of 1905 and then returned to Oregon, where for one and one-half years he taught in the Wallowa county schools. Then, in company with his brother Duane, he engaged in the sawmill business, operating a mill eight miles east of Wallowa. He was identified with this work until in 1910, when he sold his interest in the mill and in January, 1911, was appointed to the forestry reserve, in which position he is now ably serving.

WILLIAM W. HERRIOTT

In 1906 Mr. Lathrop wedded Miss Zelnie Downing, of Wallowa, Oregon, and to this union have been born two children, Thelma and Thekla. In his political views Mr. Lathrop is republican and he cast his first vote for William McKinley. Fraternally he belongs to Wallowa Lodge, I. O. O. F. Mrs. Lathrop is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church. Mr. Lathrop is recognized as a prosperous young business man and his advancement in life is not the outcome of propitious circumstances but the honest reward of labor, ambition and energy.

MILTON METCALF GILMAN. The late Milton Metcalf Gilman was born in Holloway, Maine, November 8, 1810, where his parents, Moses and Mary Gilman, passed away. At the age of ten years Milton Metcalf Gilman broke home ties and started out in the world to seek his fortune. A few years later he became a sailor on a sailing vessel; a reliable man, ambitious and diligent, he was advanced in the service and ultimately was made captain, continuing to follow the sea during the remainder of his life. He removed to Oregon in 1850. For many years after he came to Astoria he was a sea pilot, bringing in vessels over the bar, also acting as river pilot between Astoria and Portland.

In 1875 Mr. Gilman was united in marriage to Miss Laura Hare, who was born in Ohio, and was of English extraction. Mrs. Gilman is a daughter of the late Joseph and Ellen Hare, the father a native of England and the mother of Virginia. They were married in the latter state, subsequently moving to Ohio where they resided for a time, proceeding to St. Paul, Minnesota. There the father died and a few years later the mother came to Astoria, to make her home with her daughter, Mrs. Gilman. Here she continues to reside and in February last celebrated the one hundredth anniversary of her birth

Vol. III—20

Of the union of Mr. and Mrs. Hare nine children were born, all of whom are deceased with the exception of two daughters.

Mr. and Mrs. Gilman always attended the services of the Episcopal church of which she is a communicant and Mr. Gilman was a member of the Masonic order for a great many years.

J. J. CARY. Among the successful agriculturists of Yamhill county is J. J. Cary, who resides four and one half miles southeast of Carlton and who was born February 14, 1845, his parents being Miles and Cyrena B. (Taylor) Cary, the former a native of Kentucky and the latter of Virginia. They were married in Kentucky and lived there for two years before removing to Missouri, where they made their home for several years previous to crossing the plains and coming to Oregon in 1843. This trip across the plains was a very hard one for the parents. When they left Missouri they had their four children with them, but by the time they arrived at Oregon City, Oregon, where they lived for two years, they had lost two by death, one having died at Fort Bridges and the other at Linnton, Oregon. Leaving Oregon City, they came to Carlton and remained here until 1849, when they joined the great army going to California. It was during their residence in Carlton that their son, J. J. Cary, was born. Returning to Oregon in 1850, they took up a donation claim near St. Joseph and until the father's death, in 1858, this was their home. After this the family settled in La Fayette and while there six of the children died, three sons and three daughters. Mr. and Mrs. Cary were the parents of twelve children, all of whom except J. J. and Marnette have died. The eldest died in infancy, and the names of the others are as follows: Robert, Martha Ann, Catherine, William, Miles J., Wesley, Cyrena, Mariette, Lucy and Nancy.

J. J. Cary made his independent start in life at the age of twenty one years, when he purchased one hundred and thirty-seven acres of land, paying twenty five dollars down and gaining a clear title to the remainder after paying twelve per cent on the balance. At different times he has bought three farms and now owns one hundred acres, all of which is cleared and in a state of high cultivation. His efforts to gain a home and a comfortable income show perseverance, energy and determination as strong traits in his character.

In 1868 he was married to Sarah Perkins a native of Iowa and the daughter of George W. and Harriette (Herndon) Perkins, who were the parents of eight children, namely Mary Elizabeth and George M., deceased, Mrs. Cary, Edgar, who resides in La Fayette Oregon; Mary L., a resident of Portland Emeline, who is residing in La Fayette, Delmer, of Carlton, Jerry C., deceased, who was scalded to death upon the plains by having a large pot of water turned upon him. When Mr. and Mrs. Perkins crossed the plains in 1853, Mrs. Cary was a child of but five years, and since that time her entire life has been spent in the west. For the last ten years the Cary family home has been on the sixty-eight acres of an old donation land claim which she owns. To Mr. and Mrs. Cary three children have been born: Elma, deceased; Edwes, who resides in Yamhill county; and George, deceased. Edwes Cary received a business education and for a time taught school. He is now successfully engaged in the dairy business and keeps only registered Jersey cows. He is such an excellent judge of cattle that he is a director of registered stock at the state fair.

Mr. Cary accords his political support to the democratic party but has never sought office as a reward for his party loyalty. His has been a life devoted to the agricultural pursuits he began when a young man and the success due to a life's earnest endeavor has been his reward.

JOHN HJ. SAARINEN is a member of the firm of Saarinen & Knobloch, engaged in iron work and general blacksmithing at Astoria. Like many another worthy and representative resident of this city, he was born in Finland, his natal day being November 28, 1873. His parents were John and Erika Saarinen, both of whom were natives of Finland, where the mother died in the year 1911. The father is still residing there, as are five of their seven children, while two are residents of the new world.

In his youthful days John Hj. Saarinen devoted his time to the acquirement of an education and to such tasks as occupied his attention after he had put aside his textbooks and entered the business world. He made steady but slow advancement and, thinking that it would be too difficult to gain a comfortable fortune in that country where labor brought but comparatively slow returns, he resolved to come to the United States and in 1903 sailed for the new world, first settling in Astoria, where he engaged in fishing for nine months. He afterward spent two months in an iron and blacksmith shop but, desiring that his labors should more directly benefit himself, he formed a partnership with a Mr. Asp in 1904 and established a smithy, which they carried on for seven years. Mr. Saarinen then removed to his present location and formed a partnership with Karl Knobloch. They built a fine large plant and are still successfully carrying on business, doing iron work and general blacksmithing. They have secured liberal and gratifying patronage, owing to the excellence of their work and the straightforward business methods which they employ.

Mr. Saarinen's home life in Astoria had its beginning in 1909, when he wedded Miss Katie Hapaniemi, who was born in Finland and came to the United States in the year her marriage was celebrated. Her parents are Michael and Caroline Hapaniemi, who are still residents of Finland. Four of their children, however, are in America, namely: Evert, Verner, Fannie and Katie. Mr. and Mrs. Saarinen have but one son, Arthur J., who was born in 1910. The parents are both well educated, having been high-school students in their native land, and they have a warm circle of friends among people who regard intelligence and worth as the best passports to good society. They are members of the Lutheran church and Mr. Saarinen belongs to the Knights of Pythias lodge at Astoria. As the years pass by his love for his adopted country becomes deeper and deeper and no native son of America is a more stalwart champion of the institutions and interests of this country.

JOHN C. ARMSTRONG, who resides five and one-quarter miles northeast of Carlton, was born in Marion county, Oregon, near Silverton, in 1866. He is the son of Thaddeus and Maggie (Bentz) Armstrong, the former born in Iowa in 1839 and the latter in 1841 in Ohio. The parents were married in 1863 while living in Nebraska and the following year they crossed the plains with ox teams, remaining in Idaho for the first winter. On arriving in Oregon they settled at Silverton and engaged in the sawmill business, Thaddeus Armstrong associating himself with his father and brothers. The father was a skilled carpenter and worked at his trade for many years. Today John Armstrong has in his possession a broadax which was given to his grandfather by General Curtis, who had been a boyhood friend and with whom he had worked in later years. Mr. Armstrong continued in the sawmill business with his sons for many years. At one time his mill was washed away but he speedily rebuilt it and at different times he had mills advantageously situated in various places. At such times as he was not engaged in the operation of a mill, he farmed, built bridges, barns and houses.

John C. Armstrong was the second of three children, his two sisters being: Mary, the wife of Egbert Simons, an agriculturist residing in La Center, Washington; and Annie, the wife of Oliver S. Andrews, of Portland, Oregon.

Mr. Armstrong started in life for himself at the age of thirty years. Prior to this time he had stayed at home and farmed with his father. In 1882 they removed to eastern Oregon, taking up a land claim of twelve hundred acres and engaging in cattle and stock-raising and in farming, but as the crops were rather uncertain they went over into Washington. Here they remained for seven years, purchasing four hundred acres upon which to start farming and adding one hundred and sixty acres later on. All of this was good grain land and they devoted their time to raising wheat. The father spent his life in agricultural pursuits as long as he was actively engaged but now he is retired and is living in Salem.

John C. Armstrong was married to Weltha C. Todd, June 16, 1898. Mrs. Armstrong was born in 1879 in Iowa and was the daughter of Ozro J. and Rebecca (Hoff) Todd. Mr. and Mrs. Todd were the parents of seven children, namely: Emily, who was born January 20, 1863, and is the wife of Isaac Bunnell, of The Dalles, Oregon; Archibald, born January 29, 1872, and now residing in Adams county, Washington; Martha, who was born January 11, 1876, and is now deceased; Weltha, who was born September 29, 1879, and died March 3, 1911, and who was the wife of the subject of this sketch; Ina Bell, who was born March 29, 1882, and is the wife of J. C. Kaidra, a bank cashier in Centerville, Washington; Clara Louise, born January 11, 1885, and now deceased; and Esther, who was born December 4, 1886, and is the wife of W. J. Sullivan, of The Dalles, Oregon. In 1888 Mrs. Armstrong came to Oregon with her parents and later settled in Washington. Mr. and Mrs. Armstrong are the parents of the following children: Jo. Willis, born May 11, 1899; Hugh Todd, who was born May 7, 1900; Ella Maud, who was born September 28, 1901; George W., born February 22, 1904; Robert Spencer, who was born July 8, 1907; Maggie May, born October 19, 1908; and Weltha Marie, who was born July 13, 1910. They are all living at home and the four older ones are attending school.

After returning from Washington and at about the time of his marriage, Mr. Armstrong purchased one hundred and eighty-eight acres in the Chahalem valley and he is still residing on this farm, it being his desire to keep up a home for his children. One hundred and thirty acres of his home land which is in a high state of cultivation, is a part of the old Doris donation land claim. In the '50s this was bought for five dollars an acre and now is worth one hundred and forty dollars per acre. This fact alone shows what intelligent labor has done to develop this district. In addition to the interest Mr. Armstrong has shown in his agricultural pursuits, he has also given much attention to the schools in his district. Having received a high-school education himself and being a graduate of the Portland Business College, he can appreciate the value of an education, and besides his desire to give his children any college training they may care to take, he also tries to give some well directed attention to the schools which the youth of his community attend. Mr. Armstrong is a stanch republican and gives his support to that party, firmly believing that the republican policies are the best we have for aiding the material development of the west. He is a student of all that pertains to social welfare and relating to many vital issues of the day his judgment and advice are held to be highly valuable.

ADOLPH LEVY, who passed away at Union on the 5th of October, 1895, was long numbered among the town's most respected and substantial citizens and for a number of years was actively engaged in business there as the proprietor of a general mercantile store. His birth occurred in Wurtemberg, Germany, on the 4th of June, 1835. In early manhood he crossed the Atlantic to the United States, locating at Stockton, California, and applying for his first naturalization papers on the 13th of April, 1857. On the 22d of March, 1867, at Oregon City, he was admitted to full citizenship by Judge E. B. Shattuck. After some years' residence in California, during which he was engaged in business, he became a resident of Oregon and for a time conducted his interests in the city of John Day, now in Grant county. Subsequently he took up his abode in Oregon City and there continued in business until 1878, when he removed to Union, where the remainder of his life was spent. There he purchased an interest in the general store of Sommers and Baer and later bought out the partners, conducting the enterprise under his own name until within a short time of his demise, when his sons, Leon and Milton S., purchased the business. His undertakings were attended with a gratifying measure of prosperity, for he was a man of excellent executive ability, sound judgment and keen discrimination.

On the 5th of August, 1862, at San Francisco, Mr. Levy was united in marriage to Miss Babette Wertheimer, by whom he had the following children: Leon, a review of whose career follows; Julius A., who is engaged in the book and stationery business at Walla Walla, Washington; Minnie, now Mrs. J. Block, of Portland; Lily, whose demise occurred in 1891; Helen, the widow of Max Lewin; Milton S., a sketch of whom also follows; G. S., who is engaged in the drug business; and Stella and Edna, both at home.

Adolph Levy gave his political allegiance to the democratic party and took an active interest in local, state and national affairs but neither desired nor courted office. His fellow townsmen, however, frequently called him to serve as councilor or alderman and in this capacity he ably represented their interests. Fraternally he was identified with the Masons, belonging to Grande Ronde Valley Lodge, No. 56, in which he filled all of the chairs. In a biography written by a brother Mason and published in one of the local papers at the time of his demise, the loss of Mr. Levy is mourned as that of an honorable and respected citizen who was possessed of a warm, sympathetic and generous heart and who was both neighbor and brother to the destitute and unfortunate. His widow, who still survives him, is equally well known for her many excellent traits of heart and mind.

LEON LEVY, the eldest child in his father's family, acquired his education in Oregon City and removed with his parents to Union in 1878. As above stated, he and his brother, Milton S., purchased the general store of their father, and they conducted the same in partnership until Leon bought his brother's interest. At the present time he is carrying on the enterprise independently and the large patronage which he enjoys is a compliment to his ability and acumen as a merchant. He also owns a farm of three hundred and sixty acres within three miles of Union and is operating the same in connection with his mercantile interests, specializing in high grade stock. One of his horses is a grandson of Electioneer. He likewise raises heavy draft horses from registered stock and makes a specialty of registered Jersey cattle. As a raiser of hogs he favors Berkshires and in his breeding pen has a son of "Masterpiece," who was considered the finest hog in the world. Leon Levy is a Master Mason and a worthy exemplar of that fraternity. In the community where he has now resided for more than a third of a century he is well known and highly esteemed as a representative and prosperous citizen.

M. S. LEVY, a native of Oregon City, obtained his early education there and at Union, later continuing his studies in Leighton Academy. After putting aside his textbooks he entered his father's store and, as above stated, remained identified with mercantile interests until he sold out to his brother Leon. In 1901 he purchased the stallion "Teddy McDonald," a son of "Little Mack" (Shetland pony). Subsequently he bought several mares of high grade stock and engaged in breeding Shetland ponies, now having the largest band of ponies in the western country. He has exhibited at the district fairs in Union and La Grande and has always won the highest honors. His stock farm is at the edge of the city limits, his pasture land being a short distance from the home farm, which comprises two hundred and fifty acres. The climate is adapted for horse raising and disease is practically unknown. On the pasture are hot springs and experiments have shown that the temperature is sufficient to hatch chickens. Mr. Levy's ponies weigh from two hundred to six hundred pounds. The head of the herd at the present time is Kenilworth No. 6168, sired by the champion, Prince of Wales. Mr. Levy's large barns are modernly equipped for the purpose of breeding and raising ponies on an extensive scale and his reputation in this connection is a most enviable one. He belongs to the Knights of Pythias and has attained the thirty-second degree in the Masonic fraternity. His life has been upright and honorable in all its relations and the circle of his friends is an extensive one.

LYMAN M. CHAPMAN, who lives retired at Lostine, Wallowa county, is an honored veteran of the Civil war. He was born in Montgomery county, Indiana, December 18, 1836, the son of Simeon and Jane (Mitchell) Chapman, the former a native of Pennsylvania and the latter of Kentucky. The parents were married in Indiana, to which state they had removed in youth with their parents. After their marriage they resided for about five years in Montgomery county, Indiana, then went to Illinois, and about one year later removed to Crawford county, Missouri, where they resided four years. Subsequently they went to Monroe county, Iowa, while that state was yet a territory. There they took up government land, but later sold the same and took up another claim in Lucas county, Iowa, this being before that county was organized. They resided on this land until their deaths, the father passing away in 1896 at the age of eighty-five and the mother several years earlier.

Lyman M. Chapman grew to manhood on his father's farm in Lucas county and there his opportunities for a school education were very meager. He learned all he could in an old log schoolhouse, with its slab benches and puncheon floor. At the age of twenty-one years he began farming on his own account, living at that time under the parental roof and renting land in the vicinity. He continued farming in Lucas county until August 11, 1862, when he enlisted in the Union army during the Civil war, joining Company G, Thirty-fourth Iowa Infantry, his regiment being assigned to the Army of the Tennessee. He was with Sherman at the attack on Vicksburg and took part in the battle at Arkansas Post, following which he returned to Vicksburg and was there at the time of the surrender of that city. He was then transferred to the Trans-Mississippi Department and going to Texas was with the Banks Red river expedition to the Brandy Core fight. Thence he went up the Mississippi river to Baton Rogue, Louisiana, and subsequently was sent to Pensacola, and later went under the command of Steel around to the rear of Fort Blakely, being present at the surrender of Mobile. He was in Mobile at the time of the great explosion of the ammunition. Shortly afterward he went to Selma, Alabama, where his company was on guard duty for about six weeks. Afterward he was sent to Houston, Texas, where his regiment was stationed at the time of the surrender of Lee and he was mustered out of service at Houston, August 15, 1865. He had served three years. Subsequently he returned to his home farm in Iowa, but in 1870 removed to Nebraska, where he resided for three years and in 1873 came to Oregon, by train to Kelton, Utah, and from there by wagon, having shipped his team and wagon that far. On arriving in Oregon he located in the Grande Ronde valley in Union county, where he lived eight years. In 1881 he came to the Wallowa valley, reaching here March 17 and locating near the head of Parsnip creek, seven miles northeast of Lostine, where he took up a timber claim of one hundred and seventy acres and preempted another one hundred and sixty acres. He resided on this ranch, being engaged in farming and stock-raising until March, 1910, when he sold the same and removed to Lostine, where he has since lived retired.

In Lucas county, Iowa, on the 31st of October, 1861, Mr. Chapman was married to Miss Pleasant P. Wade, a daughter of Waitman T. Wade, who was a pioneer farmer of Lucas county, Iowa. Mr. Wade had removed to Iowa from Pennsylvania and later he went to Appanoose county, Iowa, where his death occurred. His wife was Miss Ruhama Eakins, who died in Lucas county. To Mr. and Mrs. Chapman have been born four children, only two of whom are now living: Jasper J., who is a ranchman residing eight miles east of Lostine; and Edward W., who is at home and is the owner of a ranch and also of town property.

MR. AND MRS. T. M. CHAPMAN

THE NEW
PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASTOR, LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS.

In his political views Mr. Chapman is a republican and socially he is a member of the John F. Reynolds Post, No. 15, G. A. R., at Joseph. Mrs. Chapman is a member of the Rebekah lodge and belongs to the Presbyterian church. All his life Mr. Chapman has been active and progressive, and has ever supported all measures of reform and progress. He has a large circle of friends and acquaintances throughout his county and especially deserves mention in this work for the faithful service which he rendered in the Civil war.

L. B. FETTER is a retired farmer, living in Myrtle Point. He has reached the age of eighty-three years, his birth having occurred May 24, 1829. His parents were Christian and Sarah (Lobinger) Fetter, natives of Maryland and Pennsylvania respectively. Removing westward in 1840, they settled in Putnam county, Illinois, where the father engaged in the practice of medicine, in which profession he continued to the time of his death. The mother afterward took up her abode in Evansville, Indiana, where she made her home until called to her final rest.

L. B. Fetter is the only survivor of seven children. He was a youth of eleven years when the family removed to the Mississippi valley and he remained a resident of Illinois until the 29th of February, 1852, when he went to California, attracted by the gold discoveries in that state. For two years he engaged in mining and in the fall of 1854 came to Oregon, and purchased one hundred acres of land near Roseburg, on Deer creek. He cultivated that land for a year and then removed to Coos county. In 1855 he was appointed United States district clerk by Judge M. P. Deady, serving for one year, during the time of the Indian war. Shortly after that he married and removed to his farm, which he afterward sold. He then established his home in the Camas valley, where he homesteaded one hundred and sixty acres, residing thereon for eleven years. Later he disposed of that property to General Holmes and secured another homestead of a quarter section, located on the Coquille river. For thirty-eight years he engaged in its cultivation and improvement and transformed the land into productive fields, from which he annually gathered good harvests. At the end of that time he retired from active life and has since lived at Myrtle Point, enjoying a well merited rest. He still owns this homestead, together with other land which he purchased, making in all two hundred and eighty acres. He is likewise the owner of a fine residence and eight lots in the town.

Mr. Fetter was united in marriage, June 15, 1857, to Miss Julia Day, who was born in Illinois, October 26, 1837, a daughter of Adam and Sarah Day, the former being a veteran of the War of 1812, who in 1853 came to Oregon and died at Roseburg. His wife had previously passed away at their home about twenty-five miles west of Roseburg. All of the children of the Day family are deceased with the exception of Mrs. Fetter, who by her marriage became the mother of eight children, four of whom are still living and are: Sarah Maud, who is the widow of Edward Jennings and resides at Remote, Oregon; Winnie K. Volkmar, of North Yakima, Washington; Hubert, of the Willamette valley; and Lillian Pearl, who is the wife of John P. Hayes, of Rural, Coos county. The deceased were: William, who died in Camas valley, Oregon; John L., who passed away in Alaska; Verner, who also died in Alaska; and Ella R., who died at Salem, Oregon.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Fetter were school teachers in early life. The former pursued his education in Pennsylvania and Illinois and afterward taught school. The latter was educated in Illinois and Oregon, and when but fourteen years of age taught school in a little log building in the former state. Mr. Fetter votes with the democratic party, yet is liberal in his views. Few men of his years keep more thoroughly in touch with the trend of modern thought, political and otherwise, than does he. Our subject is always greatly interested in questions and issues of the day, which he intelligently discusses with his neighbors and friends. He has long been a resident of the northwest and has been an interested witness of its growth and development, at all times bearing his part in the work of public progress.

H. H. WEATHERSPOON, manager of the Elgin Commission Company, which carries on a general warehouse business in this city, was born in Allen county, Kentucky, October 31, 1865, a son of William L. and Ada (Kirby) Weatherspoon, both of whom were natives of Kentucky, in which state they were reared and married. In 1884 they removed to Missouri, locating in Jasper county, where they both passed away, the mother in 1888 and the father in 1898. Both were earnest and devoted members of the Baptist church. The father was a successful farmer and horticulturist.

H. H. Weatherspoon was reared under the parental roof and his early education was very limited, most of it being acquired under his own direction. At the age of twenty-one he started out in life for himself, finding employment with the St. Louis & San Francisco Railroad Company and becoming a station agent at Webb City, Missouri. He later worked at other points in that state, remaining with the company for five years. He then went to Toledo, Ohio, and became a salesman for the Cordiron Wheel Company, manufacturer of bicycles. He represented this firm on the road for two years and in 1894 went to Chicago, Illinois, where he found employment with the Postal Telegraph Company. He was made assistant to the city superintendent of this company, in which capacity he served for five years. In 1899 he came to Oregon and here he entered the employ of the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company, serving as station agent at various points until 1903. The following two years he was engaged in business for himself, operating a sawmill and box factory at Harrison, Idaho. He then em-to Elgin as station agent for the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company, remaining in their employ for three years. Subsequently he engaged in agricultural and horticultural work in partnership with J. B. Thorson and they now own three hundred acres of land near Elgin, one hundred and fifty acres of which is planted in apple trees. In 1909 Mr. Weatherspoon was one of the organizers of the Elgin Commission Company, which carries on a general warehouse business, and he was also made manager of the same, in which capacity he is ably serving.

In 1901, H. H. Weatherspoon married Miss Frona B. Taylor, of Chicago, Illinois. In his political views he is independent. In the spring of 1910 he was elected mayor of Elgin and was reelected to that office in 1911. Fraternally, he is a member of Elgin Lodge, No. 98, A. F. & A. M., and of the Royal Arcanum, Chapter No. 72, of Fredonia, Kansas. He belongs to Al Kader Temple, No. 52, K. T., and both he and his wife are members of Blue Mountain Chapter, No. 52, O. E. S. Mr. Weatherspoon is extremely successful in his business relations and his popularity in the city of his residence is shown by the fact that his fellow townsmen have twice chosen him as their chief executive.

H. LEE FLETCHER. East of McMinnville, on the Dayton road, is the old Fletcher homestead, which H. Lee Fletcher is now engaged in cultivating, also making a specialty of raising hogs and hops. He is a young man but has already established himself in a position as one of the progressive agriculturists of this part of the state. Yamhill county claims him as a native son, his birth having here occurred on the 18th of June, 1888. His parents were J. B. and Etta E. (Martin) Fletcher, the latter a native of Oregon and the former of Missouri. The father came to this state in 1865 and settled in Yamhill county, where he has since made his home, being identified for many years with its agricultural development and progress. His wife passed away in 1907 and her death was the occasion of deep regret to many friends who held her in high esteem.

The only child of this marriage was H. Lee Fletcher, who enjoyed the benefits of a high-school education and of liberal and kindly home training. In his youthful days he assisted his father and about the time he attained his majority took charge of the old homestead, which comprises one hundred and fifty acres, situated a mile and a half east of McMinnville, on the Dayton road. The entire farm is under cultivation and presents a neat and attractive appearance, which indicates his careful supervision and practical methods. He makes a specialty of raising and breeding O. J. C. Chester hogs, keeping at all times some for sale. He also has a hop ranch of twenty acres and the cultivation of hops adds materially to his annual income, for it is a vine for which the soil of this district seems especially adapted.

On the 8th of June, 1910, Mr. Fletcher was united in marriage to Miss Nellie M. Gilson, a native of Missouri. He belongs to Occidental Lodge, No. 30, I. O. O. F., at McMinnville, but has comparatively little time for outside interests, for he is concentrating his energies upon his business affairs and, although a young man, is making substantial progress in agricultural circles by reason of his close application, keen discernment and sound judgment.

DR. LESLIE G. JOHNSON is a capable and successful physician of Coos county, practicing at Myrtle Point. His professional attainment and his fraternal relations have made him widely known. He is a member of various societies and lodges, which have for their basic principles a recognition of the brotherhood of mankind and whose members number among his host of friends. He was born in California in 1885, his parents being W. Wynn and Retta (Cougill) Johnson, both of whom are natives of Oregon. The father was born on the present site of the city of Portland. His parents were married before coming to the Pacific coast and on their arrival in this section of the country they settled upon what is now known as Johnson creek, near Lents, Oregon. W. Wynn Johnson was long a well known and prominent resident of Portland, where for many years he acted as business manager for the Oregon Daily Journal. Unto him and his wife were born two children, the youngest being Sidney L. Johnson, of Tacoma, Washington.

At an early age Dr. Johnson started out in life on his own account. His education was acquired in the public schools, which he attended until he had completed the high school course. He determined to make the practice of medicine his life work and with this end in view he entered the medical department of the University of Oregon in 1905 and was graduated from that institution in 1909. Immediately afterward he came to Myrtle Point and has since engaged in the practice of medicine in Coos county. He was not long in demonstrating the fact that his knowledge of scientific methods is comprehensive and exact and his judgment is sound in applying the principles of medicine and surgery to specific needs. He holds to high professional standards and keeps in touch with the advanced work of the profession through his membership in the American Medical Association and in lesser organizations.

Dr. Johnson was married to Miss Leta L. Drain, a daughter of John and Lucy (Cruzon) Drain. The town of Drain, Oregon, was named for her grandfather. Mrs. Johnson has the following sisters and brothers: Anna F., the wife of A. M. Smith, mayor of Astoria; Mrs. Nancy Singleton, a widow, who is a teacher in a public school of Portland; John, who is captain of the Fulton station of the Portland fire department; Otto D., a member of the fire department of that city; and Belva, the wife of W. P. Lillis, of Portland. Dr. and Mrs. Johnson were married in October, 1909, and during their residence here, brief as it has been, they have won many friends. They hold membership in the Methodist Episcopal church. Dr. Johnson gives his political allegiance to the republican party and is identified with various fraternal organizations, including the Masonic, the Woodmen of the World, Modern Woodmen of America, the Royal Neighbors, the Women of Woodcraft and the local Grange. Genial, courteous, cordial and capable, his salient qualities are such as have won for him both professional and social prominence.

AUGUST DANIELSON. For more than a third of a century August Danielson has lived in Astoria and throughout the entire period has been connected with the liquor trade as a jobber. He is also now identified with banking interests here and his prosperity is further indicated in the fact that he is the owner of good residence and business property in the city. A considerable number of the residents of Astoria are of Scandinavian birth or descent, which class includes Mr. Danielson, who was born in Sweden, on the 11th of August, 1855, a son of Lars P. and Christina C. (Anderson) Danielson, both of whom were natives of Sweden, where the father died in 1888, while the mother still resides there at the age of seventy-four years. Of their six children August is the eldest, the others being: Anders P., who died in Sweden; John O., who passed away in Alaska; Christina L., who also died in Alaska; Vendla C., the wife of Adolph Johnson, of Astoria; and Joel H., of Sweden.

When a young man of twenty years August Danielson arrived in America, reaching the new world in June. He had no capital save determination and a willingness to work, but these are valuable assets in business and so proved with him. He first settled in Astoria and soon afterward opened a jobber's liquor store, which he has since carried on, building up a substantial and growing business. Many of his patrons have remained with him through all the years and to the original number he has added many others. He has likewise extended his efforts to banking circles and is now a stockholder and director of the Scandinavian American Savings Bank of Astoria. He has made judicious investments in real estate and now owns two fine business properties, a splendid residence and other realty in this city.

On the 26th of October, 1880, Mr. Danielson was united in marriage to Mrs. Johanna C. Nelson, who was born in Sweden, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nels Larson, who were also natives of Sweden, where they spent their entire lives. They had six children: John G., who is now deceased; Sophia, the widow of O. Henderson; Mrs. Danielson; August, who has departed this life; Amanda, the wife of Axel Larson, of Sweden; and Olaus, living in Portland, Oregon. Unto the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Danielson were born three children. Laura Augusta, born in 1885, pursued a college course and was also educated in music and is now a stenographer and typewriter. Arthur Frederick, born in June, 1890, is a high-school graduate and now an electrical engineer. Frances Louise, born in October, 1900, is still attending school.

Mr. Danielson exercises his right of franchise in support of the men and measures of the republican party and, although he keeps well informed on the questions and issues of the day, is not an office seeker. He belongs to the Knights of Pythias lodge of Astoria, has filled most of the chairs and at present is master of finance, which position he has held for twenty-two years. He is likewise a popular member of the Fraternal Order of Eagles of Astoria and belongs to the Scandinavian Benevolent Society, of which he is treasurer, and to the Swedish Brotherhood. He and his family attend the Episcopal church and their many good qualities have gained them the warm regard of a large circle of friends and acquaintances.

SIMON L. McKENZIE, who is a druggist and postmaster of Lostine, was born in the province of Quebec, Canada, March 7, 1841. He is a son of Roderick and Anna (Kennedy) McKenzie, both of whom were natives of Scotland and were married in that country. In 1837 they removed to Canada, locating in Quebec, where the father engaged in farming. Both died there, the father in 1858 and the mother in 1851.

Simon L. McKenzie was educated in the common schools and at St. Francis' College in Richmond, Canada. On reaching manhood he began life for himself as a clerk in a general merchandise store at Granby, Canada. Subsequently he engaged in the insurance business and was also identified with mining interests. In 1870 he came to the United States, locating at Dardanelle, Arkansas, where he spent eight years as a clerk in a store. In 1878 he came to Oregon, locating in Summerville, Union county, and there established a drug store. In connection with his work as a druggist he also engaged in the insurance business. On the 1st of May, 1879, he was appointed postmaster of Summerville, which position he held for about seven years. He then resigned his office in favor of a friend and was prominently identified with the business interests of Summerville until 1900, when he came to Lostine, where he has since been engaged in the drug business. On the 11th of November, 1905, he was appointed postmaster of Lostine and has held that position continuously since.

In 1881 Mr. McKenzie was married to Miss Ella A. Wilhams, a daughter of James Williams, who came to Union county, Oregon, from California and is deceased. To Mr. and Mrs. McKenzie have been born eight children, seven of whom are living. They are: Kenneth, who is a member of the drug firm of McKenzie & Allen, at Wallowa; John, who is employed in his father's drug store in this city; Grace, who is the wife of Archibald Willett, of Lostine; Ethel, a teacher in a Wallowa county district school; Frances and Thomas, at home; and Robert, who is attending the State Agricultural College at Corvallis.

In his political views Mr. McKenzie is republican. He is a member of the town council, and while a resident of Summerville was for many years a justice of the peace. He gives much time and attention to educational work and is chairman of the school board. Fraternally he belongs to Lostine Lodge, No. 123, A. F. & A. M., and both he and Mrs. McKenzie are members of Anthony Chapter, No. 88, O. E. S. His life has been one of continuous activity, in which has been accorded due recognition of labor, and today he is numbered among the substantial and foremost citizens of Lostine. Both he and his wife are members of the Presbyterian church.

JOHN S. CHURCHILL is a well known druggist and property owner in Marcola. He has had a broad experience, having been a rancher, business man and educator of prominence. He was born in Iowa, December 30, 1847, a son of William and Elizabeth (Lemon) Churchill, the father a native of Kentucky and the mother of Illinois. Both parents are still living. They were married in Illinois, where they resided until 1851, when they crossed the great American plains by ox teams and settled at Santiam. After remaining there for a short time they removed to Coles valley, in Douglas county, where the father took up a donation claim of three hundred and twenty acres of land and began to clear it and make improvements without delay. He remained on this farm until 1866, when he sold out and removed to Polk county. After arriving in that county he purchased various tracts of land at different times, residing there until in 1880, when he removed to Lane county and retired. He is at present residing in Eugene at the age of eighty-seven years, while his wife has reached the age of eighty-five years. To them were born the following children, of whom J. S. Churchill, of this review, is the eldest, the others being: Mrs. Sarah L. Knox, of Cottage Grove, Oregon; Henry, of Santa Rosa, California; Alva, a resident of Bohemia, Lane County, Oregon; Mary, the deceased wife of E. J. Fenton, of San Francisco, California; Corinne, the wife of Frank E. Alley, of Roseburg, Oregon; and two who passed away in infancy.

John S. Churchill received a common-school education and later attended college in Oregon, in which state he was reared. At the age of twenty-two years he began his business career when he purchased an interest in a general mercantile store at Independence, in Polk county. He retained his connection with that business for two years, when, selling his interests there, he purchased a stock ranch in Marion county, which he operated for two years and then sold in 1874, removing to California. In that state he again became engaged in ranching and other occupations for four years. At the end of that time he sold his interests in the Golden state and returned to Lane county, Oregon, where he taught school and conducted a nursery on a ranch which he purchased until 1902, when he became bookkeeper for the Fischer Lumber Company at Marcola, a position which he held for six years. In 1909 he purchased the drug store at Marcola which he still continues to operate, and in addition to the regular drug line he also handles many other articles. He owns a fine home in this city and also has various other properties including a livery barn.

Mr. Churchill was married in 1872 to Miss Ann E. Drinkwater, a native of Oregon, and unto this union were born seven children, as follows: Myrtle, the wife of E. B. Doane, of Springfield, Oregon; Karl, a resident of Pendleton; Ollie, who married William McDougal, of Washington; Earl, deceased; Howard, living in Springfield; Raymond, also of Springfield; and Zuleika, who has also passed away. From his first wife Mr. Churchill was legally separated in 1907 and later was again married, his second union being with Mrs. T. G. McMurry, the widow of Milton McMurry, and a daughter of Stephen Meriau. Mr. Churchill in his political views is an adherent of the republican party, having taken a commendable interest in politics as affecting the common good. He has been a justice of the peace, a notary public and a member of the school board for many years. Fraternally he belongs to the Masonic lodge, of which he has been secretary, and is also a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, having filled all chairs in that order. Mr. Churchill, who is prominent in business and fraternal affairs of Marcola, is a well known business man and the success which he has achieved may be attributed to his own well directed efforts. Starting out in life with practically nothing, he has succeeded in building up a substantial competence and as he is still vigorous and ambitious he continues in a business which is very satisfactory. He has an extended acquaintance in business, fraternal and social circles throughout the community and in the business world he is regarded as being one of the most reliable and solid men in Marcola.

WALTER KALLUNKI, one of Astoria's successful business men, was born in this city on the 1st of December, 1880. He is a son of John Abraham and Christina (Pohjonen) Kallunki, the father a native of Finland, and the mother of Sweden. The father emigrated to the United States in 1875 and during the first three years of his residence in this country remained in the east. At the expiration of that period, however, he came west, locating in Astoria, where he met and subsequently married Miss Pohjonen. After settling here he turned his attention toward agricultural pursuits and fishing, in which occupations he continued to be engaged until his demise in 1902. He was quite successful in his enterprises and acquired a very pleasant homestead in Union township, adjoining Astoria on the west, where his widow continues to reside. Of this marriage there were born three children: Walter, the sub-

T. S. CHURCHILL

THE NEW
PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASTOR, LENOX AND
TILDEN FOUNDATIONS

ject of this sketch; Annie Evelyn, who is still at home; and Albert, at the present time a resident of the state of Georgia.

Walter Kallunki has spent his entire life in this city, where he is now engaged in business. He was reared at home and in the acquirement of his education attended the common schools. On the 1st of May, 1908, he started in the mercantile business at No. 221 West Bond street, where he is still located. He has met with most gratifying success in his endeavors and now has a large and well assorted stock of goods, while his patronage is constantly increasing. His is one of the largest establishments of the kind in Astoria.

On the 3d of April, 1909, Mr. Kallunki's plans for a home had their culmination in his marriage to Miss Rosa Peterson Jampsa, also a native of Astoria, and a daughter of Peter and Eva Jampsa. Her parents were both natives of Finland but were married in Norway whence they emigrated to the United States. Upon their arrival in this country they first located in Michigan, where for ten years the father engaged in operating a mine. After they settled in Astoria he devoted his energies to agricultural pursuits and fishing, until 1892 when together with his family he removed to the Nehalem valley, Oregon, where he is engaged in farming exclusively. To Mr. and Mrs. Jampsa eleven children have been born, six of whom are surviving: Ida, now the wife of Axel Carlson, of Astoria; Josie, who married Charles Anderson, of Milwaukie, Oregon; Henry, who is a resident of San Francisco, California; Anna, the wife of Emil Glutsch, of Portland; Rosa P., now Mrs. Kallunki; and Alice, who is still at home. Mr. and Mrs. Kallunki have one son, his birth having occurred on the 28th of March, 1910.

The religious views of both coincide with those of the Lutheran church, in the faith of which denomination they were reared. He also belongs to the Moose order and the Finnish Brotherhood. His political allegiance Mr. Kallunki gives to the republican party, but he has never been an office seeker or candidate for municipal honors. His undivided attention is given to his business in the development of which he is meeting with more than an average degree of success.

JOHN W. MINNICK, who settled in Union county when that section was still disturbed by Indians, has been the owner of six hundred and forty acres of land there and for many years operated a threshing machine, a business which he still follows. He has a fine home in Union, where he has resided since 1909. He was born in Highland county, Ohio, in September, 1849, a son of Samuel Minnick, who was born in Rockridge county, Virginia, January 11, 1812. The grandfather, Henry Minnick, was a native of Germany and emigrated to the new world at a comparatively early day, settling in Rockridge county, Virginia. In his family were four sons and two daughters. Three of the sons took part in the Civil war in the Confederate army, one of them being a colonel who was killed in battle. Another, Joshua, died in Des Moines, Iowa. Henry Minnick died in Virginia. As a young man his son Samuel, the father of John W. Minnick, removed to Ohio, settling in Highland county, where he engaged in agricultural pursuits. He remained there until in 1855, when he removed to Iowa, settling in Jasper county, where he resided until his death, which occurred in 1886. He had a family of twelve children, of whom John W. Minnick was the seventh in order of birth.

Mr. Minnick of this review spent his boyhood in the state of Iowa, where he was given a common school education. In 1875 he removed to Wyoming, settling at Evanston, where he was married. He remained in that state for two years, when he returned to Iowa, engaging in the coal mining business for a year and a half. He then with his wife and baby drove to Oregon by mule team, the trip requiring three months and twenty days. On arriving at Rock Creek, Idaho, they joined a wagon train containing sixty freight teams and one hundred and fifty emigrant wagons which was accompanied by an escort of soldiers and citizens as far as Boise, where the train broke up, the various members starting out directly for their destinations. On leaving that city Mr. Minnick had a narrow escape from the Indians, who broke through their camp grounds of the previous night, about eight miles east of Glen's Ferry, when they were two days out from that city, being at that time, however, twelve miles ahead of the Indians' approach. At King Hill they found Barlow & Holladay's stage coach burned, the horses and two drivers having been killed. Shortly afterward they passed the remains of an emigrant wagon which had been burned, the driver killed and the horses stolen. They crossed the Snake River at Burnt River Ferry, reaching Oregon June 21, 1878. They hushed on to Union, where they arrived a week later, at about the time the settlers there were building forts to defend themselves against the Indians who, however, confined themselves to the hills surrounding the settlement. After four days Mr. Minnick located a homestead seven miles east of Union in High valley and there built a house living alone with his family during the Indian excitement of that period. He made his home on that land which comprised six hundred and forty acres until 1909, at which time he sold out and removed to Union. He had been doing general farming but made a specialty of raising cattle, owning as many as two hundred and fifty head at one time. He has followed the threshing business for twenty-three years and for three years has been vice president of the Oregon Threshers' Association. He has threshed about one million one hundred and forty thousand bushels of grain since coming to Oregon and still follows that business, operating with up-to-date machinery. He was the first man to drive a steam thresher in the vicinity of Union, a type which has long since supplanted the old horse power machines.

Mr. Minnick was married June 5, 1876, to Miss Mary Davis, a native of Missouri, and to them were born five children, namely: Jessie May, who married Charles W. Woolever, residing near Union; Macy E., the wife of J. W. Evans; William A., who is married and resides at Twin Falls, Idaho; Mary C., now Mrs. V. W. Dodson; and Ivy V., the wife of E. F. Reuter. The wife and mother died in 1889 and Mr. Minnick was again married, in 1891, to Miss Mary J. Vass, a native of Marion county, Iowa. By this union were born two children, Milo Clifford and Kenneth Clayton.

Mr. Minnick is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, when he joined in 1886. He has been a very successful business man, being aggressive in all of his operations, yet always characterized by a reasonable degree of conservatism which has resulted in his acquiring a very comfortable competence. He has an extensive circle of acquaintances throughout Union county, having done business with a very large proportion of the farmers of that section.

WILLIAM SPREADBOROUGH, who devotes his time and energies to general agricultural pursuits, is the owner of a well improved farm of forty and a half acres situated four miles southeast of Banks. His birth occurred in County Surrey, England, on the 21st of November, 1856, his parents being Eli and Elizabeth (Elliott) Spreadborough, who were born, reared and married in that country. In 1888 they crossed the Atlantic to the United States, settling on a farm with two of their sons in Washington county, Oregon, where they have resided continuously since. Eli Spreadborough is now eighty-five years old, while his wife has attained the age of seventy-eight. Unto them were born twelve children, three of whom are still in England, namely: Harry, Fannie and Annie. The others are as follows: William, of this review; Elliott, who resides on the old homestead place; Turvill, Alfred, Frank and Walter, all living in Portland; Arthur, who makes his home in the state of Washington; Sidney, who died at the age of twenty-four years; and George, who passed away in England.

William Spreadborough obtained his education in the common schools of England and remained in his native land until twenty-seven years of age. In November, 1883, he crossed the Atlantic to the United States, settling in Ohio, where he worked on a farm for two years. Returning to England, he there remained for two years and then again set sail for American shores, once more going to Ohio, in which state he worked for a short time. Subsequently he came to Washington county, Oregon, here working on farms and also assisting his brother in the cultivation of the fields until the time of his marriage. Following that important event in his life he settled on his wife's farm of forty and a half acres, whereon he has resided continuously since, having brought the property under a high state of cultivation and improvement. The fields annually yield golden harvests as a reward for the care and labor which is bestowed upon them, and the neat and thrifty appearance of that place indicates the supervision of a practical and progressive owner.

In 1906 Mr. Spreadborough wedded Mrs. Margaret Gable, the widow of Henry Gable, who lived but three years after his marriage and who became the father of one son, William. Mrs Gable had previously been the wife of Rudolph Winterrer, who died one year after their marriage and by whom she had a daughter, Emma, whose birth occurred on the 18th of June, 1892, and who is now the wife of John Courss, of Centerville, Oregon. Mrs. Spreadborough was born in Germany on the 12th of February, 1858, her parents being Christian and Charlotte (Brown) Loch, both of whom passed away in that country, the father's demise occurring in 1879, while the mother was called to her final rest in 1882. Their children were seven in number, namely: Sophia, the wife of August Bronner, of Washington county, Oregon; George, Carl, Catherine, Magdalena and Mary, all of whom still reside in Germany; and Mrs. Spreadborough, the youngest of the family.

In politics Mr. Spreadborough is a stanch republican but the honors and emoluments of office have no attraction for him. In religious faith he is an Episcopalian, while his wife is a faithful communicant of the Catholic church. His life has been well spent. In all of its relations he has been true to high and honorable principles and has never faltered in a choice between right and wrong but has always endeavored to follow a course that his judgment and his consoience have sanctioned.

BENJAMIN A. RICKKOLA. The interest that centers in many countries in the old world clings around its past rather than its present greatness, but the history of America and especially that of the Pacific coast country is yet in the making. The progressive residents of this region are the builders of a new empire; theirs the task to reclaim and improve the land and to utilize its advantages for their own benefit and for the honor and welfare of the country. The bounteous opportunities of the west are attracting hundreds of young men to the Pacific coast and among those who have come from Finland is numbered Benjamin A. Rickkola, who was born in that country January 25, 1880. His parents were August and Emma (Waaranimi) Riekkola and the father is still a resident of Finland, their native land. They had a family of twelve children, of whom four have crossed the Atlantic, the eldest being Benjamin A., of this review. His sister Fannie and brother Adam are also residents of Astoria, while eight others are still living in Finland and one of the family has passed away.

Not content to find his labors hampered in a country where caste and class prevail and where effort is but poorly repaid with a limited wage, Mr. Riekkola resolved to cross the Atlantic and in 1899 arrived in the new world. From the eastern coast he made his way into the interior of the country, first settling in Michigan, where he remained for four years. He then went to Alaska, where he engaged in digging coal for four months. On the expiration of that period he came to Seattle, Washington, and remained a short time, after which he went to Butte, Montana, where he lived for four months. He next located at Red Lodge, where he was employed in a store for a year and a half, and afterward came to Astoria, and secured work at the carpenter's trade. He also followed fishing for one season and subsequently went to the state of Washington, conducting a hotel at Deep River. He was proprietor of that hostelry for two years, at the end of which time he sold out and returned to Astoria, where he opened a saloon, in which business he is still engaged. He also has an interest in the Finnish Mercantile Company of this city.

On the 20th of January, 1906, Mr. Riekkola was married to Miss Mary Pirila, who was born in Astoria and is a daughter of Andrew and Katie Pirila, who were natives of Finland but came to America prior to their marriage and settled in this city, where the mother now resides. The father, however, passed away here in 1904. Their family numbered four children, of whom Mrs. Riekkola is the eldest, the others being: Sophia, who is living in Nehalem, Oregon; Albert, a resident of the state of Washington; and Gustav, also of Washington. The marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Riekkola has been blessed with one son, Archie A., who was born in 1907.

Mr. Riekkola is a member of the order of Moose and he and his family are of the Lutheran faith. His diligence has been the source of whatever success he has achieved, his prosperity coming to him as the reward of his labor.

OLIVER CRESSIE SHELDON. The operation of one hundred and fifty-one acres of land situated in Yamhill county engages the attention of Oliver Cressie Sheldon, who is one of Oregon's native sons. His birth occurred in Polk county on the 13th of June, 1874, his parents being Albert and Lettie (Durbin) Sheldon. Their parents crossed the plains to Oregon during their youth with their parents, who located in Marion county, where Mr. and Mrs. Albert Sheldon were subsequently married. Farming always engaged the attention of Mr. Albert Sheldon during the entire period of his active career, and a few years after his marriage and after the death of his father he inherited one hundred and fifty-one acres of land in Yamhill county, upon which he and his wife settled. He met with such excellent financial returns in the operation of his land that he was able to withdraw from the active work of the fields in 1910, and he and his wife are now living retired in Portland. Of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Sheldon there were born three children, of whom our subject is the eldest. The other two sons, Hallie and Clifton, are both living in Marion county, this state.

Oliver Cressie Sheldon was educated in the common schools of Polk county, remaining at home with his grandparents until he attained his majority. He then started out for himself, and having been born and reared on a farm, naturally he turned his attention to agricultural pursuits. So he operated some rented land for a time, but later withdrew from this and followed various pursuits until 1910, when he bought the old home farm of his father. His entire attention is now given to the cultivation of his ranch and he is meeting with very good returns.

In 1906 Mr. Sheldon was united in marriage to Miss Minnie Koschmieder, and they have become the parents of one child, Mariann, whose birth occurred in August, 1907.

Mr. Sheldon is quite well known in this community, where his parents resided for many years and where he has a large circle of friends, many of whom have known him from boyhood.

JOHN LEA, conducting the Irving Hotel in Astoria, which under his management has become a popular and well appointed hostelry, was born in Stavanger, Norway, on the 28th of February, 1875, his parents being Ole E. and Kathinka S. (Johnson) Lea. The parents are still living in that land, where their entire lives have been passed, and the father has conducted a tannery since starting in business for himself. Of their family of four children John Lea is the second in order of birth. The eldest, Ole E. Lea, Jr., is the captain of the steamship Rask, which sails from Hangesund, Norway, and makes trips between England and Spain. Previously his run included ports in England, Russia and Spain, and over the Arctic route in the summer months. Kathinka S., the only daughter in the family, is still living with her parents in Norway and is employed in a general mercantile store. Alfred, the youngest of the family, is deceased.

John Lea supplemented his common school education by a business course and had some business training ere he started for the new world, for he felt that his efforts were somewhat hampered in his native country. He, therefore, determined to seek the broader advantages of the new world and on the 11th of March, 1901, having left adieu to friends and family, started for America. His destination was Brooklyn, New York. He was ambitious and energetic and made a good start during his residence there. After remaining in this country for a year and a half he was joined by the lady whom he made his wife. They were married in Brooklyn on the 26th of September, 1901, at which time Miss Olga Nylund became Mrs. Lea. She was born in Stavanger, Norway, May 11, 1885, and was a daughter of Ole Johannesen and Anna (Kallan) Nylund, who were likewise natives of the same country. The father died there in 1884 but the mother is still living at the old home in Norway and has reached the age of seventy years. They had five children: Johannes, who is still living in Norway; Anna, the wife of Cristoffer Lindtner, of Norway; Hans W., who is conducting a hotel in Astoria; and Magna, the wife of Gudmund Urdal, of Norway. Mrs. Lea is the youngest of the family, and by her marriage has become the mother of one son, John N., who was born in Brooklyn, New York.

For three years after their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Lea remained residents of Brooklyn and then sought the far west, making their way to Wasco, California, where he operated a farm for three and a half years. He then sold his property in that state, and in July, 1910, came to Astoria, where he has since conducted the Irving Hotel, which is becoming for him a profitable investment. He keeps everything about the place in good condition, provides an excellent table, studies the comfort and convenience of his guests and, therefore, secures a liberal patronage.

Mr. Lea votes with the republican party and holds membership with the Fraternal Brotherhood at Los Angeles, California. He and his family attend the Lutheran church and he is in sympathy with all movements and projects for the benefit of the community and its upbuilding along substantial lines. What he has accomplished indicates what may be done by persistent energy and effort where men are rated at their true worth and labor finds its just reward.

H. O. WORTHINGTON, postmaster of Athena and one of the leading and most respected citizens of that place, was born in Tennessee, June 26, 1871, a son of William L. and Nancy E. (Kinser) Worthington, the former a native of Kentucky and the latter of Pennsylvania. The parents came to Oregon in 1881 and settled in Umatilla county, where the mother passed away in 1884. After her death the father returned to Tennessee, where his death occurred in 1893. They were the parents of six children, three of whom are still living.

H. O. Worthington was given a common-school education and at seventeen years of age started out in life on his own account, working at whatever opportunity offered. He later went into the butchering business in Weston, Umatilla county, in 1892, and still later engaged in the grocery business. In 1895 he removed to Pendleton, where for two years he clerked in a store, after which he engaged in the livery business, in which he continued until 1898, when he removed to Athena, where he was appointed postmaster in January, 1911.

In 1891 Mr. Worthington was married to Miss Mary McDonald, who was born in Canada, a daughter of Duncan McDonald. To Mr. and Mrs. Worthington has been born a son, John E., who is attending high school. In his political faith Mr. Worthington is a republican, having been reasonably active in the affairs of his party and community. Fraternally he is affiliated with the Woodmen of the World, having filled all of the chairs in that order, and he is also a member of the Odd Fellows lodge. Mr. Worthington and his wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal church and the family take much interest in the affairs of that church. Postmaster Worthington has by careful attention to the duties of his office gained high appreciation from the entire community. He is courteous and obliging in his business intercourse with the patrons of the office and in all his relations with the people of his city and community he is affable and obliging. He easily ranks among the best of Athena's citizens and the Worthington family is a popular one and has not only a wide acquaintance but also enjoys a most excellent reputation.

AMEDY LASHAPELLE. One of the well equipped and prosperous farms in Marion county, one and one-half miles west of Gervais, is managed by Amedy Lashapelle. Mr. Lashapelle has been a lifelong resident of Oregon and is a son of one of this state's pioneer settlers. He was born in St. Louis, Oregon, in 1858, his parents being Andrew and Adrian (Lucier) Lashapelle, the latter a daughter of Etienne Lucier. The father of Amedy Lashapelle came to Oregon in the employ of the Hudson's Bay Company and lived here until his death in the Portland hospital, in 1883, at the age of eighty-two years. His marriage had occurred when he was forty years of age, his wife being nineteen years of age, and to them twelve children were born, namely: Felicite, deceased; Mrs. Adelaide Lavier, of Woodburn, Oregon; Joseph, who resides in Hubbard; Victor, deceased; Mrs. Kate Chamberlain, who is a resident of Idaho; Prosper, who resides on a part of the old homestead in St. Louis, Oregon; Mrs. Clementine Vandile, who is a resident of Champoeg, Oregon; Amedy; Blandine and Odeal, both deceased; Mrs. Lena Cummings, of Portland, Oregon; and Mrs. Grenier, of Carlville, Washington.

At the age of twenty years Amedy Lashapelle started in life for himself and for nine years was employed in various lines of work. At the end of this time he rented three hundred and fifty acres of land and engaged in agricultural pursuits, an occupation which has since occupied his time and in which he has had more than ordinary success. He has always had about this same amount of land and today he owns horses and farming implements to do the work on a farm of this size.

Mr. Lashapelle has been twice married. His first marriage was to Phoebe Chamberlain and to them four children were born: Lois, who is a resident of St. Louis, Oregon; and Rosie, Jessie and Leo, all of whom are deceased. His second union, in 1894, was with Lena Vandile who was born in 1868 and was one of two children, the other having died in infancy. She was the daughter of John B. and Marceline Vandile, both natives and lifelong residents of Oregon. The father was born in Marion county and died in St. Louis, Oregon, in 1908, aged sixty-three years. Of this second union ten children have been born, namely: Ernest, in 1894; Jerome, in 1896; Amy, in 1898; Sadie, in 1899; Elsie, in 1900; Irvin, in 1902; Hazel, in 1904; Alice, in 1906; Archie, in 1908; and Marceline, deceased. Mr. Lashapelle's mother, who is now ninety-three years old, is also a member of her son's family and has been living with them for the past twenty-one years. All of her donation claim except three acres has been sold.

H. O. WORTHINGTON

In politics Mr. Lashapelle gives his support to the republican party. He is a member of the Catholic church and has served as school director for several years. His interest in the development and progress of the community has been great, but the activities demanded in carrying on his agricultural pursuits occupy the greater part of his time and he has little time for politics. His neighbors find him a modern and successful agriculturist and a citizen worthy of their regard and esteem.

JOHN NEAL. One of the largest and most efficiently managed farms on the Coquille river is owned and operated by John Neal, a leading and representative agriculturist of that section. His place is run along modern and systematic lines and his success is the direct result of his energy and ability. He was born in 1851 and is a son of John O. and Roener (Pruett) Neal, the former a native of Missouri, and the latter of Indiana. His father was one of the early Oregon pioneers, coming across the plains with ox teams in 1841. His caravan was the first to come the entire way by wagon and the members of the party had several narrow escapes from death at the hands of the Indians. Upon one occasion they were without food for three days and endured all the hardships and privations incident to travel in the early days of the settlement of the northwest. The elder Mr. Neal settled first in Linn county in the forks of the Santiam river but later took up a donation claim of six hundred and forty acres. Previous to his proving his title he took part in the Cayuse Indian war, fighting in the Oregon State Militia under Captain Gillham. At one time he was pursued by seven Indians for fifteen miles and narrowly escaped with his life. He lived upon his donation claim for eight years and married during this time, his wife having come to Oregon in 1847. She crossed the plains with ox teams and the caravan with which she traveled had several narrow escapes from Indians. In 1858 the father sold his donation claim and removed to Jackson county, where he engaged successfully in stock raising until 1861 or 1862. During a hard winter he lost his stock consisting of three hundred head of high-grade cattle, thirty horses and two hundred hogs. He removed to Linn county and farmed for several years, meeting with a good degree of success. In 1871 he came to Coos county and made his home with his son, the subject of this sketch, and died in the fifty-fifth year of his age. His wife survived him until 1899, and passed away at the age of seventy eight. They became the parents of nine children, four of whom are still living: John, the subject of this sketch; William, of Myrtle Point, Oregon; Barbara, who first wedded William Phillips and is now the wife of W. S. Barnett of Coquille, Oregon; and Darius a resident of Myrtle Point. The deceased members of this family are buried in Coos county with the exception of one sister, who was laid to rest in Wallowa valley.

Mr. Neal was reared at home and received his education in the public schools of Linn county. He remained with his parents until he was twenty-two years of age and then began general farming and stock-raising upon a homestead claim of one hundred and sixty acres, which he purchased in Coos county. Here he has since resided and made extensive improvements, adding to his property from time to time until he now owns three hundred and forty acres of the finest and most productive land in the district. He raises high-grade and registered stock for the market and this branch of his enterprise forms a splendid source of income to him. He is numbered among the men who have assisted in the development of Coos county. During the first years of his life as an independent agriculturist he had a difficult time to gain his livelihood. He ground his own flour in a small coffee mill and raised the potatoes which, with elk flesh fried in bear oil, formed the principle item of his diet. He, however, won success by reason of his industry and activity and now has one of the finest and most highly improved farms upon the Coquille river.

March 31, 1881, Mr. Neal was married to Miss Sarah Whobrey, who was born in Josephine county, Oregon, in December, 1861. She is a daughter of Matthew K. and Margaret J. (Groshong) Whobrey, both natives of Missouri. Mrs. Neal's parents crossed the plains with ox teams and were among the pioneer settlers of Oregon. Her father fought in the Indian war of 1856-57. He spent most of his active life farming and stock-raising in Coos county and died in this section in 1884. His wife is still living in Myrtle Point, Oregon and is seventy-one years of age. To them were born eight children: Sarah, the wife of our subject; James, of Myrtle Point, Oregon; Willis, who also lives in Myrtle Point where he makes his home with his mother; Mrs. Jane Whetstone of Coquille City; John, who resides in Marshfield; William, a resident of Oregon; Joseph, deceased; and Samantha who married Mr. Elford of Myrtle Point. Mr. Whobrey had been married previous to his union with the mother of Mrs. Neal and by his first wife had two children: Mrs. Margaret Noah of Powers, Oregon; and Mrs. Mary Huntley of Myrtle Point.

Unto Mr. and Mrs. Neal have been born nine children: Lillie C., the wife of Arthur Sawyer, of Cascade; Willard Frank at home; O. K. and L. D., residents of Coos county; Letha, the wife of Arthur Herman, of Coos county; Mary Clyde, Wayne and John M., all at home; and Lois Fay, who died at the age of three years.

Mr. Neal is a democrat in his political belief but never seeks office and takes very little active part in local affairs. As a citizen of Oregon in the early days he has witnessed the development of the state and has labored for the advancement of his section. He has hood comrades are his friends today, and the respect and esteem in which they hold him has deepened and grown greater with the passing years.

OTTO SUND, a resident of Astoria since 1892, was born in Finland, September 16, 1871, a son of Jacob and Susanna Sund, who spent their entire lives in Finland. The mother died in 1887 and the father, surviving her for nine years, passed away in 1896. They had a family of twelve children, of whom five became residents of America, namely: Katrina, the deceased wife of William Sjoblum, of Astoria; Sophia, the wife of Judge Olaf Anderson, also of Astoria; Adolph, living in South Bend, Washington; Andrew, who is married and is living in Astoria; and Otto.

In the land of his nativity Otto Sund spent his youthful days to the age of nineteen years and the public schools afforded him his educational opportunities. Various tasks were also assigned him so that he came to correctly value industry and diligence. With the hope of bettering his financial condition, he came to America in July, 1891, and first settled in British Columbia, where he remained for eight months. He thence came to Astoria, and took up the business of salmon fishing in the Columbia river, which he continued for thirteen years. He then sold out and secured a position as bartender, working in that capacity for two years, after which he opened a saloon of his own at No. 509 Commercial street. This he has since conducted and in connection with his business he owns a fine home at No. 351 Eighth street.

In 1896 Mr. Sund was united in marriage to Miss Johannes Seepola, who was born in Finland and came to America alone in 1891, leaving her parents in their native land, where both passed away. Mrs. Sund was the eldest of their children, the others being: Feena, now the wife of Matt Kaski, of Oakland, California; and Helma, the wife of Matt Mattela, still a resident of Finland. Three children have come to brighten the home of Mr. and Mrs. Sund: Sigrede Myrtle, who was born January 18, 1898, and is now attending the public schools; Stanley E., who was born July 17, 1899, and is a pupil in the sixth grade, and Mildred Caroline, born July 18, 1911. The family are of the Lutheran faith and Mr. Sund is well known in fraternal circles, holding membership with the Red Men, Lodge No. 822 of the Order of Moose, the Fraternal Order of Eagles and the Order of Owls, all of Astoria.

CHARLES R. HIGGINS, the assistant cashier of The Astoria National Bank, is likewise connected with the Higgins & Warren Insurance Company at Astoria and is an extensive landowner. His birth occurred at Wolfville, Nova Scotia, on the 26th of October, 1866, his parents being W. J. and Rachel (Strong) Higgins, of whom more extended mention is made on another page of this work in connection with the sketch of James Edward Higgins, a brother of our subject. Charles R. Higgins supplemented his preliminary education, obtained in the common schools, by a course of study in the Horton Collegiate Academy of Wolfville, Nova Scotia, of which institution he is a graduate. In 1891 he won the degree of Bachelor of Arts from Acadia University at Wolfville. Subsequently he entered the service of the Peoples Bank of Halifax at Wolfville and was transferred successively to Halifax, Lunenburg, Mahone Bay and Riviere du Loup in Quebec, Canada. In 1893 he became identified with the Astoria National Bank at Astoria, Oregon, of which institution he is now serving as assistant cashier. He is likewise connected with insurance interests as a member of the firm of Higgins & Warren at Astoria. Mr. Higgins owns an interest in many tracts of land in the vicinity and is a holder of timber land in southern Oregon. In association with his brother-in-law he owns what is known as the Page block in Astoria. He also has a handsome residence at Astoria and is widely recognized as one of the leading and prosperous citizens of the community. For four years he served as secretary of the Chamber of Commerce.

On the 18th of October, 1899, Mr. Higgins was joined in wedlock to Miss Maude M. Warren, who was born at Astoria, Oregon, on the 26th of October, 1872. Her father was Daniel K. Warren, of whom more extended mention is made on another page of this work in connection with the sketch of George Wright Warren, a brother of Mrs. Higgins. Our subject and his wife have one daughter, Maude Elizabeth, whose natal day was February 11, 1907. Mrs. Higgins acquired her education at Auburndale, Massachusetts, and also pursued a course of study in Snell Seminary of Oakland, California.

In politics Mr. Higgins is a republican, loyally supporting the men and measures of that party. At the present time he is serving as treasurer of the centennial committee at Astoria. He is a member of the National Union of the state of Ohio, an insurance organization. His religious faith is that of the Presbyterian church. The success which he now enjoys is well merited, for he has ever followed the most honorable business methods in his dealings with his fellowmen and therefore enjoys the high regard of all with whom he has been associated.

AUGUST SCHNEIDER. Six miles southwest of Gervais, on the Salem and Champoeg road, is situated the well cultivated farm of August Schneider. He has been engaged in agricultural pursuits since he started to earn his own livelihood in Germany, at the age of eighteen, with the exception of the time he served in the Franco-Prussian war, in 1870-71. He was born in Germany in 1847 and is the son of Ferdinand and Christina (Feit) Schneider. Ferdinand Schneider was married three times. Of the first union four children were born: Francisca, who is a resident of Buffalo, New York, and is now eighty-four years of age; Rosina, deceased; Guierero, who resides in Germany; and Franz Joseph, deceased. Of the second marriage there were four children, namely: Tona, Eloise and Elizabeth, all deceased; and August, the subject of this sketch. Of the third union there are three children, namely: Francis; and Annie and Ferdinand, who reside in Germany.

After being employed by farmers in Germany for six years August Schneider came to America and for seven years was a resident of New York state, working by the day for two years and then renting and cultivating a farm for five years. After this he removed to South Dakota and took up a homestead upon which he built a home and which he developed until he brought it to a good state of productivity, raising cattle and engaging in general farming. For nineteen years he resided on this farm but sold it at the time he removed to Oregon, where he purchased one hundred and eighty-four acres of land at forty dollars per acre, which is now worth one hundred dollars an acre. Since acquiring this property Mr. Schneider has made many improvements upon the buildings, which are now commodious and modern, and has brought the entire property under a high state of cultivation. In carrying on his agricultural pursuits he has engaged in raising various products, including wheat, oats, hay, corn and clover. He also makes stock-raising a feature of his business, keeping hogs, cattle and horses. In all of these lines he has met with the success due to the persistent energy and diligent labor he has expended upon them, employing such scientific methods as assure the measure of success he has attained.

In 1876, in New York, occurred the marriage of Mr. Schneider to Eva Seigfried, who is the daughter of Adam and Elizabeth (Greenwald) Seigfried, and was born near Buffalo, New York, in 1855. To this union ten children were born, all of whom have been given a common-school education: George, who is residing in Oregon and is a railroad carpenter; Mrs. Annie Kersch, who is a resident of Marion county, Oregon; John, who has removed to Canada; Henry, who resides in Idaho where he is a railroad carpenter; Mrs. Mary Pitsel, who is the wife of Albert Pitsel and has two children; Fronie, Marguerite, John and Dora, all residing at home and the latter attending school; and Catherine, deceased.

In politics Mr. Schneider is a republican and has held the offices of road supervisor and town-ship supervisor. In religious faith he is a Roman Catholic. In all the relations of life he has proven his worth: as an agriculturist he has labored for scientific development and practical and substantial results; in office he has demonstrated his loyalty to the public trust; and in matters of general citizenship he has ever stood for patriotism and progress.

LARS LARSEN, a well known and highly esteemed resident of Astoria, is now living retired save for the supervision which he gives his business interests. His birth occurred in Norway on the 6th of March, 1854, his parents being Lars Torsen and Larcena Larsen, who spent their entire lives in that country. The father followed general agricultural pursuits throughout his active business career. Our subject was one of a family of ten children and one of the two who came to the United States, his brother Henry Larsen now residing in the upper town of Astoria. The other surviving children of the family, Christina, Martha Elizabeth and Thore, still make their home in Norway.

Lars Larsen obtained his education in the common schools of his native land and in 1873 crossed the Atlantic to America, first locating in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. In 1877 he removed to San Francisco, California, where he maintained his residence for two years, being a sailor during that period. In 1879 he came to Astoria, Oregon, and became identified with the fishing industry, owning his boat and net and hiring some help. After being thus engaged for twelve years he opened a saloon at Astoria and has conducted the same continuously since. His is one of the fine homes of the town and he likewise owns property at Seaside. He still supervises his business interests but is living practically retired in the enjoyment of well earned rest.

On the 17th of May, 1896, Mr. Larsen was united in marriage to Miss Amelia Ferry, who was born at Astoria in 1872, her parents being John and Kate (Miller) Ferry, the former a native of Guremeny Italy and the latter of St. Louis, Missouri. Their marriage was celebrated at Oak Point, near Astoria. John Ferry has been engaged in salmon fishing throughout his entire business career and is now living at Aberdeen, Washington, at the age of seventy years. His wife passed away in March, 1895, when fifty-three years of age. Unto them were born three children, as follows: Mrs Larsen; Annie, the wife of Joseph Watson, of San Pedro, California; and George, who is connected with the cold storage plant at Astoria.

Mr. Larsen is a stanch democrat in politics but has never sought office as a reward for his party fealty. He was formerly connected with the Astoria fire department and for six years acted as foreman of Company No. 3. Fraternally he is identified with the Knights of Pythias, belonging to Lodge No. 6 at Astoria. In religious faith both he and his wife are Methodists. Their home is at No. 647 Eleventh street in Astoria.

CHARLES H. GLOVER, who upon the 1st of October 1911 entered upon the duties of superintendent of the Yamhill county poor farm, has been a resident of the northwest off and on for over twenty five years. He was born in Minnesota on the 21 of February, 1861, and is a son of Joshua T. and Mary (Sagby) Glover. The father was born and reared on Long Island, New York, but the mother was a native of Pennsylvania. After completing his education Joshua T. Glover learned the carpenter's trade which he followed in New York city until he attained his majority. He then took a post tion as ship carpenter, and during the succeeding years made voyages to many ports. About 1849 he sailed around the Horn to San Francisco, where for a time he followed his trade, receiving for his services eighteen dollars per day, and prospected along the Sacramento river. He remained in California for two years then returned to New York by way of the Isthmus. For a time thereafter he was engaged in the mercantile business in New York city, but in 1855 he left the east and went to Minnesota, locating in St. Paul. There he devoted his attention to contracting and building, becoming extensively interested in real estate in St. Peter, Minnesota. About this time a bill was introduced in the legislature to change the capital, but the bill was stolen just before it was to have been signed, and a heavy slump in property values resulted. Mr. Glover lost considerable money, but he continued to reside in St. Peter until 1878. His next removal was to Kansas, where he engaged in farming until 1888, when he came to Oregon. Upon his arrival here he first located in Lane county, but subsequently removed to Douglas, where he engaged in farming until 1900. In the latter year he withdrew from active work and made his home with his son, our subject, who was then living in Washington. There he passed away in 1901, at the age of seventy-seven years. The mother passed away the same year. Of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Glover there were born five children, our subject being the third in order of birth. The others are as follows: a daughter, who died in infancy; Sarah, the wife of Festus Cowger, of Oklahoma, who died on October 3, 1911; Harriet, the wife of Eugeno Harvey, who is a resident of Chelan county, Washington; and George A., who is living in The Dalles, Oregon.

Reared in Minnesota to the age of eighteen years, Charles H. Glover attended the common schools of that state in the acquirement of an education. In 1879 he started for himself, his first position being on the Burlington & Missouri Railroad. In 1882 he went to California, locating in Sacramento county, whence he later removed to Wyoming and for five years worked on a ranch where they kept seventy-five thousand cattle. At the expiration of that time he returned to Minnesota, where he farmed for two years, then went to California. After spending two months in the latter state he came to Oregon, locating in Lane county in 1889. There he bought and operated a ranch for a year, then selling it he once more located in Minnesota. Upon his return to his native state he bought two farms and for eight years thereafter he devoted his entire attention to their operation. Disposing of his land at the end of that time he came to Oregon, but purchased a fine ranch across the Columbia river in Washington. He remained there until 1902, when selling his land he came to Yamhill county and bought eighty acres of most excellent land nine miles west of McMinnville. He devoted his attention to the further improvement and cultivation of this place until July, 1911, when he sold it and on the first of the following October entered upon the duties of superintendent of the Yamhill county poor farm, containing one hundred and twenty-seven acres.

In 1884 Mr. Glover was united in marriage to Miss Edith Davis, who is a native of Minnesota and a daughter of Isaac and Catharine (Pettice) Davis. Of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Glover there have been born three children: Ina C., who was born on the 24th of October, 1888, now teaching school in Gopher valley, Yamhill county; Iva H., whose birth occurred on the 23d of December, 1890, a teacher in Wasco county, Oregon; and Irl I., born on May 15, 1903, who is still in school.

His political support Mr. Glover gives to the republican party, but gives his indorsement to the policy of the insurgent faction of that party. He has never sought official honors or political preferment but served as school clerk at one time. Fraternally he is affiliated with the Woodmen of the World of Minnesota. Mr. Glover has met with a goodly degree of success in his undertakings and in addition to his other interests has a nice residence property in Portland, that he rents. He is well qualified for the position he is now filling, and will undoubtedly discharge his duties with efficiency and in a manner entirely satisfactory to those responsible for his appointment.

FRANKLIN THATCHER, who is successfully engaged in the fruit and dairy business four miles northwest of Forest Grove, Washington county, is a native of this county and has spent most of his life amidst scenes with which he was familiar in his boyhood. He is remarkably well acquainted with the climate, soil and resources of western Oregon and by practical application of his knowledge has gained a gratifying measure of prosperity. Born on the 30th of January, 1854, he is a son of Harmon and Jemima (Parker) Thatcher. The parents were married in Indiana in 1847 and soon afterward started for the northwest. They left their oxen and wagons at The Dalles and were brought down the river in canoes by Indians. They spent a year in Yamhill county and then came to Washington county, where Mr. Thatcher took up a donation claim of five hundred and thirty-seven acres. Here they passed the remainder of their lives. In the family of Mr. and Mrs. Thatcher were eight children, namely: Isabelle, who is now the widow of G. W. Hadden; Warren, who lives in Tillamook, Oregon; Franklin, of this review; Lewis, who is deceased; Marcia, who makes her home at Forest Grove; Julia, who married William Barker and is now deceased; Martha, who is the wife of E. J. Bondshu, a record of whom appears elsewhere in this work; and Norman, who was last heard of in southeastern Oregon.

Mr. Thatcher, whose name stands at the head of this sketch, possessed good advantages of early training in the district schools. His education, however, did not end with his school days for he has traveled extensively and, being a man of fine powers of obser-

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY

FRANKLIN THATCHER

MRS. FRANKLIN THATCHER

PUBLIC LIBRARY
TOR, LENOX AND EN FOUNDATIONS.

vation, he has gained much information which can be learned only by personal experience and direct contact with the world. He has devoted his attention to farming, making a specialty of fruits and dairying, and is the owner of forty-seven acres, all of which is under cultivation. His orchard is one of the most productive in this section and the cows on his place are all of good grade. As he understands both producing and marketing, his labors are rewarded with handsome annual returns.

In 1883 Mr. Thatcher was married to Miss Mary F. David, a daughter of William and Francisca (Buoymaster) David. The father was born in Germany and was taken by his parents to Australia, later coming to San Francisco, California. He finally located near Forest Grove, Oregon, where he spent the remainder of his life, which covered a period of thirty-five years. He was one of the leading grape growers of Oregon and gained a wide reputation in a business for which he was eminently adapted by natural inclination and experience. He had a large vineyard and always found a ready market at Portland for the products which he had to offer. David Hill, northwest of Forest Grove, was named in his honor. Two children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Thatcher: Orminda, who is the wife of William Haney and lives on part of the Thatcher donation claim; and Josephine, the wife of Victor Griep, also living on the Thatcher claim.

Fraternally Mr. Thatcher is connected with the Grange. He has been an adherent of the democratic party ever since he arrived at manhood and has actively assisted in promoting the interests of the organization. He was nominated for county commissioner and at another time for representative to the state legislature but in each instance was defeated by a small number of votes. A postoffice was located at his place and was known as Thatcher postoffice but it was discontinued upon the introduction of the rural free delivery. As a friend of education Mr. Thatcher is an earnest advocate of the public-school system and has served very acceptably as member of the school board. He occupies a highly creditable place among the representative men of a community where he has been favorably known during his entire active business career.

H. D. SPENCER is one of the up-to-date, live, progressive business men of eastern Oregon. He is the owner of a large lumber business in the city of Elgin, at which place he maintains his residence. He was born in Utica, Licking county, Ohio, December 13, 1864, and is a son of William A. and Ann C. (Burroughs) Spencer, his father being of English extraction and his mother a native of Ohio. William A. Spencer, for many years, was a resident of Ontario, Canada, and from that place he removed to the United States, settling in Utica, Ohio. In early life he had mastered the cabinet-maker's trade, which he continued to follow after taking up his residence in this country. In 1865 he removed to Henry county, Missouri, where he was engaged in the furniture business and also pursued his trade as a cabinet maker. In addition he operated a farm near Clinton, the work and care of which was looked after by his sons under his immediate supervision. In 1883 he removed to southern California, settling near the city of Los Angeles. There he lived until his death which occurred at Long Beach, in 1907. His widow still maintains her residence at Long Beach.

H. D. Spencer, the subject of this review, was reared at home, acquiring his early education in the common schools and later completed a course in a business college at Sedalia, Missouri, graduating from that institution with the class of 1883. In that year he removed to the western country with his father, settling in southern California, where he found employment on a ranch and also did bookkeeping. He continued to devote his attention to this diversified employment until an opportunity to better his condition was offered to him in the employ of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, which at that time was building its main branch through that section of the state. He accepted the position as assistant station agent at Santa Paula, California, which at that time was the terminal of the Southern Pacific Railway. Afterward he removed to Seattle, Washington, and for some years in that city he served as ticket agent for different lines of railroads among which were the Oregon Railroad & Navigation, the C. & P. S., the P. S. S., the Northern Pacific Railway and the Pacific Coast Steamship Company. In 1890 he removed to Portland, where he accepted the position as chief clerk in the ticket department of the assistant general passenger agent's office of the Northern Pacific Railroad, continuing in the employ of this road until November, 1893. In that year he tendered his resignation and in 1891 he removed to Elgin, in which place he established a shingle and planing mill. Since the establishment of this business he has been very successful in its conduct, the business having grown from a small beginning until now it is numbered among the large and prominent manufactories of lumber and timber products. In 1905, having secured the necessary franchise he constructed the electric light plant at Elgin, which he has since operated in connection with his various other enterprises.

H. D. Spencer has been twice married. His first wife was Miss Hattie B. Curtis, with whom he was joined in wedlock, December 21, 1887, and to this union eight children were born, six of whom are still living: Bessie, the wife of Clarke C. Rendshaller; Hetta, one of the teachers in the Island City schools; Roy, Frank, Harry D., Jr., and Elmer, all of whom are still at home and attending the public schools. The mother of this family passed away November 7, 1907. Later Mr. Spencer was again married and this time selected for his partner in life, Mrs. William Curtis Messick, she being a cousin of his first wife.

Mr. Spencer is in politics affiliated with the republican party, to which he gives the undivided support of his influence and suffrage.

He is a member of La Grande Lodge, No. 433, Benevolent Protective Order of Elks; and a member of Elgin Aerie, No. 389, Fraternal Order of Eagles. He is a member of Rockwall Encampment, No. 700, Woodmen of the World and also of the Women's Woodcraft Circle, No. 533. Mrs. Spencer is a member of the Presbyterian church.

H. D. Spencer is a man of large diversified business interests and has by the judicious application of his talents and ability, arisen in the scale of citizenship, from a poor boy working as a common laborer to a man of public distinction in the large business affairs of the county and city in which he lives. His influence and unreserved assistance is always readily given to the advancement of all issues affecting the educational, political and business uplift of his state and the community in which he lives.

CAPTAIN OSCAR B. WICKLAND has for the past eleven years been in command of the Point Adams life-saving station and many timely rescues have been made under his wise and capable direction. His birth occurred in Sweden on the 4th of November, 1868, his parents being Captain Olaf Henry and Blanche Sophia (Anderson) Wickland, who were born, reared and married in that country. The father served as master of the Danish schooner Napoleon for seven years. On the expiration of that period he became a wholesale dealer in lobsters, herring, etc., conducting a business of that character until called to his final rest on the 7th of October, 1878. His wife passed away on the 6th of February, 1897. Unto them were born three children, as follows: Oscar B., of this review; Katherine, the deceased wife of Carl Jorling of Sweden; and Henry S., who is employed as head bookkeeper in a furniture store at Stockholm, Sweden.

Oscar B. Wickland was a pupil in the public schools of Sweden until fifteen years of age and then pursued a business course in school, attending night sessions for a year and a half. Subsequently he joined his stepfather on the ship Arizona, sailing along the coasts of Sweden, Norway and Denmark until a youth of eighteen. In his earlier years he had also made a number of voyages with his father on the ship Napoleon. At the age of eighteen he emigrated to America, first landing at Astoria, Oregon. During the following summer he sailed along the coast and also engaged in fishing on the Columbia river and Puget Sound, continuing thus until 1890. On the 3d of January of that year he engaged as surfman in the life-saving service at Point Adams station, while in January, 1896, he was promoted to the keepership of the Yaquina Bay station, remaining in charge thereof for three years. In 1900 he was transferred to the Point Adams station, of which he is still in command. During the period of his connection with the life-saving service he has rendered assistance to more than two hundred and fifty vessels of all descriptions and has been instrumental in saving hundreds of lives. On one occasion sixteen lives were saved from a watery grave from the wreck of the Italian bark Covour, which stranded on Peacock Spit, Washington, on the evening of December 9, 1904. The life-saving crew under Captain Wickland's command rescued the crew of the vessel at 11:30 that night, and an hour afterward the bark went to pieces, scattering its timbers on the beach of Sand Island. On October 26, 1906, the British bark, Peter Iredale, stranded on Clatsop beach in a terrible southwestern gale. The surfboat was taken overland to the scene of the wrecked vessel and the crew of twenty-seven men safely landed on the beach. Captain Wickland was selected to represent the life-saving service at the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition at Seattle in 1909 and was in command of the station at that exposition giving daily exhibitions from the beginning to the end of the fair.

On the 7th of October, 1897, Captain Wickland was joined in wedlock to Miss Marie Fanning, a native of Fort Canby, Washington, and a daughter of Thomas and Sophia (Pollont) Fanning, who were born in Ireland, and Vancouver, Washington, respectively. They were married in the state of Washington and subsequently came to Astoria, Oregon, where Thomas Fanning passed away. His widow still makes her home at that place. They had five children, namely: Mrs. Wickland; Thomas E., who is a resident of Astoria; and Delphine, Bertha and Evelyn, all of whom are deceased. Unto Captain and Mrs. Wickland have been born two sons and one daughter, as follows: Blanche S., whose natal day was September 26, 1898, and who is now attending school; Oscar F., who was born March 5, 1905, and died on the 19th of December, 1910; and William H. Robert, whose birth occurred on the 19th of December, 1909. Mrs. Wickland, who is a graduate of the Astoria high school, taught music prior to her marriage.

In politics Captain Wickland is a republican, while his religious faith is that of the Lutheran church. His wife is a devoted communicant of the Catholic church. Fraternally he is identified with Temple Lodge, A. F. & A. M., of Astoria; Bay Lodge, No. 180, I. O. O. F., of Yaquina Bay; and Astor Lodge, K. P., of Astoria. His genuine personal worth and sterling traits of character have won him the unbounded confidence and esteem of the entire community and the respect and admiration of all with whom he has come in contact.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, who is ranked among the valued and representative citizens of the section in which he resides, operates one hundred and sixty acres of well-improved land, located on the Coquille river, in Oregon. He was born in Missouri, November 16, 1833, and is a son of Samuel and Elvira Johnson, the latter a native of Missouri and the former of England. Their marriage occurred in the state where their son was born and there they resided for many years. They became the parents of six children, all of whom are now dead with the exception of the subject of this sketch. One of our subject's brothers came to Oregon in 1872 and died in this state in 1900. Two others served in the Civil war and died during the period of their enlistment. The other two members of the family passed away in Missouri.

Samuel Johnson, of this review, received his education in the public schools of his native state. His residence in Oregon dates from 1870, in which year he settled on the south fork of the Coquille river, in Coos county, and bought one hundred and sixty acres of land known as the Eliza Morris donation claim, located eight miles above Myrtle Point. He immediately began its cultivation and has kept up a continuous policy of improvement since that time. He is now the owner of one hundred and sixty acres of fertile and productive land, one hundred acres of which is kept constantly under cultivation. He has one of the model farms of Coos county and is an influential factor in agricultural circles in this section.

In 1856 Mr. Johnson was united in marriage to Miss Angeline P. Morris, who was born in Crawford county, Missouri. She is a daughter of Evans and Elizabeth (Hunt) Morris, both of whom were born in Tennessee and died in Missouri. Mrs. Johnson is one of a large family of children born to her parents, only two of whom are still living; her sister being Mrs. Sarah Barnes, of Kansas. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson have become the parents of nine children: Thomas W., who is now a resident of the state of Washington; Joseph E., who was accidentally drowned; James M. and Samuel E., of Washington; C. N., who lives at home; H. A., now operating his father's homestead, who married Miss Jessie Warner, by whom he has three children, Alma, Ruby and Warren; Arminta, the wife of Joseph Dean, of North Yakima, Washington; Milton H., who is also a resident of the same city; and Frank, who passed away when he was eighteen years of age.

Mr. Johnson and his family affiliate with the Seventh Day Adventist church. In all of his agricultural and business affairs Mr. Johnson is alert and enterprising and has met with the measure of success which always rewards earnest, persistent and well-directed labor. He is well known in this district where he has resided since 1870, and won uniform trust and good will by reason of a life which in all its phases is straightforward and honorable.

ALA O. MOSIER, of Canyon City, Oregon, county treasurer of Grant county, was born in John Day, this county, December 26, 1877, a son of Arthur L. and Lina (Harper) Mosier. His father is a native of Council Grove, Kansas, and the mother was born in eastern Missouri. They came to Oregon with their respective parents in the early '60s, crossing the plains with ox teams, subsequently settling at John Day, Grant county, where the father and mother were married. The father, who is still a resident of John Day, is now living a retired life. The grandfather, Emanuel Mosier, was a blacksmith by trade and worked for many years in the mines, while his wife conducted a hotel.

Ala O. Mosier was educated in the public schools of Oregon, finishing in the high school of Eugene. After his graduation therefrom he took special courses in chemistry and then began teaching, a vocation which he followed for ten years in different parts of Oregon. He always took a considerable interest in politics, being by political faith an adherent of the republican party, and in December, 1907, he was appointed to fill the unexpired term of county treasurer, a vacancy caused by the death of county treasurer N. H. Boley. He filled that position with distinction to himself and such satisfaction to his constituents that he has twice been elected to succeed himself as county treasurer and is again a candidate for reelection.

Mr. Mosier was married, September 1, 1909, to Miss Julia H. Round, of Jefferson, Oregon, a daughter of the Rev. George F. Round, a prominent Methodist Episcopal minister now located at Coburg, Lane county, Oregon. Mr. Mosier is a member of Vernon Lodge, No. [illegible] K. P. and of Canyon Camp, No. 218, W. O. W., being secretary of both lodges. His wife is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church. He is numbered among the most popular young sons of Grant county, where his career as an instructor and official have been especially brilliant, his work in connection with these duties having been efficient and absolutely above criticism. Withal he has the distinction of being the only native son of Grant county ever elected to public office. He is a well educated man, congenial in his manner, optimistic by nature and a great favorite among a large circle of friends. He is without question one of the most valuable assets to the citizenship of Grant county and his future career will be one of which any man might well be proud.

AMOS L. NOSLER. The name of Amos L. Nosler is prominently connected with the agricultural development of many sections of the state of Oregon and stands in Coos county for all that is most progressive and up to date in the principles of farming. Mr. Nosler's residence in this state dates from 1870 and his career has been [illegible] with early agricultural expansion. He now owns in conjunction with his son six hundred acres of finely improved land in Coos county, one hundred and sixty acres of which is in the same section and [illegible] in other parts of Oregon. He has [illegible] a general merchandise store and [illegible] Bridge and for ten years [illegible] a valuable source of income to him.

Mr. Nosler was born in Iowa on the 16th of April, 1850, and is a son of Isaac H. and Martha E. (Varner) Nosler, both natives of Indiana. In that state their marriage occurred and there they lived for a few years before they moved to Iowa and settled in Polk county. At one time the father owned a large tract of land where the city of Des Moines now stands. He was active and successful in various parts of Iowa but moved to Missouri in 1866. Here he lived until 1870, in which year he came to Oregon and settled in Coos county, where he [illegible] up a homestead claim on Iowa Slough. He was successful as an agriculturist for six years but eventually retired and moved to Coquille city where he became identified with the public life of the community. He served for eight years as county judge and was the first mayor of the city. He was appointed postmaster and did able and efficient work in this line. He subsequently engaged in the drug business and was successful until his death in 1908. He passed away five years after his wife, who was accidently killed in 1897. He was the father of seven children, four of whom are still living: Amos, the subject of this review; James, who resides in Coquille, Oregon; J. W., who makes his home near Hubbard, Oregon; B. E., who was formerly postmaster of Coquille and who is now a resident of Enterprise, California; one daughter, who died in infancy; Emma, the deceased wife of Dyer Leneve of Port Orford, Oregon, who passed away at the age of twenty-three years; and William, who was crushed between two logs in an accident on his father's homestead camp in 1870.

Amos L. Nosler was educated in the public schools of his native state and came to Oregon with his parents in October, 1870, preempting a claim near Coquille City. He later moved to what is now known as Bridge and here he and his son own six hundred acres of highly productive and well improved land. Besides this tract of land Mr. Nosler owns one hundred and sixty acres of fine timber land and an interest in three hundred and twenty acres of fertile farm land in Harney county. He is interested in town property in Coquille and owns a four-acre tract within the city limits. For ten years he conducted a general merchandise store in Bridge, Oregon, which he brought to a flourishing and prosperous condition before he disposed of his interest in it. He is one of the enterprising and representative men in this section of the country, interested in the growth of the county along agricultural lines and always eager to promote in any way its progress and development.

Amos Nosler was united in marriage in 1874 to Miss Annie Hatcher, a native of Missouri and a daughter of William and Mahalah Hatcher, both of whom lived and died in Livingston county, in that state. There are four living children of this family: Annie, the wife of our subject; Hiram, of Bridge, Oregon; Nancy, the wife of J. P. Messer, of Coquille; and Sarah, who married Irvin Gibbs of Josephine county, this state. Mrs. Nosler was educated in the public schools of her native state and remained at home until her marriage. She and her husband are the parents of four children: Claude H., who resides in Bridge, Oregon; Fred N., who lives in the same city; Maud, who married Aaron Wilson of Coquille, Oregon; and one child who died in infancy.

In his political affiliations Mr. Nosler is a republican and takes an active interest in public affairs and he and his family belong to the Christian church. He is one of the representative citizens of Coos county, where his activities have been carried on along progressive lines. His farming is practical and productive, based as it is on scientifically efficient methods, and he is doing much to raise the standard of agriculture in the state of Oregon.

JOHN D. RICE, identified with farming interests in Umatilla county, was born in Benton county, near Belle Plaine, Iowa, September 18, 1867, his parents being Daniel and Amanda (Winslow) Rice. They were both natives of Indiana, where their youthful days were spent and where their marriage took place. Soon afterward they decided to try their fortune in another state and took up their residence in Iowa in 1867. Seven years later they removed to Denver, Colorado, where they are now residing. In that state Mr. Rice has been active in real-estate circles and has engaged in that business throughout the greater part of his career. He purchases and sells property, never making a sale on commission.

John D. Rice, the only child born to his parents, spent his youthful days in his father's home. His educational privileges were such as the public schools of Denver offered. He spent his summers in the mountains of Colorado, being at Leadville during the time that city was one of the booming mining centers. He was employed to carry meat from the slaughterhouse at Malta at a time when two stumps and slabs set up on ends served for a butcher shop at Leadville. In 1880 he left Colorado and set out for Boise, Idaho. He left the train at Ogden, Utah, and came across the country to Corinne, Utah, where he was engaged in loading freight for five years. At the end of that time he removed to Kelton when the Oregon Short Line was being built. He again accepted work on a freight train and during his service in that capacity traversed the greater part of the country. After giving up that position he removed to Lake county, Oregon, in 1887 and engaged in the stock business, which he disposed of about seven years later. He next removed to California, where he resided for three years before going to northern Idaho, where he engaged in ranching, lumbering and stock-raising. He did not locate in Hermiston, Oregon, until May, 1905. Since he has resided here, he has been one of the active stock-raisers and agriculturists and he at present owns one hundred and sixty acres of land, all of which is adequately irrigated. He also owns twenty acres in Umatilla and five acres where he is now residing. This is all irrigated and is, therefore, some of the most highly productive land in the district. About five years ago he erected a good substantial house and it is one of the attractive homes of Hermiston. When it was built irrigation had not yet been introduced and it stood in the midst of sagebrush and cactus. It is now within the city limits and is equipped with electric light and city water. On his farm Mr. Rice intends to make a specialty of fruit growing. In this he will probably win a good degree of success because during the few years in which he has been connected with agricultural pursuits in Hermiston he has shown that he has the ability and the will to so study the climatic and soil conditions of the district as to be able to plant to the best possible advantage.

JOHN D. RICE

On the 9th of January, 1889, Mr. Rice was married to Miss Maggie E. Clark, whose birth occurred in Springtown, Parker county, Texas, February 17, 1872. She resided in that state until she was fifteen years of age, when she came to Harney county, Oregon, with her parents, Benjamin and Catura Clark. To Mr. and Mrs. Rice four children have been born: Deiz, whose birth occurred in Harney county, Oregon; Delta and Frank, who were born in Oakesdale, Washington; and Carroll, whose birth occurred in Elk Prairie, Idaho.

In his political views Mr. Rice is independent and as every American citizen should do keeps well informed on the questions and issues of the day. He has served for four years as a member of the city council and for several years filled the office of city treasurer. Subsequently he again served in the council for three terms. Fraternally he is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Masons, the Rebekahs, the Eastern Star and the Farmers Union. During their residence in this county both Mr. and Mrs. Rice have gained the warm regard of many friends.

WILLIAM J. GALBRAITH is one of the wealthy and successful ranchmen of Grant county, Oregon. His birth occurred in County Tyrone, Ireland, on the 12th of November, 1845, his parents being John W. and Margaret (McCullough) Galbraith, who were of Scotch-Irish ancestry and spent their entire lives on the Emerald isle. In 1865, when a young man of twenty years, William J. Galbraith crossed the Atlantic to the United States, reaching New York on the 8th of July. Continuing his journey westward, he settled in Delaware county, Indiana. He was successful in obtaining employment at once as clerk in a mercantile establishment in Muncie, that state, where he remained for the succeeding two years. In 1867 he emigrated to Oregon, making the long journey by way of the Isthmus of Panama. On reaching this state he located in Canyon City, Grant county, where he was employed as clerk in one of the mercantile houses for a period of nine years. In 1876 he removed to Prairie City and embarked in the mercantile business on his own account. This enterprise he conducted without interruption until 1888, at which time he disposed of his interests and turned his attention and resources to the business of stockraising and farming. In this line of activity he has been eminently successful. He now owns fourteen hundred acres of good Oregon farm and well stocked range land. His home of modern construction, supplied with bath and running hot and cold water throughout to suit his convenience, is located one and a quarter miles from Prairie City and is considered one of the handsomest in Grant county.

In 1878 Mr. Galbraith wedded Miss Mary E. Suttlemeir, of Grant county, and to this union four children have been born, two of whom are still living: John W., of Los Angeles, California; and Alice, the wife of Frank Howell, residing in John Day valley, Grant county. Mr. Galbraith is allied with the democratic party in politics, and is a member of the Presbyterian church. He is now in the enjoyment of a well earned competency. His successful business career has given him an enviable rating in the business world and is a high compliment to his industry and the wise management of his business affairs. He bears an honored name and enjoys the reputation of being one of the representative citizens of the John Day valley.

EDWARD E. HAINES is following the agricultural standards set him by his father, who was one of the pioneer settlers in Douglas county, and in the cultivation of six hundred acres of land has added to the growth and development of the rich and fertile Umpqua valley. He was born on the old Haines homestead, a portion of which he now owns, on September 16, 1862, and is a son of Alfred and Sarah (Nixon) Haines. His father was a native of New Jersey and was married in Indiana where his wife was born, December 24, 1840. He lived in Albany, Illinois, until 1862, in which year he crossed the plains to Oregon making the journey with mule teams and spending four months in traveling from the Missouri river at Omaha to Scottsburg, Oregon, where he joined his son, William Haines, who was then located in that city with his twin brother Joseph, they having come to Oregon in 1851. Alfred Haines, the father of our subject, was one of the pioneers of Oregon. Soon after his arrival here he bought one hundred and sixty acres of land two miles south of Elkton for which he paid four hundred dollars and upon which he resided until his death, which occurred in 1888, when he was eighty-five years of age. He acquired extensive holdings during his life and was one of the largest land owners in this section. One tract of land comprising seventy two acres he secured at the small price of one dollar per acre and it now constitutes one of the most valuable pieces of land in Douglas county.

Edward E. Haines was reared at home and educated in the public schools of Douglas county, which were then extremely primitive. His active life began when he was eighteen years of age, at which time he purchased a stage line between Drain and Scottsburg and this he ran with success for four years. At the end of that time he sold out and went to California, spending the winter in Los Angeles county. Then he returned to Oregon and settled upon a portion of the home farm, which he improved and operated for some time along the most progressive and modern lines of agriculture. He is now the owner of six hundred acres and is regarded as one of the most substantial and influential men in the county.

In his political views he keeps himself independent of lines and parties, being influenced in his vote by individual worth of the candidates. He is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America and the Modern Brotherhood of America. He is the father of ten children: Maud, who is now Mrs. Alva Darby of Portland; Homer H., who resides in Elkton; Florence, the wife of Joseph Hudson, who is assisting Mr. Haines in the work of the farm; Walter B., who lives at home; Ruth, who married Victor Miller, of Kellogg; Harry, at home; Lawrence, Lydia and Opal, also at home; and Wilford, who is the youngest of the family.

Edward E. Haines is a man who was born and reared in the open west and who grew up imbued with its spirit. He studied agriculture as a modern science and understands the care of stock and the cultivation of the soil. He owns six hundred acres of land constituting one of the finest ranches in the Umpqua valley, and his success in the conduct of his farm and in the rapid expansion of his enterprise is due in a large degree to his personal supervision of its various details.

JOSEPH A. MANNING. Agricultural products constitute the chief source of wealth in Marion county for the rich and fertile soil offers excellent opportunities to the industrious and progressive farmer. To agricultural pursuits Joseph A. Manning gives his attention, having a half interest in an extensive farm situated five miles northwest of Gervais on the Salem and Champoeg road. He has always resided in Marion county, his birth having occurred here on the 30th of January, 1880. His grandparents crossed the plains with one of the many parties which left the east for Oregon in 1852. The journey was made with ox teams and took the usual time of six months and was fraught with all the dangers which the pioneers were wont to encounter in making the trip westward. They settled in St. Louis, Oregon, and for a number of years were successfully engaged in the hotel business. The parents, Vincent A. and Felicity (Viesman) Manning, were born in Missouri and Oregon respectively. The father's birth occurred in 1852 and he was the third of fourteen children, the others being: Mrs. Cecil Gleason, the wife of Morris Gleason, of Portland; Dennis, of Parkersville, Oregon; Mrs. Mary Moisan, who is the wife of F. X. Moisan of Brooks; Joseph and Kenrick, both residents of Portland; Mrs. Martina O'Brien, who is living at Salem, Oregon; Mrs. Blandina Kenney, a resident of Portland; and six who are deceased. Mrs. Vincent Manning was born in 1853, and was the youngest of three children, the others being: Mrs. Mary Nathman, who is the wife of B. A. Nathman of Gervais, Oregon; and Mrs. Teresa Mangold, who is married to F. A. Mangold of Gervais. Mr. and Mrs. Manning were married in 1874 and to them eleven children were born, namely: Mrs. Frances McClellan, who is the wife of G. B. McClellan of Portland; Ernest, deceased; Joseph A., who is the subject of this review; Augustine, who was married to Hannah Brassell on the 10th of November, 1910, and who is residing in Marion county; Albert, deceased; Fidelis, a resident of Stanwood, Washington; Cecilia, deceased; and Stephen, Clarence, Zita and Cyril, all living in Portland.

In the common schools of Marion county Joseph A. Manning acquired his education and remained at home engaging in farming duties until he was twenty-three years of age when he went to Portland and accepted employment in various lines of work. Leaving that city he worked in the fisheries on the Columbia river for a short time but soon returned to Portland where he remained until 1907 in which year he rented his father's farm in partnership with his brother Augustine. They have proven themselves successful farmers and at the present time have twenty-five acres planted to hops and fifty acres in grain and hay. They have also engaged in stock-raising and dairying to some extent and are planning to keep some twenty-five or thirty cows and engage in the dairying business more extensively. They are adding every improvement which will contribute to the neatness of their place and the systematic handling of their products and are also making such a study of the soil as will enable them to cultivate their crops so as to reap the maximum yields per acre.

On the 24th of November, 1909, Mr. Manning was married to Miss Anna Brassell, whose birth occurred in 1887 in Salem, South Dakota. She is a daughter of Ferdinand and Elizabeth (Munsky) Brassell, and was one of eight children, the others being: two who died in infancy; William, who is a resident of St. Louis, Oregon; Mrs. Joseph Manning; Mrs. Hannah Manning, who is the wife of Augustine Manning, of Marion county; Frances, who is living at home with her parents; and Frank and Peter who are residing in St. Louis, Oregon. To Mr. and Mrs. Manning one child has been born, Herbert, whose birth occurred on the 29th of January, 1911.

In politics Mr. Manning has usually favored the principles, measures and men of the democratic party, but because of his broad-minded political views has frequently cast his vote for man or measure rather than for party. He is a member of the Catholic church and fraternally is affiliated with the Yeomen. He is a progressive and wide-awake farmer, always on the alert and ready to incorporate in his business the most modern methods, and his industry and enterprise have enabled him not only to attain prosperity but have won him a high place in the respect and regard of his neighbors.

HIRAM NELSON WILLIAMS is one of the most successful agriculturists in the county of Wallowa, this state, in which he has lived for a third of a century. He has always been a public-spirited man, contributing his share of service both in private and public life in the interests of the development of his state and county. His birth occurred in McDonough county, Illinois, on the 20th of August, 1850, his parents being James and Mary J. (Millsap) Williams, who were natives of Kentucky and Indiana, respectively. They were united in wedlock in Illinois, to which state Mrs. Williams' parents had removed many years before. Immediately after their wedding they removed to McDonough county, where they established their residence and spent the remaining years of their lives, Mr. Williams passing away in 1895, in the eighty-fifth year of his age, while his wife was called to her final rest in 1897.

Hiram Nelson Williams was reared in his father's home in McDonough county and was there educated in the common schools. After completing his education he engaged in teaching, entering this vocation at the early age of nineteen years. He remained under the parental roof until he was twenty-one years of age and then removed to Missouri, locating in Bates county, where he became one of the resident farmers, continuing in this business for a period of nine years. In 1879 he emigrated to Oregon, crossing the plains with horse teams and arrived in Wallowa county on the 26th of July. In this county he homesteaded a claim near Lostine and here he has continued to live until the present time. He has been very successful in business as an agriculturist and now has joint title with his brother, George W., to twelve hundred acres of fine land, which is under cultivation, being managed entirely by Mr. Williams and his brother. In addition to his agricultural interests he is also engaged in the mining business, being the owner of some very promising mining properties in Wallowa county.

On the 11th of September, 1870, Mr. Williams was married to Miss Sarah E. Peck, of McDonough county, Illinois. To this union eight children have been born, four of whom survive, namely: James R., who is engaged in ranching near Lostine; Lulu Belle, the wife of James A. Read, who is engaged in farming on a portion of the twelve hundred acres owned by Mr. Williams and his brother; Cora E., who is the wife of Harley Fleener, a ranchman of Union county; and Stella I., who is at home with her parents.

Mr. Williams is affiliated with the democratic party and in 1898 was elected to the office of county commissioner, in which office he succeeded himself in the fall of 1902. His long residence in one locality in Wallowa county has sufficed to thoroughly establish his reputation as being one of the most up-to-date and enterprising citizens in his portion of the state. During his residence here he has been identified with the issues affecting the welfare of the business and political advancement of his county and his large real estate holdings justly entitle him to rank among the most successful agriculturists of the state.

JOEL B. KINDRED, a carpenter and contractor of Warrenton, has been in the service of the government for a number of years. His birth occurred in Clatsop county Oregon, on the 17th of March, 1866, his parents being J. F. and Elizabeth Kindred. A sketch of the father appears on another page of this work. Our subject lost his mother when a youth of sixteen and then began earning his own livelihood, learning the carpenter's trade. Subsequently he took up his abode on a ranch of one hundred and sixty acres in Pacific county, Washington, operating the same for ten years. He sold the property on the expiration of that period and has since been in the service of the government, being first connected with fortification work for four years. During the past several years, however, he has been engaged in carpentering and contracting. He has a fine home in Warrenton and also owns other property.

When a young man of twenty four years Mr. Kindred was united in marriage to Miss Ida England, a native of Sweden, who emigrated to America in 1889. Her parents, who passed away in Sweden, had a family of sixteen children, two of whom are deceased. Mrs. Kindred is the only one who came to the United States. By her marriage she has become the mother of five children, namely: Minnie B., born on the Cedar river in Pacific county, Washington, and is still at home at the age of twenty years; Sadie, a native of Clatsop county and a young lady of nineteen, who is the wife of Neal Allen, of Tacoma, Washington; Elizabeth, who is seventeen years old; and Oscar and Estella, fourteen and twelve years of age respectively.

Mr. Kindred is a stanch republican in politics but has never sought the honors and emoluments of office. Fraternally he is identified with the Ancient Order of United Workmen at Astoria, the Independent Order of Odd Fellows at Hammond and the Degree of Honor at Astoria. In religious faith he is an Episcopalian. He is regarded as a representative and enterprising citizen and wherever known is held in the highest esteem.

FRANCIS RICHARD DU RETTE, who has been a life-long resident of Marion county, is living on a farm seven miles west of Gervais on the Salem, Fairfield and St. Paul road. His birth occurred on the 23d of December, 1860, his parents being R. C. and Louisa J. (Waddell) Du Rette, the former a native of South Carolina and the latter of Virginia. The father was born in 1808, his father having come to America with a party from France who settled in Louisiana. Subsequently, however, he moved east to South Carolina where he brought up his family. The grandmother was of German lineage. Mr. R. C. Du Rette was one of seven children, all of whom are now deceased, and the mother, whose birth occurred in 1812, was the daughter of Francis Waddell and was of Scotch-Irish descent. Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Du Rette were married in 1842 in Mississippi, where they resided for a long period until Mr. Du Rette removed to Oregon. Two years later his wife followed him and they settled thirteen miles north of Salem, where they purchased six hundred and forty acres upon which they resided until [illegible] the year of the flood. At that time their property was destroyed and all their buildings washed away, thus necessitating a new start in life.

Later they lived in various places in Marion county, but finally purchased three hundred and twenty acres of the William Millsop donation land claim, making this their home for the remainder of their lives. The father's death occurred in 1884, and his wife passed away eight years later. Before her death, however, she purchased another one hundred acres of this donation land claim which is now the property of her son Francis. Mr. and Mrs. B. G. Du Rette were the parents of six children, namely: two who died in infancy; Mrs. Mary J. Smith and John W., both deceased; George A., who is married and living in Portland, Oregon; and Francis R., who is the subject of this sketch.

When Francis Du Rette was but fourteen years of age he assumed entire management of his father's farm while the latter took a necessary trip to Mississippi to look after the business interests which he had there. His father was absent from home for several years. On his return trip he made the journey from New Orleans to San Francisco by the way of Panama. After arriving in California he worked in the mines for a year and then came to Champoeg. During the ten years Francis Du Rette managed the home property he brought the land under a high state of cultivation, and by untiring energy and constant application rendered the farm profitably productive. When the father returned to Champoeg he engaged in the mercantile business for four years but at the end of that time returned to his farm where he resided until his death. At present Francis Du Rette owns one hundred and thirty acres of fine land near Gervais and six hundred and forty acres in Polk county, eighty acres of the first named tract being in a state of cultivation. The Polk county property is leased, and because of its highly productive soil is proving very remunerative. Putting into practice what he learned by experience in early life he is one of the most successful grain and stock raisers in the vicinity, and in addition to this carries on dairying to some extent, having a large herd of Jersey cows.

On January 6, 1889, Mr. Du Rette was married to Miss Isabelle Imlah, whose birth occurred in Scotland in 1861, and who is the daughter of Alexander and Louisa (Mitchell) Imlah. She came to America with her parents who moved to Yamhill county, Oregon, from Baltimore, Maryland, in 1873. After residing in Yamhill county for eight years, they removed to Polk county where they remained for one year before coming to Marion county. In the latter county they purchased four hundred acres of land, which is still the family home. Mrs. DuRette was one of eight children, namely: one who died in infancy; Mrs. Du Rette; Alexander, of Tillamook county; Agnes, who is the wife of Harrison Jones, of Marion county, and has four children; Louisa, who is the wife of G. A. Miller, of Polk county, and has one child; James, who is married and living in Polk county and has two children; David, who resides in Tillamook county and has three children; and John, of Marion county, who is married and has three children. To Mr. and Mrs. Du Rette five children have been born: Donald B., whose birth occurred on the 7th of April, 1891; F. R., Jr., whose birth occurred March 27, 1893; Cecil Alexander, whose birth occurred on the 11th of March, 1895; Louisa Murle, who was born July 27, 1898; and Agnes, who was born on the 17th of January, 1901. The children are all residing at home and the younger ones are attending school.

In politics Mr. Du Rette maintains an independent attitude and casts his vote for the men and measures rather than for party favor. He has always, however, manifested a great interest in the political issues of the day and has accepted office when he thought he could render efficient and beneficial service to his community. He has served as clerk of the school board for thirteen years and has also been road supervisor. Although he was brought up in the Roman Catholic faith the family are regular attendants of the Presbyterian church, of which Mrs. Du Rette is a member. In Mr. and Mrs. Du Rette the community finds citizens to whom they may look for support along educational, social and moral lines, and who prove their worth to society by living according to the high ideals which they hold.

GEORGE W. KERR, a miner of considerable prominence and experience, resides in Cottage Grove, where he owns property and is interested in two mines in the Bohemia district. He was born in Pennsylvania in 1846, the son of M. N. S. and Mary J. (Luther) Kerr, both of whom were natives of the Keystone state. The father was a furnace-blower and a lumberman but devoted the latter part of his life principally to prospecting and mining in the Dakotas. In 1882 he emigrated to Oregon, where he continued mining in Douglas county. He died in Pennsylvania in 1905, at the age of one hundred and six years. When he was one hundred years old he timbered his mine in Douglas county, returning to Pennsylvania in 1901. He had a family of seven children: I. A., of Tennessee; J. L. B., of Roseburg, Oregon; R. L., of Warren, Pennsylvania; Mary C., deceased; Henrietta, the wife of Thaddeus Songer, of Pennsylvania; Clara, the wife of George Wolf, of Central Point, Oregon; and George W.

George W. Kerr began to make his own way in the world at the early age of twelve years, when he ran away from home and worked at various occupations in his native state until 1862. In that year he joined Company M of the Second Pennsylvania Cavalry, with which he served until the end of the war. After his discharge from the United States service he returned to Pennsylvania and worked at the lumber business until 1877, when he removed to Kansas, where he followed farming. In 1880 he went to Idaho, where he worked in a machine shop for three years and then came to Oregon, renting a farm upon which he lived for two years. At the end of that time he took up a government homestead at Wildwood, upon which he lived for several years. He then took up mining as a business and is one of the men who assisted in opening up the Bohemia mining district and also engaged in building the first wagon road into that section. During his experience as a miner he was for three years foreman of the Annie Consolidated Mining Company. After leaving the employ of that concern he began developing properties in his own behalf and was fairly successful in his work. He owns an interest in two mines in the district where he worked for so many years and also retains his original farm and owns residence property in Eugene.

MR. AND MRS. GEORGE W. KERR

Mr. Kerr was married in Pennsylvania in 1869 to Miss Sarah E. Johnson, a daughter of Jacob and Mary (Miller) Johnson, both of whom were natives of the Keystone state. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson were the parents of ten children: Jane, who is the widow of Ed Farrell and resides in Pennsylvania; Edward, deceased; Miles, who resides on the old homestead in Pennsylvania; Arnold, of Wisconsin; Marshall, of Pennsylvania; Sarah E., now Mrs. George W. Kerr; Mary, deceased; Malinda, the widow of Henry Sheldon, of Pennsylvania; Ella, the wife of John L. Blodgett, of Dallas, Oregon; and Alva, deceased. To Mr. and Mrs. Kerr ten children have been born, Mary, the wife of William McNeil, of California, and the mother of three children, Archie, Willis and Wayne; Clara, the wife of John H. Kirk, of Dorena, Oregon, and the mother of four children, Murle, Wayne, Emmett and Bertha; Ella, the wife of Ben Petcher, of Disston, Oregon, and the mother of two children, Wilber and Vita; Lena, the wife of Cary Pitcher, of California, and the mother of three children, Lola, Gladys and Georgia; Nellie, the wife of Green Pitcher, of Cottage Grove; Georgia, deceased; Clyde, of Cottage Grove, who is married and has one child, Pearl; Edna, the wife of Leon Sullivan, of Klamath Falls, Oregon; Raymond, who is attending school; and Charles, deceased.

In his political faith Mr. Kerr is an adherent of the democracy and although he has never been an office seeker or particularly interested in political matters he served as road supervisor for three years. He is a member of the local Grand Army Post, and also belongs to the Methodist Episcopal church. Mr. Kerr is a prominent man of Cottage Grove and has the respect of the entire community. He possesses more than average ability and exerts a material influence in municipal and social as well as in business affairs.

WILLIAM H. SKINNER. Drawing valuable lessons from the history of the past William H. Skinner, as one of the founders and promoters of Hermiston, has established the town upon a safe foundation and with an absence of anything like "boom" methods has utilized every advantage and opportunity for the development of the place and for the furtherance of its interests and activities. His home at the present time is far separated from the place of his birth, which occurred in Cornwallis, Nova Scotia July 24, 1851. His parents were Henry and Ruth A. (Illsley) Skinner, both of whom were natives of Nova Scotia. In 1869 they became residents of Iowa, settling in Chickasaw county, and subsequently they took up their abode in South Dakota, whither they went to join their son William in 1881. Both passed away in Brookings, that state, the death of the father, who was a lifelong farmer, occurring in 1902, when he had reached the advanced age of seventy-nine years. In their family were eight sons and two daughters, of whom two died in early childhood, while four are yet living.

William H. Skinner pursued his education in the schools of his native country and in Acadia College at Wolfville, Nova Scotia. He taught school for about ten years altogether in Nova Scotia and in Iowa. He resided with his parents until 1875, when at the age of twenty-two years, he married and removed to Brookings county, South Dakota, where he secured a homestead upon which he resided until the fall of 1880. He then took up his abode in the town of Brookings, which had been founded and developed while Mr. Skinner was living upon his claim. He was one of the promoters of the town site and engaged in the real estate business there until 1900. He was also prominent in the public affairs of the community and served for about five years as clerk of the district court and one term as member of the board of regents of the South Dakota Agricultural College. He was also postmaster of Brookings for nearly five years and did much to further the interests and substantial activity of that place. While living in South Dakota he was admitted to practice law in the courts of the state but never followed the profession to any great extent. In 1900 he removed westward to Lewiston, Idaho, where he engaged in the real estate business and was also an active factor in the development and progress of the town, where he served as mayor for two years.

In 1904 Mr. Skinner secured a large tract of land in Umatilla county, comprising about eleven hundred acres. This he afterward sold and invested in about a thousand acres elsewhere. He platted the greater part of this land which surrounds the town of Hermiston and with the development and growth of the district Mr. Skinner has been closely associated. He [illegible] with Colonel H. C. Newport in platting the town of Hermiston on the 23rd of November, 1907. In the fall of 1907 the government put through its irrigation project and in 1906 Mr. Skinner removed his family to this district, engaging in the real estate business and acting largely in the development and progress of the town. He was elected with Colonel Newport [illegible] about a year ago and they were associated in the erection of a number of good buildings, including [illegible] and several residences. Mr. Skinner was [illegible] three other men to [illegible] to bring [illegible] to all the section lines and in other connections he has done much to further the development and upbuilding of this part of the state. He was one of the first directors of the Umatilla River Water Users Association and assisted in making the contract with the secretary of the interior for the construction of the water ways that irrigate this part of the state. Whatever he undertakes he carries forward to successful completion, for he is determined and energetic and, moreover, he sees the possibilities for development in this region.

Mr. Skinner has been married twice. On the 13th of April, 1873, he wedded Elizabeth A. Laird, a native of Iowa, who died at Brookings, South Dakota, in July, 1886. They were the parents of five children: Ansel O., who is living at Rathdrum, Idaho; Agnes A., the wife of C. L. Wight, of Hermiston; Charles H., also of this place; Guy E., living in Spokane, Washington; and May E., the wife of J. M. Griffin, of Hermiston. On the 29th of February, 1888, Mr. Skinner wedded Georgia A. Laird, who was a cousin of his first wife. Their children are seven in number: Gladys, who died when but two and a half years of age; Catherine, who is now in college at McMinnville, Oregon; and Ruth A., Rae G., Grant, Helen and Georgia, all yet at home. When Mr. Skinner first came to Hermiston there were thirteen children in attendance at the first school and six of them were his own. His daughter May was the first public-school teacher here. Mr. Skinner aided in organizing the first Baptist church and erected its house of worship. He also became a charter member of Hermiston Lodge, No. 138, F. & A. M., was its first senior warden and served as master, being the first to fill that position after the charter was obtained. His has been a well spent life, fraught with successful accomplishment, and his labors have been an important source of public progress as well as of individual advancement. When he came to Hermiston there was practically nothing here but sage brush. He has not only seen the development of the town but has done much for its upbuilding and his work will ever be a creditable chapter in its history.

PERRY E. SWEARINGEN is cultivating two hundred and fourteen acres of land one mile west of Elkton in Douglas county, Oregon. He is a native son of Oregon and was born in Douglas county, August 4, 1871, a son of Andrew J. and Charlotte (Poland) Swearingen. He was reared at home and received his education in the public schools of his native district. He has been identified with agriculture since he was sixteen years of age, at which time he was given charge of his father's farm. He became acquainted with the rudiments of scientific farming when he was still a child and before he attained his majority he was an expert and scientific farmer and his personal experience has been a valuable aid to him throughout his life. He cultivated his father's land for several years and then purchased eighty acres in Tin Pot, which is now called Sunny Dale, Oregon. There he resided for eight years and still owns the property although he does not live upon it. In 1909 he removed to the old Hart homestead, one mile west of Elkton and is now developing this property as a renter. He is cultivating two hundred and fourteen acres of land and by his progressive and scientific methods has made every acre productive. He is accounted one of the most prosperous and successful farmers in Umpqua valley.

In 1890 Mr. Swearingen was married to Miss Janie Frieze, a daughter of Leander Frieze, who came to Oregon from Missouri and who now resides in Fossil. To Mr. and Mrs. Swearingen have been born nine children, Fred, Dale, Victor, Clyde, Alva, Jack, Chester, Adelia and Charlie, all of whom are living at home. Mr. Swearingen is a republican in his political views but has never been an office seeker. He is a member of Elkton Camp, No. 259 M. W. A., and Drain Camp, No. 5786 W. O. W. He is one of the few men who really make a study of agriculture. His methods are systematic and accurate, his equipment thoroughly modern and his knowledge of farm economics has brought his property to a high state of productive efficiency.

SAMUEL D. EVANS is one of the successful orchardists and farmers of Douglas county, farsighted and enterprising in business, and active in support of any progressive movement for the betterment of the community. He was born in Washoe county, Nevada, November 6, 1861, and is a son of Samuel D. and Louisa (Thompson) Evans, who were natives of Ohio and Tennessee, respectively, but were married in Illinois. In 1852 they crossed the plains to Oregon, settling in Coles Valley, Douglas county, where Mr. Evans secured a donation claim. A few years later, however, he sold that property and bought the farm in Coles Valley, upon which our subject now resides. In 1859 he removed to Nevada, where he engaged in the stock business, and on the 1st of August, 1861, in company with Joe Bailey of Eugene, he was driving eight hundred head of cattle to Virginia City, Nevada, when they were attacked by the Pitt River Indians in Hot Spring valley, Modoc county, California, and both were killed, the cattle being driven off by the red men. A year later the mother returned to Oregon and settled on the old home farm in Coles valley, where she passed away April 27, 1912, in the eighty-first year of her age.

Samuel D. Evans was reared at home and the public schools afforded him his educational opportunities. Upon reaching his majority he entered the railway mail service, in which he was engaged for six years. He then turned his attention to merchandising in Roseburg, where he conducted a store for six years. In 1892 he disposed of this business and returned to the home farm, which he has since cultivated. He now owns three hundred and thirty acres and the place is attractive by reason of its many excellent improvements, including modern, substantial buildings. He has about thirty acres planted to prunes and has set out twelve acres in walnuts. Few men are more thoroughly or accurately informed concerning the possibility of the county in the cultivation of those two products and he has won for himself a creditable and enviable position as an orchardist and farmer.

On the 22d of November, 1892, Mr. Evans was united in marriage to Miss Etta Willis, a daughter of Judge W. R. Willis, a pioneer, and one of Roseburg's most prominent citizens. Two children were born of this marriage, of whom one has passed away, the other being Dorothy, who is attending the State Agricultural College. Mrs. Evans is a member of the Episcopal church and Mr. Evans has membership relations in Laurel Lodge, No. 13, A. F. & A. M., of Roseburg, and in Oak Camp, W. O. W., of Roseburg. He votes with the republican party and is conversant with its attitude concerning vital questions of the day. He stands for all that is progressive and, while he has won individual success, he has never neglected public duties whereby county and state have been benefited.

H. F. FISHER, who has lived retired at Hammond since 1908, was for a number of years actively and successfully identified with general agricultural pursuits in Clatsop county and still owns a valuable farm of one hundred and sixty acres. His birth occurred in Germany on the 24th of August, 1840, his parents being Carl Albert and Crystal (Wittick) Fisher, who were born, reared and married in that country. They crossed the Atlantic to the United States in 1854, first settling in Connecticut, where they made their home until 1860. In that year they came to Oregon, locating near Astoria, where they continued to reside until called to their final rest, the father passing away at the age of seventy-two and the mother when fifty-eight years of age. Carl A. Fisher followed farming throughout his active business career. Unto him and his wife were born nine children, as follows: Henrietta, who is the widow of Peter Svensen and resides at Svensen Station, Oregon; Augusta, who is deceased, as is also her husband, Louis Wilson; Wilhelmina, who is the wife of John Nunbareg, and resides near Astoria, Oregon; H. F., of this review; August, living in Astoria; Anstine, who is the widow of William Cole, of Connecticut; Annie, whose demise occurred in Connecticut; Ferdinand, of Astoria; and Edward, who passed away in Germany.

H. F. Fisher was a youth of fourteen when he accompanied his parents on their emigration to the new world. Soon afterward he left the parental roof and began earning his own livelihood, working as a farm hand for about five years. On the expiration of that period he became connected with river work and followed it for ten years. He then homesteaded a tract of land comprising one hundred and sixty acres near Svensen, nine miles east of Astoria, and was busily engaged in the operation of that farm until 1908. In that year he put aside the active work of the fields and took up his abode at Hammond, where he has since lived in honorable retirement. He has a handsome home in the town and also owns three other residence properties.

On the 24th of August, 1868, Mr. Fisher was united in marriage to Miss Nancy Kindred, a native of Oregon. Her parents, B. C. and Rachel (Miler) Kindred, are mentioned at greater length on another page of this work in connection with the sketch of David C. Kindred, a brother of Mrs. Fisher. Unto our subject and his wife have been born five children. Crystal, who is a high school graduate, pursued a course in bookkeeping, and gave her hand in marriage to J. T. Lee, with whom she lives on her father's homestead farm. Mr. Lee was awarded a state certificate and follows the profession of teaching. Amy is the deceased wife of Samuel McIntire, of Svensen, Oregon. Carl was drowned in the Columbia river on the 27th of February, 1910, when a young man of twenty-six. He had wedded Miss Grace Powers, a native of Oregon, by whom he had one son, Carl George Fisher, passed away at the age of two years. Estella, a high school graduate, has a teacher's certificate, and has also completed a course in music.

Mr. Fisher is a republican in politics and has held the office of county commissioner of Clatsop county, while for twelve or fifteen years he served as a member of the school board. He is a Congregationalist in religious faith, and fraternally identified with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, belonging to Beaver Lodge at Astoria. He has now passed the seventy first milestone on this earthly pilgrimage and is spending the evening of life in the enjoyment of well earned rest, happy in the regard and esteem of all with whom he has been associated.

OLIVER ARAL. In the death of Oliver Aral, on February 8, 1894, Marion county lost one of its most progressive and successful agriculturists. For twenty-two years he resided on his one hundred and sixty-four acre farm, four miles west of Gervais on the Salem and Champoeg road and during that time brought it to a high state of productivity.

Oliver Aral was born in St. Martins, Canada, on the 15th of March, 1818, and was the son of Louis and Pauline (Viney) Aral, who were the parents of ten children, all now deceased. When but eighteen years of age he left Canada to start upon his independent career, going first to Watertown, New York, where he learned the tanner's and harness-maker's trades and then coming west to San Francisco via Panama. After three years' residence in San Francisco he removed to Oregon and settled in Salem for ten years, during which time he was employed in a woolen mill. He then purchased the farm which was his home during the remainder of his life.

On the 15th of September, 1851, in San Francisco, Mr. Aral was married to Miss Mary McManus, who was born in County Cavan, Ireland, on August 15, 1831, and came to the United States in 1848. Her parents died when she was five years of age and her older sister reared her. Following the two brothers who had preceded them and were working in the mines of Idaho, the three sisters came west to San Francisco via Panama. They were traveling on the same steamer with Mr. Aral but did not meet him until after reaching their destination, where they remained three years. Mrs. Aral was one of ten children, namely: Margaret, Francis, Michael, James, Patrick, Anna, Martha, Catherine, Nora and Mrs. Aral.

After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Aral went directly to Salem where they joined one of her brothers and the three were employed in a woolen mill for the ten years previous to the removal of the Arals to their farm. To Mr. and Mrs. Aral five children were born, namely: Francis, who is a resident of California, and is the father of two children; Oliver, who resides at home; Augustine, who is residing in Marion county, Oregon, and is the father of one child; and Louis L. and Pauline, who are living at home. The three sons, Oliver, Augustine, and Louis, are engaged in hop raising and are the largest producers in this section. In addition to hops they raise oats, wheat, hay, loganberries, vegetables and other farm products, and carry on dairying to some extent.

In politics Mr. Aral was a democrat and gave his support to that party but never sought office as a reward for party fealty. He was a member of the Ancient Order of United Workmen and of the Catholic church. So successful and prominent did Mr. Aral become that his name was among the foremost in the county. By nature he was diligent, energetic and loyal and by the exercise of these characteristics he became a leader for good and progress in his community, and the large circle of devoted and admiring friends who mourned his death attest to his popularity.

WILLIAM M. BLAKLEY. A well known and highly respected resident of Pendleton is William M. Blakley, the owner of eight hundred acres of valuable land in Umatilla county, and his extensive interests place him among the leading agriculturists of this part of the state. He was born in Missouri, October 14, 1840, and is a son of James and Sarah (Dick) Blakley, both of whom were natives of Knox county, Tennessee. About 1836 they removed to Missouri and remained residents of that state for ten years. In 1846 they determined to establish their home on the Pacific coast and traveled to Oregon across the plains with ox teams. Only a few miles could be covered each day and the journey was a very long, tedious and difficult one, for six months passed ere they arrived at their destination. At length they located in Linn county, Oregon, where the father took up a donation land claim and began the development of a farm. The wild and unimproved land was converted into rich and productive fields from which he annually gathered good harvests. He is still living upon the old homestead at the remarkable age of ninety-nine years, but his wife passed away there on the 14th of June, 1888. In their family were twelve children, each of whom reached mature years.

William M. Blakley remained at home until he had attained his majority after which he engaged in mining in the Orofino mines in the Coeur d'Alene, spending one season in that way after which he returned to Linn county, Oregon, where he engaged in freighting, making trips from The Dalles to Boise, Idaho. On one of these trips Indians stole all of the freight horses, numbering four teams. Mr. Blakley then sold out his business and in the fall of 1863 came to Umatilla county where he purchased a herd of cattle. The following spring he sold his stock and again went to Linn county.

While residing there Mr. Blakley was married to Miss Margaret Baird, who was born in La Fayette, Indiana, and was a daughter of William C. and Margaret (McBride) Baird. After his marriage he still continued to engage in the live-stock business which he followed successfully for a long period. In 1868 he removed to Umatilla county and took up a homestead which he still owns. He also owns a wheat ranch of a hundred and sixty acres ten miles east of Pendleton. His land is very valuable and is highly cultivated according to the most modern and progressive methods. This part of the state is especially adapted for wheat raising and his success is well merited because of his unfaltering industry and perseverance. Mr. Blakley also owns a fine residence in the city of Pendleton where he makes his home.

As the years have passed Mr. and Mrs. Blakley have become parents of five children: Anna L., who became the wife of J. C. Losier and since his death has married G. M. Leser, of Los Angeles, California; Lilly M., born August 18, 1867, died August 5, 1875; Farrow, born February 14, 1870, died August 7, 1875; Lollie, born January 31, 1874, died August 8, 1875—these three children passing away within three days of each other; and Frances, who is the wife of S. R. Thompson, of Pendleton.

Politically Mr. Blakley is a democrat and for two terms he served as sheriff of the county, in which connection he made a most creditable official record, discharging his duties without fear or favor. Other political honors have been accorded him for he has twice represented his district in the state legislature where he gave earnest consideration to each question that came up for settlement. He was an active working member of the general assembly and his course commanded the commendation of his colleagues and the general public. He belongs to the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and his wife is a consistent member of the Presbyterian church. In every relation of life he has measured up to the full standard of honorable manhood and citizenship. He has a wide acquaintance throughout the state and wherever known he is held in high esteem. He certainly deserves much credit for what he has accomplished in a business way for he started out in life empty-handed and by persistent energy and straightforward dealing has won his success.

WILLIAM M. BLAKLEY

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY
R, LENOX AND NDATIONS.

At the same time he has ever recognized his duties and obligations of citizenship and has been most loyal to the trust reposed in him as a public official.

MRS. KATIE N. BYRNE is the widow of Torrence P. Byrne, who passed away January 5, 1904, on the delightful homestead of one hundred and sixty acres near Watkins, where the family settled many years ago. Mrs. Byrne was born in California, March 22, 1854, a daughter of William C. and Ellen (Owens) Byrne, both of whom were natives of Iowa. There were two children in their family.

Katie N. Byrne was given a good common-school education and was carefully reared under the parental roof, where she remained until her marriage, in 1875, to Torrence P. Byrne, a native of Ireland. To their union six children were born, one of whom, Lillian, passed away in 1876 and her remains are interred in a cemetery at Eureka, Nevada. Those who survive are Mary, William C., Margaret E., John S. and Katherine.

At an early date Mr. Byrne took up a homestead of one hundred and sixty acres near Watkins and to the development of what was later a very fine agricultural property he devoted his time and attention, working early and late to get his land cleared and to erect the suitable and necessary improvements thereon. Fortune smiled upon him and he raised abundant crops as well as a good deal of stock, and from year to year the financial condition of the family improved. The old homestead is still in possession of the widow and is one of the fine farming properties in the community, being well improved, well stocked and under a high state of cultivation.

Mrs. Byrne was reared in the Catholic faith and is an earnest and consistent member of that church. The family has for many years been extremely well and favorably known in Watkins and the community, where during the lifetime of Mr. Byrne he was an active and useful member of society and a thoroughly representative and honorable citizen. Since his demise his widow has, owing to the excellent business training which she received, been able to manage her affairs in such a manner that her income provides her with all of the necessities and some of the luxuries of life and she maintains the excellent standing which the family has always enjoyed in the community.

JOSHUA W. MARSH. Among the respected pioneers of Washington county may be named Joshua W. Marsh. For over fifty-nine years he has been a resident of this county and no man has been more interested in its development or in the wonderful progress that has taken place throughout the Pacific coast region. During most of the time named he has been actively identified with farming. He is now living retired on the old homestead which is endeared to him by many associations. He is a native of Branch county, Michigan, and was born October 6, 1840, a son of John and Rebecca (Leverich) Marsh. The father was born in New York state and the mother in Ohio. They were married in Michigan and lived in that state until 1852. They then joined in the great movement across the plains and came overland to Washington county, Oregon, where Mr. Marsh took up a donation claim of three hundred and forty acres. He died at his home at the age of sixty-five and his widow was called away several years later. Of the ten children of Mr. and Mrs. Marsh two are now living: Joshua, the subject of this review, and Mrs. Sarah Ann Zimmerman of Washington county. Those deceased are John, Albert, Martha, Loretta, Sylvia, Mary, George William and Charity.

Joshua W. Marsh was twelve years of age when he undertook the long journey across the plains and mountains to Oregon. The stirring events of a trip by wagon through a strange country made a deep impression upon his mind and furnished material for many reminiscences of surpassing interest. After arriving in Washington county he assisted his father in clearing the land and erecting buildings, thus gaining practical experience which was highly useful after he began life on his own account. At the age of twenty-one he proved up on one hundred and sixty acres of land. He also engaged in contracting and logging, which he followed for two years in connection with farming. He then turned his attention to clearing and developing the place which was originally thickly covered with timber and brush. He prospered as the years passed and acquired more land, becoming the owner of three hundred and fifty acres, all of which he brought under cultivation. He also owned one hundred and sixty acres of heavy timber land which he recently sold. He has divided his farm among his children but he is still living at the old homestead.

Mr. Marsh was married in Washington county October 3, 1868, to Miss Angenette Deletts, who was born in Coos county, Oregon. Her parents were among the pioneers of this state. The father died in Washington county but the mother is still living. She makes her home at Salem and is now seventy-eight years of age. In the family of Mr. and Mrs. Deletts were seven children, namely: Angenette, now Mrs. Joshua M. Marsh; Mollie, who is married and lives in the state of Washington; Alice, the wife of John Wagoner, of Washington county; and Mary and Grant, both of whom are deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Marsh were the parents of eight children: William W., who was born March 9, 1871, and died June 6, 1907; John, who was born February 18, 1873, and died November 7, 1911; Katie, who was born January 7, 1875, and died December 25, 1876; Bertha, who was born in April, 1877, and is the wife of Isaac G. Wallbridge, of Portland; Minnie, born September 27, 1879, who is now the wife of Theodore Grimm, of Washington county; Annie, who was born November 19, 1887, and was married to D. A. Cameron, son of Washington county pioneers; Benjamin Harrison, who was born November 10, 1888, and is living on the old homestead; and Edward, who was born May 28, 1890, and died June 9, 1896. The mother of these children died September 2, 1910. She was a woman of many noble qualities and was highly respected wherever she was known.

Mr. Marsh has passed the age of three score and ten and the responsibilities which for many years he faithfully discharged now devolve upon younger men. He has witnessed many great changes in his adopted state, which is now recognized as one of the important producing sections of the union, and, comparing the conditions of the present with those of half a century ago, he has just cause of gratification for having remained a citizen of Washington county. He is not identified with any religious denomination but his wife was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church as are also his children. In politics he adheres to the republican party. His life has been one of activity and enterprise and as he has ever been mindful of the interests and welfare of others, he can claim many friends in Oregon.

EZRA H. WOODWARD. One of Newberg's citizens who has been an active factor in promoting the town's development is Ezra H. Woodward, who through twenty-three of the thirty-two years of his residence in Yamhill county has been editor of the Newberg Graphic. He is a son of Benjamin and Lydia Woodward, and a native of Indiana, his birth having occurred on a farm in the vicinity of Mooresville, Morgan county, on the 29th of January, 1854.

There have never been any unusual or exciting occurrences in the life of Ezra H. Woodward, his youthful experiences having been very similar to those of other lads of the same period and like circumstances who were reared in the country. He belonged to a family whose members placed a high valuation upon education, so after completing the course in the common schools he was sent to the Bloomingdale Academy. From early boyhood, at such times as he was not engaged with his studies, he assisted his father in the work of the farm, thus by the time he had completed his education he was a good, practical agriculturist. When ready to assume responsibilities for himself naturally he continued to follow the vocation to which he had been trained from his early youth and for ten years his time and attention was entirely devoted to agricultural pursuits. The first twenty-six years of his life were spent in his native state, but the west had a very great attraction for him, therefore in 1880 he decided to become a citizen of Oregon, and in September of that year located in Newberg. Here he has continued to reside for thirty-two years, and during that time has contributed his full quota to the advancement of the interests of the town and county. Twenty-three years ago Mr. Woodward became the editor of the Newberg Graphic, one of the well-known publications of the county. He has made a success of this, being in every way a man well qualified to edit a local paper. He has high standards of the duties of citizenship, pronounced views on right and wrong and is absolutely fearless in his denunciation of whatever he deems unjust or harmful to the interests of the community. His is neither a scurrilous nor sensational sheet in any sense of the word, but thoroughly clean and wholesome and worthy of admission into the home. He is a man of progressive ideas and public spirit and it has always been his custom to use the columns of his paper in advancing every movement that he deemed likely to be of benefit to the community at large. Owing to his high ideals, sound principles and irreproachable reputation the indorsement or cooperation of his publication has much weight and influence, and when he champions any cause, his readers know that it has been given his careful consideration and that he is well qualified to pass judgment.

For his wife and helpmate Mr. Woodward chose Miss Amanda Maris, a daughter of Jonathan and Julia A. Maris, their marriage being celebrated at Bloomingdale, Indiana, on the 27th of December, 1877. Unto them have been born five children: Walter C.; Sibyl; Bernice, who married W. A. King; and two who are deceased.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Woodward are members of the Friends church and his political support is given to the republican party. He has always taken an active interest in all governmental matters and represented his district in the state legislature in 1885. Mr. Woodward is highly esteemed throughout the county, where he is widely known, and is accorded the respect of all who know him, as during the long period of his residence here he has ever manifested those qualities that are associated with the highest types of manhood.

JOHN OMAN. For the past twenty-five years John Oman has been engaged in salmon fishing in Oregon. He was born in Finland on the 11th of December, 1864, and is a son of John and Bertha Oman, also natives of Finland, where they spent their entire lives. The father passed away in May, 1867, and the mother two weeks later. Of this union there were born five children, none of whom came to America with the exception of our subject.

Left an orphan at the age of three years, John Oman was early dependent upon his own efforts for a livelihood. He obtained an education in the common schools of his native land, and began his career there as a wage earner. When he was seventeen years old he decided to emigrate to the United States and with this purpose in view took passage for America. Upon his arrival in this country he made his way westward to Minnesota, locating in Duluth, where for three years thereafter he worked on the railroad. At the expiration of that period he again started westward, arriving in Astoria in 1885, and remaining until 1897, engaging in salmon fishing. In the latter year he came to Hammond, continuing to fish until 1908, when he entered the government employ and has ever since been working on the jetty that is being constructed at the mouth of the Columbia river. Mr. Oman has always been diligent and thrifty and has succeeded in acquiring an ample competence and a comfortable residence in Hammond.

On the 6th of November, 1898, Mr. Oman was united in marriage to Miss Hilda Fredrickson, also a native of Finland, her natal day having been the 25th of November, 1875. Mrs. Oman is a daughter of Alexander and Catrina (Slotte) Fredrickson, both of whom were born in Finland. In 1880 the father emigrated to the United States, first locating in Minnesota, where he remained for a brief time before coming west. For several years thereafter he resided in California, whence he moved to Astoria. In 1885 he sent for his wife and family who joined him here and have ever since made Astoria their home. The father is a carpenter and contractor and is meeting with excellent success in the pursuit of these occupations. Mrs. Oman is the eldest of five children, the others, in order of birth being: Hugo, who died when he was eighteen months of age; William, who was one year of age when he died; Ellen, whose death occurred when she was eleven years old; and Hilfred, who is living in Astoria. To Mr. and Mrs. Oman there have been born three children: John Ture, whose birth occurred on the 1st of September, 1899; George Albin, born on the 4th of April, 1901; and Ellen Waldina, whose birth occurred on the 10th of September, 1903.

The family affiliate with the Lutheran church, and fraternally Mr. Oman is a member of the Maccabees, being identified with Stevens Hive, No. 64; and he also belongs to the Improved Order of Red Men, being a member of Nicarine Tribe, No. 12, Hammond. His political allegiance he gives to the republican party and always takes an active and helpful interest in all municipal affairs, now serving his third term as a member of the city council, the period of his service being proof of the satisfactory discharge of his responsibilities.

JOHN MARTHALER, who resides on his farm near Fairfield, on the Willamette river, is one of the prominent farmers of Marion county. He was born in Illinois on January 12, 1856, and is the son of Joseph and Annie (Kneter) Marthaler, both natives of Germany. The father was born in Bavaria, February 7, 1823, and, coming to the United States at the age of eighteen years, settled in New Orleans, Louisiana, for twelve years. At the end of this time he removed to Illinois and engaged in agricultural pursuits for three years and then went to Minnesota, being one of the pioneers of that state. He took up a homestead and is still residing in Minnesota. Mrs. Marthaler was born in Prussia, March 7, 1830, and came to the United States at an early age and in 1848 was married in New Orleans. To this union eleven children were born, namely: Joseph, deceased; Mrs. Mary Webber, a widow, who is a resident of St. Cloud, Minnesota; Mrs. Katherine Wilhelms, a resident of Albany, Minnesota, who is the wife of Jacob Wilhelms; John, the subject of this sketch; Mrs. Martha Schmidt, residing in St. Martin, Minnesota, who is the wife of Peter Schmidt; Alex, a resident of West Union, Minnesota; Mrs. Barbara Bramenschenkel, who is the wife of John Bramenschenkel, of Sauk Center, Minnesota; Antone, of West Union, Minnesota; Henry, also a resident of West Union; and Frank and Simon, both residents of Meyers Grove, Minnesota.

During his youth John Marthaler assisted his father on the home place but in 1877 he left home and came to Marion county, stopping en route for two months in California and for eight in Corvallis, Oregon. He finally settled on the P. E. Eldridge farm on the French prairie and was employed there until the autumn of 1885, when he rented four hundred acres, which he cultivated for seven years, the first three years in partnership with J. R. Broyles, whose interest Mr. Marthaler purchased later assuming complete charge of the farm. In 1890 he removed to the Jackson farm and remained there for the two years following his marriage the next spring before going to the Skaife farm of three hundred and sixty acres, which he has since purchased. Two hundred and forty acres of this is under a high state of cultivation and it is one of the most productive farms in the county. The farm produces wheat, oats and clover, and he also raises sheep, hogs and cattle of a very fine breed. He has won a substantial degree of success as the reward of able and well directed effort.

On April 8, 1891, Mr. Marthaler was married in Fairfield, Oregon, to Margaret A. Skaife, who was born on November 30, 1857, in Fairfield and is the daughter of John and Marietta (Hilest) Skaife. The father was a native of Yorkshire, England, and the mother was born February 4, 1832, near Hannibal, Missouri, of French and German descent, her father being a native of Kentucky. Mr. and Mrs. Skaife were married in 1849 in Iowa and in 1850 they set out for Oregon. Their first winter was spent in Oregon City. In 1852 Mr. Skaife came to Woodburn, where he lived for two years on a donation land claim on which he had purchased the equity but later came to Fairfield and took up the donation land claim which John Marthaler now owns. To Mr. and Mrs. Skaife four children were born. The eldest, Jasper N., was born in the Cascade mountains while the family were crossing the plains. He now resides in Salem, Oregon. Mrs. Mary F. Phillips is the wife of Samuel Phillips and they reside in Salem, Oregon. Mrs. Laura J. Broyles is also a resident of Salem and is the wife of James R. Broyles. Margaret A. is now Mrs. John Marthaler. To Mr. and Mrs. Marthaler five children have been born, namely: Etta and John Freeman, twins, born January 21, 1892, the former being in college at Mount Angel, Oregon, and the latter attending school; Nellie, who was born February 1, 1894; Ella, whose birth occurred June 18, 1896, and who is attending college at Mount Angel, Oregon; and Margaret, who was born February 11, 1900, and is attending public school. They are all residing at home except when away at college.

The family attend the Presbyterian church at Fairfield, and in his political views Mr. Marthaler is a democrat, giving his support to the men and policies of that party.

EMIL BRITT. One of the best cultivated and most attractive ranches in Jackson county is that of Emil Britt, who holds the title to two thousand acres of valuable land in the vicinity of Jacksonville. He is not only one of the representative agriculturists and business men of the town but he has prominently figured in public affairs in Jacksonville from his early manhood, having been a member of the council for many years, while he held the office of mayor for several terms. He is a native of this county, his birth having occurred on the place where he is now residing on the 22d of March, 1862, and he is the eldest child and the only living son born of the marriage of Peter and Amelia Grob Britt. The paternal grandfather, Kasper Britt, was a soldier in the Napoleonic wars and participated in the battle of Waterloo under the command of the great emperor. The parents were both natives of Switzerland whence the father emigrated to the United States in his early youth. The father was a gifted artist and painted in oil, being proficient both in portrait and landscape work. He first located in Illinois and engaged in farming for several years, and also learned the art to make daguerreotypes. He followed this art in Illinois until 1852 when he crossed the plains to Oregon, locating in Jacksonville, where he continued to make daguerreotypes, having the distinction of being the first photographer in the state. He also engaged in packing from Crescent City to Jacksonville, owning his own pack train and selling his goods and wares to the miners in the latter place. He was a republican in politics and served as a member of the city council of Jacksonville. Here he wedded Mrs. Grob in 1861, but ten years later she passed away. Of this marriage there was born beside our subject a daughter, Amelia, who is living in the old home with her brother. Mr. Britt survived his wife for many years, his death occurring in October, 1905.

The boyhood and youth of Emil Britt were passed very similarly to those of other lads reared in this section of the state at that period. He was given the advantages of a public school education and helped his father when not engaged with his studies. After his graduation from the high school he turned his attention to agricultural pursuits and has met with excellent success in his undertakings. He now owns two thousand acres of land in this county, a large portion of which is improved while the remainder is in timber. His home place in Jacksonville is well kept up and equipped with everything essential to the modern agriculturist. The farm buildings are substantially constructed and provide ample shelter for his stock and grain, while the residence in Jacksonville is pleasantly situated amid attractive grounds and is fitted with all modern appointments. Mr. Britt is a man of keen discernment, clear judgment and systematic methods and directs his undertakings with sagacity and foresight. He gives his personal supervision to every detail connected with the operation of his business and the excellent condition of the property generally manifests competent oversight and intelligent direction. In addition to his highly cultivated fields Mr. Britt has some valuable timber holdings and other interests.

The political prerogatives of Mr. Britt are exercised in support of the men and measures of the republican party and he takes an active and helpful interest in all local affairs. He served for fifteen years as a member of the council while for six he discharged the duties of mayor. That he was efficient in both capacities is evidenced by the length of his period of service, no less than by the esteem in which he is held throughout the community. Fraternally he is a member of the Masonic order, being affiliated with Warren Lodge, No. 10, A. F. & A. M.; Oregon Chapter, No. 4, R. A. M., in both of which he has held all of the chairs, while he and his sister belong to the Order of the Eastern Star. Miss Britt is also president of the Native Daughters of Jacksonville, Oregon. Mr. Britt is one of the enterprising men of the county whose efforts have always been largely directed toward the betterment of local conditions, and as he is upright and honorable in his transactions and loyal to his friends he is held in high esteem by all who know him.

JESSE H. LEWIS. Mr. and Mrs. Jesse H. Lewis are among those brave men and women who formed the advance guard of civilization and courageously faced the hardships and privations incident to the life on the frontier, leaving behind them all of the comforts to which they had been accustomed, to establish homes for themselves and families in western Oregon.

Jesse H. Lewis was born in Breathitt county, Kentucky, May 3, 1830. He migrated from Platte county, Missouri, May 5, 1851, to Oregon, crossing the plains at that early date, making his first location in Silverton. About the same time Mrs. Lewis, who was then Mahala J. Dickson, crossed the plains with her parents and a year later was united in marriage to Mr. Lewis.

Jesse H. Lewis is descended from colonial stock, and his father was James Lewis, a second cousin of Daniel Boone, Kentucky's frontier hero. The father was also a son-in-law of Jonathan Couch, famed in American history, as one who fought at the side of General Washington. His son, Daniel L. became one of the early settlers of Marion county, Oregon. James Lewis was born in North Carolina, January 23, 1807, the family removing from North Carolina to Kentucky in 1810. By trade and occupation he was a stone mason and he continued his residence in the Blue Grass state until 1840, at which time he moved with his family to Platte county, Missouri. Here he remained until 1851 and in that year emigrated to Oregon, crossing the plains with ox teams, the long journey requiring one hundred and thirty days to complete. Having arrived at his destination, he secured a donation claim of three hundred and twenty acres, eight miles southeast of Silverton, on Waldo hills. Here he established his western home, being occupied alternately at his trade and in the development of his farm, until the time of his death, which occurred in the eightieth year of his age. He was married when he was seventeen years of age on November 28, 1824, to Margaret Spurlock. His wife was a native of Virginia, her birth occurring January 9, 1808, and at the time of her marriage she was sixteen years of age. She passed out of this life at the exceptional age of ninety-one years. Ten children were born to this union, of which their son, Jesse H., crossed the plains with his parents at the time of their emigration to this state in 1851. Throughout his life Jesse H. Lewis has followed agricultural pursuits.

PETER BRITT

In Silverton, Oregon, January 21, 1853, was celebrated the marriage of Jesse H. Lewis and Mahala Jane Dickson and in 1903 their golden wedding was celebrated. Although they have now traveled nearly sixty years on life's journey together, both are hale and hearty and they look forward to a diamond wedding celebration fifteen years hence. They now reside in Johnson, Washington, respected and loved by all who know them.

JACOB WILLIAM MILNE, who is winning his way to prominence in Washington county as one of its enterprising farmers and stockraisers, is a native of Hillsboro, Oregon, born August 23, 1882. He is a young man who has from his boyhood been active and enterprising and has shown an ability in his business that gives bright promise for the future. He is of Scotch descent on both sides of the family and his parents, John and Maggie (Linklater) Milne, were both born in Scotland. They were married in the old country and emigrated to America, spending several years in Canada where Mr. Milne secured lucrative employment. Not being satisfied with conditions in the older settled part of the country, he came west to California with his family and operated a flour and oatmeal mill. Subsequently he removed to Portland and conducted a mill there until 1870, when he settled at Hillsboro. He is still living in this county but his wife died in 1900, leaving three children, the subject of this sketch being the youngest. John, the eldest of the children, is the owner of a farm of two hundred and fifty-four acres in this county. He married Eva Cawrse, of Washington county, who died in 1910. Elizabeth, the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Milne, is the wife of Willis Ireland, of Washington county.

In the common schools Jacob W. Milne acquired his early education, to which he has added by reading, observation and experience. He continued at home until twenty five years of age and then began cultivating a portion of his father's land in this county. Four years later he came into possession of four hundred and one acres and is now the owner of one of the best improved properties in the neighborhood. It is provided with substantial buildings and all the accessories of an up-to-date farming establishment. Mr. Milne is fully awake to the advantages of improved ery, thus securing advantageous returns upon the time and labor expended. He keeps good grades of stock and as he understands farming he usually secures satisfactory prices for what he has to offer.

On October 16, 1907, Mr. Milne was married to Miss Maud Alice Cawrse, a native of this county and a daughter of Joseph and Sarah Cawrse, both of whom were born in England. The parents came to Washington county, Oregon, thirty six years ago and Mr Cawrse has ever since been successfully identified with the agricultural development of this section. He is now living on the old homestead but his wife was called away in 1903. In their family were ten children, namely: Adelaide, who is at home; Maud Alice and Mabel, twins; the former of whom is now Mrs. J. W. Milne, while the latter married H. O. Voss, of Spokane, Washington; Fannie, who married R. L. McPherson, of Portland, Oregon; Birdie, John and Joseph, all of whom are at home; and William, Florence Eva and Josie, all of whom are deceased.

Mr. Milne is identified with Lodge No. 22, K. P., of Glencoe, and he is a splendid representative of the beneficent teachings of that order. He and his wife are members of the Presbyterian church and in politics he supports the candidates and principles of the republican party. He has been a lifelong resident of Oregon and is a lover of his state and its institutions. Honorable and upright in all his dealings, he is the possessor of many attractive traits of character that have gained for him the respect of all with whom he has come in contact.

PETER G. HOFFMANN. Although he is a carpenter and continues to follow that trade, the greater part of his attention Peter G. Hoffmann devotes to the operation of his fine farm of one hundred and ten acres located five miles southeast of Dayton. He was born in Minneapolis, Minnesota, on the 9th of September, 1866, and is the eldest child of Lawrence and Elizabeth (Metter) Hoffmann. The father, who was born in Germany, emigrated to the United States in 1860, locating in Minneapolis where he continued to live until his death in the late '80s. When the call came for troops in 1861 he enlisted in Company G, Second Minnesota Volunteer Infantry, remaining at the front until he received his discharge in 1865. He saw some very hard service and was taken by the enemy at Chattanooga and consigned to a southern prison where he spent two months. He participated in some of the most severe battles that were waged, and had the misfortune to be wounded three times, twice at Gettysburg and once at Shiloh. His allegiance to the country of his adoption was ever most loyal and he was an honored member of the Grand Army of the Republic until his death. The mother although of German parentage was born and reared in McHenry county, Wisconsin, and is now residing in Fairfield, Minnesota, where all of her children with the exception of our subject live. Beside the subject of this sketch the family of Mr. and Mrs. Hoffmann numbered the following children: Mecheal; Josephine, the wife of Henry Ritter; Margarette, the wife of John Ritter; Tena, who is at home; Lawrence; and Edith, who is also at home.

In the acquirement of his education Peter G. Hoffmann attended the common schools of Minneapolis, remaining at home until he had attained the age of twenty-six years. He then turned his attention to the carpenter's trade, which he followed in Minneapolis until his removal to Oregon. Upon his arrival in this country he located on the ranch where he is now living, and has ever since engaged in its cultivation in connection with his carpentry work. He has wrought many and extensive improvements on this place during the period of his occupancy and it is now one of the very valuable properties in this section of the county. The land is devoted to general farming and is operated under his personal supervision, every detail connected with the cultivation of the ranch from the tilling of the fields to the harvesting of the crops being given the most careful attention. Mr. Hoffmann is in every sense of the word a self-made man, having begun for himself at a very early age and through his own unaided effort acquired all that he possesses. He is a most practical man who by intelligently concentrated effort, as well as through thrift and capable management, has attained his present state of prosperity.

Mr. Hoffmann completed his arrangements for a home of his own about eighteen years ago by marrying Miss Josephine Fassmann, a native of Minnesota, and unto them have been born eight children: Lawrence, Hilda, Elizabeth, Rosa, Carline, Henry, Peter and Lewis, all of whom are at home.

In matters of faith Mr. Hoffmann was reared a Roman Catholic and his wife a Lutheran, while his political support he gives to the democratic party. He is one of the progressive citizens of the county and takes an active and helpful interest in promoting its development along the various lines of activity.

H. E. PRANGER, who is in charge of his father's farm three and one-half miles northwest of Hillsboro, Washington county, is one of the bright young farmers of Oregon; and gives promise of becoming widely known in connection with his chosen calling. He is a native of Illinois, born at Carrollton, October 26, 1883, a son of Gerhard Henry and Mary (Meyer) Pranger. The parents were both born in Germany, and came to America early in their lives. They were married at Carrollton, and made their home in that city for a number of years. In 1903, Mr. Pranger arrived in Oregon with his family, and located on a farm in Washington county. Here he continued until October, 1909, when he retired from active labor. Since then, he and his wife have resided at Hillsboro. They are the parents of ten children: Bernhard J., a resident of Illinois; Frank, of Creswell, Oregon; H. E., of this review; Marie and Annie, twins, the former of whom is the wife of William Weible, of Hillsboro, while the latter married W. Sohlar, of Banks; Henry, Ella, William, and Margaret and Rosa, twins, all of whom are deceased.

Mr. Pranger received a good education in his boyhood and youth, in the public schools of Carrollton. He was reared under conditions favorable to the formation of habits of industry and self-reliance. He came with his parents to Oregon at the age of twenty, and assisted in the development of a farm on which was established the family home. At the age of twenty-five, he began farming on his own account, and is now in charge of his father's place, which comprises ninety-six acres. The farm is located three and one-half miles northwest of Hillsboro, in a productive district. It is one of the most desirable properties of its size in this part of the county.

In June, 1910, Mr. Pranger was married to Miss Rose Ostermann, of Forest Grove, Oregon, a daughter of Bernhard and Gezina (Siemer) Ostermann. The father is a native of Germany, and the mother of Illinois. They were married in Illinois and lived in that state until March, 1884, when they came to Portland, Oregon. Two months later, Mr. Ostermann purchased a farm in Washington county, upon which he established his residence. He has prospered as an agriculturist and stock-raiser, and he and his wife are now living, with several of their children, on the family homestead. To Mr. and Mrs. Ostermann seven children were born, the youngest of whom, Rose, is now Mrs. H. E. Pranger. The others are Herman, who is living with his parents; Mary, who married Remy Delplanche, of Washington county; John B., who died at the age of four years; Helen, the wife of John W. Bernards, of Washington county; and John and William, both of whom are at home.

Mr. Pranger and his wife were reared in the Catholic faith, and are consistent followers of the teachings of the church. He cast his first vote in support of the democratic party, and has seen no reason to change his political views. He is straightforward, prompt, energetic and efficient in whatever he undertakes; and, as he possesses a pleasing manner and gentlemanly address, he readily makes friends. Being guided by the laudable ambition to win an honored place in the estimation of his fellowmen, there is no doubt that Mr. Pranger will succeed; at the same time, his excellent business ability gives brilliant promise of financial success.

PHILIP KUNTZ, who resides in Woodburn, Oregon, was born in Bavaria, Germany, on the 27th of April, 1856, his parents being Henry and Barbara (Yilk) Kuntz, the former having been born in Germany in 1832. To them six children were born: Michael, deceased; Philip, the subject of this sketch; Katie, who is the wife of Henry Sump, of Williamsport, Pennsylvania, and has three children; John, deceased; George, deceased, who is survived by his widow and three children; and Henry, of Williamsport, who is married and has two children.

Philip Kuntz came to America in 1871 and after arriving in New York went directly to Williamsport, Pennsylvania, where he resided for five years and was employed as an engineer. But after his marriage, at the age of twenty years, he started for South Dakota, becoming one of the pioneers of that state. The journey westward was an exceedingly difficult one, as a rifle and very little money were his only possessions when he left Williamsport and it was necessary for him from time to time to engage in hard labor in order to earn the money necessary for the continuation of the trip. Going directly to the Black hills, he settled in Deadwood, South Dakota, where he worked for the Home Stake Mining Company on the first stamp mill they erected. Subsequently he was employed for twenty-six months as an engineer for Crane Brothers in Chicago previous to his return to South Dakota, where he took up a homestead of one hundred and sixty acres in the spring of 1881. For nearly thirty years excepting the four years he spent in the gold mines he was engaged in the cultivation of this farm, devoting his time and efforts principally to stock-raising, but in August, 1908, he retired from his ranch and came direct to Woodburn, where he purchased a home and where in partnership with his brother-in-law, George Frasier, he engaged in the bakery business. They conducted this in partnership for one year, after which Mr. Kuntz purchased Mr. Frasier's share and during the following year remained as sole owner and manager. At that time he purchased stock in the Peoples Stove Company, of which he is now president and which enjoys a large patronage in the surrounding country.

In 1876 Mr. Kuntz married Miss Emma Frasier, whose birth occurred in 1857 in Philadelphia, and who is a daughter of Charles and Amelia (Bisch) Frasier. Mrs. Kuntz was the eldest of six children, the others being: George, who is a resident of Newberg, Oregon, and has three children; Charles, who makes his home in Iowa and has two sons; Herman, who lives in South Dakota and has four children; William, of Chicago; and one who died in infancy. To Mr. and Mrs. Kuntz nine children have been born: Kate, who was born August 4, 1877, and married Fred Rano, by whom she has four children; Clara, who is the wife of John Gervis, of South Dakota, and has five children; Edward, who resides in Woodburn, Oregon, and has two children; Herman, who is also living in Woodburn; Emma, who is the wife of Carl Faust, of Minnesota, and the mother of one child; Harry of Umatilla, Oregon; and Charles, Philip and Albert, who are all living at home and attending school.

In politics Mr. Kuntz has always cast his vote for the men and measures of the republican party but has never sought any office, although he has efficiently served on the school board of his district. He has manifested a great interest in the educational and religious activities of his community, having donated land for both a schoolhouse and a church in South Dakota. In religious faith he affiliates with the Lutheran church although all of his family are Presbyterians. He holds membership with the Masons and the Ancient Order of United Workmen. Mr. Kuntz holds the confidence and respect of his fellow citizens and has won for himself an enviable place in the business, social and fraternal circles of Woodburn.

JOSEPH L. GROFF. There is no doubt as to the energy and ability of Joseph L. Groff who is now successfully engaged in farming in Washington county and has also been identified with irrigation. He possesses the laudable ambition to advance in the world and his friends do not hesitate to prophesy that he will win high standing as a farmer and stock-raiser. He was born in Stephenson county, Illinois, April 9, 1882, a son of John and Catherine Groff, the former of whom was born in Buffalo, New York, and the latter in Illinois. Mr. Groff continued in that state until his arrival in Hood River county, Oregon, where he engaged in farming. He died in 1907 and his wife was called away at the old home in Illinois in 1888. There were nine children in their family, one of whom died in infancy, the others being: Mrs. Mary Seals, a resident of Illinois; Mrs. Nettie Williams, also of Illinois; George, of Illinois; Mrs. Elizabeth Zephies, of Kenosha, Wisconsin; Henry, of Washington county, Oregon; Joseph L., the subject of this sketch; and Julia and Edward, both of whom are deceased.

Joseph L. Groff attended the common schools of his native state and as a boy showed an interest in his various duties at home or in school which gave bright promise as to his future. At the age of nineteen he accompanied his father across the plains to Oregon and four years later purchased one hundred and sixty acres of land in Hood River county, which he cultivated for two years. His attention was attracted to irrigation and for three years he was connected with the Mountain Valley Irrigating Company, in which he served with marked efficiency as director, secretary, treasurer and foreman. In 1910, having disposed of part of his interests in Hood River county, he came to Washington county and purchased sixty-seven acres one mile west of North Plains. This place is well improved and is under a good state of cultivation. He is the owner of one hundred and seven acres of land in Oregon and also of valuable town property in the state of Washington and, although a young man, is on the high road to prosperity.

On the 15th of June, 1907, Mr. Groff was married to Miss Edith Agnes Helms, and they have one son, John Vernon, who was born June 8, 1908. Mrs. Groff was born at Benton Harbor, Michigan, April 6, 1882, and is the only child of John Fowler and Rowena (Hudson) Helme. The father was born at Rockford, Illinois, and the mother in Oakland county, Michigan. They were married in Michigan and lived in that state for four years, at the end of which time they moved to Chicago, Illinois, and Mr. Helme was employed for eighteen years as salesman for Heath & Milligan wholesale dealers in paints, etc. In 1902 Mr. Helme removed with his family to Colorado Springs, Colorado, and a year later came west, finally locating at Hood River, Oregon. He died July 10, 1907, but the mother is still living and makes her home with Mr. and Mrs. Groff.

